Rizzini announces open meeting for rec. facility update

By Bill Winter

The second Open Meeting of the academic year, called by President William Rizzini to discuss issues "critical to the future well being of the institution" has been tentatively scheduled for Friday, February 22, at 12 noon in the Bayroom.

Highlighting the discussion will be updates by Rizzini on financing plans for the proposed recreational facility, a report on the college's long range goals, and a discussion about state aid to RWC.

Also slated for the meeting are reports on the possible sale or lease of the Kaiser aluminum factory, the latest figures on enrollment, and an update on the Dean of the College search.

Rizzini has said he may make a definite statement about the Board of Trustee's efforts to obtain funding for the planned recreational facility, tentatively scheduled to be built by 1981-82. Possible methods of financing being explored by the Trustees include bank loans and tax-free bonds.

Registrar Bart Schiavo is scheduled to report on the progress of the All-College Council's attempts to draw up long range goals for the school.

The discussion part of the meeting will center around the question of state aid to the college. Rizzini said he is hoping for feedback about how dependent the college should be on state aid--and how bound the school will be to the state if it accepts aid.

All facets of the college community--students, faculty, administration, and staff--are encouraged by Rizzini to attend the Open Meeting. "It is an attempt to communicate in a very personal way," he said.

"The issues that are discussed are planned like a state of the college presentation," Rizzini added. "Out of these meetings have come certain mandates that have helped RWC."

Rizzini said if there is any change in the Open Meeting plans, the college community will be informed in advance.

More than half of RWC students oppose re-institution of the draft

By Rich Gluck and Mike McCord

Male and female students at RWC seem to be in agreement about their opposition to the registration for the draft, with over 50 percent of both sexes expressing the opinion they would rather not be forced to serve in the military.

Of the men interviewed, 54 percent were against registration, 40 percent were in favor, six percent had no opinion.

The women were slightly more opposed as a group to military registration with 58 percent opposed, 32 percent in agreement and 10 percent undecided.

Most of the men cited "self-preservation" as their reason for being opposed to the draft. One senior industrial engineering major stated, "I don't want to get killed. It's not right for the government to force me to go. It's a violation of my rights."

An RA said, "I believe the USA is a free country and I'm not free if I have to go."

Another student offered, "I'm against college kids and married people going to war. They should draft everyone under 25 years-old who's not educated and not married. Why should we suffer?"

A senior said, "I'm graduating soon and I won't have a shelter anymore and I don't want to go to war."

Other students were against not only the draft, but war in any form.

A freshman marine biology major said, "I'm a pacifist. I am morally against war and violence."

An accounting major said, "I don't believe in killing." However, one optimistic student suggested that, "all people should lay down our arms and live in peace."

Many male students agree with one sophomore when he said, "I don't think it's necessary at this point."

Surprisingly, out of all the students who were against the draft, only four declared they would "refuse to go."

Among the 40 percent of the males who were in favor of the re-institution of registration, their belief that the present volunteer army just isn't affective enough caused them to stand behind the draft.

"I've seen the way the army works by watching '60 Minutes'," one freshman said. "And if we ever went to war with a volunteer army we would get our asses blown off."

Another freshman said, "Right now the army is crap; derelicts, kids who can't hack school or are too lazy to work, all in for a free ride. If we enlist everyone for two years each, we will be ready for those commies. After all, every man owes four years to his country."

Most other male students who agreed with the idea of the draft did so because they believed in a means of protecting the country. As one freshman said, "We should be prepared."

A junior philosophy major added, "It's a time of international crisis. If we don't draft, we may not be ready if something big happens."

Of the 50 females surveyed -- females who for the first time in history might be drafted -- 58 percent were against the re-institution of the registration.

Many of the women interviewed agreed with the words of one freshman, "I don't think that anyone should have to go to war."

A junior said, "People shouldn't be forced to fight. Patriots shouldn't be forced to kill."

18 to 20 year olds to register

By David Levin

There now appears to be an excellent chance that all RWC students below the age of 20--and a lesser chance that RWC female students--may be forced to register for the draft sometime during the summer.

President Carter recently proposed that men and women aged 19 and 20 register for military service. However, White House officials said while Carter will sign an executive order next week requiring young men to register for the draft, he needs congressional approval for his plan to include women.

In explaining his decision to include women in the program, Carter said, "There is no distinction possible, on the basis of ability or performance, that would allow me to exclude women from an obligation to register."

Carter cited his action as "a recognition of the reality that both women and men are working members of our society."

However, some White House aides are now suggesting that even if such a measure pertaining to women was approved, Carter would seek only the registration of women--not the actual drafting of them.

Now it seems evident that Carter decided to seek authority to register women for the draft only after determining that the chances for passage of such legislation through Congress is highly unlikely.

The pay-off for all of this effort on the President's part is that by allowing Congress to defeat the proposal, Carter can avoid alienating some supporters of the Equal Rights Amendment. Such supporters will be appeased by this effort to recognize their belief that any draft must include both men and women, in Carter's opinion.

Under Carter's plans, registration would be accomplished by having all people aged 19 and 20 go to a local post office and fill out a form giving their name, address, date of birth and Social Security number.

This bulk of information would then be fed into government computers. Under the current plan, there would be no draft cards, classifications or medical

LaBonta and Stephenson appointed as new senators

By Jane Scott

Because of recent resignations from the RWC Student Senate, two runners-up from the last senate election, Matt LaBonta and Wendy Stephenson, have been added to the Senate roster.

LaBonta and Stephenson are replacing Don Uhlig, who resigned last semester, and Carlos Tosta who just resigned his post last week.

Tosta cited "academics" as his reason for leaving the Senate, while adding, "I plan to remain involved with the committee working on the construction of the new gym."

Both LaBonta and Stephenson feel confident about their appointments to the Senate. LaBonta said, "Before last semester I was a senator for two years, and since then I have been helping out the senate in any way possible."

During the past semester LaBonta was the financial director for the Student Senate social committee. "Among other things, I plan to remain active on the social committee," he said.

"The main thing I plan to work on," LaBonta continued, "is communications between the senate and the students -- of which I think there is a lack."

Small Change

Feeding the machines

By Kimberly Tinkham

Each day, uncounted numbers of quarters, dimes and nickles are transferred from students' pockets and purses into the more than the three dozen vending machines on campus.

And according to Director of the Student Union Peter DiSarro, this huge amount of pocket change not only provides students with coffee, soft drinks, and candy, but also valuable additional services students may not be aware of.

Lynch Vending -- the company responsible for all vending machines and electronic games at RWC -- has donated several "special" intems for students' use. Among these are the television in the Rat, and new pool cues. A possible future donation is a new TV for the lounge area near the Senate office.

According to DiSarro, who is responsible for obtaining the services of a vending company, Lynch does a job he is happy with.

No solution to dormitory students' complaints about cold showers

By Jane Scott

Although many students in the old dorm are complaining their showers are colder than they have ever been, RWC Chief Engineer Al Adams says, "We have not turned down the water temperature or pressure, this is a problem that happens every semester."

Ever since returning from January vacation, students in the various units have been complaining about the "freezing showers every morning", as one student in Unit 7 put it. "The water comes out slow and not hot enough, making it kind of hard to force yourself to step into that icy water first thing in the morning," another resident sated.

Adams said, "The pressure is not something we have control over, the town of Bristol regulates that. But the temperature we do control."

Adams explained that the water temperature was not deliberately lowered and is not a step taken by the Energy Conservation Committee.

"I monitor the water temperature and volume down at the boiler room," Adams said. "Monday at 6:15 am there were 500 gallons in the new dorm's tank at 168 degrees. At 8:15 a.m. the volume was way down and the temperature was 100 degrees. It takes half an hour for the volume and temperature to rise again."

