Fashions Take Center Stage

Julia Arouchon
Archway Staff Writer

The Student Senate sponsored their second annual Spring Fashion Show Wednesday, April 1, as part of their major fundraiser for the year.

All clothes were modeled by fifty Bryant students, with members from the following organizations: the Karate Club, Student Senate, Alpha Phi, Phi Sigma Sigma, Theta Phi Alpha, Delta Zeta, Sigma Sigma Sigma, Tau Epsilon Phi, Tau Kappa Epsilon, the Baseball Team, the International Student Organization, the Student Programming Board, and several Resident Assistants and Orientation Leaders.

The spring and summer outfits were loaned by stores in the Lincoln and Emerald Square Malls. Clothes from the Lincoln Mall came from stores such as Up's and Downs, Hit or Miss, Brooks, and Rave.

The participating stores from the Emerald Square Mall included: Aeropostale, Eddie Bauer, Ormonds, Empire, Structure, The Lodge, and the County Seat.

The Student Senate, Images, the Office of Student Activities, Bryant Center Operations, and the participating stores and models all helped to organize the fashion show.

The Student Senate will distributed the money raised to organizations throughout the year. This is one of the many Student Senate fundraisers this year.

Senior Julayne Lazar takes the stage during the Student Senate's second annual Spring Fashion Show, held in Janikes Auditorium last night.

Law School to Open in Rhode Island

Julia Arouchon and Bill Becker

In September of 1993, Roger Williams College will open the doors to the first law school in Rhode Island's history.

The law school will be located at Roger Williams' Bristol campus. However, in an attempt to be more accessible, officials also plan to hold classes in Providence for third year students.

According to Roger Williams' public relations office, the tuition for students is expected to be around $14,000/year for full time students and approximately $9,000 for part year students.

Other schools, including Bryant College, have considered the possibility of opening a law school over the last two decades.

However, the high costs of opening the school as well as the cost and access to out of state law schools have always outweighed the benefits of opening the law school.

The law school will apply for accreditation after its first year of existence, which will be in 1993. The school is projected to have 350 full-time students, 175 part-time students, and a faculty of 60 professors within its first five years.

Dean Anthony Santoro, originally from Widener University, was selected to head up the new law school. Santoro has been instrumental in the founding of four other law schools across the country.

According to Santoro, "the kind of law school that the college should be envisioning is one that is regionally attended. That is, the students who will enroll will come from Rhode Island and surrounding counties in Massachusetts and Connecticut.

The opening of the school, although the result of a unanimous vote by the board of trustees, sparked debate among the students.

Steve Gould, a fourth year architecture student at Roger Williams asked "Why does Rhode Island need a law school when some of the best law schools in the country are less than an hour away?"

However, Craig Tiedemann, a recent paralegal graduate of Roger Williams, suggested that "the presence of law students in the Rhode Island courts will alleviate some of the shoddy justice that occurs from time to time due to the backlog [in the courts]."

Students aren't the only people who have experienced concerns. For example, some of the faculty at Roger Williams have voiced concerns about whether the college is financially secure enough to absorb the extraordinarily high costs of starting a law firm.

The fear is that the strain during the start-up years will effect the existing departments. According to estimates by Roger Williams College, the law school will cost approximately $12 million.

Juan Alvarez, has returned to Bryant College after graduating in 1989, to serve as the Assistant Director of Admissions. Alvarez took over Donna Cuddy's job after she left to raise a family.

The 25 year old lived in Columbia until he was about nine years old. He then moved to Rhode Island with his parents. He feels that since there aren't many Hispanics in higher education, his background may help him serve as a minority role model. He says that he feels more in touch with Bryant's minority students. With a business communications degree, Alvarez is thinking about continuing on with a graduate degree in higher education.

Alvarez attended the Community College of Rhode Island before transferring to Bryant in his junior year.

He remembers his best experience at Bryant as being graduation. He referred to it as a "bittersweet moment." He adds, "It was sad to say goodbye but at least you know that you've come a long way and accomplished something."

Top Executives Visit Bryant

Lisa Lucchesi
Archway Staff Writer

Jack Keigwin, a management professor at Bryant, underwrote and sponsored the "Marjorie Burgoyne French Memorial Visiting Executives Program" with the help of the F.H. French Company, on March 25th and 26th.

Several top-level executives came to Bryant to lecture students and to provide them with a first-hand look at business, government, and several different professions.

The guest speakers also addressed several different graduate and under-graduate classes. According to senior Joshua Lander, "They provided the students with more of a grasp of the real world, instead of knowledge only found in a book."

Thomas Tanury of Tanury Industries explained how he took a small business which is now nationally and internationally responsible for providing its valuable services. He described how he used marketing tools, teamwork, management techniques and a favorable attitude toward his employees and the environment to help his business grow.

Tanury provides electroplating services to the jewelry, writing instrument, automotive, giftware, and eyeglass frame industries. Tanury's company was responsible for providing many pairs of sunglasses to the soldiers in the Persian Gulf War.

Matt Bristow, the vice president of productivity for The Stanley Works in Connecticut, discussed how Stanley, a worldwide, $2 million company, is responsible for environmental affairs and technical engineering.

While speaking to a graduate level Operations Management class, Bristow emphasized how important the productivity function is to Stanley. He said the productivity function was not only responsible for bringing about change in its operational management areas, but also in the development of Stanley's strategic plans.

Gary Snowden, of the $350 million G-Tech Corporation, said that marketing has been responsible for the biggest part of the company's expansion. G-Tech provides modern technological equipment to

Honors Program Change May Hurt Students

The Bryant College Honors Program was first offered in 1991 "to meet the educational needs of highly motivated students" according to the program brochure.

The Honors Program is open to students with an overall GPA of 3.1 or higher, who "are oriented toward achievement, take pride in work of superior quality, wish a broad general education as well as a professionally specialized one, and have strong reasoning skills and writing ability."

The greatest benefit of the program is its intellectual challenge. Another benefit is small class size, which results in greater participation and interaction. Also, Honor Program students who successfully complete a designated number of courses will be awarded the designation "Honors Program Graduate" on their diploma. But how much does this really matter to students? No one sees it unless you sport your diploma at the interview.

When the program began, there was another built-in benefit for the participants. The grading procedure was designed to add one quality point to the final grade. For example, a "B" grade would be equal to a 4.0 instead of a 3.0, and an "A" was assigned a value of 5.0, rather than the usual 4.0. The quality point was to be added by the Registrar's Office to the grade assigned by the professor.

However, that policy has now been changed. According to a recent letter to Honors Program Participants, "Beginning in fall 1992, instructors, recognizing that honors courses are especially challenging and that honors students are among Bryant's highest academic achievers, will assign grades that they feel are appropriate. Those grades will not be modified by the Registrar's Office."

The co-directors should be applauded for notifying students of the change as quickly as they could after it was finally passed. And their rationale for changing the procedure makes sense ... to a point. The grading procedure was changed because the administration was not satisfied with it, and because the professors felt they had to grade differently than they wanted.

That's where the point falls short. The instructors should be assigning grades as they are earned based on the course criteria, not based on the extra quality point. For example, if a student does work that merits an A/B, the instructor should not give the student a B/C because an honors B/C is equal to a regular A/B.

The change in grading policy may prove to have a negligible effect on students, but students seem to feel that something is being taken away from them. One sophomore commented, "They shouldn't change the policy once it's in place ... They're basically admitting the teachers didn't follow the set grading procedure."

