Entrepreneurship club visits Harvard Business School

Steven Manning
Entrepreneurship Club
Treasurer

On Saturday, October 26, the Entrepreneurship Club visited Harvard Business School for their 13th annual Entrepreneurship Conference. The Bryant College Entrepreneurship Club is very proud to be the only group outside of Harvard expressly invited to this event, which is sponsored by the Harvard Small Business and Entrepreneurship Club. Although entrepreneurship is already well established at Harvard, the theme of "Breaking the Mold" refers to the non-traditional role that entrepreneurship has assumed among business schools and the increasing support of entrepreneurship as a legitimate and viable career choice for the business student.

At the conference, we heard from several very distinguished speakers and panelists who shared with us their experiences and insights on where they are today and how they got there. The first keynote speaker was Todd Krasnow, who is the Executive Vice President of Sales and Marketing at Staples'. Mr. Krasnow is also responsible for Staples $450 million catalog business, as well as company-wide marketing, communication, and advertising functions. Staples recently announced an agreement to merge with Office Depot, forming an organization with 1996 revenues of $10 billion. Combined, the companies operate in 12 countries and employ 55,000 people. Mr. Krasnow hit on some key points in his speech, including: 1) entrepreneurship is incredibly hard work and that nothing you can do will ever fully prepare you for the reality of it; 2) you have to love change because you will have to change and adapt in order to survive; and 3) you must enjoy and believe in what you do and have complete commitment so you will succeed. Surely Mr. Krasnow can be given a good deal of credibility since those who originally invested in Staples have received 70 times their money!

The second keynote speaker was

Charles Couric, who has been President of Brita Products (a subsidiary of Clorox) since July 1995 and is the company's senior manager responsible for the manufacturing and marketing of Brita water filtration systems in North and South America. Mr. Couric especially focused on the characteristics of intrapreneurship, which is basically entrepreneurship within the context of a large organization. He described the merits of the open minded approach that intrapreneurship can provide to the often constraining bureaucracy of large corporations. Another notable speaker was one of the panelists, Tom First, who is a founding partner of Nantucket Nectars, a local company that produces all natural high-quality juice products. Mr. First's humor and informal approach to business certainly enlightened and inspired all who attended the conference.

The Entrepreneurship Club would like to thank our advisor, Professor Jack Keigwin, for providing this opportunity and also Jamie Bergeron, a 1992 graduate of Bryant currently attending the Harvard Business School. Jamie not only accommodated the club while we visited, but he also spoke to us regarding the rigors of the Harvard program and what it takes to get into this prestigious school of business.

The Bryant College Entrepreneurship Club is looking for new members who want to join this exciting program. Anyone who is interested can feel free to call me on campus at 4208, or e-mail the club at entclub@acad.bryant.edu.

While visiting Harvard Business School, members of the Entrepreneurship Club take time out for a picture.

First lady urges citizens to vote

Joann Loviglio
Associated Press Writer

PAWTUCKET, R.I. (AP) - Hundreds of soggy Rhode Islanders huddled under umbrellas at Slater Mill Park on Monday to see first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton, who urged citizens to vote next week and support Democrats.

"People who don't vote should forfeit their right of taking part in the great American pastime of criticizing the government," Mrs. Clinton said. "If you don't take part, you can't go around pointing fingers and placing blame."

The crowd cheered Mrs. Clinton as she took the stage with U.S. Rep. Jack Reed to the strains of "Happy Days Are Here Again." She spoke for about 6 minutes and then shook hands before leaving the historic mill, the birthplace of the American Industrial Revolution.

She addressed her husband's record and urged voters to support Reed in the U.S. Senate race, U.S. Rep. Patrick Kennedy in the 1st District and 2nd District nominee Bob Weygand, all of whom represent the "mainstream, common-sense ideas that built this country," Mrs. Clinton said.

The first lady touted health and education initiatives, including legislation to end drive-through deliveries and to make college more affordable that her husband has championed.

"Go out and talk to everyone you know and tell them the reasons they should vote," Mrs. Clinton said. "I'm going to ask you to vote for hope over fear, for optimism over pessimism, for unity over disunity, for ideas over insults, for the future over the past."

The rally was the second of three campaign stops on the first lady's schedule Monday. She spoke about crime and violence with citizens in Portland, Maine, in the morning and attended an afternoon rally at the State University of New York at Stony Brook.

President Clinton, Mrs. Clinton, Vice President Al Gore and his wife, Tipper, will be visiting 43 cities in 24 states over six days to try to ensure Clinton's re-election and restore the Democratic majority in Congress.

The Pawtucket trip marked Mrs. Clinton's third visit to Rhode Island this year. On Aug. 6 she toured Brown University with daughter Chelsea, who was college-shopping. Mrs. Clinton also attended a Democratic fund-raiser on January 20.

Truth needed ASAP

With the Associated Press working harder and harder to bring the news straight to you, oftentimes signals get crossed and otherwise private information becomes common knowledge. It is times like these when you, as an avid reader (or watcher) of the daily news, must decide between guilt or innocence for the unsuspecting criminals. The trouble is that, like in soap operas, the facts surrounding the case at hand are often tinkered with, by both law enforcement and the press, to play upon your own emotions. Guilt is associated with the suspects from the very start, and because of this, assuming innocence--before anything is proven in a court of law--has become a thing of the past.

For instance, the June 27 Centennial Olympic Park bombing was initially thought to have been caused by a security guard, Richard Jewell, employed at the sight. With accusations that he had caused the bombing so that he would be seen as a hero, people's emotions were toyed with, and he became coined as a sick man, etc. However, just this past week, Jewell was released from custody and dropped as a suspect from the case; as if a means of restitution, the officials working on the case stated that he would play a large role in finding the criminal truly responsible for the planting of the pipe bomb. Jewell, however, was rather peeved; can you blame him? In a press conference, he stated, "I felt like a hunted animal, followed constantly, waiting to be killed." He went on to stress the fact he was made out to look like someone with a few pretty severe character flaws, all of which were lies used to support his arrest. And, as he puts it: "While the government can tell you that I am an innocent man, the government's letter cannot give me back my good name or my reputation." What's a doomed man to do? He's no O.J. Simpson, who had tremendous financial and social support; he's Richard Jewell, a former law official with only a small family to support (mentally) him during this whole ordeal.

In another case which is much closer to home, over the summer, Warwick Police's Detective Scott Hornoff was finally found guilty of the murder of Victoria Cushman after nearly a decade of some serious cover-ups. Cushman, who had been Hornoff's extramarital affair victim as well, finally was allowed the chance to rest in peace (so to speak). For someone to slip past the authorities (his own co-workers) for such a long period of time mystified a great deal of RI natives. Perhaps a little more investigating could have taken place in this particular case; indeed the exact opposite of Jewell's case.

The question is, can we discern between what is true and what is not when reading news stories, which should be presented as all facts? In last week's Archway, the front page story accusing a 9-year-old boy of arson was in fact false. Though it did not mention the youth's name, the truth was not told. In fact, two fourteen-year-old boys were the culprits. The sad fact of the matter is that the nine-year-old had actually confessed to the crime (after some really long talks with the nice policemen). If it hadn't been for one of the older boys' pious dads, who convinced the guilty child of turning himself in, the innocent yet confused nine-year-old would have had a serious problem on his hands--training school.

Truth cannot be found in the newspaper or on the nightly news. Pretty much everything needs to be questioned. If we take the news for granted and accept what is presented to us, we just might end up in Ray Bradbury's Fahrenheit 451 world, where innocent bystanders are substituted for guilty suspects to appease the pathetically curious public. It doesn't seem all that likely, however, that we will be burning books anytime soon; enjoy classes.

Editorial filled with misinformation

I have always believed that an editorial should present factual material in a clear and orderly fashion in an effort to allow people to draw their own conclusions. However, in "Where is She Now?," the focus tended to be on conjecture regarding the climate and interpersonal relationships in the Office of Undergraduate Programs. It did not portray a professional, dedicated staff who has only the interests of the students at heart; and I am surprised and disappointed that The Archway would publish an editorial that could be construed as demeaning to people and an office when, as the editorial stated, it was based on "no facts."

As with student confidentiality, Bryant College extends the confidentiality privilege to staff; thus, I can neither confirm nor deny speculation regarding Ms. Nagle. What I can do is clarify some facts for you regarding her dates of employment and reporting relationships while in the Undergraduate Programs Office. Lynda Nagle joined Undergraduate programs on 1/1/90 in a temporary position, and was assigned to a permanent position after a year. During this time, she reported to Ms. Eleanor Read (Lynda had not been in Undergraduate Programs for close to a decade, although she held a variety of interim and part-time positions at Bryant before joining Undergraduate Programs). When Mr. Cartwright left Bryant in July of 1992, Ms. Read, not Ms. Elizabeth Powers, assumed Mr. Cartwright's responsibilities. Ms. Read supervised the department until her retirement on 6/30/93. Ms. Elizabeth Powers was selected Director in September of 1993. While it is not appropriate for me or any other administrator of the College to comment further on Lynda's (or anyone's) employment, let me add that Lynda Nagle was well liked by many students and was also an avid student supporter.

Editorials should not be based primarily on conjecture, nor should a fair and equitable discussion be based on unsubstantiated conclusions that are without a factual basis. In "Where is She Now?," I contend that this particular editorial is not reflective of first-rate research and discussion.

Help the Honorary Degree committee

Dear Bryant Community,

It is with excitement that the Honorary Degree Committee has begun searching for honorary degree candidates. Honorary degrees are presented to people whose service represents the great qualities of Bryant College. Honorary degree recipients come from all walks of life, including public service, business and education. This week we are looking for the Bryant community's suggestions. Students' input is extremely important. We ask you to recommend names of people you feel should be considered for an honorary degree. To help you get your suggestions back to us we have put a form in this week's Archway and have set-up a box in the Library to collect them. We anticipate many great candidates and thank you for helping the Honorary Degree Committee find them.

Lester misses you! A reason to wash

Lester, a seven-year old, Gemini-born, fawn colored bulldog was born in New York and arrived in Rhode Island as a puppy. He is the unofficial live mascot of Bryant College.

