The Prospectus requested platforms from each of the candidates, but by press time did not have them from Grant Collins and Richard Covert. Platforms available and pictures of all four candidates appear the "informal gag" rule. At the Senate meetings I've often wanted to get into the discussion, but before I or any other visitor can speak he has to be sponsored by a Senator. That's crazy and I am planning to work to remove any restrictions on the participation of visiting students. As I see it, the only difference between a student and a Senator is that the Senator can vote. That's the only privilege a Senator should enjoy is being able to vote.

A pet project I have in mind is to get a couple of students and make a survey of students to find out why students aren't voting. Then I have several ideas to increase voter participation, like removing the rule that one needs an ID to vote, getting students to go through the lounges urging people to vote, putting voter booths in each FSM and letting students out of class 5 minutes early

I plan to support the move to hire law enforcement students as security guards. In addition, I plan to work to have as part of their job, the task of turning out unused lights around the college to save energy. will try to co-ordinate my activities as a member of the energy crisis committee with the job of Senator to move toward great energy conservation. In addition to energy conservation I would like to vote for conservation and recycling of all the paper the college uses. I will also work with Morgan Hulsizer to continue the reforms she started.

That's a few of my ideas I plan to work to make come to reality. In addition to having lots of ideas, I think I have some skills to bring to the Senate. As a debater, I've Parkland student Carlita Davis and U of I freshman Clarence Hudson will begin flexing their legs this week in anticipation of the annual Multiple Sclerosis Dance For Those Who Can't Marathon to be held at Huff Gym April 5-7. An estimated 100 enthusiastic couples are expected to enter the marathon which is scheduled to last 52 hours.

The couples will begin dancing at 6 Friday and continue gliding around Huff Gym through the night and on into Saturday and finishing Sunday

A half - hour break every four len feet to regain their strength before throbbing once again.

They will also be allowed to sleep from 3 a.m. to 7 a.m. The winners will be selected from those who are still standing and moving Sunday Moans and groans dribbling from exhausted bodies will be a small price to pay for the lucrative prizes that are being offered.

First place winners will receive a trip to Hawaii; second place a trip to Mexico, and third place finisher will pick up a $3,000 scholarship.

Entertainment will be provided by the Ramsey Lewis Trio and singer Megan McDonald. Food and drinks will be furnished from Macdonalds Restaurant (no relationship).

Each couple is sponsored by a business or organization that makes a monetary pledge to the marathon. Carlita and Clarence are still looking for other sponsors and any Parkland organization wishing to help may contact the Prospectus in room X-155 before April 5.

This year's marathon is being sponsored by Zeta Beta Tau located at 907 S. 4th, Champaign. Anyone wishing further information are urged to contact ZBT.

When we go to the Student Government polls again next week, I strongly urge all of you to vote for David Wiechman as your new day senator.

While I don't know all of the candidates personally, I have read all of their applications, and have found nothing in these applications to convince me that they are more qualified than Dave

I have been acquainted with Dave since the beginning of the school year and have found him to be a very responsible, intelligent, and cool-headed fellow. I believe these qualities are needed on our Student Government.

If any of you have ever worked on a student publication, you realize that everyone assigned a task doesn't always complete that task. (Hell, I've skipped a few myself.) Dave, however, always turns in whatever is asked of him. He also gets his assignments done on time, which is highly remarkable for most student publications. This quality, whether you call it responsibility or loyalty, makes him a prime contender for Student Government.

Dave is also a highly intelligent individual. While he and I have often differed in opinion on national and international issues, he always has his facts and figures fairly straight (something I have been accused of not doing). He has been on the Dean's List both quarters this year, and has also been a highly effective member of the Parkland Debate team. The Debate Coach, Chuck Newman, is proud of the job Dave has done so far and stated that Dave may even do well in the Nationals.

Another quality which would be in his favor if he were elected is his "cool-headedness." Tempers flare occasionally in any organization, and the Prospectus is no different. I have yet to see Dave lose his temper, or any of his effectiveness, because of an argument. I don't mean to "potshot" at the Student Government, but our (the Prospectus) office is next to theirs and occasionally we hear "raised voices that sound angry." I have never attended a StuGo meeting (as Senator Tom McMullen pointed out to me rather pointedly this week) but these voices often sound as if they could use a cool head. Dave Wiechman has that cool head.

The one quality that I haven't mentioned yet, but is probably the most important, is his responsiveness. Dave is a very sensitive person, and responds well to all suggestions from the student body. This is, after all, the main job of a Senator, and I believe Dave Wiechman would make a great one.

jn*jn*jn*jn*jn

Since Mr. Waldon, vice president of the Parkland Student Association, has chosen to rebut my last column (of which comments are two to one in favor), I believe a couple of comments of mine are in order.