Others are concerned the program will die because students won't think they're getting enough for the effort they put in. "An honors course requires a greater time commitment than most non-honors courses," added a senior who has taken honors courses. "The additional incentive [of the added quality] point is a major factor of the honors courses that compensate for the time commitment."

There is now little incentive to take an honors course. Students are going to wonder why they should subject themselves to the extra work load and the extra effort these classes take if they are not being rewarded for it. The question is: are the benefits from honors courses (small class size, extra perspective, special events) worth it, when the recognition you receive is slight, and somewhat hidden?

Unfortunately, without any extra incentive, many people are going to answer no.

Students Care About Electives

If all work and no play make Jack a dull boy and Jill a dull girl, what does all work and no art or music or theater make the students at Bryant?

Bryant means business, but that should not mean business and nothing else.

But we think that may in fact be the case. For example, we went looking for a piano one day last week and found only one, off in a corner in Janikies auditorium. We looked through the Student Activities Calendar for the week and found nothing that would qualify as a cultural event.

Now we are looking at the course selection at pre-registration. The selection is better than it was our freshman year, but still very limited. For example, there is only one course in music and one in art, and there are no studio courses at all.

Bryant College is a specialty business school, but does this mean the students should be offered such limited open elective courses and limited extra curricular activities? Any executive will tell you that a successful business person is a well rounded one, one who knows art and literature as well as accounting and management.

Often Bryant students feel restricted when selecting their academic schedule and are disinterested in the available course selection. "I think because Bryant is a business school, [many people] do not think the students care about other electives, but in fact we do care," said Kirstie Suggs, a junior majoring in finance. She added, "I am appalled that the one Black History course they finally offered here was an honors course." This causes a problem because honors courses at Bryant have limited enrollment.

The college should show some sensitivity towards the need of an arts program. A year ago, Bryant announced a co-op arrangement between Rhode Island

School of Design and Bryant College. Bryant students were going to be offered the opportunity to take courses at R.I.S.D. and students there would take courses at Bryant. However, this great idea apparently has not been followed through.

Tracy Newcombe, a sophomore accounting major, said she was disappointed, "I would have loved the opportunity to take courses at another school like R.I.S.D.," she explained and added, "It would be interesting to compare their artistic environment with the business environment here at Bryant."

In order for the curriculum at Bryant to improve, the administration must not take the pessimistic attitude of "it will never go" or "we already tried that once." Instead they must expand the course selection and integrate cultural programs within the classroom lectures. Even more important, the students must voice their concerns about the college's curriculum and their interest in cultural activities. As one student said, "Putting money towards programs involving art and music should be as equally important as the money put into sports."

Therefore, we challenge the administration to give the students at Bryant a chance to "broaden their educational horizons." To start, the college should take a course of action and implement programs for the incoming freshmen. Establishing new programs and courses dealing with areas in music, art, photography, and drama would create a more diverse student body and would make a Bryant College graduate a well-rounded business leader.

In the meantime, is there another piano out there?

Confirmation Ceremony Held

Bryant students after confirmation ceremonies last Sunday

Julia Arouchon
Archway Staff Writer

Seven Bryant students were confirmed last Sunday in the Papitto Dining Room by Most Reverend Kenneth A. Angell, D.D., Auxiliary Bishop of Providence.

The following students completed the last stage of initiation into the Catholic Faith: Diane M. Barsky, Janel M. Blackstock, John B. Cohen, Jr., Alison F. Falcone, Carollynn Keeley, Brooke A. Miller and Michelle A. Murphy.

In most cases, confirmation takes place at an earlier age than college but Catholic Chaplain Reverend Douglas J. Spina, who teaches the classes, said that ideally the confirmation should take place at a later age because the individual is more mature and responsible.

This year's program has more than doubled from last year's three member class.

Hunger Clean-Up Day Scheduled

Julia Arouchon
Archway Staff Writer

The second annual Hunger Clean Up day, which raises money for people and organizations in need, is planned for Saturday April 11.

Currently sixty Bryant volunteers are raising funds by asking friends to sponsor them in their efforts of cleaning four work sites in the surrounding area.

The sites already confirmed include: Johnson Memorial Park, North Providence Governor Notte Park, East Providence Pierce Athletic club and the Cranston Brayton Little League field. Fifty percent of the earnings go to the national organization and the other fifty percent will be split between the St. George's Soup Kitchen and the Amos House.

Last year, Bryant raised over $3,000 in their first attempt at the fund raiser.

According to BHC Vice President Caroline Pierce, "It is important for students to voluntarily give back to the community."

"The money goes to a good cause because needy organizations need help, especially in these tough times," said Pierce.

All funds will support the hunger and homeless groups across the country and world. Approximately 450 schools nationwide already contribute to the event annually.

Assault

Tuesday, March 24, 1992: At 12:38am, the Department of Public Safety (DPS) received a telephone call from a Manager at the Country Comfort (CC). The complainant requested an Emergency Medical Technician (EMT), claiming that someone had been assaulted. Upon arrival the responding DPS Officer found a visitor outside the CC, suffering from a swollen eye and cut lip. The complainant stated that the victim had been drinking upstairs and became boisterous and insulting, when an unknown assaultant hit him.

The victim was accompanied by another visitor, neither of which had identification on them. The complainant stated that the visitors did have identification on them when they entered the CC.

The Resident Director (RD) on duty and the Smithfield Police Department (SPD) were asked to respond. The responding SPD Officer requested the Smithfield Fire Department to the scene to treat the victim, whom was later transported to a hospital.

The RD, SPD and DPS jointly agreed that the two visitors would not be permitted to stay on campus that night due to their uncooperative and abusive behavior. It was agreed by SPD that no charges would be filed.

Fight

Sunday, March 29, 1992: Department of Public Safety (DPS) Officers were dispatched to Residence Hall 5 at 11:00pm to respond to a reported fight. When the officers arrived, they found a party of more than eighty (80) people breaking up.

Residents of the suite claimed to have asked a guest to ask another guest to leave the party. The two guests had reportedly had an argument. When the first guest attempted to leave, he was apparently jumped and punched in the head by the second guest. The victim received minor injuries and returned to his residence hall. The victim's roommate, learning of the incident, then went to Hall 5 to find the suspect, being jumped himself by a friend of the suspect.

Witnesses identified the suspects and statements were taken. DPS Officers then escorted the conflicting parties to their respective halls.

Driving to Endanger

On Tuesday, March 24, 1992 at 9:05pm, a Department of Public Safety (DPS) Officer at the Entry Control Station (ECS) witnessed a pizza delivery vehicle pass the ECS at a high rate of speed, failing to stop. The DPS Officer contacted the DPS mobile unit and requested that the vehicle be directed back to the ECS. When the vehicle returned, the driver was issued a citation for "driving to endanger." The DPS Officer asked the driver if she felt she was driving over forty (40) miles per hour. She agreed, stating that she was in a hurry.

DPS contacted the owner of the pizza restaurant immediately following the incident.

Safety Tip of the Week

Do not become a victim yourself.

If a person has been injured in a vehicle accident, the natural inclination is to help. Make sure the scene is safe to approach. If it is not, keep onlookers away until help arrives.

Alvarez adds, "My experience at Alfred University has helped me a great deal, not only in seeing what institutions are like but also what it's like working with people."

