Latarnia

Latarnia (lantern, lamp). Also a province along the Baltic coast near the River Inster. The Latarnia headland is almost always cloaked in fog, but it is glimpsed several times a year by steamer passengers on their way to Szczecin from Kaliningrad. Latarnia is famous only for its lighthouses, which are built of stones dug from Iron Age barrows and whitewashed with a mixture made of the crushed bones of exhumed Prussian Junkers.

Little else is to be seen in Latarnia. The seamen there have a saying which goes: "Only fools and lighthouse mirrors reflect."