"This shows that excessive amounts of water are being used during the early hours of the morning," Adams explained. "The problem with the water pressure is something that I've noticed for years."

"Bristol is one of the lowest pressure areas I know" Adams continued. An average water pressure is 50 pounds. Bristol sets their water pressure at 30 pounds, and that sometimes falls as low as 20 pounds during peak times."

Low pressure and water temperature, therefore, are a continuous problem, only to be avoided -- but not solved -- by using the showers when there is a lesser demand on the precious hot water. For, as one student did point out, "The water is fine during the evening."

Adams, who -- in his position as Chief Engineer -- is also responsible for heating, ventilation, plumbing and electricity at the school, pointed out changes that have taken place in the heating for the dormitories.

"Recently," Adams said, "the man who controls the heat in the dorms -- Vice-President Robert McKenna -- said it was too hot down there and told me to turn down the heat."

McKenna instructed Adams to reduce the temperature in the dorms to 66 degrees. "Right now," said Adams, "it costs the school $200 per student per semester to heat the dorms" according to a report put out by McKenna's office.

"The whole object of this conservation project is to try to reduce that cost," Adams pointed out. "We are having no problem acquiring the oil to heat the school, but the price is going up every two to three weeks."

Noticing the possibility that the water pressure in some of the showers is different than in others, Adams said, "This may be due to flaws in the plumbing or the mechanisms of the shower themselves.

Senate opposes registration and raised drinking age

By Bill Winter

The Student Senate recently drew up an ambitious list of goals they would like to accomplish--ranging from organizing student support against efforts to raise the drinking age and reinstate registration for the draft, to an examination of various campus services.

Highlighting the meeting were votes against the raising of the drinking age in Rhode Island and the reinstatement of registration for the draft.

In an open letter to the student body (see page 4) Senate President Steve Fusco explained the Senate does not think raising the drinking age will solve the alcohol problem, but will just change the location.

A committee was set up to begin circulating a petition and to urge students to write letters to legislators asking them to vote against raising the drinking age.

Another committee is being organized to act against the reinstatement of draft registration, which President Jimmy Carter has stated he favors. The committee plans to invite guest speakers to the campus to discuss both sides of the issue, and also plans to urge students to share their opinions on the matter with their various state congressmen.

Committees were also organized to examine the bursars office, the registrars office, and the admissions office. The senators involved plan to check with other colleges and find what services they provide through the bursar and registrar offices, and perhaps make recommendations at this school to improve service and reduce student complaints.

More immediate problems that individual senators expressed a desire to tackle included having all dorm windows caulked, making sure a student phone number directory is published, repaving the road into the campus, installing a bike rack by the Student Center, getting lights put up by the dirt parking lot, and setting up a picnic area behind the Student Center with picnic tables and grills.

Other projects to be done include maintaining a satisfactory bus schedule for the Bristol Motor Lodge, tuning the pianos on campus, constructing a Senate information board by the Senate office, getting a mailbox constructed in or by the Student Center, getting the flag in front of the Administration Building hung at half mast for the hostages in Iran, and dismantling all the lounge rooms in both dorms.

Stephenson, a first-time senator, said, "I feel confident that I can do a good job and make a decision that's right -- which doesn't necessarily mean that it will agree with my own personal feelings -- but means that it will be the right decision for the majority of the students I am supposed to be representing."

As one of her goals on the Senate, Stephenson said, "I plan to work to get the numbers on the doors in the Science Business building changed so people can find their classes. Right now it's really hard to find SB124 when all the rooms say SM."

"I have only been in one Senate meeting so far this semester," Stephenson said, "but one first impression I got was that there are too many separate committees in the Senate. Right now we've got people on eight or nine committees. There's only so much one person can do."

"As a group the Senate should try to set our goals high, but not too high," Stephenson said. "Climbing Mt. Everest is ridiculous."

"We're a good organization," Stephenson added. "I really think that we can do some important things."

Both of the new senators spoke out in favor of the recent stand taken by the Senate to oppose the draft. Stephenson said, "I think our statement against the draft is important, because the senate should be a group that the student body can look up to. But, that's hard sometimes."

"There are several steps to be taken in working on anti-registration," LaBonta said. "First we will be informing the students and finding out how they feel. Then we will make our opinion known to the school and to the state of Rhode Island."

Stephenson said, "I don't think students get out and talk enough. They're too ready to sit in their rooms."

"I think we need to find some way to get in touch with the students," Stephenson continued. "At the very least we should list our numbers somewhere in case students have any gripes or would like to contact one of us."

"I would like to see more students at our meetings," LaBonta said. "I think it gets stagnant when it's just senators."

"We can represent the students just so far," LaBonta added. "We need them to come to us and tell us what they think."

Conservation contest gets underway in both dorms

By Kimberly Tinkham

Starting two weeks ago, and running until the end of May, the Energy Conservation Committee and the Student Services office will be sponsoring a conservation contest in an effort to cut down on the college's energy costs.

The winning floor or unit will receive a steamship round and champagne dinner in the Bayroom at the end of the contest.

The scoring for the contest is as follows: 10 points for keeping lights off during the day; 10 points for keeping lounge and room windows closed, and 20 points for keeping floor and hall doors shut.

Each side of the floors is independently responsible for keeping the lights shut off and the hall doors shut. The lounge door on the floors will be the responsibility of both sides of the floor.

Judging of the contest will be done at random intervals by a representative of the Student Services office. Individual rooms will only be checked if the door is open and someone is inside.

Point tallies will be posted weekly for all the units and floors on a chart in the cafeteria.

The contest is the brainchild of Student Senator Gretchen Ebel and Director of Student Service William O'Connell.

Ebel said, "The reason for the contest was to remind students to conserve. Saving energy can be like taking a bitter pill, and the contest is like a sugar coating over the pill."

PRESS CLIPPINGS

Free C starts today

Three "Free C" courses will be holding their first meetings today and Saturday to any members of the RWC community interested in taking the free, non-credit classes.

Tonight at 6 pm in the Bayroom, Bridge for Beginners, taught by Mary White Oates, will be offered for up to 16 people. The course will consist of one hour of instruction, followed by one hour of playing time.

Also tonight, in CL 119 at 7:30 pm, Joshua Stein will be offering Naked Eye Astronomy. Students will learn about star patterns constellations, phases of the moon, and special phenomon.

On Feb. 16, W. DeWolf Fulton will be offering Outdoorsmanship at 10 am in SB 121. The course will include rock climbing, backpacking, camping, and first aid. Class limit is 10-12 people.

Editorial positions available

Any students interested in applying for the positions of News or Administrative Editor of the Quill should contact the Quill office (x2200) before Friday.

Scholarship forms ready

Applications are now being accepted for the RWC Faculty Association Scholarship. There are two $400 scholarships awarded annually by the Association.

Application forms may be picked up at the Financial Aid office in the administration building or from Paul Langello in SB 111. The deadline for all applications is May 1, 1980

WROG position open

WROG will be holding elections for the position of Business Mgr., Feb. 15. Any students who are interested should call the radio station at 255-2288, or stop by the WROG's main office, located in the New Dorm, first floor north.

Other positions open at WROG are Sales Manager, Sports Director, Sales Staff, News Writers, and Disc Jockeys.

Summer Co-op's available

Several summer cooperative education positions are available for RWC students majoring in law, business and engineering.

According to Fran Katzanek, Director of Co-op, a number of business positions are available for this summer and next fall. Recruiters will be at RWC sometime in March. Students interested should set up interview appointments as soon as possible.