He claims he came back to Bryant because of the people.

"I think our students are unique. They have their niche. I hope Bryant will have the same student quality in the future," stated Alvarez.

Alvarez has the advantage of seeing the students and, the administration's perspective. He says that he sees the difference between the two but he believes that the two really work together well.

Alvarez is eager to work his way up the ladder in admissions. His job is to travel back and forth to New Jersey, meet with alumni, act as a representative for the college at high school and college nights, and to interview students.

His main objective when interviewing applicants, is to look for people that he thinks have the quality to survive at Bryant and are responsible.

His advice to the present and incoming students is to use extracurricular activities, career services, and various other resources as a means of getting involved.

"Involvement is a big part of college. The resources are there, students just have to decide what to do with them," says Alvarez.

Daylight Savings Time Springs into Effect This Sunday

Be Sure to Set Your Clocks Ahead One Hour

Drowning in a Sea of Waste

I'm sure you're all happy to hear that we've been very busy here at the Institute For Stupid Research and Ways to Waste Tax Payer Money. As a matter of fact, we've been working non-stop for quite some time now, what with presidential races, check bouncing scandals, and Ted Kennedy's engagement going on.

By now, I hope you've recovered from those nasty hangovers from National Pecan Day. What's that you say? You never heard of National Pecan Day! That's the problem with this country. Here we are at the Institute, working hard every day from nine to five (except for when we're playing golf), wasting your tax money, and you don't even have the decency to know what we're wasting it on! We've got a good mind to just stop wasting your money and go out and play golf all the time!

Sorry for that outburst. It's just that we don't get a whole lot of recognition here at the Institute. Every so often, though, we come up with a real doozy that gets everybody all excited. I don't like to brag, but Star Wars was our idea. Yup, we were just sitting around the club house one afternoon, drinking whiskey straight from the bottle (hey, even us scientific types like to have fun!) when someone said "Why don't we put lasers up in the sky and try to shoot nuclear missiles out of the sky. It's so crazy that it might even work!"

Well, enough about our past achievements. We've moved on to bigger and better things, and we couldn't be more excited about some of these new projects. This year, we expect to waste more money than ever before!

Off the Cuff

Mark Plihcik
Archway Staff Writer

Even as this is written, we're busy buying up hundreds of thousands of surgical smocks to stack in our warehouses on top of the surgical smocks we bought during the Korean War.

And that's just the tip of the iceberg! Of course, we were heavily involved in that check bouncing thing - as a matter of fact, we created the House bank for the express purpose of wasting your money and increasing the deficit. We didn't count on a few bad apples abusing the privilege of writing bad checks though. If it hadn't been for those guys, we could've kept this scam going on for years! Millions of dollars wasted!

Oh well, no sense crying about spilled milk. We think our latest effort has extraordinary potential to waste money, and we're really excited about it. It has come to our attention that there is an overly large amount of belly button lint being produced by the American People.

So we're working on a research project to determine a feasible method of collecting all of this lint and finding someplace to drop it, such as on Pat Buchanan.

This project is actually an extension of that bovine emission research we were working on. Remember that one? That's where we had you people convinced that cows emit roughly two pounds of methane gas per day, and these emissions were having a significant effect on Global Warming (I swear, I am not making this up).

That was a really expensive project. Why salary alone took up more than 50 percent of the money we budgeted. Why is that, you ask? Well, would you want to stand out in the middle of a pasture all day, waiting for some stupid animal to pass gas? And then measure it? Boy, we had you snowed but good that time!

So anyway, this belly button lint idea came out of the bovine emissions project. What happened was this. One of those over-paid scientists out in the pasture got really, really bored one day (he probably had too much sun and methane gas, too) and noticed that his belly button collected approximately 1.64 grams of lint every 12 hours.

And that got us to thinking. If we collected the belly button lint of every American on a weekly basis, we'd end up with a really disgusting, huge ball of lint, roughly the size of Los Angeles.

And then we got to thinking, "What could we do with a ball of lint roughly the size of Los Angeles?"

Well, we couldn't think of anything. This was enough to swing our agency into action, planning and budgeting a research project to study potential uses for a ball of belly button lint roughly the size of Los Angeles. We expect to spend about $50 million this year. And I'm happy to report in the first three months of the research, we've come up with about 15 uses for the lint. But I don't have time to tell you about them right now.

I tee off in ten minutes.

The Mysterious "Magic" Mushroom

Health Services

by Doris Horridge

The original settlers of North America first found out about mushrooms the hard way. What they found was a natural drug, psilocybin, which triggered a bewildering array of hallucinatory effects - magic!

Psilocybin isn't a single mushroom. There are two dozen different species. And the confusion doesn't end there. Although psilocybin is the main psychoactive ingredient, psilocin is responsible for the psychedelic punch. Research shows that psilocybin is converted in the body to psilocin before it triggers its mind-altering effects. While it's uncertain how mushrooms exert their effects, most researchers believe the compounds disrupt the equilibrium in the brain of chemicals that regulate sensory perceptions and the processing of new information. And that's something that people who learn about things the hard way learn about psilocybin right away. Here's how to learn about "magic mushrooms" the easy way:

•In moderate doses of 1-5 grams, dry mushrooms (10-15 grams fresh), trigger a rise in body temperature, pulse rate, and blood pressure and causes enlargement of the pupils. Nausea, drowsiness, and feelings of numbness are also common.

•As the effects build, LSD-like mood changes and distortions of time and space perception occur. Judgment and concentration are affected and activities like driving a car are impossible. Visual and auditory hallucinations are also usually present.

•Acute anxiety reactions - in the form of sudden mood swings can be frightening and terrifying for both yourself and the help of a caring friend. It's tough enough to face your fears, without doing it the hard way.

On a positive note, mushrooms are a milder hallucinogenic than LSD, which is the major reason for their popularity. Peak effects typically occur within two hours of ingestion and fade altogether within 3-8 hours. Tolerance develops rapidly and one does not develop a physical dependence. Overdose, while not impossible, is unlikely, since a fatal dose is equal to more than 2,000 times the psychoactive dose.

Some cautions and considerations:
•Mushrooms are in high demand and low supply. Some may be grocery store mushrooms laced with LSD.

•Since there are two dozen species containing varying amounts of the drug, gauging the safe dose is like guessing the amount of jelly beans in a huge glass jar.

•Be especially careful of the poisonous "look a likes." The ratio of poisonous to "magic" is 10:1.

•Please don't learn the hard way. Life has much more to offer. There is no magic to making it better. Please stop by Health Services or the Counseling Center if you want help.

For Seniors, the Job Search Continues

by Lisa Ronca
and Annie Vaillancourt
Journalism Students

The Class of 1992 graduates from across the nation are realizing that finding a job in a recession may be like finding a needle in a haystack.

Jobs are at a minimum and the number of skilled workers is ever rising. As the recession continues, many companies are downsizing their workforce and hiring fewer inexperienced workers.

Furthermore, recruiters are more meticulous in their choosing of interviewees. According to the editor of Career Futures, Jeremy Schlosberg, business students are the ones most affected by the dramatic decrease in on-campus corporate recruiters being experienced nationwide.

To make matters worse, Schlosberg says, many graduates are looking for jobs where they feel they can make a difference and achieve self-satisfaction. They're not searching for the high-paying jobs the students of the 1980's sought.

There is some good news, however.