To begin with, he attacks my column, not because of its contents, but because of the size of the letters that spell out my name at the top. (They are 48 point, if you're still wondering, Bob). I'm sorry they're so big, but when we decided to run the pictures at the top of the columns (something Bob himself did last year, although he declined to have his picture used this year) we left it up to our publisher to make those standing heads, and it seems that my name fit best in 48-point type.

Moving on along to the third paragraph, Mr. Waldon asks if I would be happier to leave the deadbeats in office. I'm not sure if that question was asked in a humorous vein or not, so I won't answer it. Later, in the same paragraph, he implies that I would like for Student Government to pick their own replacements, or perhaps he implies that I would like to appoint them myself; I'm not sure what the sentence says. At any rate, I can remember offering no such suggestion.

Later on in the letter, our vice president implies that I feel Student Government minutes should be exciting. That is relative to saying that an algebra book should be entertaining, something I have never found. My contention was that if the minutes were to be run verbatim, they should have some substance, something an algebra book has.

Mr. Waldon also accuses me of "ridiculing" Bobbie Reid, Publications Senator. My intention was not to ridicule, only point out the facts. I hereby publicly apologize to Mr. Reid if I publicly ridiculed him.

I'm also sorry to state that my advisor does have a key to our publications office. Mr. Jones, it seems, had forgotten that he had the key and Mr. Waldon was quite correct Please turn to Page 3

THE NIXORCIST

Father Humphrey looked up, and was surprised to see Pat Nixon standing in front of his desk, handkerchief in hand, stifling a dry heave

"Father Humphrey, I need your

"Why, Mrs. Nixon? Is something wrong with your husband?" Father Humphrey had a gift for understatement.

"I don't know where to begin. I think my husband is possessed by a demon!"

Father Humphrey reflected briefly. This was not the first case of sinister forces that had come to him. Humphrey had exorcised a demon from the foot of Rose Mary Woods. From John Mitchell he had removed a wife. And just last week a demon had come to him, requesting the removal of the evil spirit of John Ehrlichmann from his body. This had been a busy Administration.

"So how can I help, Mrs. Nixon?"
"There is a demon in the White House, and I want him removed!"

"So do we all, Mrs. Nixon."
"So I have come to you, because I heard you were a nixorcist."
And that is how Father Humphrey, with his assistant Brother McGovern, came to visit the White House. It was the first time that both Humphrey and McGovern had been there together.

"Now, remember, George, we are here to exorcise, after we determine whether he is truly possessed by the devil."

"Father Humphrey, what are the signs that this man is truly possessed and not merely psychotic?"

"Well possession leads psychosis by two to one in the latest Harris poll. And Mrs. Nixon has given me proofs of demonic possession."

"Remember, Father, that there are certain types of proof which are required for the Commission to approve an exorcism."

"What would you like, George?"
"Well, a man truly possessed would exhibit odd sexual behavior.
What odd sexual behavior has he engaged in lately that isn't normal for Him?"

"Mrs. Nixon has told me of how he often locks himself in the Oval Office and plays pocket veto with himself. Perhaps if he didn't enjoy it so much, more legislation would become law."

"Okay. How about strange appetites?"

"Mrs. Nixon tells of how she once caught him eating weird spaghetti-type of brown stuff."

"How much did he eat?"
"Two seven-inch reels of it. And his neurotic compulsion for total isolation."

"What's new about that?"

"He has arranged for several atomic blasts along the San Andreas Fault so that San Clemente can secede from the union into the Pacific along rails they have built."

"Ah, yes, the old Union/Pacific Rail Way. But to be a true demon, he would have to have turned somebody's head completely around to an unnatural direction."

"What about John Connally?"
"Sorry, I forgot."

At this point, a White House guard came in and escorted the two priests to the President's bedroom.

Mr. Nixon was bound to the bedposts. The signs of demonic possession were clear. His jowls looked like two grey basketballs, and his face was covered by a thick, black growth. He looked up at the two priests.

"Mr. President, would you please say something to us?"

"Let others wallow in Watergate, I'm going to take the money and run."

"That didn't sound like his voice."

"Nothing sounds like his voice.
One of the indicators of possession is the speaking of a strange tongue."

The Short Circuit

BY DAVID WIECHMAN

As much as I would like to address a reply to Mr. Segal's letter to the editor in regard to an editorial I wrote, I won't. This editorial is devoted to beating my own drum. As you probably know by now, there is to be a special election this week. In case you haven't heard by now, I will be a candidate for your vote. At the outset, I made two promises to myself. One is that I won't make any promises that I might not be able to keep and besides I don't believe in that sort of thing. Second, I won't campaign for myself. As a serious candidate, I would like to meet each and every student but because I have made previous commitments for my time I cannot. However, several of my friends have expressed a willingness to run a campaign for me and I am grateful to them.

