Depending on when sound checks are ready, we will open up the event room to participants, aiming for 15 minutes before the event starts, when we will start displaying slides like this one.

Good morning, good afternoon, and good evening to our participants at today's Belonging Talk hosted by the Integration and Belonging Hub at Clark University and co-sponsored by the Strassler Center for Holocaust and Genocide Studies. I'm Anita Fábos, Professor of International Development, Community and Environment at Clark University, and co-convener of the Integration and Belonging Hub. Our speaker today is Elzbieta Gozdziki, who will present her current work and thoughts on Ukrainian Migrants and Middle Eastern Asylum Seekers in Poland.

Tech briefing:

"Before starting the session, let me explain a few technical aspects of the Zoom webinar platform:As always, your active participation in today's discussion is encouraged, and you can submit questions and comments throughout the event.

Use the Q&A button to submit questions to our panelists. Note that if you use the Q&A button, you have the option to submit your question anonymously. This meeting will be recorded and available on our Integration and Belonging website, TBD, and the Strassler Center Website.

Anita introductory remarks:

If you are just joining us, we welcome you to our Integration and Belonging Hub virtual speakers series, "The Belonging Talks." The Integration and Belonging Hub is an initiative of CLark Unviersity, and promotes interdisciplinary collaboration, engagement between academic and community partners, student involvement, and innovative research towards understanding multi-directional processes of migration and social cohesion. Building upon models of urban sustainability, an Integration and Belonging Hub views migrants and refugees as a vital part of 21st-century transformation in the face of significant social, economic, political, and environmental strain.

Today we welcome our speaker Elzbieta Gozdzia. Elzbieta is a migration scholar whose contributisons really span academic research and the world of policy, ranging from human trafficking, migrant children, global health and health disparities, and immigrant integration. Currently, Elzbieta is a Visiting Scholar at Adam Mickiewicz University in Poznan, Poland, where she has taught previously and which is also Elzbieta's alma mater. I know Elzbieta through her previous position at Georgetown's Institute for the Study of International Migration, and due to the immense role she has played in the International Association for the Study of Forced Migration. She is also a fellow anthropologist, and I fondly remember meeting her and her young daughter at conferences and chatting about work-life balance! We are delighted to have you with us, Elzbieta, and look forward to hearing your talk today.

Elzbieta will give her presentation!!!

Thank you Elzbieta for your talk! (remind to turn off PPT) Anita invites questions from the audience