Much of the frustration and anxiety that graduates felt last year has led to the growing awareness that job hunting is going to be a great challenge. This year's graduates, therefore, are beginning to look realistically at the challenges that face them and form strategies to set themselves apart from the crowd.

To help graduates form these strategies, companies and publishers are producing brochures and reading materials on job-hunting and interviewing. Reading these pamphlets and using their advice will ensure that students didn't waste their parents' money by going to college. Experts advise students to do extensive research and be optimistic about finding the right job.

Even in a tight job market, the right information and the right attitude may lead to the right job.

Cheating 101: What It's All About

by Christopher Hinckley and Jason Hall
Journalism Students

It happens every day. A little peek onto a neighbor's test, a note tucked into a calculator case, or a basic cheat sheet. Just about everyone has cheated, or at least someone you know has cheated, at some time, in some way, shape, or form.

Some students cheat a little, some cheat a lot, and some cheat all the time. Some students would say they could write a book on how to cheat.

Well, someone has. Michael Moore, a 24-year-old junior journalism major at Rutgers University, has capitalized on the fine art of cheating and has written Cheating 101: The Benefits and Fundamentals of Earning the Easy "A."

Cheating 101 is a serious, yet satiric, approach to how to survive by cheating.

The satiric side is obvious from the start. The book is dedicated to St. Francis College, in Loretto, PA where Moore learned "cheating is part of a college 'education.'"

As you read through the eighty-six pages, you can see the book is as much about the values and systems that encourage and reward cheating as it is about specific techniques.

Moore believes, for example, that cheating begins in elementary school. According to the book, a 1987 survey of California sixth graders found that 38 percent of the students admitted to copying another's exam. And a May 1991 study conducted by Rutgers University found that nearly 67 percent of all college students cheat.

Business students lead the collegiate list of most avid cheaters, according to the Rutgers survey. Next are engineering majors, followed by science, economic, communication, history, psychology, and English students.

Moore says, tongue in cheek (or perhaps not?), students should not feel guilty about cheating. He states cheating is very much a part of the real world. "Cheating prepares you, perhaps more than anything for the working world," he says.

Moore goes on to say cheating is just a way of outsmarting professors and a way to graduate with good grades.

Cheating on an exam seems like a minor offense compared to how much cheating goes on in real life. Moore says, "Self-employed professionals like doctors, lawyers, and building contractors cheat the government out of $24 billion dollars annually."

Moore continues, "Scientific researchers have been known to cheat and falsify supposed breakthroughs in order to maintain or gain federal and state funding grants... So as you can see, cheating in college is a pale comparison."

Cheating 101 is also full of helpful hints - or warnings, if you happen to be a professor. It lists everything from writing on the bill of a baseball hat to just bringing extra notes into the exam.

It gets into the more difficult logistics of cheating as well. For instance, Moore suggests you have someone else take the exam for you, or even better, tell the professor you are sick, set up a retest, go to the original test day, get the exam, leave, then go to the makeup exam.

The last two ideas, however, would only work in large, lecture hall type classes, Moore warns.

Besides identifying methods of cheating, Moore also lists some of the tools of the trade. He names essentials, extra blue books, copies of old exams, and a pen with a retractable scroll. Moore even goes as far as to give the company and address where a cheater's pen can be ordered.

You may pay a high price for cheating in the future, the moralists say, but for now, Moore's raking in huge profits from Cheating 101. He is publishing and marketing thousands of copies of the book himself and is selling them for $10 each, up from the original price of $7 each.

Are There Really Jobs Out There in Retail Sales?

The bureau of Labor Statistics has identified retail sales as the field offering the most new jobs between now and 2005, yet 17,000 retail stores are expected to fold this year and the problems of such stores as Korvette's, Bonwit Teller, and Ames are well known.

Even long-time merchants, (such as Macy's and Sears) are in a slump, and many aggressive discount merchandisers (like New York's Crazy Eddies) are in serious trouble.

How can a field with so many problems offer opportunities to those planning careers? For starters, assume that people are going to feed, clothe, and house themselves and stores are going to play the major role in meeting those needs. But which stores? That is the key.

The secret to planning successful careers in the retail field lies in hitching your wagon to a successful merchandizing team. Some think that big stores (Marshall Field, Burdine's, Wanamaker's) have had their day.

But Wal-Mart stores are going strong in non metropolitan areas and even Montgomery Ward seems on the road back.

Smaller specialty stores, close to consumer tastes and able to adjust more quickly, may also offer attractive futures.

The highly successful Gap offers clothes for the whole family that are durable, attractive and moderately priced.

Stores that cater to particular markets may do well: busy women executives or older women, sports enthusiasts, or children. Spectacular results, and failures, follow advertising and merchandizing innovations.

Success in a retail sales career will be related to the success of the enterprise with which one is affiliated. Candidates for jobs in the field should spend more time reviewing recent financial reports than recruiting literature and, once hired, should be prepared to leave at any time for a store more attuned to tomorrow's markets.

Easter: New Life & New Joy

This semester is just flying by! I can't believe that the Cadberry Bunny commercials are back on the old tube. Easter is just around the corner. And, folks, this is my favorite time of the year. New Life is springing up all around us, our friends the geese are back, the trees are budding, term papers are due, flowers sprouting, and the harsh winds of winter are giving way to the gentle warm breezes of spring. YES! It is the season of Easter - our hope is renewed in the promise of Christ's peace and we are reborn and freed in the moment of the resurrection as we stand before the empty tomb marveling at the angel's message: "He is not here! He is risen!"

It's so easy to get weighted down by our lives and the problems of living: school work, relationships, family matters, finances, and so forth. It is easy for us to turn inward and selfishly think that the world revolves around us - and what did we do to deserve the pains and little tragedies that life metes out along the way. Easter pulls us up from our boot straps and helps us to put life and the ultimate challenges that life poses, into a new, Christian perspective. The gift of life finds its highest realization in the faith we have in the resurrection. The bottom line is: all is grace, all is holy, all is redeemed through the Easter proclamation, even those little tragedies life may have in store for us.

During this Holy Week of 1992, join us for services. Come celebrate around the table of the Lord. Jesus walks with us. Jesus lives with us and we with him. HAPPY EASTER!

Holy Week Schedule

How to Kill the Person Who Has Been Making Your Life A Living Hell

Have you ever known someone, who in the wink of an eye can make you so mad you want to spit? They can do the littlest

The Real Scoop

Cindy Gale
Archway Staff Writer

thing, always unintentional of course, and they get you so aggravated ancient Chinese tortures come to mind? How do you go about getting rid of this person so they won't cause you anymore problems...read on and discover what many people have gone to prison for.

Let me set the scene for you. You go out, in a brand new outfit. You look sharp and you know it. Upon arrival at your destination, you see your arch-enemy across the room wearing something that resembles something you can't even describe. Something you can't even describe. Because you don't even want to be breathing the same air they are.

You are immediately aggravated this person is there, but you become determined not to let them destroy your evening, at any cost. You go about your evening, mingling with the people there, having a wonderful time.

Then...they walk into the room you were trying to hide in and you feel your entire night is destined to be ruined. How do you go about getting rid of this person so they do not cause you any more pain, aggravation and anguish? Murder...Murder in the first degree.