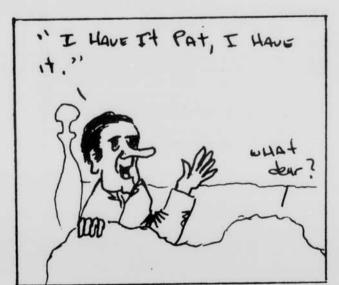

When Wednesday rolls around and you go into that polling booth I hope that you will vote for me because you believe that I am the most qualified candidate and will do a good job. First let me explain my qualifications. Since the beginning of the school year I have covered student government as Prospectus' political reporter. I was there at the first meeting and have a total record of attendance that is better than three-fourths of the members of student government right now. Because of this indepth reporting, I know what is happening in the student Senate, I know what it has done, plans to do, I know each member personally and can function effectively as your Senator. In addition to this unique experience, I have been involved in government and politics for many years now. I have a double major in Economics and Political Science which gives me an extensive knowledge of and back ground in the workings of public service. Someday I hope to hold an elected public service post in government. I was a campaign worker for the 1972 elections and some local city elections. I am not only abreast with what is happening at Parkland but I try to keep well informed of what's happening in the world around us. As for my background, I come from Rantoul where I attended high school. At Rantoul High I was involved in politics, journalism, music, clubs and debate. At Parkland, besides being a reporter and editorial writer for Prospectus I am a member of the Debate team, Speech team, and am involved in politics.

Secondly, I think I would do a good job. A big problem with Senators is their failure to attend StuGo meetings. There will be no such trouble with me I have to attend the meetings as a reporter anyway, so you can rest assured that I will be on the job. My being in government would be a real benefit to the student body. If elected I would continue to function as a reporter only now I would be in a position to inform the students of things I couldn't possibly today. Students running for government are always promising to improve communication between the students and their elected leaders. While others make promises, I'm in a position to deliver. I'm not promising that suddenly I can solve all the problems but I can communicate the feelings and ideas of our leaders back to you through the newspaper. You and I will always be in contact via the Prospectus. During the long months I have watched the Senate in action, I noticed a couple human flaws. So often, too often, fights and misunderstandings occur because some of the Senators cannot give and take critizism easily. There is nothing I can do for the other Senators except serve as a moderating influence. I do have a couple qualities that will work well for me as a Senator. I don't have all the answers or even any of the answers but in debate and in life I have learned to understand the issues, detect fallacies, and generally get to the heart of a problem. These skills will help me do a good job. Since I don't get angry and can remain calm in the midst of a battle, I hope to keep Senate meetings moving smoothly and efficiently. In the Congress of the United States, one man out of 435 can not make a difference but in the Parkland Senate, I will be one man out of ten. At Parkland one man can make a difference, one man can be heard. If I get to the Senate you can bet they'll hear me.

I have a large field of competitors in this election. Five people are running, as far as I know, for the one Senate seat. I think it's really great that so many people are getting involved in politics. Of course, I have nothing bad to say about my competition. I hope to never have to stoop that low. But let's compare their qualifications to mine. First, none of the others have any experience in student government at Parkland this year. I can testify for a fact that none of them has ever been to a Senate meeting this year. One of them, Richard Covert, was a member of the Convocations Board last year. That makes him the most qualifed of my competitors, I guess. Something that is especially important to remember is that the three men. Grant Collins, Richard Johnson and Richard Covert are all sophomores. That means that in a couple months they will be gone. If they fail to attend the meetings it will be too late to get a new Senator. Also, they might not have any incentive to do a good job. If Parkland goes to pot (pardon

in what he said. (I'll get you for that, Jones.)

Moving back to Waldon's letter, he states the biggest difference between StuGo and the Prospectus is "ours (Stu-Go's inner workings) are on display once a week; nobody knows what you are up to." Again Mr. Waldon seems to have lost me; is he accusing the Prospectus of conspiring to criminal acts or what? I have no idea, and can only offer that we are also on display each week.

Later on Waldon accuses me of being a "pot-shotter." This reminds me of nothing more than the proverbial pot calling the proverbial skillet black. Mr. Waldon has been pot-shotting at Nixon, Security, Canteen, etc., for two years now. Strangely enough, these "pot-shots" are approximately the same topics I have used in past columns, with the notable exception of Student Government, of which Waldon finally became a member. Perhaps we can draw a conclusion

Another accusation leveled against me was that I didn't check my facts. I wonder what inside sources he has in Washington to check up on President Nixon, Waldon's favorite target over the past two years. Perhaps he, like me, trusted what he thought were reliable sources.