Law Enforcement summer co-op program interviews will be conducted on Feb. 26, and there are several engineering assignments with the Dept. of the Navy. Anyone interested in having a interview should contact Kenneth Osborne, in the Co-op office.

Feb. 28 at 3 pm in the Bay room, the Cooperative Education staff will speak out about various other summer employment opportunities available for RWC students.

Temporary solution to soiled water at Nike

By Dawn Schauer

Problems with foul-smelling water at the North Campus have apparently been resolved--temporarily, at least--with the installation of new water filters that have silenced student complaints.

Faulty underground pipes are being blamed as the cause of the discolored, sulfur-smelling water that has been bothering Nike students for more than four months.

"The problem was that the filters needed to be changed more often," said Physical Plant Director William Nott. "We will be changing them more frequently."

Housing Director Barbara Love admitted the changing of filters is only a temporary solution, and said the pipes will be dug up and replaced over the summer months.

The pipes were not replaced last semester because of the high cost--estimated at $100,000 by the Physical Plant--of digging up the frozen ground.

North Campus students first brought the problem of "Brown water" to the attention of their resident assistants last semester, although the administration has been aware of the inferior water at the old Nike base for a number of years.

"We couldn't drink it or wash our clothes, and it was pretty hard to take a shower, too," said one student.

The RAs informed the Housing Department of the problem, who in turn referred it to the Physical Plant. Because of the high cost of replacing the pipes at that time, the Physical Plant reported there was little they could do.

Consequently, anger at the Administration's lack of action mounted at the North Campus. Resident Assistants Mike Numez and Steve Richardelli took samples of the water, with sediment clinging to the bottom of the test tubes, to the Housing Office, who passed them on to the Administration.

The problem was finally tackled over the January intersession. Students returned to the North Campus this semester to find a memo from Dean of Students Karen Haskell. It explained the filters had been changed, and although the solution was temporary, the water was drinkable.

The students were also offered the opportunity to get a room on campus or at Almeida if they were still not satisfied with the water. However, Love reports that no students have requested a transfer.

"They like the fraternity atmosphere and the conveniences of a kitchen and color television," she said.

One student at the North Campus said, "The water's fine now. We all have single rooms here and we're very comfortable. Why should we want to leave now?"

Quill editors resign today

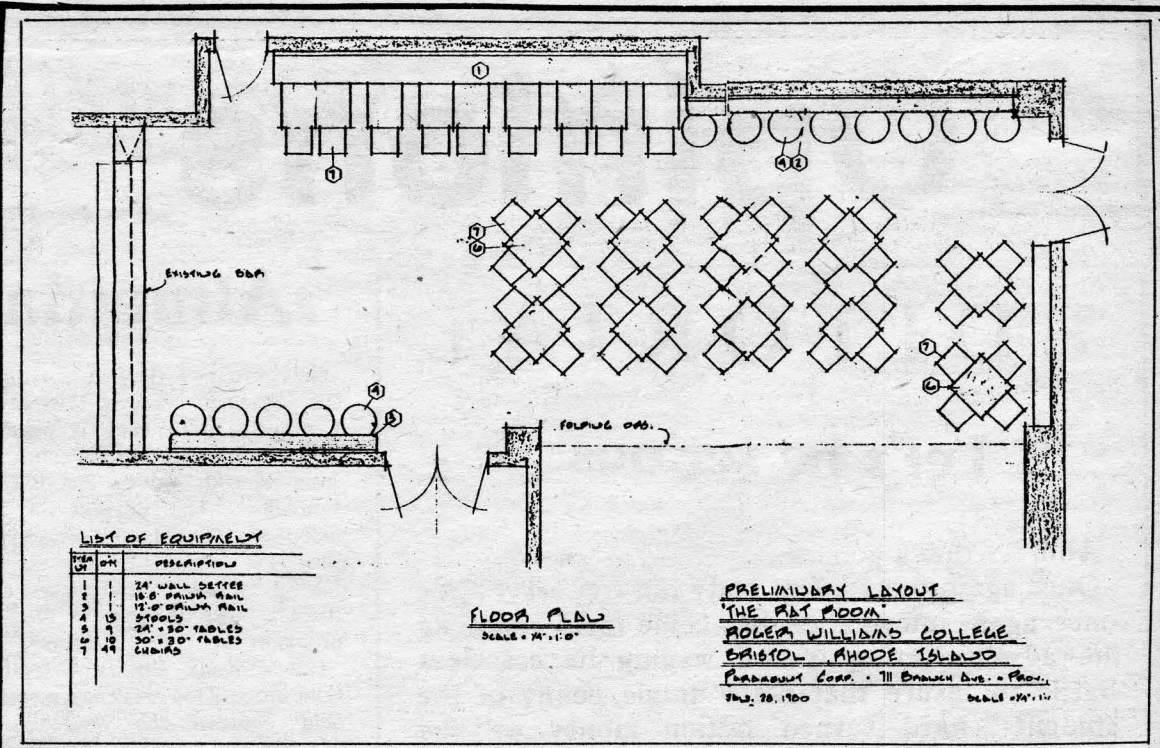

At the Student Publication Board of Directors' meeting last Friday, both Quill Editor-In-Chief William Winter and News Editor Kimberly Newton resigned from their positions effective today.

Before nine of the 13-member board, Winter resigned due to "academic reasons," and Newton resigned because of time commitments with her resident assistant position.

It is expected that at tomorrow's Board meeting -- in accordance with the Quill Organizational Charter -- Jane Scott will be appointed Editor-in-Chief. Scott is currently the Administrative Editor of the Quill.

Reflecting on his job as Quill Editor, Winter said, "I believe that during the past semester, the Quill has set a standard of professionalism that I am confident will continue in the future."

Before leaving, Newton said "I am proud of our 30-member staff. Without them, RWC wouldn't have had such a high-quality newspaper."

Feedback wanted on Rat plans

Director of the Student Center Peter DiSarro is currently waiting for student feedback on the proposed redecoration of the Rathskeller--the cost of which could run as high as $7,000.

DiSarro has already received one bid from the Paramount Fountain and Restaurant Supply Corp., and is waiting for another two bids to come in before deciding which company will get the contract. A February 18 deadline has been set by DiSarro for the bids.

The bids will be based on a preliminary floor plan for the redesigned Rat, which calls for 13 barroom seats to be set up along the walls, new booths, and 10 new table and chair sets.

Once the bids are received, DiSarro said he will make the final decision on which company will get the contract, and on the final decorating decision.

DiSarro said it will take six to eight weeks from the time the order is placed for the furniture to arrive and be installed, so students should not expect any changes in the Rat until perhaps the third week in April.

Before making final decisions on how the Rat will be redecorated, DiSarro said he is hoping for more student input. He said he is especially interested in hearing what students think about the drawn floor plans.

DiSarro can be reached in his office on the second floor in the Student Center.

Conscientious objectors could avoid draft by registering

The Central Committee for Conscientious Objectors has announced that they are registering individuals who are opposed to participation in the military.

Larry Spears, director of CCCO's Youth and Conscientious Objection Campaign, says "The need for young people to go on record as conscientious objectors to war has never been greater than it is today."

According to Spears, "There is a very real possibility that Congress will pass a bill, after the 1980 elections, requiring the mandatory registration of young people with Selective Service. Young Americans should start thinking about whether they could participate in the military."

Spears say that CCCO has already registered several thousand young people through its conscientious objection card. "These cards are available from CCCO, P.O. Box 155796, Philadelphia, PA 19103. They simply state 'Because of my beliefs about war, I am opposed to participation in the military.'"

According to Betty Alexander, a Nationally elected spokesperson in Washington, the cards could carry a lot of weight in convincing a draft board of an objector's sincerity. "It sounds like a rational approach," she said. "It shows the applicant is not experiencing a late crystallization of beliefs.