Now, let's get one thing straight right off the bat. This person may or may not have done anything to you. There is just something about them you don't like, for whatever reason. You may not like the way they eat their ice cream, or the way they talk, or even the way they only eat the top part of their corn muffins. Remember, nothing has been done to you by them and you want to cause them bodily harm. But then again, if you want to kill them for reasons such as this, I'd hate to see what you'd do to them if they actually did something.

There are several ways in which you can get rid of this person. Some of them are more creative than others, and some more painful. It all depends on how much pain you want to cause them and how much of a mess you want to clean up.

Now, when I think of murder, the first things that comes to my mind is blood, fun and butchery. What better way to brighten your day than by doing one thing that would make your life so much easier - killing the one person you would like to see die. Sorry, I'm a horror movie fan!

But, in reality, would doing this actually make your life easier? Wouldn't this actually make things more difficult than they were behind bars and you wouldn't have to see their horrible face again anyway? This would ultimately defeat your purpose, and make you miss fun years of your life.

But, if you do want to waste twenty to thirty years of your life, there are many ways to bump off that individual so they will no longer cause problems.

My first suggestion to you, if you have the money, is an assassination attempt. It's quick, easy, and doesn't link you to the crime. The only drawback to this, as already mentioned, is the price. It can be rather expensive, but, it may be worth it just to watch the person get done in.

This method also has its advantages because you can be at the place the person dies without committing the act. You can watch the actual "hit" take place, and not have your name attached to it. Who could ask for more?

The good thing about assassinations is they work. Just look at JFK! It's been how long and they still have no clue as to what happened!

Tar and feathering is a method that was in fashion many years ago, that doesn't really seem appropriate anymore. It can be replaced in the modern world by pouring syrup on the person and setting a mound of red ants free upon the person. This accident can be rationalized at a breakfast picnic.

Poisoning is something that always has, and always will, be around. Whether you use rat poison in their coffee, or arsenic on their donuts, it will eventually get the job done. The demise of your "favorite" person will be gradual and again, you will get to watch them weaken day by day...

Another fun way to get rid of that person is to set a colony of killer bees loose in that person's bathroom while they are in the shower. Note: This should be done after you have sealed the bathroom door and window shut so they can't escape.

On the subject of the bathroom, electrocution can always be an interesting way to die. Dropping a curling iron or hair dryer into the bathtub while someone is in it is one of those everyday, run-of-the-mill household accidents that probably go unquestioned.

This, however, is one you would have to worry about cleaning up after. Who wants to mop the water up off the bathroom floor the person dripped while they were screaming in excruciating pain?

But honestly folks, do you really want to cause someone that much pain? What about their families? Won't they be missed? Not by you of course, but they probably would be by someone.

But, if that person does cause you that much misery, and you see their death as the only way to alleviate that aggravation, in the words of Nike, "Just Do It!!" It may make your life a little more difficult, but it will sure make you feel better!

Editor's Note: If by some chance a murder does take place, the author of this article is not held responsible. The author neither owns an ice pick, nor is planning on purchasing one and did not do any scientific research to see which method is most effective.

A Cool Evening With LUSH

by Pete Mancuso

Just who is Lush anyway? What is Lush? Well, they're an indie band from London for starters. What the hell does indie mean?

These are all plausible questions for the average Bryant student. Indie is simply short for Independent Record Label, in other words alternative or progressive music. An indie label usually means lack of radio airplay for that group.

Lush has only been around since 1988. The members formed out of a desire to be in band. As students of North London Polytechnic, Lush has had one change in their line-up; a new bassist, no big deal.

Three EP import releases on British label 4AD at the close of the last decade established Lush as "up and coming." This year brings Lush a new album SPOOKY(4AD/Reprise) produced by the Cocteau Twins' Robin Guthrie.

SPOOKY is currently atop the college charts and the band has been enjoying an incredible amount of press in every possible publication from Rolling Stone to the NicePaper. On Tuesday night, the city of Providence was lucky enough to have Lush play downtown.

The venue was the Campus Club—"Lush only $6, with special guests Babes in Toyland and The Laurels." Subsiding through the open acts was grueling. Lush was greeted with a warm welcome. Lead singer and guitarist Miki Berenyi wasted no time with a hello, not even a smile;...maybe she's still sore about the Revolution.

They began with a track off the new album. Which one I'm not too sure. Lush's songs are very similar, so similar many tunes were indistinguishable. Yet it is all so soothing. Their sound is like a mellow groove, much like the Cocteau Twins' sound (although Miki hates that comparison, Guthrie's influence is evident). Their latest single "For Love" was a maybe the forth song of the set.

Miki's voice was barely audible, yet something made it work, maybe it was Miki's fire-red hair or maybe it was that black ribbed sweater she was sporting, which is just so en vogue.

The crowd at Campus Club was more or less lame. The college crowd didn't seem too impressed with Lush; Lush didn't seem too impressed with the crowd; it was mutual. Miki referred to the crowd as "comatose."

Miki probably didn't mean to offend, but she did. Lush is a young band and not too many people would argue that they still have some maturing to do. I certainly wouldn't argue. Lush is probably used to the popularity that Britain gives them.

Quickly Lush finished things off, but not without a decent encore. The show was good, but the excitement of the evening would come later.

As the crowd diffused into the cold streets of Providence, I found myself unsatisfied with a mere performance. I realized the fun was going on behind closed doors. I attempted to convince security I needed to get backstage, telling him I was a WJMF disc-jockey, concert reviewer, anything I could think of...he was not impressed.

At this point I realized I needed to make a deft move. I brought my story elsewhere. Bob was the chosen one. He had sold me the Lush tickets earlier and we established some rapport. Bob is a great guy.

The next thing I knew, I was submerged into the realms of backstage land. Leaving behind my fellow Bryant concert goers, Greg and Jason, I was no longer a common spectator. I was chillin' backstage with Lush.

Happy as a kid in a candy store, I quickly realized I knew nobody. That didn't matter; I made friends swiftly. Trying to act as cool as possible, I struck up a conversation with a few people. Sure it was a phony conversation. It was simply a political move to make myself feel at home, but the conversation turned out to be excellent. And the best part about it was that Bill Clinton's name never came up.

At this point I was ready to confront Miki. As I approached her, I helped myself to a celery stick in order to appear more relaxed. Miki was real down to earth. Of course I told her I was a big fan and that I even saw her in her hometown London.

We talked about music, drugs, and the youth culture of today. We both agreed that the Madchester scene in the U.K. was definitely dead and the kids needed to mellow out. She was not afraid to express her opinion.

I asked Miki what she thought about the concert fans in America. "They suck!" she sneered without hesitation. I guess she truly didn't care about offending anyone. Judging from the crowd that evening at Campus Club, she's probably right.

Miki, feeling guilty maybe, did express an appreciation for the city of Chicago and the band's fans. She's not so harsh on America after all.

The evening had ended on a definite high. The whole night was an excellent experience. Since the show, I haven't stopped listen to SPOOKY and it seems to only get better each time. It's definitely worth your time and money.

As far as Lush live, well, it would probably only be worth it if you are as lucky as I was to hang backstage and rap about life with Miki. But of course this is only my opinion, which I am free to express in this great country of ours....

Cadet Commissions Announced

by Brian K. Jenkins

Finding jobs is a very difficult task for many students who are graduating this year. For those of us in the ROTC program our time and dedication has paid off. Three of the cadets have a part time job with the Reserves and the remaining three will be serving on Active Duty which has become difficult to earn. As you may have heard large cuts in the size of today's Army are being made. Each one of the Bryant cadets that requested Active Duty received it, as did those who asked for Reserve Duty.