There is one thing I did check up on, however. A usually reliable source told me that my column from the last issue was on StuGo's bulletin board. Not trusting that source, I entered StuGo's office myself today (Thursday) and sure enough, there was my column, with my picture and my name in 48-point type. At the end of the column was a note signed "Morgan." I couldn't find Morgan Hulsizer to ask her if she put the note there or not. However, since she is the only member of StuGo with the first or last name of Morgan, let us assume she wrote it.

I'm sorry I don't have an exact copy of the note, but in substance it said if all of us (StuGo members, I assume) don't write a response, what he (that's me I assume) says is true. After reading that, I checked to see how many responses we had; strangely enough, Waldon's was the only one. Therefore, I would like to thank all of the StuGo members but Waldon for agreeing with me.

LETTERS

Dear Editor-In-Chief:

My goodness, I feel as though I'm participating in one of those contests where the person who points out the most mistakes wins a package of radish seeds, or something. I'm referring to Jeff Nicholas' recent spleen-letting. I don't know the title of the column. Perhaps the title is there, somewhere, perhaps hidden between the huge letters that make up his name. Well, to start: If Mr. Nicholas would read his Parkland constitution, he would see that a provision has been made for an election per quarter, and that they are not as unscheduled as he would have us believe. If we weren't going to the polls next week to elect a day and two evening senators, we would be going to approve or reject a constitutional amendment. And I cannot see how elections can be a nuisance when they are never participated in by more than about 200 people.

must ask whether Nicholas would prefer to have more frequent elections to help get dead-beats out of office (which would possibly occur if the constitutional amendment were to pass), or if he would rather leave them in office. And I am not convinced that amendment would result in more elections. Student Government could appoint all of its own replacements, but unlike Nicholas, we think it is better to leave that decision to the entire Student Association

I would be curious to know just how Student Government throws its weight around with the Prospectus. If you consider our almost complete ignoring of the newspaper as weight." then I guess we have been pushing you around.

Student Government allocates a certain amount of money to the publications area. Although we are pleased to see that the Prospectus seems headed toward self-sufficiency, it is still the only weekly student publication which is authorized office space and other special facilities of Parkland, and should devote a tiny part of its energies ment. If you were at one time asked to run student government minutes as written, it is only because at the time it seemed the most effective method of letting students know of what we were doing.

Although you now send a reporter to most student government meetings, we still cannot depend upon coverage, because your reporter is somehow "too busy" with other things to do even a sketchy job of coverage.

Admittedly, student government meetings are dull: most legislative proceedings are. And the minutes of each meeting serve the sole purpose of making an official record of what went on at each meeting -our secretary cannot always entertain: that is not her function. I am sorry if Mr. Nicholas is bored by what we say and do. I notice that he has no suggestions of his own as to how to better do our job, or at least be more exciting. Unless Nicholas can show us where we are specifically failing in our duties, given our limited power, I must assume he is taking pot-shots because he--well, I'll get to his motivations later.

Our crimes against the student body seem to be: that we acknowledge the need to remove ineffective people from Stugo; that we try THE SHORT CIRCUIT Continued from Page 2 the expression no humor intended) what do they care? They won't be here next year. I'm a freshman with a year to go at Parkland. I have a strike in the school, just like many of you, and also the experience I gain as a Senator can be used next year. If one of the others get elected, their experience can't be utilized fully. There also is a but since I know nothing about her, not girl running even her name, I won't comment on her.

I hope that you feel that I am the best candidate available and that I will do the job well. But whether you want me or not is not half as important to me as getting out and voting. Out of between 4,000 and 5,000 students at Parkland only about 250 students have been voting during these elections. This is less than 1% of the students, and I hope this time will be better. If nothing else, come out in droves to defeat me. But do vote, because, remember, it's your government.

to help fellow members to attend meetings; that we recognize the benefit of a deposit to be made on borrowed College property; that we have keys to our office so that Stugo can be open to other students more often: that we, as representatives of Parkland students, wish to be recognizable to members of the Student Association so they can see us and express their concerns to us, and we recognize the benefits of having our photographs made available to students to meet that

Speaking of pictures: I could not help noticing a few issues back the prominent front-page shots of Prospectus staff members. Before we are accused of egocentric arrogance, I would advise that the newspaper use a little more restraint and journalistic responsibility.

It bothers me that Publications Senator Bobbie Reid was singled out by your cub reporter as being "irritating" because of his lack of journalism background. To the best of my knowledge, he was merely reflecting the legitimate concerns expressed to him by other students. He expressed some of those concerns to me, although the decision to read them into his report was his own. A lack of expertise in a particular field is grounds for educating a person. However, Nicholas takes an opposite view, and ridicules Mr. Reid.

Remember, the Prospectus and all Parkland publications) Prospectus has been set up to be invulnerable to all pressures except those of its reading public. There is nothing overnment can do to pub lications directly. I know, I checked last year. Reid was merely echsome of the complaints he had heard. He was taking no action against your paper. If his journalistic concepts were incorrect, the last place in which you should correct him is in print.