"They (CCCO) are a very organized group. They know a statement made at this time would carry a lot of weight. If the draft is reinstated and a young man can prove he went on record in a time when he was not in danger of going to war, then it might have some influence on his board."

"The usefulness of this card," says Spears, "is that it provides a record of an individual's opposition to war and the military. Under current Selective Service regulations, an individual who is called up for active duty will have only 10 days to put together his or her CO claim. This CO card will help demonstrate to the military the thousands of young people who will not serve in the military even if the nation returns to the draft."

Students opposed to draft

were against the draft because of moral or religious reasons. One such student said, "It's against my religious beliefs. Going to war won't do anyone any good."

"I don't believe in war at all. It is unnecessary," were the words of an accounting major. And another student added simply, "I'm not for. I hate it. I won't go."

Females were more determined in their opposition to the registration than men. They offered such comments as, "The draft is no good. I'd move to Canada."

Thirty-two percent of those females surveyed were for the draft. One administration of justice major summed up many of the comments by saying, "We have to do something. Everyone is running over us and we have to do something."

Several patriotic females voiced their opinions. For instance, as one freshman said, "War is wrong, but without the draft we're going to get shafted. We will let the world know that we are not going to sit around and we'll have a proud America."

"We can't just sit around and let Russia take over," was the feeling of one law major.

A few females, although they were for the draft, had their own suggestions for running it. For instance, a freshman marine biology major suggested a draft "only for people over 20 years-old. The president thinks that 18-20 year-olds have no goals, but if they take people in that age bracket they will come back with no education and no jobs and have to start all over again. However, if they take people over 20, they will have something to come back to."

Another freshman said, "If they are going to raise the adult age in one way (drinking) they should raise it all ways."

And a business major said, "I'm for the draft, but I don't want the world to go to war."

Almeida grievance comm. formed due to complaints

By Dawn Schauer

At Almeida's hour-long gripe session on Jan. 31, residents complained enough about faulty security, thermometer locks and missing furniture that a grievance committee was formed to handle future problems.

Twenty students who attended the meeting complained to administrators that locked thermostats were ineffective in some apartments due to poor insulation, poor lighting and faulty locking devices were security problems, furniture was missing from many apartments, and there were not enough parking spaces.

During the meeting the administrators present, Director of Student Services William O'Connell, Vice President Robert McKenna, Housing Directors Peter Sherman and Barbara Love, Physical Plant Director William Nott, Chief of Security Carl Wilke and Almeida Night Manager Paul Nalette, formed the grievance committee out of interested students to solve present and future problems.

According to administrators all of the gripes presented at the session will be solved shortly. O'Connell said "The apartments that complain of bad insulation will be examined, and some attempt will be made to better insulate those that warrant it. However, complete insulation will be a longer process."

"Any students needing desks have been asked to come to the game room this morning from 9 am to noon. Town House students who don't have curtains were told measurements would be taken of their windows and either curtains already in stock will be installed or new ones would be purchased.

Parking complaints have been referred to the college parking committee.

Members of the grievance committee are O'Connell, Love, Steve Turano, Jeff Cathcart, Bonnie Clark, Roger Carroll, Larry Beck and John Mount.

Opinions

EDITORIAL

Let's be serious

Ahh... thank goodness.

Once again the student body can rest easy... for once again information has come forth revealing the administration is still waging its ceaseless battle to insure that not a single penny of the students' hard earned tuition money will be wasted.

The issue at hand, apparently, is whether or not the secretaries will be allowed to have a cup of coffee at their desks while they are working.

It seems the administration--eagle-eyed, money-savers all--finally realized the enormous amount of work that was not getting done because they were allowing secretaries to spend uncountable hours each day drinking gallons of coffee at their desks.

Therefore, affective last month, the administration announced that except for during the two 15 minute coffeebreaks, which are guaranteed in the clerical union's contract, no secretaries will be allowed to have any food or drink at their desks.

After all, pointed out the administration, it doesn't say in their contract they can drink coffee at their desks, so we don't have to let them.

The secretaries, naturally agogge at the petty vindictiveness of the move, have filed a formal grievance procedure against the administration.

It may seem unnecessary even to point this out, but there must be better ways for the administration to be spending its time than thinking up silly rules to get revenge on the clerical union.

It might also be pointed out that treating the secretaries in such a smug, condescending way is hardly the proper way to insure maximum work and good relations.

Actually, the smartest thing to do is probably for the administration to just say, "Forget the whole thing," and then treat their secretaries to a cup of coffee... at their desks.

Speak Out!

The gauntlet has been thrown. President Carter has announced he will re-institute registration for the draft, and everyone but the intentionally blind will recognize this as the first step toward the draft.

Unless all those affected by this move--20 year olds and under--and all those concerned about the threat of war make their feelings immediately known, they will only have themselves to blame when the United State's saber-rattling turns to open warfare.

Almeida gripes will be solved

On February 7, the first meeting of the Almeida Courts Grievance Committee was held between a representative group of students from Almeida Courts and Bill O'Connell. The purpose of the meeting was to point out some of the problems residents of Almeida are having with their apartments, and discuss possible solutions to these problems.

The Almeida Courts Grievance Committee is the result of a meeting held between the residents of Almeida and administration during which a communications problem between these two parties was recognized.

It was because of this breakdown, many complaints residents voiced weren't getting to the proper people and, as a result, nothing was being done about them.

The Almeida Grievance Committee was created to increase communications between residents and administrators so complaints could be better dealt with.

The first meeting of the Committee mainly dealt with recognizing what problems exist, placing them in order of importance, and then deciding on the best way to deal with these problems as effectively and efficiently as possible.

Such items discussed were desks for those who need them, insulation for apartments in need, lowering the speed bumps, curtains for townhouses lacking them, and doing something about the parking problem at Almeida.

Action concerning the distribution

Commentary by Bonnie Clark of desks and getting insulation for needy apartments was taken. On Feb. 12 and 14, residents of Almeida will be able to go to the pool, ask for a desk, receive the desk that day, and sign up for insulation to be put in. A member of the committee agreed to also be a representative of the Parking Committee to deal with that problem. Bill O'Connell had already scheduled a meeting with a curtain-maker for the following day to measure for curtains for those townhouses lacking them. Finally, another meeting was set up that would include those administrators involved with the decision to lower the speed bumps.

In my opinion, this first meeting of the Almeida Grievance Committee was successful. It let the administration know of the complaints at Almeida so that something could be done. It showed by some of the actions taken that the administration is willing to help solve these problems.

But, it must be remembered that the future success of this committee depends just as much on the support of all Almeida residents as it does on the administration. If residents don't let the committee know when they have a complaint, then the committee can't act on it.

Therefore, it is up to the residents to do their job by contacting committee members when they have a problem and keep after them until some course of action is taken. If this is done, maybe then living at Almeida will be enjoyable for everyone.

Letters To The Editor

Senate's stands

To the Editor:

I am writing this letter to the entire student body, to inform them of recent Student Senate actions on two very important issues facing the college community, the state of Rhode Island, and the nation.

As you are well aware, the Rhode Island state legislature is currently considering a bill to raise the drinking age. The Senate feels that such a move would not be in the best interest of Roger Williams College.

We are circulating a petition among the students and encouraging everyone to write to the legislators stating their opinions.

We oppose the raising of the drinking age for many reasons. Raising the drinking age will not stop 18 and-or 19 year olds from drinking; instead it will just change the location where they drink.

At Roger Williams College this will have the effect of moving the drinking out of the healthy atmosphere of the Rathskeller and into the dormitories. Enacting this change during the mid-stream of the semester (namely May 1, 1980) will have its own disastrous results. We feel that raising the drinking age and splitting the student body in half will greatly harm the college community.