Following graduation sometime during the summer or early fall, the new lieutenants will be going to Officer Basic Course (OBC) where they will be learning the duties that they will be expected to perform as well as the standards they will be required to maintain in their respective branches.

The following cadets received Active Duty: Matthew Kaleskas, Field Artillery, who will be attending OBC at Fort Sill, OK. Brian Jenkins and James Murray received Commissions in the Infantry and will attend OBC at Fort Benning, GA. Jenkins and Murray will also be going to Ranger School following their OBC.

The following cadets received a Reserve Duty Commission: Don Moyer, Infantry, also attending OBC at Fort Benning, GA. Dave Burke, Armor, attending OBC at Fort Knox, KY, and Joe Massaroni, Finance, attending OBC at Fort Benjamin Harrison, IN.

All the cadets have worked very hard to earn their commissions.

"To have over half of the graduating class earn active duty appointments is a reflection of the quality of the Bryant cadets corps and Bryant students in general," said CPT Jim Parker.

The Heidi Chronicles Hits Home at Trinity Repertory

Julia Kahler
Archway Staff Writer

The Heidi Chronicles, at the Trinity Repertory Company, is an excellent portrayal of American values. This contemporary play, written by Wendy Wasserstein, has been performed on Broadway, as well as gaining Tony and Pulitzer acclaim.

The story follows the fears and dreams of an optimistic American woman, Heidi Holland, as she lives through the 60s, 70s, 80s, and 90s. Heidi is a feminist art historian, who believes that 'all people deserve to fulfill their potential.'

When she is at a political campaign in the 60s, she meets Scoop Rosenbaum, a liberal journalist. Scoop questions Heidi about her goals and doubts her self confidence. "Do you know what you are, Heidi? You are a serious, good person. And that is an unfortunate contradiction," Scoop said.

Another of Heidi's lifelong friends is Peter Patrone, whom she meets at a high school dance. Peter becomes a caring pediatrician with caustic sarcasm. He and Heidi remain very close friends, however, nothing else can come of their relationship. Peter admits his homosexuality to Heidi at a feminist protest.

Heidi attends consciousness raising rap sessions, in order to make sense of her values and ideas. Scoop eventually marries a woman whom he does not love. At the wedding reception, Heidi confronts Scoop. Scoop admits his love for Heidi, but says that his marriage is a matter of priorities. If he married Heidi, they would constantly be competing with each other for fulfillment, he reasoned.

In the 80s, Heidi's girlfriends give into the male dominated arena of sitcom writing in Hollywood. Their thinking becomes very superficial and Heidi feels alone. Sitting in a bright pink Los Angeles restaurant she thinks that often "what makes you a person keeps you from becoming a person."

Heidi questions the changing roles of women and ridicules the superwoman of the 1990s. There were excellent performances by Cynthia Strickland, who played Heidi, Fred Sullivan the sensitive Peter Patrone, and Andrew Mutnick, the intelligent calculating Scoop Rosenbaum.

The scenes of the play are tied together by a slide show depicting American protests, presidents, and icons of our recent history.

The Heidi Chronicles has been called "an enlightening portrait of a generation." Although all viewers may not have lived through this era, the underlying themes appeal to all generations. This excellent play runs through May 2. Call Trinity at 521-1100 for ticket information.

Great weekend at Beta! Beta safety tip of the week: Always lock your window.

We are anxiously awaiting our formal this weekend. It's only days away.

Finally, Beta soccer started their run towards a second straight undefeated season by defeating TEP in a thriller, 1-0. The game winning goal was scored in sudden death overtime on an astounding bicycle kick by Fudd while Ike screened the goalie. Syd grabbed everything in his sight making 53 saves. We are looking to the championship already. See ya.

National Hunger Clean-Up Day (NHCD) is almost here. We now have four definite worksites; Cranston, East Providence, Johnston, and North Providence. Members will be looking for sponsors over the next couple of weeks. Give generously; it is for people who aren't as fortunate as you. Support NHCD for a good cause.

We all hope to see you Friday afternoon from 4-7 at the Comfort with DJ Joe. The cover will go toward NHCD. Come out and have a good time for a good cause. Our final meeting before NHCD is on April 8th at 8:00 in Meeting Room 2A. Anyone interested please feel free to attend. See you all soon.

Bryant Players

by Lori Nowak

Hit of hits! Light the lights! This is it! The night of nights! And oh what fun it'll be, on with the show! This is it!

"An Actor's Nightmare" will be performed on Sunday, April 5th at 2pm in the South Dining Room. Admission will be $2-students, $4-Administratorsn, Faculty, and Alumni.

Bryant Players will also be presenting "Bye-Bye Birdie" April 10th-12th in the auditorium. Performances are scheduled for: Fri. & Sat. at 8pm, Sun. at 2pm & 8pm. Admission is $3-students, $5 adults. Come see the show!!

Well, the two shows are coming along marvelously. In this ring we have "An Actor's Nightmare" with everyone pulling together - let's keep the energy high - we're doing great! And in the other ring we have "Bye-Bye Birdie" - I've never heard so much screaming in my life! The tension is on-just two weeks! It's looking real good - keep it up! Don't forget - FUN, FUN, FUN!

Delta Chi

by Michael Prestash

Well, I hope everyone had a good time this weekend at our White Carnation formal at Mt. Snow. Thanks to all the alumni and brothers who made the weekend a smashing success. Congratulations go out to Dana Smith for Brother of the Year and to Marc Jaro for Unsung Brother of the Year. Congratulations to John Biscotti, John Abbott and Dave O'Brien on their scholarship awards as well.

In sports news, the Martlets remained undefeated this week by beating Phi Kappa Sigma 29-27. The C team also won by forfeit to Phi Kappa Sigma. The B team fought hard, playing a crushing game of basketball with Kappa Delta Rho. Soccer C also won by forfeit.

Quote of the week, "You look like a six car pile up." Question of the week, "Who is a better driver, Mike or Marcel?" Adios.

Delta Zeta

by Audra Roderigues and Jenn Lopes

The beautiful weather this weekend seemed to give everyone a touch of spring fever.

We hope that any sisters going to formals this weekend will have a good time.

On Sunday afternoon we gave a warm welcome to our Province Collegiate Director, Fran Carnes. She was full of energy and personality and left our chapter with a very positive feeling. We are all looking forward to seeing her again at our Province Weekend on April 10th. Last but certainly not least, a belated Happy Birthday goes out to Elan!!

Delta Kappa Epsilon

by Sean Leone

Congratulations to all election winners and our new E-Board: President Welch, Executive V.P. L-ski, Social V.P. Aaron, Secretary Mam, Treasurer Hector, Pledgemaster A.J., and Sergeant at Arms Boomer.

The A-soccer team is now at .500 with a shocking 10-1 win over Sig-Ep. Wayne scored the game's only goal late in the first half and the defense held on strong the rest of the way. Also, the B-league basketball team brought out its secret weapon, Jeff Vlach, in its win over KDR.

Congratulations to Dan and Dennis, for their awards at the pledge formal this weekend, for a job well done. The formal was a great success.

On a sad note, Opie is leaving Campus Scene. Happy birthday wishes to Aaron.