The only true "power" Stugo has is over allocation of student activity funds. The rules we make are unenforceable. Anything we say or do can be readily vetoed or otherwise rendered ineffective by the College Board of Trustees.

Student government salaries are based upon tuition fees. Traditionally, the president has received a full tuition waiver, with the vicepresident, secretary, and treasurer each receiving half of that amount. The recent salary raise was not a large one (only $8 per quarter on the average excluding the presiand was in fact necessitated by last summer's tuition increase, to which salaries are tied. Half of the new regular full-time tuition refund is $74, rounded to $75 for bookkeeping purposes. I want to point out that no senator receives a salary. And a new salary proposal would reduce the salary of the president to that of the other executive board members. This actually means an annual saving of $125.00 over last year! I hardly regard that saving as inflationary, or as robbing the cradle.

Mr. Nicholas also justifies Prospectus salaries as being paid for by advertising revenues, not by student activity fees. By such financial reasoning, I therefore contend that Student Government salaries are no longer footed by mandatory activity fees, but by the game room profits

As for office keys, Student Government has no control over their issuance, Student Activities does. And I have been informed that your does have a key to your

I hope I have effectively countered each of the charges leveled against us. Just as you don't expect us to read your paper from cover to cover, we don't expect you to keep up on all proceedings at our meetings. Perhaps the biggest difference between the inner workings of Stugo and the newspaper is that ours are on display once a week; nobody knows what you are up to.

And since we are on display each week, it seems your Nicholas could have come up with better complaints than he did, unless, of course, none

I advance the argument that Nicholas didn't know what he was talking about, wrote his column under deadline pressure, didn't check his facts, and wrote the poorly-thoughtout article to stir some sort of controversy to spark readership.

If this is his purpose (and I believe it is), he has abused his Student Government to no construc-

Admittedly this Student Government has its shortcomings, but if you are to depend upon Mr. Nicholas in order to find out what they are, you will find yourselves greatly deceived.

Behind

This column will appear as a regular feature on the many topics within the wide area of education.

The idea behind the creation of this column was inspired by two not unreasonable assumptions, these being that (a) as students we are more than casually interested in

JUNIOR COLLEGE JUNIOR EDUCATION

Somehow, the atmosphere sur rounding this institution has developed into a massive inferiority complex. Students seem to associate their attending a "Junior College" with a "Junior" intelligence or that in some way they are inferior.

It is a fact that Parkland has smaller facilities, less money, and in general a smaller set-up, as compared to a larger four-year in-

However, the student can, if he exerts some effort, gain the same undergraduate education as he might in any institution of higher learn-

I feel that the first two years of college are closely matched no matter where you go. What is really frustrating is the fact that people who are enrolled in this college don't even know where their facil-ities are, and if they do know, then they don't know how to use those facilities

I am speaking mainly of the LRC and all of the facilities available to students there. Some people actually didn't know that there is a 3rd floor section of the LRC. Of course, those people belong in the same group of students that get lost in three quarters of the school because they go to classes in one building and rarely step outside the building in which they attend. This is the same category of students that leave the campus as soon as classes are over and never even think of attending any school-oriented function.

We are all prisoners of our own choice on this campus, which is in reality one gigantic building. So here we are trapped in this building, which was specifically designed to force us to interact and yet students still resist

The Parkland Cobras were defeated by the Lincoln Land Loggers in the final event at the State Junior College Track and Field championships on Saturday, March 9.

Lincoln Land led Parkland by a score of 121-119 before the mile relay and went on to capture first place with a time of 3:19.8. Park-land came in second in the mile relay with a clocking of 3:24.0.

The race for first place was very close as is apparent by the final scores: Lincoln Land with 131, Parkland with 127 while DuPage came in third with a meager 60 points

Lincoln Land's main stimulus was in the form of George Haley. Haley, who toured Europe last sum-mer with Illini distance star Craig Virgin as a member of the U. S Junior term, had an individual total of 30 points. He also won the 600yard run in 1:11.7, placed second in both the 300-yard dash and 60-yard high hurdles and took fourth in the 1,000-yard run.

Parkland's motivation was provided by Randy Williams and Mike King. Williams took first place in the long jump (22 feet, 9-1/4 inches) and the triple jump (45 feet, 11-1/4 inches) while King placed first in the 60-yard dash and the 60-yard high hurdles with times of :06.3 and :07.5 respectively.

education, and (b) there is more to the overall educational process than most of us are aware of. It is the hope that the subjects to be examined in this and future installments will guide us all toward the formation of concrete personal perspectives on the meaning of education.

minority of the student body

Are we the victims of the Community College system? When you have students living so many miles apart, is it feasible to have any kind of interaction at all? Can students at Parkland unite in any worthwhile number on any occasion?