Lester and I were walking around the campus on a glorious day — he was truly himself, watching volleyball, track, and soccer events. He was flattered by many people of all shapes, sizes, and ages who stopped to pat and praise him for just being himself. Occasionally, he would express his joy by snorting ("love snorts" in dog language) or voicing his opinion on a particularly crucial point. Sometimes his interest would lag, but pass by with a hot-dog or a slice of pizza, and he would perk up fast!

He loves to offer people an opportunity to reach out and pet him. His expression of uncompromising and unconditional love is overwhelmingly received as devotion and compassion. People want to pat him for luck or share their affection for him. Lester enjoys the attention, and I like the companionship to cheer on our athletic events.

Lester wants to know, "Where is everyone?" He and I miss you and want you to support our Bryant Bulldogs.

Be safe, take care, and God bless!

Thanks to Dianna Larosee and Mark Ornstedt for independently asking the same question, "What's the green growth on tombstones and rocks (Diana) and on tree bark (Mark)?"

Dianna and Mark have asked about a life form that we call a lichen (pronounced "like-en"), a symbiotic cooperation between a fungus and photosynthetic algae or cyanobacteria. Lichens tend to be green, like the leaves of a typical plant, because of their photosynthetic pigments.

Symbiotic relationships among organisms involve a give and take, a sharing of strengths and weaknesses. In the case of a lichen, the photosynthetic organism provides nutrients and energy by converting sunlight, water, and carbon dioxide into sugars while the fungus seems to provide protection against dehydration and perhaps some important minerals from the substrate on which it grows.

Lichens are observed to grow on substrates, like rock or tree bark, which are inhospitable to other life forms. Since they provide their own energy and nutrients, they require little external nourishment. They sprout from pieces of existing lichens that break off and are carried by the wind or animals to new substrates. They could grow virtually anywhere, but since they grow very slowly, in richer environments other life forms, which grow faster, quickly overtake them.

Lichens serve as food for reindeer in the Arctic tundra, the source of the wool-dye orchil and litmus, the famous acid-base dye, and a dandy indicator of air pollution (lichens are tough, but they cannot grow in smoggy air). On the down side, the fungal partner in a lichen typically secretes acids that begin the process of degrading rock to soil, slowly mimicking the degradation that acid rain is causing to sculptures and architecture in industrialized countries.

I'm tempted to draw parallels between symbiotic organisms and the community culture of our college campus. But it wouldn't be right to write, nor would I like to lightly liken lichens to the night life rife with strife at Bryant. Absolut nonsense

Wednesday night, the new members of the Greek System and the Bryant Peer Educators gathered in the lobby of Hall 15 for the New Membership Orientation. The Bryant Peer Educators presented Absolut Nonsense to the New Members.

The New Members were divided into two groups, males and females, in order to create questions that they wanted to ask the opposite sex regarding what or why do they think or behave the way they do while under the influence of alcohol. After the questions were thought up and posted on paper, the two groups came together to answer and discuss the questions that were posed.

The success of the program was to determine if the behavior and/or thoughts of individuals was Absolut Nonsense while under the influence of alcohol.

Holistic education for students: Paving the way for career success

Billie Jean Sanders, a Bryant student, posed the following question on Brynet on November 15, 1994:

As a student I sometimes have to reach for an understanding for the relevance that some courses have in the business world. I am taking Statistics I now and plan on taking Statistics II next semester. I like the course much more than humanities or psychology because it applies to business situations. How does reading Gochberg prepare me for the business world? The only purpose I can find for courses such as humanities and other liberal arts courses is to force a student to be intellectual. My question is: If you don't do well in liberal arts, does that mean that you aren't smart?

The question Billie Jean asked is important and I, along with other faculty, have heard it from hundreds of other students. Listed below are the spontaneous responses to Billie Jean's questions which came the next day on Brynet from a professor teaching business (yours truly) and another teaching political science (Professor Glen Camp). I have made minor additions to my original response. The students should find these answers to be informative and instructive.

Dr. Harsh K. Luthar's response:

A college education should ideally develop all parts of an individual. A genuine education goes beyond training us for a vocation but trains us to learn for life, that is, to learn how to live fully and be good citizens and good human beings.

It is often difficult for some students to imagine what applications the liberal arts component of their education will have in the future. But to have a "rich future," you must have a love of learning. Of course, focusing on a career is vital, and I recommend to all my Human Resource students that they start planning in their junior year. However, there is no substitute for having depth in the fundamental life issues.

We need managers who are not only functionally trained, but who are sensitive to political, ethical, cultural, philosophical, sociological and psychological issues facing us as a society and as individuals. Such a manager, from his or her language, manner of speaking and from the richness of his or her ideas would tower over other managers who are only "trained" in business but do not understand that organizations are embedded in a much larger system. Ultimately, there is no dichotomy in all of this. No matter what your field of interest is as a student, you should understand something about what other fields have to offer because all disciplines at some level or another are interrelated.

A manager and a leader must have the capacity to integrate a broad spectrum of information streams and make judgments which may have far reaching consequences. It is only by taking a variety of courses that you can be exposed to different paradigms and the many alternative ways of learning, thinking, perceiving, interpreting and knowing. Such an education will allow you to develop a certain sensitivity and adaptability to your environment which will be crucial to your career success. To compete in a dynamic labor market one should learn to develop all of one's talents. The best way to do this is to get a sound business and a liberal arts education. That will make you a truly dynamite person and a really cool individual. You will come to realize this in your later years. So if you have to, take it on faith. All disciplines have something of genuine value to offer you.

Inspiration Points

Professor Harsh K. Luthar

Dr. Glen D. Camp's response: I worked for a "large" business, EXXON, at their world Headquarters. The executives were among the most brilliant and interesting people I have ever met. One — an advisor on Saudi Arabia who used to go hawking with the Saudi King — had a Ph.D. in Sociology from Columbia just like my colleague, Gregg Carter.

My German language ability was a big help when we had guests from EXXON's German affiliate and I was assigned the job of translating for them when they visited the US Dept. of Agriculture.

Another colleague of mine was "on leave" from Esso Italiano, our Italian affiliate. Thus "sociology" and "German literature and language" were a big help at this major "Big Seven" oil company. In fact, many Fortune 500 companies prefer new hires who are "broadly educated" rather than those with narrow "technical" training only. Perhaps that's why our Board of Trustees (largely successful business people) as well as AACSB (our accrediting agency for business schools) demand that, roughly half of all courses taken at Bryant be in liberal arts and humanities.

As for being smart and intellectual — what's wrong with a smart and intellectual businessman? My best friend is a Rhode Island CEO who graduated from the Harvard "B" school, and he's both! He thinks deeply about issues and feels he has to in order to be a good businessman and a good citizen! Lastly, what do you do if you are narrowly technically trained and when you graduate you find there aren't any jobs in your field? Starve? If you are broadly trained you can find a good job and can also "jump" to another career if you are not technically locked into a narrow specialty.

Does this help, Billie? Note: Brynet is an e-mail discussion list to which the students, faculty, and staff contribute by posing questions which are at times serious and at other times not so serious.

10 questions: An interview with Jill M. Quatrala

Kenneth Wakefield
Archway Staff Writer

Jill has been very active in Bryant activities. Besides being in the field hockey club, she is also a member of Phi Sigma Sigma and the president of the Panhellenic Council.

Kenneth Wakefield: When did you first notice your leadership skills?

Jill Quatrala: I have always been some sort of leader. In early elementary school when there was a group and it needed a leader, I was that leader. That natural instinct of leadership has followed me through both the lower levels and the higher levels of education.

K.W.: What is the most important event you have led in your life?

J.Q.: There are a couple things which I feel share the same amount of importance. The Panhellenic council just finished putting on a faculty Halloween party, which I was in charge of; I felt that it was very important. I am also trying to get a philanthropy together for all Greek women to help the community.

K.W.: Where are your leadership skills used most effectively in your daily life?

J.Q.: The Panhellenic council is where I think I use my leadership abilities the most effectively right now. I have to delegate some of the work and use initiative to come up with ideas to keep people interested in what we are doing. I also have to get everything organized to let people know what's going on.

K.W.: What are some of the other leadership skills needed as president of the Panhellenic Council?

J.Q.: I must be an innovator, have to come up with new ideas. The most important thing is to encourage enthusiasm among the rest of the members, they might not have the same enthusiasm as I do about a project or event. I also have to be responsible, can't be a slacker, have to manage my time.

K.W.: What are some of the ways you improve your leadership skills?

J.Q.: I learn mostly by watching the other leaders I admire and the way they handle situations. I ask questions and I listen to the majority to see what they want, because if nobody is behind you on what you're doing, it is going to be ineffective.

K.W.: How do you feel being a student leader has affected your life?

J.Q.: It really hasn't affected my overall life, but I have learned many of the skills I will need out in the real world when I graduate.

K.W.: Do you feel that Bryant has had any influence on your being a leader?

J.Q.: I think Bryant gives more people a chance to become a leader. With less members of each club, I think climbing up within the club is easier and occurs with quicker acceleration.

K.W.: As a leader of the Bryant community, what are some of the things you would like to see changed?

J.Q.: I would like to see Bryant become more of a community where everybody can live together in peace. There is a lot of segregation on this campus, I think the clubs need to interact with each other more, but because they don't the people bring the segregation upon themselves. An example of this is how badly the Greeks get stereotyped. All people hear about is the bad things the Greeks do, none of the good stuff.

K.W.: What message would you give to potential leaders?

J.Q.: Don't stress about leadership. It does not have to be stressful, just try your best to make things work, try to be sequential, and people will respond positively.

K.W.: Who is your hero, and why?

J.Q.: My mother is my hero. I can learn from her mistakes and look to her successes for reference, and she is always there to guide me in life.

Soaring

Now that the first round of exams is over, it might be helpful to reflect on the semester so far. How did you do on your exams? Of course, when I ask that question of many students, the response I get is "Fine" or "Okay." But for some students, the results of their first round of exams were anything but "fine." What can be done about that?