Finance Association

by Henry S. Thompson

The Finance Association held its elections earlier this week. Next year's officers are as follows:

President—Stacey Spidle; Vice-President—Mark Bernier; Secretary—Christopher Hinckley; Treasurer—Bill Cameron; Investment Chairperson—Jessica Perkins; Public Relations Chairperson—Matthew Sprague

Congratulations and best of luck to you. I'd also like to thank Mike, Alisson, Maricarmen, and Steve for all their help this past year.

Our next meeting date has not been set yet, but will be announced shortly.

Kappa Delta Rho

by Tom Foolery

First I would like to congratulate our new E-Board: Sean "Cat-Man" Cataldo-President, Pete "Box of Rocks" Muzsi-Rush, Dean "The Duka" Fattibene-Pledgemaster, Rob "Newdog Narc" Cooper-Treasurer, and Michael "Dorm 5" Andradi-Secretary.

The formal is coming up so beware: brothers are looking for dates. In sports, there is nothing to say but GO Michigan.

Good night teenagers. That's the news Ladies and Gentlemen and I am out of here.

Phi Kappa Sigma

by Kevin Reid

Hello again, this last week seemed to be full of surprises.

Happy Birthday to Redeye, Carolyn, and myself.

Everybody's looking forward to the Final Four.

Phi Sigma Sigma

by Tracey Keller

Greetings! This past weekend, several sisters attended formals and everyone had a great time. This weekend we are all looking forward to our formal at Mt Snow. So sisters be prepared, and new sisters, don't forget.

Congratulations on everyone's new positions. President-Melissa, VP-Mary, Rush-Dawn, Bursar-Lauren, Pledge Mistress-Lara, Scribe-Janice, Tribune-Cyndi, MAL-Megan, PanHel-Rachael, and congrats goes out to Kelly and Wendy for being co-townhouse managers. We know you will do a great job girls!

That's all for now. Later! KT top dog! Phi Sig Sig top cat!! Quote of the week: "If you can't be with the one you love, love the one you're with!"

Rugby

by John Comino

Welcome back all rugby supporters! Bryant Rugby made its overdue return on the weekend in a clash against Babson College. It was great to be out on the field again even if it was frozen and muddy!

The 1st XV looked good from the word go and played a rugged eighty minutes of intense rugby. The backs were running on to the ball well and the forwards were playing a much more supportive game than last year - practice certainly has paid off!

Outstanding individual performances by Will, Spoons, and Zona must be acknowledged as must Rusty's leadership on the field. The excellent calibre of refereeing should also not go unnoticed!

Unfortunately, however, our worst nightmare came true when Babson scored in the last minute of the game to win the game 4-0. The 2nd XV played well also and managed to win their first game of the season 4-0. Strong debuts were made by Bill, Jay, and Mat.

Thanks must go to our supporters who stood in the cold (especially those who stayed for both games) - your support is never unappreciated. Thanks also to Coach Reill for fixing the practice field. This weekend we go on the road to play Trinity College so if you see a rugger don't forget to wish him good luck! Until next time then, au revoir!

Student Senate

by Jill Kostzweski

Congratulations to Jennie Lynn Rice for being named Senator of the Month, and also Senator of the Year, and congratulations to Jason Fromer and his Housing Committee for being named Committee of the month!

Jennie Rice, now the Student Senate Treasurer, served her Freshman and Sophomore years on Senate as the Fundraising Chairman. She was responsible for the fashion show we held last year, as well as last night's fashion show.

This job took a lot of work. Jennie had to find stores who wanted to participate, book rooms, get models and commentators, make flyers and programs, and the list goes on and on! In addition to her work on fundraising, Jennie has helped with Unhomecoming Weekend, and various other committees. You can easily see why she was voted Senator of the Year.

Jason Fromer, as well as the rest of the Housing Committee, did a lot of work to make sure everyone got a decent place to live next year! He and his committee worked with Residence Life to modify the Housing Sign-up process, as well as overseeing the drawings, making sure they are "fair and equitable."

Congratulations to Jennie, Jason, and the Housing Committee for a job well done!

SHRM

by Sharie Poulin

Attention SHRM Members!! At last week's meeting, we were pleased to have Barbara Gregory from Career Services come to speak. She spoke about career options in the HRM field as well as many other interesting areas of business.

Our next meeting will be held on Wednesday, April 8, in Rm. 2A of the Bryant Center at 7:00 PM. Any new members as well as old members are always welcome!! Hope to see you there!!

Sigma Phi Epsilon

by Derek Fairfield

The Brothers of Sigma Phi Epsilon had an outrageous week. Friday, we were bound for Mt. Snow. The formal was a blast again this year. Congratulations to the Brothers on their awards.

In Sig Ep sports the weekend definitely took its toll. The Soccer A-team suffered its first defeat to DKE. The B hoops team, which is 3-2, also lost to KDR. The A hoops team has yet to play since break.

Sigma Sigma Sigma

by Mo Mabie

Well, we hope everyone had fun at the formals this weekend: Delta Chi, TEP, DKE, and Sig Ep. The juniors who are moving into the new townhouses M4 and H5, along with the sisters who picked an old townhouse today, deserve to be congratulated for going through that hellish procedure. We're all looking forward to frequent get-togethers.

This week, we'd like to make a very special introduction. Please help us in congratulating our new sister Tracy. We decided not to put her in last week's Campus Scene because she really deserves her own day in the spotlight.

Special Olympics

by Heather K. Calderone and Tracy Markiewicz

Four weeks to go and you still have a chance to volunteer!! Remember the informational meeting on April 6th in the lobby of hall 15 at 8:00 pm. There will be tables for sign-up on April 7th and 8th at Salmonson and the Bryant Center during dinner hours.

The deadline for the softball and tennis tournament sign-ups are April 6th in the intramural office. Also on April 6th, we ask all residents to please leave their empty cans outside of your dorms and townhouses for our Can Recycling Fundraiser.

"Just For the Fun of It," Special Olympics has planned a week of exciting activities. Be on the lookout for further details! Be sure to see Frank Santos this Saturday in Janikies Auditorium at 6:30 pm. Also, on Wednesday, April 8th, Graffix will be playing at the Comfort from 9-1.

Special Olympics would like to thank all organizations who placed ads in the program. We would also like to thank Senate for sponsoring Johnny Groove and GPC for sponsoring Frank Santos. And last but not least we'd like to thank Phi Sig Sig and Tri Sigma for their generous donations.

Tau Epsilon Phi

by Brian Queen

First off I'd like to introduce myself. I'm Brian "Scooby" Queen. Over the next year, I will keep you well informed of all the news surrounding TEP.

This past weekend was TEP's pledge formal. A special thanks to Dad for making the arrangements and the whole formal weekend a huge success. A job well done!

At the awards banquet, Justin was the proud recipient of the Robert Lee Ellems Memorial Brotherhood award. He also received the best "B" award. Thanks for all the help G-Man. Other award winners were; Vince Worst "B," Indy best pledge, Slick worst pledge. Scott McKay was the well deserved winner of the Senior Unity Award, but the top prize goes to Spohn. Congratulations to all the award winners.

This week in sports, TEP's A soccer team defeated DKE in a close hard fought battle with TEP's Purple Haze scoring the only goal of the game. TEP's B teams were also victorious. The B soccer team posted two "W's" with impressive victories over TKE and Phi Kap by the scores of 7-1 and 8-3. In basketball, TEP's B team dismantled Pi Kap by the score of 34-15. TEP started the game on a 18-0 run. It was a great team effort. Keep up the winning tradition guys.