The second concern regards the re-instatement of registration for the draft. Our goal is to encourage the President of the United States and other politicians to consider other alternatives to war by opposing the registration. We hope to accomplish this by inviting responsible persons to campus to talk about both sides of the issue and once again encourage students to get involved by writing letters to their legislators stating their personal opinion.

Two separate pieces of legislation which embody the ideas presented in this letter were passed on February 5, 1980 at a regular meeting of the Roger Williams College Student Senate.

We urge all students to contact the Senate for more information about what they can do to help in this effort.

Respectfully,

Steven Fusco

Student Senate President

To the Editor:

I would like to commend Jane Scott on her article, "It does not compute," printed in the previous Quill issue. It was quite informative and well written.

My question is, who gave Miss Scott or anyone else on the Quill staff the authority to see my grades? When she phoned for the survey I didn't have to give her one number; she already had them.

Is this information always that easy to get hold of?

Under the Freedom of Information Act, every student is given a form at the beginning of each academic year which he or she can fill out. The form is designed for the protection of each student's personal information, including address, phone number, grades, etc. Each student is given the option of filling out this form and keeping the information confidential.

In the case of Mr. LeBlanc, there is no form on file requesting this information be kept confidential.

Predicting the 80's at RWC

By Bill Winter

Although the new decade is but six weeks old, various administrators, faculty, and students have already begun considering what the remaining nine years and 46 weeks of the 1980's will hold for RWC.

Covering issues from student government to faculty changes; from the financial situation of small colleges to unions; from student life to the philosophy of the institution, seven members of the college community recently answered the question: What do the 80's hold for RWC?

The College

William Rizzini, President

"I hope the college will be known as an aggressive, forward looking institution which has lived up to its reputation of helping students achieve their stated goals," President William Rizzini said while looking forward to a decade of great changes that the college will have to prepare students to cope with.

"I think we have to prepare students to cope with the culture of the '80's," he said, a culture where--he believes--the rights of the individual will be more respected, Americans will learn to live with less, and a revolution in communications will take place.

To achieve this goal, Rizzini sees the college getting more lab space, more classroom space, more library space; expanding the technical sciences taught at the college, but most of all, staying together as a community.

"I hope in ten years," he said, "the faculty, staff, and administration will work as closely and as well with students as they do now. I hope we never lose the caring for students we have now."

Student government

Steve Fusco, Senate President

President of the Student Senate Steve Fusco, looks forward to a

Kaiser could be demolished

The Kaiser Aluminum Factory, which was donated to the college over two years ago, may be demolished by a private construction company if RWC can't sell the site soon.

The factory, which was zoned by the town of Bristol as "industrial", has been a lengthy burden for the college. Over the years the college has considered using it for classrooms and dormitories, as housing for the elderly, and last year they announced that the building was on the auction block.

According to President William Rizzini, the college has hired a Newport-based realtor, J.W. Ricker to sell the property. "If we are unable to sell the property, it is possible the college may hire to have the site demolished," he said.

"I'm anxious for action," Rizzini said. "We would prefer to have a buyer purchase the entire site, but if someone only wanted the building in part, that's fine too."

Rizzini said the college has had over 12 inquiries and two offers.

The RWC Board of Trustees formed an ad-hoc committee last June to study marketing proposals for the property. At that time the college was considering developing the site, but the Board decided against the move.

Earlier this year, when the college sought a land use change in order to sell a portion of the property for construction of housing for the elderly, the Bristol Town-Council denied the request, and left the land zoned industrial.

decade in which student government will play a greater role in the lives of the students on campus.

"I think the Student Senate will be taking more of a leadership role in matters affecting the students' futures. They will have to take stands on issues--internal issues, but also issues that effect them on a greater scale--on state and national issues," Fusco said.

To increase the Senate's influence on campus, Fusco is hoping for a student member on the college's Board of Trustees, and "more representation on other college committees that carry clout."

Finances

Robert McKenna, Vice President

Despite an uncertain economic future facing the whole country, Vice President of the college Robert McKenna, said confidently, "I think we will survive."

McKenna looks forward to a decade where the school's biggest problems will be its "ability to compete with public colleges because of tuition costs. It is a problem now, and will become more intense in the later half of the 80's. It will be tougher and tougher to convince students that a private college is worth the extra money."

However, McKenna said he sees ways to get around the problems: "We must offer more and better programs."

Along with changes in academia, McKenna also predicts physical changes to the campus, including a finished recreational facility, a small apartment-type dorm on campus and a facility on the waterfront, such as a dock and swimming platforms.

This combination of academics and a more attractive campus that he sees in the future leads McKenna to predict, "I think we'll still be here when a lot of other private colleges don't survive."

Student Life

William O'Connell, Director of Student Services

Student life, said Director of Student Services William O'Connell, can be broken down into seven areas--all of which will undergo major changes over the new decade.

Career Education--"We are going to have to make serious investments in the area of Career Education," O'Connell said, because in the 80's, students will go to the college that can guarantee them jobs when they graduate.

Counseling Service--"I see counseling services really supporting career education on one level--helping students discover what they want to do. Yet, I see a need for competent counselors because of the lack of support from the family unit," O'Connell said.

Student Activities--O'Connell suggests that in the 80's, the area of student activities will turn increasingly toward the adult segment of the student population, and feature professional speakers about careers. "We will have to put a lot more thought into the student activities," O'Connell said.

Athletics--On tap for the school is a fieldhouse, not a gym, O'Connell said--one that could be used by students, old or young.

Health Services--"There is a greater need to get the nurses out of Health service and into the apartments and dorms," O'Connell said, "to talk about health education and preventive health."

Residential Life--It is apartments, not dormitories, which will attract students in the 80's, predicts O'Connell. "Dorm life is becoming increasingly unpopular," O'Connell said, which is why Almeida was one step in the right direction for the school.

Orientation--"Orientation of freshmen needs to be more specialized," O'Connell said. To accomplish this, he suggested that in future years, freshmen may get orientated in small groups over the summer instead of in one large group at the beginning of the academic year.

All these changes, O'Connell said, will help the school move more into the area of adult education, and become a more special college for the "typical student"--steps the institution must take to survive.

Academics

Edwin Wilde, Dean of the College

"I think the school will continue to improve academically," Wilde said, looking at the coming decade. "It's going to be a struggle, but it will continue. If it ever stops improving it will be in jeopardy."

The 80's, predicts Wilde, will be a decade of increasing competition for a shrinking high school population to recruit from. To stay afloat, RWC must begin tailoring its programs to a new type of student, with new types of academic needs.

Among these new programs, Wilde sees applied math and computer science, a five year architectural program with EPCD accreditation, and para-legal studies. Taking these new courses will be more adult students, Wilde believes, saying that the population of "traditional students" has already peaked.

Other possible changes in the near future for RWC, suggests Wilde, could be the school closing down for two months over January and February to save energy, and becoming an institution that is more "world wise" and more aware of world problems--perhaps through visiting scholars. "The more the school improves," Wilde said, "the better its chance for survival."

Faculty

Phil Schyler, President of the Faculty Union

President of the Faculty Union Phil Schyler said that as students improve over the years because of tightening admissions policies teachers are going to have to change with them.

"The college is becoming more selective for students," he said, "and new faculty will be expected to be highly qualified." However, he believes the present faculty will have to adjust, also.

"I think the bulk of the faculty came here around '69 to '71, and adapted to a student body that was different. Students are better prepared now, and expect more. If the faculty tries to go to sleep, they will find they are in trouble with the students."