One of the first things faculty members tell students when handing back graded exams is that they are available to help students who performed poorly. They encourage students to contact them during their office hours, and even think of studying methods students might employ to improve their exam performance. The problem is, too few students take advantage of this genuine offer. Of course, I know what that's all about from a student perspective. In the fall of 1974, I was a freshman in a course entitled "Contemporary Peoples of Latin America," a course with nine books on the reading list. Imagine my embarrassment when, in my very first college exam, I scored a "50" out of 100. That was also the lowest grade in the class. When that happened, the last thing on my mind was speaking to the instructor about getting help. A few days later, though, I did speak to the instructor, got a tutor, and managed to earn a "C" for proper fashion, and pulled a "B" on an exam. His father drew an analogy to an airplane. He said that it took a lot of energy to get off the ground, but a lot less energy to stay in the air once aloft. He said that cramming before an exam is very strenuous and difficult, but staying on top of your academic assignments is relatively easy. For example, if you wait until two days before your research paper is due before you begin your research, you'll be just like a plane taking off, and will have to use a lot of energy over a short period of time in order to succeed. Had you started researching your paper weeks earlier, you wouldn't find it so daunting a task.

This is your challenge for the rest of the semester. Plan the remainder of your semester carefully, and don't allow yourself to get behind in your reading or preparation for written assignments or exams. Instead of being the airplane that is constantly taking off, be the one that soars. That's what being at Bryant is all about — learning how to soar.

Davenport's Restaurant is a family-owned operation with a unique seaside charm that prides itself on "fun people and good food." Upon entering the establishment, you will indeed be greeted with friendly faces and the enticing aromas of high-quality food. Approximately 10 minutes from Bryant, the restaurant brings a coastal flavor to Cumberland, Rhode Island; it is located at 1070 Mendon Road.

From any viewpoint, one will feel the comforting effects from muted blue, green and gray hues. The relaxing colors establish a laid-back mood, set a leisurely pace, and reflect the owner's stylistic attitude. Numerous mirrors framed with window panes and shutters establish a sense of openness, while conjuring up memories of peaceful days spent sauntering the endless coastline.

Once seated, you cannot help but notice coastal memorabilia throughout the restaurant. Portholes aligned along walls add to the coastal flair, while replicas of ships and sailboats prompt you to visit a pier after your meal. While absorbed in the ambiance, an appetizer of fresh bruschetta will tempt your taste buds. This crisp bread, topped with olive oil, basil, oregano, garlic, chopped fresh tomatoes and melted cheese, is highly recommended. Other appetizers of interest include calamari and focaccia (garlic and herb cheese bread). One hears sounds of crashing waves echoing across the land which drowns out background noise. This allows each party to feel confident in their private conversation.

For an entree, the New Orleans stir fry offers a unique taste with shrimp and scallops sautéed with fresh broccoli, mushrooms, onions, celery, and red peppers, dusted with Cajun spices, and all served over a bed of rice. In addition to seafood dishes, Davenport's offers Italian entrees and specialty sandwiches. From the Italian menu, the Davenport Supreme of grilled chicken, broccoli sautéed in olive oil, and fresh parmesan cheese, all tossed with penne, is a sophisticated taste.

Also, pizza is served with dough baked daily on the premises. The Leonardo Da Vinci features homemade grilled focaccia bread, sprinkled with fresh herbs and spices, layered with fresh roasted turkey, ham, bacon, lettuce, tomato and onion, and topped with Monterey Jack cheese. Served with french fries, this overflowing filling sandwich is clearly sculptured the way Da Vinci imagined it! The Michelangelo and the Pablo Picasso seem to be worth trying; these are hamburgers with a unique twist for the 90's. For dessert, an assortment of cheesecakes finish off the meal well, perhaps with an iced mocha.

"The Fortune 500" more than just a listing

Most students are aware of, and/or have looked at, a listing of companies termed "The Fortune 500." This ranked list of America's largest corporations is printed each year in an April issue of Fortune magazine in a special feature by the same name. The feature is valuable reading for 2 reasons: 1) the performance of these 500 companies provides insight into what is happening in the general U.S. economy, and 2) the figures and rankings of companies and industries serve as a valuable source of information for competitive analysis of companies within various industries.

For an idea of how the performance of the companies in the Fortune 500 both reflects and impacts our overall economy, read the introductory text sections. Reading the Introduction, you will learn that the earnings of companies that make up the Fortune 500 rose 13.4% in 1995 in an economy that grew only 2% with inflation at 2.8%. Joe Spiers, author of this section, points to corporate restructuring as the driving force behind such impressive profits. He also restates an important trend that most of us are already aware of; i.e. our economy is rapidly evolving into service and high-tech industries.

Following the introduction is a section entitled: Who Owns the 500?, which discusses the public response to corporate restructuring. One oft-stated response to downsizing in an age of rising profits has been an accusation of greed pointed at corporate officers and board members who are presented as having little regard for the victims of layoffs done to increase efficiency. Ronald B. Lieber, author of this section, encourages us to take a look closer to determine the real villain in this scenario. Lieber's argument runs like this: Since the early 1980's, employees have, in large numbers, been investing their earnings in 401(k)s which are in turn invested in huge mutual fund accounts, the managers of which stake large amounts of money on individual stocks. When the performance of a particular stock begins to fall, rather than withdrawing their sizable investment, these managers "put the screws to" the corporate CEO. In response, the CEO initiates downsizing and corporate restructuring in an attempt to increase the value of the stock. The result? The real villain appears to be the "main street" worker who watches the value of his 401(k) investment rise at the cost of employee layoffs.

The next section of the feature, entitled What's Driving Return on Equity, attempts to explain a 1995 Fortune 500 ROE of 14.6%, a phenomenal high that should reflect improvements in management performance. Richard Teitelbaum, author of the section, asks us to refer to a formula stated by E.I. du Pont de Nemours senior accounting executive, Donaldson Brown, in 1903 to determine the factors driving ROE. Brown's formula multiplies profit margin (profits as a percent of sales) and turnover (sales as a percent of assets) and adds leverage (assets as a multiple of equity) to the formula to factor in the effect of financing costs. What is happening today with profit margins, turnover, and leverage? Teitelbaum observes that leverage and turnover are high and profit margins are going wild. He points out that since 1990, nearly half of all profit growth has come from fatter margins and that rising profit margins impact ROE proportionately. What's happening in corporations to explain all this? The author suggests are: 1) Ambitious efforts in the 90's to cut bloat; 2) the continuing addition of automation into the workplace and the resulting increase in efficiency; 3) a fall in the after-tax cost of debt fueled by lower long-term interest rates; and 4) improved just-in-time inventory practices which have enabled companies to increase sales with fewer assets. Leverage is also high because assets have been rising modestly while equity has been decreasing due to restructuring, accounting changes, and stock buybacks.

What kind of numbers are presented in the feature to validate the claims presented above and to determine company, industry, and company within industry performance? Each company entry in the Fortune 500 list includes revenues, profits, assets, stockholder's equity, market value, profits as a percentage of revenues, assets and stockholder's equity, earnings per share and total return to investors (including a 1985-95 annual growth rate). Following this list is the 500 Medians, industry rankings for changes in revenue, revenues per employee, revenues per $ of equity, changes in profits, total return to investors, return on revenues, and return on assets and equity. The final sections rank the 500 according to 12 different measures and within states, and lists the Fortune 1,000 ranked within industries.

Where does one find this wealth of information? This year the Fortune 500 feature is printed in the April 29 issue of Fortune, located at the Circulation Desk. It can also be accessed via the Web through URL <http://www.fortune.com> or <http://pathfinder.com/fortune>. The information can be downloaded in Excel format using a Macintosh or PC terminal. e-mail: canderson@acad.bryant.edu

One more connection

F. J. Talley, Ph.D.
Vice President for Student Affairs

On Monday, October 28, President Machtley addressed the College community to discuss the upcoming strategic planning process. He wanted to inform the community of who would serve in key roles in the process and re-acquaint faculty members, staff members and administrators with his vision for Bryant College. In short, the President wants Bryant to be student-focused. His belief is simple: If we can find ways to make our students successful in college and beyond, Bryant will be successful as a result.

To help accomplish this, he announced a new initiative that I want to tell you about. He has asked all full-time employees at Bryant — faculty members, staff members and administrators — to “connect” with five students. Research tells us that among successful students, all or almost all can identify one staff person at their college or university with whom they have made an important connection. This person could be a member of the faculty, a custodian, a Resident Director, or a secretary. But it is someone who cared, and that’s the point.

There are other initiatives like this at Bryant. Our Adopt-a-Floor program, in which faculty members and freshman floors “adopt” each other, is one way for first year students to make a connection with our faculty. The Avenues to Success course, coordinated by the Learning Center, is another vehicle for linking students with employees.

So, don’t be surprised if you soon receive a call from a Bryant employee who wants to get to know you over a cup of coffee. Whether you participate or not is your choice. And if you don’t receive a call in the next couple of weeks and would like to participate in the program, give me a call at 232-6046, and we’ll have a member of the faculty or staff call you.

This program is not designed to replace our counseling or advising system, nor is it going to duplicate any existing support program. It’s really just another way to help you make a connection with Bryant. I hope you’ll consider participating.

Hypocrisy and revenge

Myron Gorham
Archway Staff Writer

Well, murder is murder no matter how you put it and/or substantiate it. The dictionary defines murder as the unlawful taking of somebody else’s life. That is an invalid definition, for the mere fact that it’s against the law doesn’t make it murder. A better definition of murder: the deliberate taking of someone’s life against their will or without their permission, without a present threat on one’s own life or an immediate other’s life from the person killed, in which there’s no other immediate option other than death. Couple this with the fact that everyone has a right to live (a right that can’t be taken away, but can be readily violated), and you have unconstitutionality and murderous revenge. And, it’s our very own government that is proudly engaging in this devilish art of passing Godly judgment on those who commit wrong by violating another’s right to life (now, in a few cases, extended to other crimes, like drug king pins).

An eye for an eye. Justice. Revenge. There is a fine line between justice and revenge. It’s so fine that most people don’t even realize when they cross it. Others know they have crossed that line, but don’t care; because the line is so fine almost everybody else won’t. So many times have justice and revenge been mixed-up that most people have made revenge a part of justice. When people say they want justice, they are really saying they want revenge. Here’s how to distinguish: Justice is merely doing what is necessary to make sure that someone is no longer a threat to anyone else, which obviously includes reforming that person; and, revenge is getting back at someone, mostly using the same medium as the person who you seek revenge on (ex: You steal something from me; I steal something from you. You kill my sister; I kill you to avenge my sister, for she can’t do it herself. You con me; I con you, etc.), but in many cases, especially when it comes to the criminal system, an equivalent to it (ex: You steal from me; I send you to jail for ten years, and just sending someone to jail doesn’t mean you are reforming them, etc.).