Why not?

What if there were dorms right next to Parkland? Would that change things any? Is it possible for stu-dents to get rid of the stigma sur-rounding a "Junior" College? These questions can only be answered by students collectively, not by hundreds of little blobs or groups of students acting in their own sep arate ways.

If you have any response to this line of thinking, you should direct your responses to the Prospectus (if you know where the offices are).

I am interested in findout out if any other students have the same ideas or why they don't

Gee, I wonder who's going to finish second in the NCAA Bas-ketball Championship? That's the question I asked myself after I watched UCLA crush USC 82-52 on March 9.

The score wasn't indicative of the way the game was played and anyone who witnessed the game can attest to that. Southern Cal came into the game ranked seventh in the country and supposedly this was the year that they had a chance to knock off the mighty Bruins and win the bid to the NCAA tournament.

Well, Bill Walton and company came to play that evening and after a few minutes it was obvious that Bob Boyd's Trojans would have to wait at least another year to pull off their miracle. The halftime score was 47-13 and the Bruinshad put together almost a flawless half of basketball. The final score could have been much worse, but John Wooden benched his regulars midway through the second half and his reserves finished the game.

After the game, All-American Keith Wilkes stated that UCLA would manage to be charged up emotionally for the big games from now I for one am not about to doubt that statement. History has shown that when UCLA really wants to win they manage to come up with a supreme effort. This spells nothing but trouble for the rest of the teams that have hopes of going all the way in the NCAA.

Many fans will argue that either Notre Dame or North Carolina State has a good chance of beating the Bruins. I must say I am not convinced. Sure, Notre Dame beat UCLA earlier in the season, but in the rematch a week later UCLA put things in the proper prospective.

Nevertheless, it should be exciting to follow the tournament just to see who will finish second. John Wooden has taken teams to the finals before and his teams handle the pressure well. Besides, I'm sure Bill Walton and Keith Wilkes want to go out as winners.

HOW FAR CAN BARTOW GO

Last week I wrote about the merits of Sherrill Hanks, the basket-ball coach at Quincy High School. Hanks of course was mentioned as a possible replacement for Harv Schmidt as Illinois head basket ball coach. Athletic Director Cecil Coleman didn't go along with my views, however, and chose Memphis State's Gene Bartow. It appears that Coleman made a wise decision in choosing Bartow, who has had experience coaching at both the high school and college level.

Bartow went to Memphis State when that school had much the same problem that Illinois has now Memphis State had finished last in their conference and in three short years Bartow led them to a second place finish in the NCAA tournament. He was also named Coach of

If Bartow can come close to equaling that record here at Illinois he will exceed everyones greatest expectations. Most followers of University of Illinois basketball would settle for a Big Ten title or even a second or third place finish in three years. Although my man Hanks wasn't awarded the job, I wish Bartow all the luck in the world in turning the Illinois basketball program around.

CERRO GORDO POSSIBLE CHAMPS

Cerro Gordo looms as a favorite in the Illinois class A basketball championship as the tournament winds down. Fifth ranked Ottawa Marquette received five first place votes in a poll of seventeen sportswriters and sportscasters as the team most likely to go all the way. Cerro Gordo, currently ranked second, received four votes.

Cerro Gordo certainly deserves their rating after last years squad made it to the Elite Eight before losing. Returning from that squad are starters Mark Mull, Jim Neff, Larry Pflum, and Homer O'-Field. The year of experience may be all that coach Jack Blickensderfer's squad needs to be able to go all the way.

Balanced scoring is the key to the team, as all four of the aforementioned players are capable of leading the team in scoring. Mull is the team leader and has been mentioned as an all-state candidate. It would certainly be nice to see the champ come from this part of the state this year.

CCA TO SPORT GOOD BASKETBALL

The first Collegiate Commiss-Association Basketball Tournament should be quite an affair. The tournament, made up primarily of major conference runnerups, has some highly respected teams participating.

Headlining the tournament are teams like USC, Indiana, Bradley, Tennessee, and Kansas State. All the teams have the responsibility of representing their conference in a respectable manner. The tournament has received much publicity during the past weeks and by all indications it should be a success.

The teams involved seem to be highly indicative of the brand of ball played in their respective leagues. Thus it will give sportswriters a chance to make some sort of a comparison between the various conferences.

Wolverines Make Bid

Monday night saw over 15,000 fans jammed into the Assembly You're right, the U of I wasn't on the court! Michigan and Indiana were head to head in a championship playoff for the Big Ten Title and a berth in the NCAA

After parking a country mile from the Dome and running flat out across a field that could better be described as a mud pond, I shoved my way to a seat well up in C section. Thank God there are no posts to look around. I'd prepared myself for one of the best executed ballgames in the Big Ten this year. Right! From the onset, errors marred the entire game. Indiana's fouls and Michigan's fouls greatly enhanced that growing feeling of Big Ten basketball inferior-Forty-nine fouls were called during the game. (18 against Michigan-31 against Indiana.)