Schyler also sees the new computer technology playing an increasingly important part in RWC education over the next 10 years, and proposes that mini-computers will start being phased into many different departments.

Unions

Stan Jakobiak, Dean of Administrative Services

"We've got tough sledding in the 80's," Dean of Administrative Service Stan Jakobiak said. "We've got to get together. And I think we will."

Jakobiak admits that dealing with the three unions on campus--who's contracts come up for renegotiation every two years--will be a challenge in the 80's, but thinks the college can handle it. "All the unions seem to think about RWC," he said, "They care about RWC. It would be a problem if they didn't care."

Jakobiak sees some simple steps that can be taken to make the coming years smoother for union-administration interaction. "I think it's in the best interest of the institution if both parties get their acts together. No group can afford to make demands that would harm the institution. I think we've been levelheaded so far, and entering the 80's we are going to have to be." If both sides can do this, Jakobiak thinks the school will avoid the possibility of strikes, and insure the survival of the RWC.

Now is the time To consider The two year option

If you're thinking of leaving college this semester, you may want to consider the benefits of the Army's 2 year enlistment option.

A Chance To Learn. Joining for two years offers you a limited choice of Army specialties. But, there are still many challenging choices available that will test your skill, strength and stamina. Plus, you may be eligible for assignment in Europe. You'll learn discipline, responsibility and leadership. Qualities that can make you a better person.

A Chance To Save. Starting pay is now up to $448.80 a month (before deductions). Plus, the Veteran's Educational Assistance Program (VEAP, for short) will help you accumulate as much as $7400 to continue college at a later date. (Ask your Army recruiter for details.)

A Chance To Serve. Our country has always counted on the soldier. It still does. And you'll be a prouder person for having served your 2 years in the Army. You'll gain experience, maturity and a clearer idea of what you want.

For more information, see your local Army representative. Look in the yellow pages under "Recruiting." Or call our toll free number.

Profile

Franklin: 30 years and still smiling

By Jane Scott

Barbara Franklin has traveled with Roger Williams College through 30 years of ups, downs, beginnings and several near endings.

During that time she has learned to satisfy the widely varying needs of four presidents, survived the rebellious Vietnam era and changed her philosophy time and again to meet the changing goals of the college.

But even with such a history behind her -- and unknown changes still to come -- one can still enter the administration building and mount those silently padded golden stairs to encounter a woman who says she tries always to remember, "to be gracious and take time out for people and their needs."

"Thirty years is a long time," Franklin said, "but the college is still my favorite topic." Franklin was originally hired as the secretary to the president of the college, and has remained in that capacity throughout her tenure at RWC.

"I have seen a lot in my time here," Franklin said. "In the early years there were times when we thought the school wouldn't go. On days like that my stomach would drop, and I used to get nervous."

In 'those days' the college was affiliated with the Providence YMCA, was not accredited, and awarded only associate degrees.

"But as the school began to grow, they didn't know what to do with it," Franklin explained. "We needed to get away from the YMCA to have our own identity. That's when we incorporated -- in 1956 -- and when the school first was called Roger Williams College."

In that time the school has seen many changes. The YMCA was left behind, the Providence campus moved and the Bristol campus came into being.

But the biggest influence on the college -- more than relocations or physical changes -- has always been the people who have brushed through the doors of RWC.

"Each generation of students is a little different from the one before," Franklin said. "The kids of today are much different from those of the 70's. And people from other institutions have noticed this also, and agree."

"There were factors back then that made the students the way they were," she said. "But today there is no Vietnam. There is no Kent State."

"I have noticed," Franklin said, "that today's students are much freer, much more open."

Many of the students of the previous decades however were anything but 'free and open' as Barbara Franklin saw them from day-to-day in her office.

"We had so much conflict then that it's good to be without it for a while," Franklin commented. "But it is also good to have a cause -- a positive one -- to get behind."

One of Franklin's own great causes has been that of adapting herself to each of the different presidents she has worked for.

"Each of the presidents has been different," Franklin said. "Every one of them has contributed their own thing to the school."

For instance, "President Chancy was a great one for attention to detail.

But following him was President Gauvey who was anything but a stickler for detail."

"In such a situation," Franklin said, "it's you who must change and gear yourself to that person. Sometimes that means turning your whole philosophy around. It is difficult, but you manage, because it's part of the job."

Franklin said, "I am constantly finding that things I thought were important yesterday are no longer important because I'm working for another person now."

Electronic machines provide more than munchies and fun diversions

"The vending company is very cooperative when it comes to something they think the students will enjoy," said DiSarro. "All the electronic games in the game room are of the newest variety. I go to various places and see what is popular. Then I ask the vending company to supply the ones that seem to give the best challenge."

According to the vending company, they are currently supplying RWC with about $22,500 worth of electronic games. DiSarro said the money made by the machines goes partially into a commission for RWC, and the rest to the company itself.

"It is not a clear profit in either case," DiSarro said. "The school has to pay for electricity to run the machines, keeping the machines clean, and staffing the game room."

The company itself must pay for reloading and maintenance of the machines. "Also," DiSarro said, "the company's money goes to any loss that occurs, such as in the juice machines. Even though the machines are serviced three times a week, there is still a lot of spoilage."

"This is why the juice cost is so high," he said.

According to DiSarro, students can come to him and suggest types of candy and soda that might be offered in machines.

"If a student wants a certain kind of candy in the machines he just has to come to me and I will talk to the vending company about putting it in. Generally, if it sells, it stays. "Of course, in the summer all the chocolate candy has to go because it melts," said DiSarro.

DiSarro also indicated the school may get Coke back, but it will cost the same as 7up and Dr. Pepper. He explained the machines currently have Shasta soda because of the now defunct recycling program. Shasta was the only soda available in aluminum cans.

"Between the vending machines, Roger's Corner and the snack bar, I feel the students are able to get what they want 18 hours a day," he said. There is no contract between RWC and Lynch vending. "If Lynch continues to provide the college with good service they will continue to examinations.

Government officials were very clear on the penalty for failure to register. Such an act would entail five years in jail or a $10,000 fine or both.

However, the administration was not as clear on the means they plan to use to enforce the requirements of registration once the program begins.

CHANGING WITH THE PRESIDENTS--Barbara Franklin, secretary to the President of RWC for 30 years and standing, found her greatest challenge that of changing her personality to meet the needs of four different Presidents.

have RWC as an account," says DiSarro "every year there are bids from other companies but we are not looking for a higher commission, we are looking for the best service to the students.

NICE TRY, But--the Memphis Rockabilly Band didn't do much right at their concert in the cafeteria last weekend.

Rockabilly band proves to be step backwards

By Bart Bauer

Announcing themselves as the band from "the days of yesteryear when you could waste gasoline" the Memphis Rockabilly band proved to those who saw them Saturday night that it wasn't worth the trip.

The British rock group Queen recently renewed the interest in Rockabilly music, with the single "A Crazy Little Thing Called Love", which is still rocketing up the charts, but the Memphis Rockabilly Band will never follow that path of success.

The version of Rockabilly music performed by the band featured songs by Hank Williams and Jerry Lee Louis, as well as songs whose roots are deep in the past of country music.

The band's first set contained a rousing version of "Great Balls of Fire," as its highlight; as well as the beginning of a collection of songs that's topic was "Are there cars after death?" A better question might have been: is the life after this band?

Songs from the repertoire of the "unforgettable" Joe Clay were performed several times.

The band played, with obvious delight, these all time "classics" of rockabilly that Joe Clay had so graciously bestowed on the waiting world.

The only thing the band forgot to include in their tribute to this great composer was a brief explanation of exactly who Joe Clay is?