Sure the belief that one who takes another’s life deserves to die is quite valid and one that I share, but when we take it upon ourselves to enforce that belief, forcing our victim to adhere to our beliefs, we become the very thing we despise. We become murderers. At the same time we become something just as bad; hypocrites.

In truth, the death penalty is nothing but legalized murder. Basically what we’re saying is that it is Ok to commit murder we agree with but murder we don’t agree with, damn the murderer to Hell. We manage to convince ourselves that it’s not murder to appease our desire not to be classified in the same category as the murdered murderer; how easily do we revert to naiveté. A life for a life. Blood for blood... So this is civilization.

How many innocent victims have lost their life? Dying slowly in a solitary cage with nothing to comfort them but their faith, if left in tact, and the knowledge that they are innocent? How many guiltless victims have been tortured by the coming death, infesting them with madness, breaking them into little pieces and poisoning their hearts with hopelessness? How many good people will be stricken-down by our godly bolt, just because an excellent prosecutor pull-off a flawless case? Do we think we’re perfect? Do we believe that innocent people should have to pay for the wrongdoing of others? Do we honestly think it is just to kill people, who probably never done a thing wrong in their life, just for the satisfaction they we might be getting revenge on the murderer of our father, mother, child, sister, grandmother, friend, lover, neighbor, etc.? Is there ever an excuse? If you answer yes to any of these question, please report to the nearest electric chair.

I’m not saying that we shouldn’t take action; just action. The above argument can easily be construed as a rejection of the entire criminal system all together, for it is no secret that every day many innocent people go to jail and many guilty people get off scot-free. I’m merely saying that going as far as to take someone’s life is inexcusable. Once the sentence is carried-out it’s over. No taking it back or reversing the decision. No undoing what was done or making up for it. Just a dead man who did nothing to deserve such a permanent fate. Giving the person a life sentence would at least allow that person to live, but, of course, I’m against that too. Justice is making sure that someone is no longer a threat to anyone else, which means you reform a murderer (or any other criminal) and keep him/her separated from the rest of society until you no longer think him/her to be a threat (which could be for the rest of their life or a few years; whatever it takes).

Do we prize life so little. We don’t condone someone stealing from a thief, except, of course, Robin Hood. We don’t condone a con man being coned. We don’t condone an assaulter being assaulted; a rapist being raped; and so on and so on. But we happily condone a murderer being murdered. By our own government. Painting their blood unwashably upon our hands. Casting us quietly, with our blind eyes, into Hell’s ferocious fire, and cursing our eternal souls with the foul stench of death. For Heaven’s sake, I hope we come to our senses before the world disperse within a burning blaze.

The Mad Sage: The dream of Gods

Myron Gorham
Archway Staff Writer

Now cleansed of the beast, he decided to rest. He was near his objective, but still had a ways to go. As he reclaimed his resting place under the tree, all the surrounding animals, as if they had just been released from the most diabolical of trances, scatter into the shroud of the woods. He fell asleep once more knowing that soon his quest would reap him the ultimate reward; he would soon achieve what others merely dream about.

As he closed his eyes, like flicking the channel on a TV, he instantly opened them back up. He was standing in the middle of a barren field with no sign of any kind of life anywhere. He thought to himself, "Is this a dream?"

Then a cold wind came upon him, freezing him still. But as quickly as it froze him, it released him from its icy grips. It was as though it was copying his physique, but more like his inner physique.

As he looked, it was as though he was watching a painter skillfully creating his next masterpiece. Suddenly their were trees, flourishing in the dance of the wind, as flowers and grass joined in its harmony. Air, there was now air. He just realized that there was no air before; how could he still be alive? Then he look at the sky as the blue beauty emerged untainted by civilization; it was mesmerizing as its light blue dilated with the gentle grace of white. Then his attention was brought to the ground; a smooth running river flowed undamed by the will of others. His eyes become blurred as he witnessed the mighty explosion that brought forth the sun, and as his eyes cleared, so did his mind. Then from the sky came a stampede of glistening sand, and it plunged deep into the river before him, every last grain.

Suddenly, from the river emerged vivan life, life of all kinds from birds to lions to fish. Then came a mighty rainbow to brighten up the Earth after the massive pouring of life. The rainbow then plumaged into the river and, after a few seconds, emerged man. As the man walked from the river, the ground quaked with each step, and in the distance, he could see mountains coming-up from the ground, as though they no longer had to hide. He then turned and looked behind him, and there, surrounded by an ever expanding body of water, was a raging volcano forming an island that he knew was to be paradise. Then his ears became rich with the sounds of joyous life; life infecting a lifeless void of nothing that wasn't even breathing air, but death.

It was a rejuvenation. First a rebirth, now a revitalization of life itself. He realized that though he was reborn, he was still dead. And, now that he was about to begin his new life, he fully understood it all.

He woke up from the dream with a big smile. He looked at the waterfall one more time and whispered to the wind, "Yes, I can breathe again."

* Six Encounters With A Wise Man

"The moon is but a reflection of the sun, yet the moon maintains its own glow."

"Life is best served on buttered bread, rich with inhibition."

"The single truth is the biggest lie of them all."

"He who sees the light drowns in it."

"He who cannot walk on water shouldn't swim in it."

"Like Adam and Eve, let no man (God) deprive you of the fruit."

Greeks sponsor children's Halloween party

A bride, a lion, butterflies, Dracula, Elmo, fraternity and sorority members and much more. They all combined for a great time at the Annual Halloween Party for the Bryant employees' children sponsored by Greek Life. There was a great turnout, with about 50 children altogether. There were many games and activities for the children to participate in. These included pictures for the kids to color (which many of the Greeks also had fun doing), a doughnut-eating contest, pin-the-nose-on-the-pumpkin, and face painting. Some of the children were satisfied by simply watching test, won by the caterpillar--Amber Bigwood, daughter of Chris Bigwood.

Thanks to the Greek Community and everyone else who helped out or participated. The party ran smoothly and was a great success. The children had a fun time dressing up and showing off their costumes while participating in great activities. It was great to see all of the Greeks working together and volunteering their day for the enjoyment of the children.

Wanna catch a movie?

Nigel "Dead in Denver" Fubara
Archway Staff Writer

This week in entertainment we have been blessed with a plethora of tasty entertainment choices. Movies, plays, concerts, videos and, of course, we always have the option of playing video games in a dark room until we have Nintendo thumb and the shape of the characters are burnt into our retinas so that we see the characters when we close our eyes (don't laugh, I speak from experience; one summer I played so much Tetris, I would see the pieces falling in my dreams and I would wake up begging for the long red piece). Speaking of video games, next week, a new writer will be reviewing the new Nintendo 64 and other hot new game playing platforms, video game releases and much more, so be sure to look for it. On the movie front, I have three new movies to review; The Ghost and the Darkness starring Kirk Douglas and Val Kilmer, High School High starring Jon Lovitz and Tia Carrera, and Steven King's, Thinner, starring nobody in particular (or at least no one you would care about).

As for The Ghost and the Darkness, this is definitely worth your time and money. This story, set during the western colonization of Africa, is about a bridge builder and the unique problem he encounters, in the way of man eating lions. This is one of the best movies of the fall. This Val Kilmer animal movie makes the last Val Kilmer animal movie (The Island of Dr. Moreau) look as exciting as shadow puppets at a very lame party. The special effects will make you wonder, "How did they do that?," and the acting and writing are excellent. Catch it. Now on to matters less agreeable; the Jon Lovitz movie sucked!! This spoof of Dangerous Minds and the incredibly awful The Substitute was not funny; it wasn't even vaguely amusing. There were a few light chortles, but this nasty piece of celluloid trash would leave the untrained filmgoer in the fetal position begging to be shot. The addition of Tia Carrera as eye candy (very pleasing eye candy) cannot cover the horrible badness of this wretched movie. Steven King's Thinner was the same old Steven King horror movie. I am now making a plea to all readers. Please ignore Mr. King! I am hoping that if we ignore him and his banality posing as horror fiction and film, that he will either begin producing better products (not just haunted toasters that want to rule the world and burn down a little town near Bangor, Maine, it's always in Bangor Maine). If he doesn't produce a better product he may actually stop, which isn't a half bad idea.

As for plays, there is Les Miserable's playing at the Providence Performing Arts Theater, definitely worth the rather expensive entrance fee. I would warn you though, it is rather long and there is no thermo nuclear device being used to threaten the happiness of the planet (that seems to be a necessary plot device in film today). Sylvia is playing at the Trinity Repertory. A good time would be had by all. It wouldn't hurt to check out the coffee shop district on Thayer Street at the same time, and while you are in the area, you could check out the bands playing at the Strand and Lupo's. Last week, Goodie Mobb, Phishbone, and De La Soul played at the Strand (I did a back stage interview with all three bands after the show- one of the perks of being a WJMF deejay; excerpts of the interviews will run later). In the coming weeks, The Pharcyde, Susan Vega and Luscious Jackson will be playing at Lupo's. Tune in to 88.7 WJMF during the week for ticket giveaways and to listen to taped interviews of the bands. Really cool to check out on video, Faces of Death. I went down to our friendly Major Video this week and picked up this little gem, among other videos (which I can't mention in this conservative paper- let's call them instructional) anyway, Faces of Death is a mind blowing (literally!) trip through the grotesque and macabre. Check it out. Enough talking and on to the doing. I'm off to continue spreading vicious lies and heinous gossip through the halls and to propagate ignorance while starting conspiracy theories about aliens and how Tupac Shakur isn't really dead. As you can see I have my hands full. Till next time, young Jedi, may the force be with you.

UNITED WAY/FUND FOR COMMUNITY PROGRESS CAMPAIGN

With less than three weeks remaining in the campaign, Bryant is at 71% of our goal of $13,725.00. The United Way and The Fund For Community Progress have a significant impact on several health, human service and educational agencies throughout the area. Their effectiveness depends heavily upon the generosity of the Bryant Community.

As an incentive to employees, the committee has obtained a number of gifts for the drawing at the donor appreciation continental breakfast on November 21. Among some of the items received are a hand made cornucopia (on display in the Gulski Dining Room), a one year membership to "AAA," a floral arrangement from Simply Elegant, gift certificates, etc. To those who haven't given yet, please consider "Giving for a New Beginning." To those who have already pledged, the committee thanks you for your participation.