Tau Kappa Epsilon

by John Nieratko

Ladies and gentlemen, the tickets for TKE's second annual Pig Roast will soon be on sale!! Pisci has stated all the arrangements have been made and all we do now is hope for an excellent day.

TKE-A soccer has improved its record to 2-0 with a 3-1 victory over Pi Kappa Phi Monday night. Chico was the man once again with two goals. Colin, who was not to be outdone, netted the most talked about goal of the season. Disco has played great goal with only one goal scored against him in two games.

At this time, I would like to wish our two Paris runway models the best of luck in the Bryant College fashion show. That is correct TKE has two famous models: Matt "Giorgio" Piscitelli and E. Michael "Ricky Schroeder" Slomba. Good Luck men. Finally, I would like to thank Matt Lehane for his effort in finding a less expensive formal for the brothers.

Next Tuesday marks Opening Day and may it be a brand new year for the RED HOT SOX!

Theta Phi Alpha

by Crissy Yantorno

Hi!! The count is still on - four weeks left Theta!! Comfort night was a great success, thanks to everyone. We'd also like to give a final thank you to everyone who supported the American Cancer Society.

Happy Charter Birthday Alpha Phi.

Softball Wins Home Opener

Angelo Corradino
Archway Sports Writer

The softball team opened their home season this week winning three games, improving their record to 5-8.

The lady Indians swept Salve Regina yesterday in a doubleheader. Starting pitchers were Jen Flanigan and Britt Chanasyk both pitched two hitters as the team won 3-1, 7-0.

Junior centerfielder Wendy Powell went five for six with four runs and three RBI's to lead the Bryant offense for the day. In game one, Bridgett Casey had a triple and drove in a run to secure the victory.

Game two was called after four innings due to darkness.

The team won their first home game of the season 7-0 over South Maine on Tuesday.

The team jumped out to a two run lead in the first inning and never looked back.

"Very good, we made a few errors but they didn't hurt," coach Bob Reall said when asked about teams performance.

Captain Cindy Stone lead the team; at the plate, she had three hits and drove in one run. Wendy Powell and Jayna Fontaine also collected two hits and one RBI to lead the team to victory.

"This was our best offensive performance of the year," Reall said. "We hit with runner on base and we hit solid every time."

"We were also aggressive on the base path. We stole bases and took advantage of their mistakes. We have to keep this up all year, it will be key. But, we still could tighten up on defense."

On the mound for the lady Indians was Britt Chanasyk, who lead the team to victory, threw a one-hitter and struck out seven batter en route to the victory.

Game two of this double header was cancelled due to inclement weather.

The team will travel to Merrimack on Saturday and Assumption on Wendy Powell at bat during a Sweep of Salve Regina in Doubleheader Yesterday.

Sunday. Before returning home Monday, for a make-up game, against St. Anselm's at 2:00. They will then host Roger Williams College at 3:00, Tuesday and New Haven Wednesday at 3:00.

Men's Golf Tees Off for Spring Season

Angelo Corradino
Archway Sports Writer

The Men's golf team began their Spring season with two tournaments at Fripp Island and Daytona Beach over the past two weekends.

In the Palm Coast Invitational at Daytona Beach, Florida, the team finished seventh out of 24 teams. They missed fifth place by only two strokes.

High finishers for the Indians were Chris Congden who tied for eighth with a 11 over par 227, Bob Bigonette who tied for 12th with a 12 over par 228, and Brian Baker who tied for 30th with a 18 over par 234.

Baker also had the team's lowest round of the tournament with a 71.

The tournament consisted of many Division I schools including; the University of Louisville, Morehead State and Southern Illinois. URI and Providence College also competed but finished near the bottom.

The final standings, in order of finish, were Louisville 902, Brevard Community College 909, Morehead State 913, Methodist College 917, Lynn University 924, Southern Illinois 925, Bryant 926, Georgia State 927, Eastern Kentucky 933, and Hartford University 935.

In a Division I tournament at Fripp Island, South Carolina, Bryant finished eighth out of twelve.

Top finishers in this tourney were Bigonette with a 22 over par 238, and Congden with a 23 over par 239.

The team stats were not available at press time.

The Indians will travel to West Point, New York this weekend to play in the West Point Invitational.

Tribe Scalped by Bad Weather

Scott Gura
Archway Sports Writer

The Bryant Baseball Team has only played nine innings since returning from Florida.

So far, the Indians have had seven games postponed due to inclement conditions. The weather has been victorious, 7-1. The one loss, a peek of sunshine, enabled Bryant to beat Rhode Island College yesterday, 6-0.

Coming back from Florida, the Tribe was red hot. They continued their winning ways, posting their ninth victory of the season, Wednesday.

It was the first time in three weeks Bryant played baseball. The layoff did not seem to hurt. The team led by Dave Carey, who went 2-5, with two runs scored, and David Doyle, making seven or eight sensational defensive stops. Bryant's winning streak reached eight games.

DIAMOND DUST: Last week the players were outside shovel-

ling snow off the field, trying desperately to get it into Shape for the game.

The team must now play 29 games in the next 30 days—a tough road for anyone. The Tribe has been waiting for Mother Nature to be kind and some early spring sun to appear. Soon, the players will be doing their own version of a "sun dance" to bring better weather.

Women's Rugby Defeated

The Bryant Women's Rugby team lost to Rhode Island College 6-0 in a match at Bryant yesterday.

Men's Tennis Begins Season

Angelo Corradino
Archway Sports Writer

The men's tennis team opened their season this weekend by splitting two NE-10 matches.

On Sunday, the team faced Springfield College, losing 2-7. The only highlight for Bryant was freshman Roman Pavlik who defeated Springfield's Chris O'Brien 6-2, 6-2.

Pavlik, teamed with Zinck, also won the doubles, by defeating Scott Kelly/Eric Martel 6-4, 5-7, 7-6(7-4). The third set was played as a single tie breaker game to determine the winner.

Despite the bitter cold wind and snow, the Indians won their first match of the season Saturday against Assumption.

Leading the team to victory was Pavlik, who defeated Glenn Lavallee 6-2, 6-0. Lars Pluss topped Sean Hussey 6-0, 6-1 and Chris Fountas over Mark Sirois 6-0, 6-1.

Doubles teams also helped Bryant secure the win. Pavlik/Steve Zinck teamed up once again to defeat Hussey/Sirois 6-1, 6-1. Fountas and Paul Francis, in the snow, defeated Lavallee/Mike Mcafrey 6-4, 6-4.

The team faced Lowell Tuesday and Bentley yesterday. The results of these matches were not available at time of publication. The Lowell match was eventually rained out and will be played at a later date.

The Indians will be home today at 3:00 pm to face Babson, Saturday at 1:00 pm against Stonehill and Sunday at 10:00 am to face St. Michael's. They will then travel to Quinnipiac on Tuesday.

Athlete OF THE WEEK

This week's athlete of the week is Roman Pavlik of the men's tennis team. Pavlik, a freshman, helped the team by going undefeated this weekend.

He won his singles matches 6-2, 6-2 on Sunday and 6-2, 6-0 Saturday.

Pavlik also won both doubles matches 6-4, 5-7, 7-6(7-4) and 6-1, 6-1, as the team split matches against Springfield and Assumption.