The band's performance left a great many things to be desired. Most songs were hardly recognized, except for their refrains--which at best were barely distinguishable.

Announcing a song that was "covered by the Beatles", they started into a tune that sounded as familiar as the flip side of a Bay City Rollers single.

The highlight of the visual performance was the lead guitarist, who over-compensated for his three, stiff, non-descript comrades with leaps and bounds that got boring and repetitious after the third song.

Rockabilly music is in its purest sense a main root of today's Rock and Roll. According to its reception at RWC, however, popular music continues to rock on rather than roll back the pages of history.

Coffeehouse Corner

Stunning Home Free

By Carolan Whittle

The evening of Feb. 8 will not easily be tucked away in the back of the Coffeehouse audience's minds. Lanford Wilson's "Home Free" left its spectators deep in reverie.

Joanne (Rachel Perry) and Lawrence (Sean Curran) live in a curious arrangement. She's pregnant and he writes books, only... it's not quite that simple. Joanne and Lawrence are young teenagers, but the catch is that they are brother and sister.

Mentally unbalanced, these two survive by the slimmest means. All they have are each other and their imaginary friends.

Afraid of the outside world, Joanne and Lawrence make-believe that their "royal" birth will present a deformed baby (hopefully at least "without a voice box") and other seemingly bizarre activities. The play is most touching and raises many contemporary questions.

Perry turns out lines about her pregnancy with surity. "I'll be turning them out like Volkswagens, and other such lines fall from Perry's lips naturally and believably.

Curran was fascinating as Lawrence. His sterling performance amazed the audience into a state of awe and speechlessness at the end of the performance.

Jeff Gage deserves congratulations on directing this fine piece of work. Gage was obviously truly sensitive, for this one-act was stunning in its effect.

This Friday night in the Coffeehouse will be "At a Beetle's Pace" by Louis B. Catron, Cindy Rose and Paul Farewell. The production will be directed by Dawn Bates.

Smorgasbord of one-acts

By Carolan Whittle

On the nights of Feb. 1 and 2, the Coffeehouse Theatre audience was treated to a smorgasbord of one-acts. "Constantinople Smith", by Charles L. Mee, Jr. (directed by Paul Farwell) prompted the audience to ask the old question, "To be or not to be?"

Bob Anderson, as Constantinople Smith, worked hard for deserved laughs. Charming Rosemary Deschamps, the model dream-angel, Christina, delivered lines such as, "I'm innocent, but not a virgin," with certain clarity. Frederick DiCapua played the absurd role of Reality.

In Israel Horowitz's "Stage Directions", Mary Ann Taylor, Eileen Murphy and Brian Reynolds created a stunning ensemble in a difficult show reminiscent of Woody Allen's "Interiors".

Some exceptional lighting appeared in this show, but the show left one question unanswered: why didn't the director follow the stage directions?

There were several obvious technical errors made by the director, such as retaining lines that referred to crystal glasses when a paper cup was on stage, or lines that referred to a flat chest when an extremely voluptuous chest was on stage. These errors need not have appeared, and could have been easily corrected.

The last one-act, directed by Margene Grandgeorge, "Quiet Please" by Howard Buerman, was the most successful. Robert Crowell and Dennis Perrault gave performances that won't be easily forgotten.

Rounding out the cast were Cindy Rose (as the Switzerland in their lives) and Frederick DiCapua (as a Reverend uncannily resembling Lou Costello), Thom Miller, Mark Lauzon and M. Beth Shimon as The Sunnyville Church Society.

Kazoo for kids

By Carolan Whittle

For director Betsy Argo and her cast, a wish has come true; they have a successful show on their hands.

"King of Kazoo", by Robert Newton Peck, a children's play presented by Ms. Argo's Children's Theatre Workshop, has entertained approximately 12,000 young students on tour and netted a nice sum for the Theatre Department.

They also enchanted a predominantly adult audience Sunday afternoon in the Coffeehouse.

Have you ever wanted to be a drummer in a big, brass band, a King or a Queen? "King of Kazoo" has a character of every child's (and adult's) fantasy.

The fine and funny performers (Rosemary Deschamps, Maureen Collura, Helen Blackwell, Cynthia Rose, Judy Cohen, Dennis Perrault, Bob Crowell, Mark Selz and Frederick DiCapua) more than learned a lesson and taught the audience that there is more to life than purple ccws and Peppermint Palaces -- for instance, happiness, kindness, consideration and sharing.

Callin' Card

Callin' Card, a band comprised of RWC students, will be performing in the Rat tonight.

One of the band members, Roman Borysiuk, put on a mediocre show in the Rat earlier this semester, and though you can't judge a band by one member, this may be an event to avoid.

Butch and Sundance Movies

The movie, Butch Cassidy and Sundance Kid, followed by Butch and Sundance, The Early Days, will be shown this weekend and next.

The story, about two outlaws and their humorous exploits in the early west is always good for a laugh. Don't forget that candy and other munchies are available at the movie.

Sammy Brown and Fred

Comedian A. Whitney Brown teams up with Sammy Brown and Fred Friday night, Feb. 22, in the cafe. These old favorites, combined with fresh new talent, should prove to be a performance you won't want to miss.

The Shittons

On Saturday night, Feb. 23, a 50's band called the Shittons will perform in the cafe. Although no promotional information is available yet, their picture shows the band on motor cycles, looking tough enough to kill for an audience. Maybe it would be a good idea to be there. Why take chances?

Men's basketball slumps: drops four straight games

By Bernie Cunniff

The Hawks have fallen on hard times this year as they recently lost four in a row to make their seasonal mark 4-15.

Franklin Pierce exploded for 61 second half points and easily rode to a 98-67 decision over RWC on Feb. 11 at St. Andrews in Barrington.

The first half was action-packed and some tough RWC defense and a strong 16 point effort from John Korn held the talented Ravens to only a 37-34 lead.

The second half was a different story as some strong pressure defense by FPC and impressive shot blocking from two incredible leapers, 6'5" Greg Trotman and 6'9" Joe Delaney proved to be too much for the Hawks.

Trotman and Larry Leach paced the Ravens with 19 points each. Delaney added 14 while Jeff Stevenson and Pat Dean had 13 and 11. The win gave Franklin Pierce a 20-1 record.

RWC was paced by Korn and Tom Beaucage with 18 each. Tony Gibbs also had a strong game while contributing 16.

On Feb. 8, RWC played Barrington College at the St. Andrews' Gym. Leading most of the way, the Hawks lost a frustrating 67-61 decision.

The game seesawed back and forth in the first 20 minutes as neither team could lead by more than four points at any time.

RWC, however, began to use a four corners offense which let the Warriors right back into the game. Some key steals by Elmer Stanley and big hoops from Larry Tomassetti and Ernie Madden coupled with some poor foul shooting from the Hawks gave the visitors a tough victory.

Beaucage led all Hawk scorers with 16 points. Korn, meanwhile, added 10.

The Hawks traveled up to Bridgewater, Massachusetts on Feb. 6 to tangle with the Bridgewater State Bears. RWC lost by an 82-60 count.

The first half saw Bridgewater St. commit loads of personal fouls and the Hawks a lot of careless turnovers. At halftime, the Bears proceeded to take a sloppy 43-36 lead.

Bridgewater St. was still in a trance as the second half began. With seven minutes remaining in the game, Greg DeVerna took a beautiful pass from Tom Beaucage and converted it for a layup to deadlock the score at 53-53.

Beaucage had a strong 24 point game for the Hawks. John Horgan also contributed 10 points.

RWC played host to Curry College on Feb. 4 and came away with an 87-71 loss.

Curry took a 49-36 lead at halftime, due mainly to outside shooting of Steve Grant and Scott McClure who added 14 points each.