Donor forms can be obtained from and returned to any of the committee members listed below. To be eligible for the drawings, donor forms must be returned by November 18. The committee suggests that donors consider payroll deduction, as it is a convenient and painless way to make a contribution.

Committee members are Frank Arena, Bill Baker, Leslie Bucci, Rosann Dana, Carla Gardner, Patrick Keeley, Guiomar Melo and Jane St. Onge.

Looking at the World Through Different Eyes

How Stereotypes Influence Opinions About Individuals

by Jann-Douglass Bell

Director

Multicultural Student Services

Stereotyping is an automatic way of thinking. It encompasses who we are, where we all come from, family background, and, if you will, inclusion of all the ingredients of diversity (and or sameness). Stereotyping means that we have made up our minds about someone new to us, or strange to us without the knowledge of that person or group. It means that we have formed an opinion before we have all the facts. Basically, and easily explainable, a stereotype is a belief that we harbor within that all people of a certain group have some common quality. For instance: All blondes are dumb; All Arabs are terrorists; Boys are better at math than girls; Blacks are natural athletes; All old people are politically conservative. Stereotyping, or as we who are in the business of diversity like to say, cultural biases, is a "set up".

When we go on trips travelling from one city to another, or one state to another, we usually rely on road maps to guide us from one place to another. Cultural biases, or stereotyping is sort of like a road map, only we call it a mental map. Such mental maps influence one's perception and judgement. That's when you hear people making statements like: Oh, she's from Mississippi - that means she's a bigot, because all southerners are bigots. Like the maps that are made for our travel experiences, we need to improve our mental maps - vis a vis, by obtaining reliable knowledge of the territory. One way to do this is by first hand knowledge. Get to know the territory. The more experience we have with certain things, the more reliable is our knowledge of them.

Most people are not interested in this mental map alteration. Why? Because most of us believe, or assume, that our beliefs, attitudes, and opinions are correct. And they are the right conclusions to have. I hasten to inform you, or anyone within earshot of any lecture that I give, NO ONE IS BORN WITH BELIEFS - THEY ARE LEARNED. Developing our mental maps (our beliefs, opinions, attitudes) goes on for a lifetime.

To change the course means CHANGE. And we, members of the human race, resist change. (In some parts of the country it is worse that other - New England, for instance is known for its lack of change.)

What does the map-territory tell us about stereotypes? Road maps are changed sometime weekly, sometimes monthly, oftentimes yearly, because it is learned that the map no longer matches that territory and therefore is NO Good to the user. Bad maps lead us to jump to conclusions, or make bad decisions, that will result in bad experiences or just plain mistakes. By creating and using mental maps that are a good match to the territory we can avoid bad experiences and encourage more successful life experiences. This just doesn't happen overnight; it's reprogramming and it takes careful building of reliable knowledge of new territories. And it is important to state, creating the map to fit the territory. Ex: Remember the stereotype about all old people being politically conservative? Investigating that territory, we need to observe MANY older people before creating a mental map about them, which could turn out to be erroneous. Also, we will soon discover that using words like ALL or EVERY should be eliminated from our vocabularies - WHY? Because no matter how far we travel, how smart we perceive ourselves to be, no matter how old we get, we will never, I repeat NEVER, have the opportunity of meeting ALL or EVERY old person, or ALL or EVERY person or thing in a specific territory.

Creating a sound mental map means that we choose our words carefully in forming the map. We will soon discover that meeting scores of people will wake us up to the fact: People in the same group are different from each other as well as from me. If we have this kind of awareness of our own limitations, vis a vis, our mental maps, coupled with the desire to change some things about ourselves such as stereotyping, we will reduce the chance of jumping to the wrong conclusions about other people - those people that are not necessarily a part of our every day life.

On October 23rd, members of MSU along with help from ISO and INTRAX, celebrated "Unity Day" with respect to Asian and Middle Eastern cultures in the Rotunda.

Letter From the President

Dear Bryant College Community,

I hope you enjoyed the last issue of Cultural Flavor. We've received a lot of praise from various members of the Bryant Community about Cultural Flavor along with suggestions on how we can improve CF in the future. An example on one of the suggestions we received is on the front cover of this issue - a list of upcoming MSU events. This way, for those who can't attend our meetings have a god idea of what we plan to do for the next month.

As a reminder, the entire Bryant community is welcome to submit articles, poetry, pictures, and advertisements representing your unique cultural background, for publication in Cultural Flavor. Below is a list of submission due dates for CF and its corresponding issue release date:

Submission Due Date		Cultural Flavor Release Date
November 8th, 1996	-	November 21st, 1996
December 4th, 1996	-	January 30th, 1996
February 14th, 1996	-	February 27th, 1996
March 7th, 1996	-	March 27th, 1996
April 18th, 1996	-	May 8th, 1996

The CF staff asks that all submission formats are in both electronic form, preferably in Microsoft Word, and as a hard copy. Submissions can be placed in the MSU box at the Office of Multicultural Student Services, (right next door to Career Services), or mailed to Box 5.

MSU would like to make sure that everyone becomes involved in spreading the message of diversity and harmony here at Bryant College - Cultural Flavor is just one of those ways. I encourage the entire Bryant College community to be a part of Cultural Flavor.

If you have any questions, comments, or suggestions, feel free to e-mail MSU at MSU@acad.bryant.edu or you can contact me at extension 4862.

Thank you.

Sincerely,
Harold Peacock, Jr.
MSU President

Letter From the Editor

Dear Readers,

We hope that you will enjoy this issue of Cultural Flavor. The Cultural Flavor staff has worked very hard to compile many of the articles that you will be reading in this issue. We appreciate your contributions to the newsletter. I'd like to send a special "Thank You" to the contributors of this newsletter. Great job, ladies and gentlemen!

We appreciate and encourage the entire Bryant College community to make a contribution to this newsletter. If you'd like to make a contribution to this newsletter, please submit your materials to the Multicultural Student Services (M.S.S.) office in the Unistructure. The materials can be placed in the Multicultural Student Union box in the M.S.S. office. We prefer that submissions be in electronic format, along with an attached hard copy of the submission.

We hope that you enjoy this issue of Cultural Flavor! If you have any ideas that you'd like us to hear, email us at msu@acad.bryant.edu.

Sincerely,

Louis Camacho-Rosado

Zeta Phi Beta Sorority, Incorporated

Hello!

I hope the semester is going well. Zeta Phi Beta Sorority would like to take this opportunity to thank those who participated in our annual Walk for Literacy. We will be participating in City Year's annual community service project this Sunday as well as selling pizzas at Foxboro Stadium in November. Keep your eyes and ears open for more opportunities to join the Zetas in their community projects. We will be holding a Zeta Social for those interested in the organization and for those who would like to meet the rest of my sorors. Stay posted for the time and place. Black and Gold Night is right around the corner. Come and support this event. The ladies of Zeta Phi Beta Sorority Incorporated will be performing their first STEP SHOW Exhibition of the year. I'd like to wish a happy belated birthday to Sorors/Bryant Graduates '96': Katrina Gathers and Keisha Gilliard. ZEE-PHI LADIES!!!! I'd also like to wish a warm happy birthday to fraternity brothers: Toney Harewood and "Don Juan." Misery happy B-day. Last but certainly not least the Zeta Sleepover was a success. Thank you for the support Ms. Albert. For further information on any Zeta events please call Jenn @ ext. 4659

The Gunman's House Niggers

by Herman F. Thomas

I am a slave still,
Against my own will,
Done so by the stress and pain,
Tying my brain into knots,
Because my brothers work hard for a cot and three hots,
By any means necessary they "buck" their shots.

They are only the weapon, they do not pull the triggers,
When the genocide is through the gunman will turn around and call them "niggers."

A just reward for a job well done,
While the rest of us slaves fry in the sun,
Working the fields from 9 to 5,
That is all we can do to stay alive.

Trying to "stay up," trying to "maintain,"
Grieving and crying over the brothers and sisters those "House
Niggers" have slain,
They remain, in the house of the master, the so-called man,
This I can not comprehend, this I can not understand,
Why do they give their brothers the left instead of their right hand.

Prolonging our enslavement, stretching our hours in the field,
Shining his shoes, serving his food and polishing the gunman's shield.

Black only by color, minus the pride,
You could not tell they were black if you looked on the inside,
Under the master's roof is where they reside,
In the gunman's holster is the place they hide,
They relieve the gunman's itch by aiding in genocide.

In anticipation they cock their hammers and ready their triggers,
Ready to do their work as the "Gunman's House Niggers."

Mi Orgullo por mi Lengua

Por: Jenny Urena

Oh lengua espanola
Oh lengua castellana
Eres la mas rica
y la mas admirada.

El origen de tu raza
me parece inolvidable
las personas que te alaban saben como apreciarte.

Eres sensible como una flor
Eres hermosa como un cristal
Te mereces todo el honor que nosotros te podemos dar.

En ti hable mi lengua materna en tidije mi primera palabra seremos como una familia fraterna unidos por una lengua hablada.

New Kid on the Block

by Jennifer Carvahlo

New Kid on the Block
see if you can find a friend in me
I've lived here all my life and only made enemies

They all want to come and play
but I'm to be their toys
They don't like to share and they pull on my long hair
It's no wonder why I hate boys

Mama says I gotta get along cus' one day they'll be put to good use
All he does is stick out his tongue and give me cooties
What could possibly be worth the abuse

She says they'll lay me down and make me a woman
Instead of pulling, they'll run their fingers through my hair
She say at age 23 they'll stop drooling and find the ambition to share

I guess you can come on my swing as long as we both have a turn Bear with me, I'm trying to make friends with the New Kid on the Block something I've always found so hard to learn.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Changes in K2 - Discovery Lab on the Horizon

The terminal lab K-2, on the lower level of the Koffler Center, is undergoing a transformation. The DEC terminals will be removed and the Discovery Lab will take its place. The Discovery Lab is a collaboration between Dr. Hal Records and the students in his CIS 410 course. The general purpose of the Discovery Lab is to support new initiatives in the CIS Department. Look for future articles from students on the development of this exciting facility.

For those students who have used K2 for their e-mail, the network upgrade this summer allowed Information Technology to configure all the computers in Koffler for access to e-mail and the Web. Students now access all services from the desktop computers. If you have trouble getting to services from the computers, ask the student staff in the print booth for help.