Indiana had troubles other than fouls, however. The zone defense they employed seemed to beg the long armed one (Campy Russell) to drive for the high percentage shot. The Indiana offense had its problems, too. What about Quinn Buckner, superstar, going about ten minutes into the game before he scores a point and netting but six points all night? Add the forementioned miscues to the fact that both teams had sickly ball handling (except for a few spectacular Indiana passes and one Steve Grote who is a master guardsman) and it's not hard to see why John Orr's Wolverines will be meeting the Irish this Thursday.

Bobby Knight seems to have fallen into the old-any team can beat any other team on any given night syndrome when he said, "On this night, a better team beat us.' The fact is, that on this night, Indiana seemed to be playing at their utmost worst while Michigan played their usual ball-control slow paced game.

The way I saw it, this is what happened Steve Grote came out to play basketball. He started with a pointer and came quick three back with another outside bucket in the contest. He was hot early and this necessarily tied up Quinn Buckner. Then, Michigan started whittling away at the Indiana defense in an amazingly balanced attack. The Wolverines pressed and semi-pressed the Hoosiers into numerous bad passes and poor percentage shots. All the while, the Indiana bench was getting hot the numerous illegal moves that the starters were making, and getting caught at, on the floor. After all, Indiana had one man with three fouls, two with four and four with five. The only man I know of with two first strings is Wooden!

To get on with it, the Wolverines got out to a substantial lead in the early moments of the game. Then John Laskowski substituted in and pulled a few much needed tricks to help the Hoosiers tie it at 30 - 30. At the half, the Michigan five were enjoying a meager two point lead.

After the half, Orr's quintet went at it again, rolling the score up to 56-47 at about the half way point in the second half. The only fault with their splurge hung with Campy Russell's unfortunate accumulation of 4 fouls. He sat the bench for about five minutes while Indiana brought the score within two points to 60-58. Campy came back in the game and almost immediately fouled out. But, it was already too late for the falling Hoosiers.

time!) It just so happens that Indiana played one of their worst games Monday night. And, they got some bad breaks, both self-made and official-made

The official-made mistakes, however, in my opinion, were honest mistakes. I can't believe that any black and white shirted man on that floor was intentionally making poor calls.

I know what it's like to have a bad call make all the difference in the world in a specific game. A poor call cost me a youth football championship two years ago and a lousy judgment cost a young wrestler that I coach a championship at the Mattoon Sectional a week ago.

But, I know that neither of these calls was intentional. Neither of them came from a man igerence in his mind. Sure, they were mistakes but that's all.

I wonder if the lady in front of me ever complained about the bad calls that went the other way, in favor of her team. I seriously doubt it. She was too busy worrying about the one that went against her team.

Don't get me wrong. I'm very much for team spirit but I don't think that blaming everything that goes wrong on purposeful mistakes by the officials is the way to go

Don McKenna, an official of the Rantoul Association of Illinois High School Association, once told me that "we know we make bad calls but we do it without malice. We do the absolute best that we can to call a game properly." And, I choose to believe him.

The next time some lady turns around and lays her personal bias on me about the "poor officiating" I think I'll do like a few officials that I know and ask her where her official's card is.

BILLIARDS IN THE

If you are interested in having the billiard and game room area open during the evening hours, please contact the Student Activities Office (X153) or call 351-2264. There is some thought regarding the opening of the facility from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. on Mondays through Thursdays

Excellent delay tactics and rebounding efforts by the Michigan squad wrecked the Big Red's bid for a chance in the NCAA.

Now Michigan must face its toughest test of the year against Notre Dame in the tourney. That's a helluva way to start a tournament. Even though UPI and AP both rate Michigan twelth and Notre Dame at third. I contend that there is one world of difference between the caliber of the two. However, Michigan is rapidly being referred to as the "Cinderella" team of the year and could, with their momentum, pull an early win out of the bag. But, I wouldn't bet on it.

Title Defense To Begin March 23

Parkland's baseball team has been working out for almost a month in preparation for their opening game against Kaskaskia Junior College on March 23. The Cobras travel there for a doubleheader if the weather allows

Last year Parkland won the conference title and according to head coach Jim Reed, the Cobras again must be considered as a strong title threat. Reed has many returning from last year's squad and the good weather of a few weeks back has allowed the team to work into shape sooner than anticipated.

In next week's issue the Prospectus will run a feature on this year's version of the Cobra base-

A LITTLE MORE GORE By Paul Hensel

WHERE'S YOUR CARD, LADY?