From here on in, RWC could come no closer than 10 points the rest of the way as Curry was displaying some fine dribbling, passing and shooting.

Tom Beaucage once again played well while scoring 25 points. Chuck Sears, John Horgan and John Ko. n added 12, 11 and 10 respectively.

Hockey team notches up two thrilling wins

By Jeffrey Tucker

The RWC Hockey Hawks have won two out of their last four games, notching up their second game in a row last Tuesday night by beating Clark College 5-2. The Hawks record is now 4-10.

Larry Ellis scored two goals and Danny Murphy, Paul King and Dave Keith added one goal apiece to pace the Hawks to their fourth win of the season.

Freshman Richard Luck played excellent in the goal, stopping 42 shots on net.

On Sunday Feb. 10 the overconfident New England University hockey team traveled south to Portsmouth Abby rink to play the RWC Hawks. The Hockey Hawks went out in determined spirits, looking for their third win, and beat New England University 5-2.

The Hockey Hawks drew first blood on a quick goal by Tom Koch with assists from Chip Bruce and Scott Bush four minutes and ten seconds into the first period. N.E.U. came back to score with eight minutes left in the period. The goal was a power play, because of a tripping penalty to captain Bob Whiffen.

In the second period the Hawks came out shooting. Six minutes into the period Ed O'Brien sent a slapshot from the right point, assisted by Roger Andrey and Alan Rotatori. Mike Weslake then scored, assisted by Paul King and Danny Murphy.

With 1:12 left in the period the referees granted N.E.U. a penalty shot. The Hawks coach Alan Soares pulled goalie Rick Luck and put in Drew Murphy, who successfully stopped the drive and finished out the period.

In the third period, Chip Bruce scored a quick goal assisted by Bob Whiffen. Then N.E.U., tried to make a comeback by putting one past RWC goalie Rich Luck.

With half of the period gone, coach Soares pulled Luck and sent veteran goalie Drew Murphy back into finish on an empty net with five seconds left in the game to bring the Hawk's tally up to five.

On Tuesday, Feb. 5 Iona came to Rhode Island to play the RWC Hawks. Iona took a quick three goal lead, which was enough to secure the victory.

The Hawks did manage to score twice. One was a goal by Alan Rotatori, assisted by Larry Ellis and Tom Reilly. Next Chip Bruce scored, assisted by Larry Ellis and Ed O'Brien.

But these attempts were to no avail as the Hawks could not stop the Iona onslaught, losing the game 6-2.

In this corner....

by Roger Carroll

It is very likely that the most renowned person yet to attend Roger Williams College only went to the school for a single semester. Jerry Remy, second baseman for baseball's Boston Red Sox, attended the RWC-Providence campus in the fall of 1970 as a Business Administration major.

"I went to Roger Williams while I was waiting to be picked in the January (1971) free agent draft," said Remy in a telephone interview. He speculated, "I'm sure I would have stayed at Roger Williams and gotten my degree if I had not been drafted." At the time he had aspirations of becoming an accountant.

But the call did come, and it was the California Angels who selected the fleet-footed Remy. He wasted little time in climbing the organizational ladder. In 1973, he won Most Valuable Player laurels in the Midwest League. And just four years after Remy entered the Angels' system, he had won a job with the parent club as its second baseman.

He kept this job for quite some time, as he played in over 140 games in each of his three seasons with the Angels. In 1976, he was voted the "Owner's Trophy" by his teammates, signifying him as the Most Valuable Player on the California team.

Then, after a 1977 season in which he was third in the league in stolen bases with 41, came "the trade."

The California Angels dealt Remy to the Boston Red Sox. Remy in a sense, was coming home, since he admits to having been a Red Sox fan as a youth in Fall River, Mass. Since the trade, his speed on the bases and courageous defensive play have made him a favorite among Fenway Park followers.

In 1979, Remy was also beginning to sparkle with his bat until a midseason knee injury sidelined him.

At the time of the frustrating mishap his batting average was above the .300 mark. One brief comeback attempt later, and Jerry Remy was out for the remainder of the 1979 season. But he has been working to get that knee into shape for the 1980 season.

Though he has received his share of exposure since playing in the limelight of the big leagues, the fact that Remy attended RWC has long been ripe for picking by local trivia buffs. Asked if, had he not been drafted into pro baseball, he would have played for the RWC baseball squad, Remy earnestly replied, "I'm sure I would have--if I were good enough to make the club."

Baseball coach looks forward to tough year

By Jeffrey Tucker

On Monday, Feb. 11, the baseball Hawks had the first practice of the new season, but Coach Tom Asmermely is already hopeful about the upcoming season.

Coach Asmermely's main goal this year will be for the baseball Hawks to gain a spot in the regional playoffs. The coach said this is not impossible after coming within one game of making the playoffs last year with a record of 12 wins and 10 losses.

Coach Asmermely said the strengths of this year's team are "team speed, defensive ability and the pitching staff." The only weakness this year, he said, is their hitting power.

According to Asmermely, this year's schedule is particularly tough.

"There are many doubleheaders and this should put a strain on the pitching staff," he said. However, he did say he can meet and overcome this challenge.

Other returning pitchers are Charlie Dobbins and Steve Koertje, who Asmermely said will round off the "strongest pitching staff" he has seen in his years of coaching at RWC.

Coach Asmermely has high aspirations in Junior Captain Bill LeBlanc. The coach said, "Bill is a two-year starter and will provide this year's team with his cohesiveness, versatility in the field, and a strong bat at the plate."

Asmermely is also looking for a strong season from Bob Collamore, who hopefully will hit well again this year--perhaps even bettering his incredible .444 average of last year. "Bob has an excellent glove and should anchor the first base position," Asmermely said.

Also, the coach is hoping Jim Bezner will perform his Lou Brock base stealing magic again Bezner has a steady glove and is counted on to hit well this season.

Senior Captain John Dressing will be leading this year's team at either first base or in the outfield. Dressing also may be used as a designated hitter.

Asmermely sums up his feeling about the coming season by saying, "We are approaching the season with a positive outlook."

Women Hawks extend win streak to four straight games

By Jeffrey Tucker

The women's basketball team totally outclassed another opponent Monday night, demolishing the Coast Guard Academy 81-48 to extend their current winning streak to four games.

The four victories over the past two weeks boosted the women Hawks record to 11-4.

The Hawks dominated both the offensive and defensive boards in handing the GGA their 33 point loss. Pat Carberry, Bridget Flanagan, and Jan Parker combined for 39 rebounds.

The team also displayed the extraordinary teamwork and precision play that are becoming team trademarks. Guards Dee Dee Ligouri and Margret Murphy called out the plays to set up the Hawks blistering scoring attack, which gave the Hawks a 43 to 20 lead by half time.

The Hawks only substitute, Donna Keshura, played an excellent defensive game, and was instrumental in setting up the first half scoring surge.

RWC scoring in the game went as follows: Pat Carberry 30 points; Bridget Flanagan 22 points; Jan Parker 11 points; Margret Murphy seven points; Dee Dee Ligouri six points; and Donna Keshura five points.

The Hawks lopsided victory is even more impressive because they had only six women ready to play. Three other team members were out sick.

On February 8 the Hawks played Barrington at St. Andrews Gym, winning the game by a 12 point margin, 50-38.

Scoring for the Hawks were Pat Carberry 13 points; Bridget Flanagan 12 points; Jan Parker 10 points; Terry Wood seven points; Dee Dee Ligouri seven points; and Margret Murphy with one point.

On Feb. 4 Lise Trotter, Pat Carberry, and Bridget Flanagan combined for 54 points to lead the women Hawks past Curry College, 68-25.
