About the Auction

Dear friends and supporters,

Thank you for attending, "Lights, Camera, Auction." We appreciate your support of our annual auction. This evening will be filled with live music, great food, raffles, silent and live auctions, and fun. This wonderful annual event is managed entirely by law students, with support from the Feinstein Institute for Legal Service, and is funded by Roger Williams University School of Law and BARBRI.

Proceeds from tonight's auction and raffle will provide stipends for law students who will spend their summers providing unpaid legal work at public interest law organizations in Rhode Island, Southeastern Massachusetts, and across the country. Last year, through a competitive application process, we were able to provide summer stipends to thirty-two law students. Students worked at a range of public interest organizations, including legal services programs, non-profits and government agencies that provide critical legal work to address the unmet needs of disadvantaged clients, families and communities. We urge you to help us provide these stipends to even more students this year to meet the huge demand for this work.

Tonight, you will be able to identify the 2011 stipend recipients by the lanyard nametags they will be wearing. Please take a moment to ask them about their experiences. All of them have a story to share. Your attendance this evening, purchase of raffle tickets, and enthusiastic bidding will enable us to support life-changing legal work.

As you bid on tonight's many wonderful auction items so generously donated by law school supporters, community-oriented businesses, local artists, students, professors, law school staff and administration, we hope you will be as generous as possible.

Now let's start the show!