ATTENTION UNDECLARED MAJORS

We are a group of marketing seniors who would like to take the opportunity to share with you our positive experiences with the marketing program at Bryant. We strongly feel that the marketing program is superior for many of the following reasons:

- We are extremely impressed by the knowledgeable and experienced marketing professors here at Bryant.
 - We feel that marketing is a challenging and interesting field that provides us with the greatest range of job opportunities (e.g. sales, research, consulting, and advertising).
 - Marketing allows you to be creative since it is a non-restrictive field.
 - Marketing also increases your interpersonal skills.
- We have enjoyed our experiences as marketing majors and invite you to declare marketing as your major by visiting the Office of Undergraduate Studies.
- Sincerely,
 Shirley Brakenwagen, Anne Staffier, Roger Hall, Julie Smith

HONORARY DEGREE NOMINATIONS PLEASE!

Bryant's Honorary Degree Committee is responsible for gathering recommendations for honorary degree candidates, evaluating their credentials, and making nominations to the Board of Trustees of those recommended for honors at commencement or convocation ceremonies.

The criteria for candidates include outstanding leadership, distinguished service, and important contributions in the fields of business, education, community activity, and public office. Other considerations include furthering the cause of minority group interests; advancing the cause of women in leadership roles; recognizing outstanding achievements by alumni; and acknowledging and encouraging support for Bryant College, financially or otherwise.

In all cases, the candidates must pass the test of role models for Bryant students. Nominations for women and individuals with international business experience are particularly welcome.

Please give us your suggestions on candidates for Commencement '97. Please include name of the person and the name of a contact person who can help us reach the candidate, if chosen.

Leanna Mansour

Hello everyone! First of all, congratulations to Doris on her upcoming two awards.

Just a reminder, the sweater man vender will be coming to Bryant soon, so save your money! He will be here Tuesday, November 12, so look out for him!

Don't forget, nominations for upcoming elections are coming up at the next meeting. Be prepared if you want to run for office. If you want to vote, you have to pay your dues, so pay up!

All members, please fill out your turquoise papers so that we can all get to know each other a little better. These will be put together in a newsletter that all members will receive.

I will look forward to seeing you all at the next meeting on Wednesday, November 6, in room 2A in the Bryant Center!

Beta Theta Pi

David Koestner

Hello again everyone. November is approaching us shortly as the semester is flying by. Our annual putt-a-thon will be coming in a few weeks. The brothers of Beta Theta Pi encourage all to help us raise money for the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

We have nine new names facing our Fraternity. Our pledges consist of Fletch, Jethro, Proctor, Boyd, Stout, Angus, Snype, Chive, and Wilson. Oscar made a new friend Friday night. Robin thought he was very polite. Merlin now has a blind side thanks to Flip. Cobb found the new bathroom on Saturday night. Monte is thinking about going to Six Flags. Ren found his belongings somewhere other than in his room. Hey Otis, I don't think you will ever make a good bartender.

Quote of the week: "Thanks for the resourcefulness of Gunner, we have her here tonight!"

Darwin's deep quote of the week: "The reaction I get now thinking about it looking back... Maybe one or two of them... We are just running around freaking out, and just leaped into my soul period, and their still in there."

BOAC

Bryan D. Magnus

Hello everyone! I hope you enjoyed the great weather this weekend, but don't get too attached because it's gone! That's right; it's ski season. People have already been skiing for two and a half weeks at Killington and Sunday River. So what better time to start/keep coming to BOAC meetings? Avi will need tons of help planning ski trips, and there is plenty of administrative things that need to get done. Also, it is a great time to get in on some of the trips, like indoor rock climbing for only $5.

Well, I know that this is a short one, but I am saving all the good stuff for Thursday's meeting. See ya there at 5 p.m. in room 2B of the Bryant Center.

The Bryant Players

Meagan Mirkovich

Happy fall everyone! Congratulations to the directors of the dessert theater, Rob and Susan. Make us proud guys! Good luck to everyone who tried out for the Bryant Players' production of M*A*S*H.

In other news, Becca, Don, and Jason were very excited when the Yankees won the World Series. Let the celebration begin! Becca, though, wished that she could be at the parade in New York City instead of being stuck in class. Hope everyone takes full advantage of the Fall Weekend activities starting on Friday. Some of the Players will be taking a trip to Providence on Saturday night, which should prove to be an interesting evening. Till next week.

Delta Chi

James Dow

I'll begin this week's column with the D-Chi sports report. In football, our A-Team remains in the playoff picture, while our B-Team currently holds the 2nd place spot in the division and awaits the post season. Our volleyball team (if we still have one) has made the playoffs easily and plays this week (I think).

Thanks to the Softball Team for Friday afternoon. To Janu & Jamie: Ego & myself want a re-match. Hey Scooter, when is the wedding? A happy B-Day goes out to Magoo, not Magoose. It feels like he never left if you walk past Buckley's room. Also a thanks to Duke & Lefty for stopping by this weekend.

Saturday night was in the townhouse, as K6 hosted the non-invite party. Stiltz turned in early, while Huey should have. Newman will now take the long way back to the floor, as he learned the hard way on Saturday. Scooter had an unnecessary visit to the side of M1, while Tully and Soto stopped by late night to announce the outcome of the World Series. A thanks goes out to Delta Zeta for a great time on Saturday at the Dungeon Party.

A personal question I would like to address: How do you get kicked out of the same place twice? Personally, I have been kicked out of better places than Foxboro Stadium, right Buckley....

Our AM's are doing well. Keep going guys, it is well worth it. Hey P-Nut, never leave your door unlocked. Commander, Barnacle, & Baloo took off to Swanson's on Saturday. Wait, let me guess, Beak got made fun of, Walker talked about Tyson, and Pony looked as rough as he did two years ago. Goose & Tony reminisced about last year by gracing their old room and the residents in it. Goose, try to stay out of the freshman dorms; you live on the floor!

A good time was had by all the "tailgating crowd" at Foxboro on Sunday. Oh yes, F-Sharp was in attendance, while JoBu and the Commander supervised the operation. Also thanks to Huey for the grill and the aggravation that followed.

Lastly, congratulations to the Greek Community for putting on a successful Halloween party on Sunday. And especially to Tanya, for all her help to make sure the event was a huge success; next time I'll bring the Iced Tea.... Until next week, born at Foxboro and leaving for good!

Prediction of the Week: Bulls over Celtics, 120-94, Friday Night at the Fleet.

Stat of the Week: Bulls center and traitor, Robert Parish, begins his 23rd NBA season.

Quote of the Week: Anything Wally has said this weekend, take your pick.

Tip of the Week: Never take another shirt at Foxboro without permission (JD).

Delta Zeta

Nicole Greenlaw

The sisters of Delta Zeta want to welcome our National Representative to Bryant College. We hope your stay in New England is a memorable one.

Good luck to all the new members in the Greek community. We want to wish everyone a safe and fun Halloween.

We would all like to congratulate Mike and Ken for earning their brown belts. It seems that several years of hard work has paid off. If we all continue to work at the pace we have lately, hopefully many more can join the ranks.

With Halloween this week, it should be a note not to dress as Karate Fighters. It is also not a good idea to try to kick solid objects such as doors and cement walls.

Everyone should stay tuned in class for word of future weekend events. Hopefully, there should be a bit more left in us this semester. On a final note, we should remind Keith that you do not need to dress up in a costume to scare anyone. Like the Hitman, being yourself is usually the best approach. Until next time, BKKA!

David Kaplan

Well, here's the story.... We were excited to have many alumni come up this weekend. Smiley, Wheeler, and Chad all graced us with their presence. In the mean time, we had a great time on both Friday and Thursday night. Saturday saw Sandy get invited everywhere. The night, nonetheless was still filled with excitement. The real excitement was our Football game on Saturday morning. Ryan, Pete, and I reffed, and often had to conference on many difficult calls. The game was intense at first, but after the half-time break, it seemed as though everybody was a bit more mellow. Still a great day for football. Sunday night, we went to the Pats, and I didn't have to sit in the "little room." Instead it was "Get your souvenir mugs here!" Not much else exciting going other than the fact that I'm anticipating graduation. Oh, yeah.... Mullins came up one night at like 2 AM, and left around 6. I don't know when, but I'm pretty sure it was not just a dream. I hope everyone has their costume picked out already.... Time is a'ticking.

Now for the part you've all been waiting for.... With the assistance of my Staff Writer, Ryan Delaney, Coming straight out of our central office in Cleveland, Ohio.... The top 10 reasons why they're taking so long to build their so-called "Pizza-Hut"

10) Its not really a Pizza Hut, it's Faculty Suite L, as in Late-night... That is where all of the cool Faculty hang.

9) The Info Desk is building another Info Desk, soon to be called the "Low Down" Because it is located on the first floor. This new facility will provide the students with the real information.

8) Construction Delays, as Tupper's old inventory is being counted for an old IRS Audit.

7) Franchise Conflicts involving name disputes. It really should be called Pizza-corner, I mean its more a corner than a hut.. isn't it?

6) Construction was temporarily halted because toxic waste removal units had to move in to remove what was originally thought to be Tupper's Tomato sauce.

5) Due to the inappropriate actions of upper level management, Brycol Lost their Pizza license.

4) The only thing really built back there is the stage, lighting, and Special Effects for the Ozzy concert on December 3rd in the Bryant Center.

3) Its just like the Coke Machines.... Apparently somebody is not doing WHATEVER IT TAKES.

2) Sandy, a Loyal Tupper's fan and advocate, gained vengeance recently by infiltrating the Pizza-Hut mainframe, and deleted the accounts payable to Construction.... NO pay, NO Pizza.... It's all about Tupper's.

1) By day they build it, and by night ... Ole' Man Tupper tears it down....

Well that's the way the cookie crumbles ladies and gentlemen.... Well before I go... I read something this weekend... it was

Multicultural Student Union

Louis Camacho-Rosado

Hello everyone!
This week has been a busy week for MSU. On Tuesday night, MSU held the "What's on Everyone's Minds?" speaker series. This speaker series focused on diversity. The event was held in the Bryant Center.

On Wednesday, the MSU held "Unity Day," focusing on Asian and Middle Eastern cultures. The event was fantastic. It had a great attendance. A special "Thank You" goes out to the International Student Organization (ISO) for their help in providing their help, materials, and attendance at the different displays. Also, a special "Thank You" goes out to Meg Springer, Jan Bell, and Intrax for their participation in the event.