Few people in sports anger me more than someone like the spectator that was seated in front of me at the Indiana-Michigan playoff game this past Monday night. Indiana was committing numerous fouls and playing generally bad bas-ketball. They were losing. The crowd was largely partisan in the direction of the Hoosier squad. Midway in the first half, about the time Buckner drew his third foul, the lady in front of me turned around and asked me if the Michigan team brought their own referees?

Yeah, lady-you're a rock! I'll admit that some seamingly poor calls were made, and that some fairly flagrant fouls were missed, but aren't they always?

Officials are people. We all admit that people are fallible. Therefore, officials make mistakes. But, I seriously doubt that the conseq-uences of a Big Ten playoff, on a neutral court would invite any official to display a purposeful bias towards either contestant

I, myself, was sympathetic with the Indiana team. I feel that, although they lost to Michigan, the are the better team of Hoosiers the two. And, that Indiana would have a much more realistic chance in the NCAA playoffs. Not that anyone will do much against the likes of UCLA, Notre Dame and North Carolina State. The reason for my allegiance is simple, Indhas depth, that necessary thing that makes oceans deep and a basketball team win. (Most of the Next week, an election will be held to fill the position of Day Senator. Of the four candidates, I think David Wiechman would be the best man for the job. Dave has had experience with Student Government. he is an excellent debater, and is much involved with Parkland and things going on here. We need someone who is concerned and cares about us, as students, and I feel Dave is the best qualified.

Drug Abuse Series Begins At Parkland

A series of lectures and films will be presented at Parkland for explicit purpose of identifying and becoming aware of the various problems associated with drug abuse as it exists in the Champaign-Urbana area.

A factual exposure of the types of drugs available, legally and illegally, will be made through the use of community resources. An indentification of many potentially dangerous drugs will be incorporated into this program in order to classify misconceptions which might exist in regard to the potential detrimental effects of these drugs. Physiological, psychological and sociological interpretations will be utilized in an attempt to expose the ways in which drugs act on the individual and his performance in so-

The methods of treatment available for persons with drug problems will also be examined with special emphasis on the facilities which are available here in Champaign - Urbana. Therapy, counseling, and general rehabilitative objectives will be reviewed in detail.

The legal perspective on drugs and the abuse of them will also be taken into account and examined in an effort to classify the position of the police and courts in respect to this problem.

First in the lecture series will be representatives of Mustard Seed Foundation, Gemini House and Teen Challenge. On Tuesday, March 19 at 11:15 p.m., they will present information on their respective approaches to drug abuse and ensuing problems. A question and answer period will follow involving open discussion on the most common types of drugs being used in the community today and the effects of such drugs concerning physical, psychological and social consequen-

On March 28, the movie "Methadone" will be shown from 12 to 1 p.m. and from 2 to 3 p.m. At 1 p.m.

Meditation Society Formed at P/C

Students International Meditation Society Parkland is a non-profit educational organization formed to perpetuate and spread the technique Transcendental Meditation as taught by Maharishi Mahesh Yogi.

SIMS Parkland is directly affiliated with the Midwest Regional Center for SIMS in Chicago and the National Center in Los Angeles.

At the present time there are 12 teachers of Transcendental Meditation in the Champaign/Urbana area who have been personally trained and qualified by Maharishi Mehesh Yogi TM is a simple effortless mental technique which expands the conscious capacity of the mind and allows the body to experience a profound state of rest.

TM has been shown to be effective in rooting out psychosomatic diseases caused by stresses and strains accumulated in the nervous system

SIMS Parkland officials are as follows

Scott Dillenger, president; Cassandra Brown, vice president; Morgan Hulsizer, secretary; Bill Shoemaker, treasurer; Charles War-wick, local coordinator, and Donald Nolen, faculty adviser

Courses will be held approximately every two weeks. Students are welcome to attend any introductory and preparatory lectures to learn the practice of Transcendental Meditation.

Solution

Mr. Harry Baker, a local pharmacist, will speak on the methadone maintenance program. He believes that a methadone maintenance program is the only realistic avenue the community can take in an attempt to rehabilitate heroin addicts. Other factions of the community seriously disagree with this method of treatment and feel that an abstinence program would be more functional. An open discussion will follow in which students, faculty and invited guests will be given an opportunity to question and examine the advantages and disadvantages of the methadone program.

Mr. William Goldstein, former assistant state's attorney, and Mr Joseph Brown, chief investigator for the Champaign County Sheriff's office, will answer questions on the topic of "A Legal Perspective on Drug Abuse" on Tuesday, April 2 at 1 p.m. They will review the present laws which prohibit the pos-session, use and sale of certain drugs as well as the punishment for violation of such laws. The relationship between drug abuse and the extent of crime in our community will be reviewed with emphasis on such offenses as armedrobbery and larceny. The film. "Darkness, Darkness" will also be shown at 10 a.m. on April 2.

All presentations will be held in
