Depending on when sound checks are ready, we will open up the event room to participants, aiming for 15 minutes before the event starts, when we will start displaying slides like this one.

Good morning, good afternoon, and good evening to our participants at today's Integration and Belonging Hub "Virtual Brown Bag" Series. I'm Anita Fábos, Professor and Associate Director of the International Development, Community, and Environment Department at Clark University, and co-convener of the Integration and Belonging Hub. Our speaker today is Stephanie Acker, who will present her talk, "Beauty and beautification in refugees' lives and its implications for refugee policy".

Tech briefing:

"Before starting the session, let me explain a few technical aspects of the Zoom platform: .....As always, your active participation in today's discussion is encouraged, and you can submit questions and comments throughout the event.

Use the Q&A button to submit questions to our panelists. Note that if you use the Q&A button, you have the option to submit your question anonymously. This meeting will be recorded and available on our soon-to-be launched Integration and Belonging website.

Anita introductory remarks:

If you are just joining us, we welcome you to our second Integration and Belonging Hub virtual brown bag speakers series. The Integration and Belonging Hub is an initiative of Clark University, and promotes collaboration among departments, engagement between academic and community partners, student involvement, and innovative research towards understanding multi-directional processes of migration and social cohesion. Building upon models of urban sustainability, an Integration and Belonging Hub views migrants and refugees as a vital part of 21st-century transformation in the face of significant social, economic, political, and environmental strain.

Today we welcome our speaker Stephanie Acker, a Visiting Scholar at the Department of International Development, Community, and Environment at Clark University, where she has joined the Integration and Belonging Hub as a policy, program, and communications leader and researcher. Stephanie has a Masters in Public Administration from Harvard's Kennedy School of Government, as well as a Presidential Management Fellow award from the US Government. She has held leadership positions with the Bureaus of Homeless Services and Emergency Shelter and Housing for the Boston Public Health Commission, and spent several years with the federal Office of Refugee Resettlement at the US Department of Health and Human Services. Stephanie just concluded a Policy Leader Fellowship at the European University Institute's School of Transnational Governance, where she conducted policy analysis across refugee resettlement and homelessness policy models. Today, Stephanie will speak about her exploratory research to understand the role that beauty and beautification plays in how refugees make home in exile and how this could inform policy frameworks and service-delivery in protracted refugee situations. Welcome Stephanie!

Stephanie will give her presentation!!!

Anita invites questions from the audience

Anita chooses 2 good questions from Q&A and pops them into the Chat for Stephanie to see;