MSU participated in the Amos House Walkathon on Saturday morning. For those who participated, it was a beautiful walk through the Roger Williams Park in Providence. We collected donations for the Amos House programs. The Amos House offers meals to the poor, maintains its transitional living programs for homeless men and women. The Amos House also offers support services to low income people. It was a great experience!

I hope to see you at the next MSU meeting; everyone is welcome!!
Ciao!

Hello everyone! I hope everyone has enjoyed their week. We would like to start by congratulating Belle and Melanie on their interviews and Nikki on her second interview. Good luck, we will be thinking about you. Tricia, please get better soon, we love you. The sisters would like to thank Tyler from DZ for contributing to our Jail N Bail, we appreciate it. Happy 21st to McCarron, we love you Hadjii and hope you enjoyed your birthday.

This weekend was wild. We'll start by thanking TEP for their wine and cheese, we had a great time.

CAMPUS SCENE

Sorry Phi-Tep didn't make the finals, but watch out for next season. And here's to the NKOTB. As for Friday night, we all had a great time at the dance. Thanks to DZ and KT for driving, we really appreciated it. Thanks also to the Smithfield Police for chauffeuring us. The sisters took a trip to Foxwoods on Saturday night. Thanks to Nader for everything, especially Frankie M. And the three magic words are: Keep it on!

The ghost man has disappeared once again. Sunny, Sahara says I love you and "hey baby." Congrats, Divine, for the awesome two nights in a row. Spencer, we will miss you, especially the presence of Kurtis. So long Captain Red, Sunny and Jess. Rock on Gibraltar, what an enlightening show! Can anyone tell us exactly what was going on in the bathroom that night? A random trip to CT was made...watch out for flying bats. Wheels, how the heck do you work that VCR anyway? It must be Sunny proof. Maybe you need to read the wine book to figure it out. Nice kitty! Hey top of four, rock on. Lush, have you found your shoe? While you are looking, watch out from above; but hey you're the smartest man alive, Sunny and Screech. Don't make Sunny mad because you'll never know what will come flying at you. And now for the quote of the week, "His tassel was flagrantly flying in the wind!" -Ohar. Is the suspense killing you, Woody? You'll have to wait till next week...

Student Alumni Association

by Darrell Cook

Although I was unable to participate in the Challenge by Choice course last Tuesday, I hope that all who attended had fun. I also hope that everyone learned that you do NOT motivate other people by saying that their is a fudge brownie at the other end of the rope. If anyone is interested in attending the Alumni Chapter Meetings held on Thursday Nov. 14th, and Wed. Nov. 20th in Hartford and Boston, please contact Susan at *6042. President, Machtley will be the guest speaker for both dates. Transportation is available.

This week is the finale of Candy & Carnations. For a first time event, it is going pretty well. Thank you to all who helped and to the students who purchased these Halloween treats. Karen and Jenn both did a wonderful job.

Coming up next week will be the October dinner/Birthday party. All members are invited to attend. Further details will be forthcoming. I hope everyone has a good week. See you at the next meeting on Tuesday at 5:00 p.m. in the Alumni House.

Student Senate

Scott J. Rttigan

Hello everyone! Well, we're back after a brief hiatus from the newspaper circuit. So what's new around campus? Well...the Bryant Center will be celebrating its 10th Anniversary the week of November 11-15. There will be many great events going on that week, including the grand opening of Pizza Hut! Look for more details to come. Black & Gold Night is November 8 from 7p.m. - 12:30 a.m. in the gym. We encourage all of you to attend and support our athletics program. Go Bulldogs! Registration is continuing for TAP (The Alternative Program). Some upcoming events include a trip to New York City on Sunday, December 9. This will be a great time to do some holiday shopping. If you're interested, stop by the Senate office and pick up a TAP brochure. Speaking of the Senate office, our office hours are Monday - Thursday 10a.m. - 4:00 p.m., and Friday 10 a.m.-3:00 p.m. Feel free to stop by and talk with us about any questions, issues or concerns you might have. You can also call our office at x6271. Even better, you can come to the Senate meeting, held every Wednesday at 4:00 p.m. in Papitto Dining Room. Well that's all for this week. One more thing...Congratulations to Rob Graybill, who was interviewed in this same newspaper just a few issues ago, for being elected Student Senator of the Month for September. Stay tuned for more news from the Senate. Look for another column next week and our monthly newsletter, The Link, in two weeks. So long!

Society For Human Resource Management

Jennifer Parkhurst

Hi everyone! I hope that everybody's midterms went well. We wanted to thank Mr. Rick Smith,

Vice President of Fleet Bank, for joining us last week. The topic was the role of the HR Generalist in the corporate environment. His talk was both informative and interesting, while giving students a view of the application of Human Resources in the real world. We would also like to thank Professors Pollard, Luthar, and Sinclair for attending the meeting and supporting our organization, as well as the great turnout from the student body. Mr. Michael Oliver of Norrell Staffing Services will be joining us on Tuesday, November 12. As usual, the meeting will be in room 2A in the Bryant Center at 4 p.m. Free pizza and soda will be served. Everyone is welcome. We look forward to seeing you there.

Sigma Sigma Sigma

Ivy May Kusler

Hello, how is everyone doing this week? Happy Halloween! Things are pretty good on the Sigma front, except for the fact that someone stole our Banner! We want it back A.S.A.P.!! We have our annual Crush Party tomorrow night. I can't wait; it's gonna be a good time! Watch out for punches, though Jamie; Brenda is coming back! It was great to see Finn on Friday night when she came to pick up Gimpy (AKA, Tonya) and bring her home.

Hey Maureen and Gina, TGI Friday's mint chocolate chip is a good time; I don't think you're supposed to finish the whole thing in one sitting, though. Miller night was a good time at Rents; can't beat free T-shirts and glasses. Mel, what was that face? Do you think we have enough tickets? If we sit here long enough we'll all win. Cider Jack night was cool too, thanks to Larry and Holly; I got a shirt, and we all got glasses. Hey, is this Bobby Brown? Closet Cheeze ball! Hey, watch out for those people! Gina, I think you should have driven.

Thanks, TEP, for a great time on Thursday. Sarah, you left me! Friday night late night was cool. The name of the game is Sarah. "I'm brain washing you." The video camera is a good time; thanks Gina. Cobb, you said you weren't taping. "Cindy loves the camera."

Saturday was cool; too bad our game didn't work out. Sarah, how's that new jacket treating you? Hey guys, our plan in 15 didn't work too well.

Tonya would like to thank a few people for a great turkey dinner, and a certain townhouse for eating all the leftovers; sorry four of you couldn't join us. She would also like to give a word of advice to anyone who cares "Don't try to be a cool kid like me and sprain your ankle twice in three weeks, its not as fun as it looks." Thanks to J8 for the new table.

Michelle, it was good to see you Saturday, but you left too early! Maureen, do the Olympic rings! -Mel. Michelle, I know you loved the magician.

Last but not least, thanks to Delta Chi for our Pumpkin; it's awesome! Oh by the way, how far do you guys live from home? That's it for this week, have a great Halloween. Get ready for our Party girls! Check ya later -Ivy May!

Women's Rugby

Summer Wallace and Erica Wright

Hey Ruggers! We hope to have our Literacy community service project in order soon. We hope everyone's parents had a good time after last week's game against Brandeis. We showed them that we have class. We put up a good fight on Saturday girls, but it just wasn't enough to beat Stonehill. We'll make up for that this Saturday. We play URI away, this Saturday, for our last game of the season. Thanks to Stonehill for showing us a good time-just kidding- but as always, we found our own entertainment.

We hope everyone had fun on Thursday. We'd like to say good riddance to the coaches after they tried to clear us out of house and home, but we were happy to sing our favorite song for the last time. Leneord, I'm glad you didn't fall off the sunshine mountain. Trish, I'm glad you didn't fall out of the window.

Deanna, we were glad you could join the "bunch" on Saturday. I think we got a little bit too into character, girls. There were also sightings of the cast of Hee-Haw at Scoobie's party. Shorts, what were you supposed to be again?

The Hunger Coalition

Shane Sachdev

The Hunger Coalition is about helping local churches feed the homeless population of the Providence area. We have our meetings in the Bryant Center Room 1 every other Tuesday. Our next meeting is Tuesday, November 5. Feel free to come down if you are interested. You can call Brian at x8300 or me at x4138 for more information.

Tip of the week: Little things can make big differences if you see them through.

SPB

by Jeff Hill

Hi again, everyone! I hope all midterms are over and that they went well. Only three and a half weeks till Thanksgiving break, hang in there.

Fall Weekend is coming up this weekend and SPB has many events planned for you all. Starting on Friday, from 11 a.m. till 2 p.m., there will be a card reader and numerologist on the first floor of the Bryant Center. Friday night, Frank Santos will be bringing his R-rated hypnotist show to South Dining Hall. For all of you who have not seen him before, I guarantee you that you will not be able to stop laughing. The show starts at 10 p.m. Tickets are on sale at the Info Desk for $2, or they can be purchased for $3 at the door. The Fall Semi-formal will be held on Saturday from 6pm till midnight. Get your tickets now at the Info desk. If you are unable to join us at the formal, SPB is also presenting "A Time To Kill" starting at 8p.m. This movie will also be shown on Sunday at 6:30 and 9:15 p.m. Admission for Saturday is $1 and for Sunday is $1.50 with soda and popcorn.

It is now time for you to sign up for this year's College Bowl. The games will be held on Tuesday, November 12 and Thursday, November 14. Sign up now at the Info desk. There is a $10 charge per team.

Join us Monday at 4:30 p.m. in Papiito for our weekly meeting. Hope to see all of your faces there, and make sure you check out the events this weekend. It will be lots of fun.

Tau Kappa Epsilon

Vincent L. Petrangelo

This weekend was rather bad, and I went home. See ya next week! (I have to write something because Chimpy Z. is here watching me). From what I hear, this weekend was the absolute best weekend in Bryant history, but I guess every weekend is (Ya right!).

Enzo, come on now, there are many PHISH in the sea, no need to rage over one. Luca, I was starting to worry a bit about you, but all those worries ended this weekend when I saw the remains of this weekend's guest AA Ga Ga Ga! I'm sure HOOTERS was a treat, fellas. A nice way to start off Friday night with is a great meal at a fine restaurant. Of course, you were only interested in the fine cuisine.

