

University of Rhode Island DigitalCommons@URI

Lesbian Gay Bisexual Transgender Queer Center

The Community, Equity, & Diversity Collections

2011

URI LGBTQ community to screen It Gets Better At URI: Coming Out for Change video 2011

Joseph A. Santiago

University of Rhode Island, balanceheart@hotmail.com

Follow this and additional works at: <http://digitalcommons.uri.edu/glbtc>

 Part of the Broadcast and Video Studies Commons, and the Gender, Race, Sexuality, and Ethnicity in Communication Commons

Recommended Citation

Santiago, Joseph A., "URI LGBTQ community to screen It Gets Better At URI: Coming Out for Change video 2011" (2011). Lesbian Gay Bisexual Transgender Queer Center. Paper 123.
<http://digitalcommons.uri.edu/glbtc/123>

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the The Community, Equity, & Diversity Collections at DigitalCommons@URI. It has been accepted for inclusion in Lesbian Gay Bisexual Transgender Queer Center by an authorized administrator of DigitalCommons@URI. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@etal.uri.edu.

URI LGBTQ community to screen It Gets Better At URI: Coming Out for Change video, Oct. 5

KINGSTON, R.I. – September 29, 2011 –In response to the rash of suicides by lesbian, gay, and transgender youth during the fall of 2010, the national It Gets Better campaign, www.itgetsbetter.org, was launched. Two months later, it became a global movement, leading to than 10,000 videos viewed more than 35 million times.

Inspired by a desire to instill hope in others, members of the URI LGBTQ Women's Group have produced a campus wide version of the It Gets Better video, It Gets Better at URI: Coming Out for Change. Their purpose has been to help those struggling with their sexual or gender identity, to identify other members of the LGBTQ community and their allies with whom they can seek support as well as to provide examples of how URI can create a more welcoming and affirming environment.

Eighty-five URI students, faculty, staff, administrators, and alumni came together to share their moving stories of struggle and perseverance, discrimination and compassion. The film provides personal accounts of what it means to be an ally or member of the lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, queer, questioning community. The video, which runs about 40 minutes, will be screened Wednesday, Oct. 5 at 7 p.m. in Edwards Auditorium, 64 Upper College Road, Kingston. It is free and open to the public.

"The video is really compelling," says Betty-Jo Cugini Greene, supervisor of new media in URI's Department of Communications and Marketing, who helped edit the film. "It's about people sharing their personal stories to try to really make a difference in other people's lives."

"The film illustrates how URI is working toward ending discrimination and intolerance against the LGBTQ community," says Holly Nichols, a clinical counselor at URI's Counseling Center and co-advisor of the LGBTQ Women's group.

A discussion led by four students who are members of the LGBTQ

Women's Group will follow the video. After the discussion, the URI LGBTIQ2 Alumni and Friends Chapter and the URI LBTQ Women's Group will co-host a reception in the URI Alumni Center.

For questions about the screening or the LBTQ Women's Group, contact Holly Nichols at hjnichols@uri.edu. For questions about the reception, contact Jess Raffaele at 401-874-4604 or jraffaele@advance.uri.edu.