

THE PROSE POEM: AN INTERNATIONAL JOURNAL

Volume 7 | 1998

Madam's Heart Russell Edson

© Providence College

The author(s) permits users to copy, distribute, display, and perform this work under the following conditions: (1) the original author(s) must be given proper attribution; (2) this work may not be used for commercial purposes; (3) the users may not alter, transform, or build upon this work; (4) users must make the license terms of this work clearly known for any reuse or distribution of this work. Upon request, as holder of this work's copyright, the author(s) may waive any or all of these conditions.

The Prose Poem: An International Journal is produced by The Berkeley Electronic Press (bepress) for the Providence College Digital Commons.
<http://digitalcommons.providence.edu/prosepoems/>

Russell Edson

MADAM'S HEART

She had fallen in love with her doctor's stethoscope; the way it listened to her heart . . .

The doctor said, would you like to honeymoon with my telescope? You should see how it extends itself and looks into the night for the heavenly body.

Oh, but your microscope is so nearsighted . . .

Then how about my periscope? It rises out of the mattress with a cunning eye for backdoors.

That's even more disgusting than that kaleidoscope; the way it fixes me with its fractured cyclops eye.

Finally the doctor holds up his stethoscope and wiggles it at her and asks, is madam ready?

Oh, yes, she sighed . . .