I would like to thank DZ for full TKE attendance at the Dungeon Party Saturday night. Well, that's all folks.

Oh ya, Castanza, did I mention the floor enough? I wouldn't want to leave you girls out.

For the grand finale I would like to thank Cecil for the lovely, thoughtful present he left me! It was so nice of you. I'll have to think of some way to repay you.

COMMUTER/OFF CAMPUS HOUSING DPS CRIME PREVENTION TIPS

HOUSE/APARTMENT

-Equip the house/apartment with solid exterior doors, tamper-resistant hinges, and deadbolt locks. If the landlord hasn't provided them, ask for them to be installed.

-Keep a radio and lights on during absences. Put auxiliary locks on sliding doors and a spacer in the tracks to resist lifting.

-Make sure the area by the front door is lit properly. If the apartment or house cannot be seen from the street or parking lot, ask the landlord to trim the shrubs.

-Stop newspaper delivery and have the post office hold the mail if you plan to be away for more than a few days.

VEHICLE

-Have a roadworthy vehicle and do not allow your gas tank to get low. Learn how to change a flat tire.

-Plan routes before leaving. Let someone know where you are going and when you'll return.

-Park in well-lit areas and always lock all vehicle doors. Place belongings in the trunk or on the floor covered up.

Whether at home or on the road, you are primarily responsible for your own safety/security. Be aware of those around you. If something feels wrong, get away from the situation immediately.

Call Ginnie Bowry, DPS Crime Prevention Specialist, 232-6001, if you wish to borrow books & videos on personal safety for men and women, or ask to have DPS give a safety/security presentation for you and fellow students/faculty/staff.

SPORTS

Ice Hockey off to 2-0 Start

Bob Clark

Bryant's ice hockey team started its season on a winning note last weekend at non-league opponent RISD. Bryant jumped out to an early lead with a goal by Jack Edwards, who was assisted by Steve Delaney and Dave Zielinski. Tim O'Brien poked home the rebound from a Kevin Parke shot for the Bulldog's second goal. Paul Dube scored an insurance goal assisted by Jeff Hannon and Dave Dolph. Bryant then held the lead as Pete Somers and Vin Di Giolia combined in net for 25 saves and a 3-1 win.

In their second game, Bryant visited non-league opponent Wheaton College. The team showed its offensive firepower in steamrolling

Wheaton 10-2. Bryant received an outstanding performance from Zielinski, who recorded 3 goals and 3 assists. The team raced out of the blocks scoring 4 times in the first 10 minutes on 2 goals by Seth Anderson and 1 each by Hannon and Zielinski. Bryant's potent offense got help from several players: Dube and Delaney, 1 goal and 2 assists each, Edwards, 1 goal and 1 assist, and Shawn Tyler, 2 assists. Assists were also credited to Brian Turtolato, Eric Toussaint, O'Brien and Somers. The play of the game came when Eric "The Sniper" Toussaint fired a bullet the length of the ice catching Wheaton's goalie completely off guard. Di Giolia, 15 saves, and Somers, 19 saves, each made several spectacular plays and combined to limit Wheaton's offensive production.

Bryant will host its first home game of the season this Saturday, November 2, at 7 p.m., against league rival, The Coast Guard. This is Bryant's first league game, and they invite everyone to come and show their support. The team hopes to see you there!

VOLLEYBALL CRUISE TO HALLOWEEN CLASSIC TITLE

The Bulldogs (15-8, 5-2 NE-10), who rolled to five consecutive victories last week, captured their second straight Bryant Halloween Classic championship Saturday.

Bryant was led by tourney most valuable player Jennifer Carvahlo (E. Providence, RI/E. Providence). In her first action since October 16, Carvahlo paced Bryant's 3-0 tournament-opening win over St. Rose with 29 assists and five digs. Her best performance came in the semifinals, where she turned in a 35-assist, 12-dig effort in a 3-0 triumph over Sacred Heart.

Wendy Jackson (Guilford, CT/Guilford) was named to the all-tournament team. The junior defensive specialist sparked Bryant's come-from-behind win in the finals against C.W. Post, recording nine digs.

The Bulldogs' 3-1 victory over Mercy Friday night marked the 100th victory for seniors Stacy Defaranos (W. Haven, CT/W. Haven), Alicia Kadlick (Weymouth, MA/Weymouth) and Sharon Pacheco (Warwick, RI/Warwick). The trio has registered an astounding 102-39 mark in four seasons at Bryant.

Defaranos reached double-figures in digs in three of the four matches (10 vs. Mercy, 13 vs. Sacred Heart and C.W. Post).

Bryant, who has won six in a row, raised its NE-10 mark to 5-2 with a 3-0 win over Merrimack Tuesday. Freshman Meredith Vachon (Cumberland, RI/Cumberland), who replaced the injured Carvahlo at setter, had 30 assists and 11 digs

MATCHES THIS WEEK: Stonehill (10/30), PACE (11/2)

CROSS COUNTRY: The men and women tuned up for this weekend's NE-10 meet with impressive outings at the Stonehill Invitational.

The women, who finished second overall, placed four runners in the top ten. First and second place went to sophomores Jackie Ely (Bohemia, NY/Connetquot) and Michele Mottola (Stoneham, MA/Stoneham), who recorded times of 19:36 and 19:44, respectively. Freshman Nikki Rogerson (Essex Junction, VT/Essex Junction) continued an outstanding freshman campaign, finishing eighth with a time 20:18. Senior captain Carrie Stygar (Lebanon, CT/Lyman Memorial) turned in her best performance of the season, finishing tenth (20:42). Ely was named conference runner of the week for the second time this season. Rogerson was selected the freshman runner of the week, also for the second time this fall.

The men, who were edged by St. Anselm by three points, also placed four runners in the top ten. Junior Shawn Nassaney (Pawtucket, RI/St. Raphael) finished fourth (27:35), freshman Nicholas Lamb (Hingham, MA/Hingham) finished fifth (27:36), sophomore Matt Roloff (S. Portland, ME/S. Portland) finished seventh (28:08) and freshman Elgin Booth (Plaistow, NH/Timberlane) finished eighth (28:11).

MEETS THIS WEEK: NORTH-EAST-10 CHAMPIONSHIP AT BRYANT (11/2)

MEN'S SOCCER: The Bulldogs (5-8-1, 1-6-1 NE-10) fell 2-1 to Bentley Saturday in their only match last week. Bryant spotted Bentley a 2-0 first-half lead and was unable to overcome it, despite Scott Mann's (Annadale, VA/W.T. Woodson) third goal of the season. Freshman Dan Cain (S. Windsor, CT/S. Windsor) made nine saves.

GAMES THIS WEEK: SACRED HEART (10/30), at Quinnipiac (11/2)

WOMEN'S SOCCER: Bryant (4-10-2, 2-7 NE-10) ended the season with a pair of losses last week. First-place Quinnipiac was fortunate to leave Smithfield with a 2-0 win Wednesday. Freshman Stephanie Smith (Sutton, MA/Sutton) sparked in net for the Bulldogs, making 14 saves. Smith turned back seven shots and yielded just one goal at Bentley, but her counterpart Kelly Lach posted her fifth shutout of the season and led Bentley to a 1-0 triumph.

Wednesday's game marked the final home appearance for seniors captains Beth Guay (Harrisville, RI/Burrillville) and Cammy Hickey (Marlboro, MA/Marlboro).

WOMEN'S TENNIS: The Bulldogs (8-7, 4-5 NE-10) ended the season on a positive note, defeating UMass-Lowell (7-2) and Salve Regina (5-4). Lisa Sarandopolis (Marblehead, MA/Hamilton-Wenham) notched a pair of first-singles wins without losing a single game. Jen Kiellar (Wyckoff, NJ/Ramapo) and Beth Anderson (W. Boylston, MA/Wachusett Regional) also posted 2-0 records. Despite a season-ending 4-6, 3-6, freshman Jennifer Flaherty (Nokomis, FL/Venice) led the squad with a 12-6 singles mark.

Bryant's top doubles team, Sarandopolis and Kiellar, picked up a pair of wins to improve to 11-7.

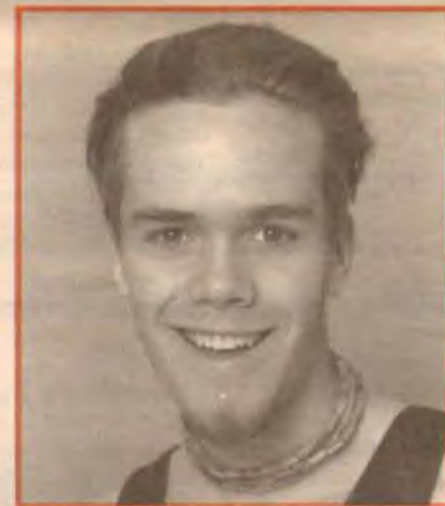

ATHLETE of the WEEK

Michelle Mottola

After two weeks off, this cross country runner posted her best time of the season at the Stonehill Invitational last weekend. Mottola's time of 19:44 was good for a second place finish at the meet. Her continuing improvements throughout the season has helped the women's team turn it around after a poor start. Good Job, Michele!

ATHLETE of the WEEK

Shawn Nassaney

Being the team's most consistent runner this entire season, Nassaney, again had an outstanding meet at the Stonehill Invitational. The junior runner raced through the 5 mile course in 27:35, which landed him a fourth place finish. It has been both talent and dedication that has kept Nassaney a few steps ahead of other competitors. Congratulations Shawn!

Bryant lacrosse takes tournament title

Steve Tully

The Bryant men's lacrosse team is off to a fast year. After barely dropping the Bridgewater State Tournament two weeks ago, the Bulldogs have made their case. On Saturday, October 26, the Bulldogs beat Dean College 5-3, and then went on to beat Mount Ida in sudden death overtime, 6-5. The tournament was held at Dean College, and Bryant fell behind early, 2-0. After this, though, it was pure and simple; determination and desire set in. Fueled by single goals by Todd Partridge, Bert Alvarado, Steve Tully, and two by Frank Pepe, Bryant scored five straight and never looked back. The key to their attack was the defense, and Goalie Mark "Wheels" Framtz, who had 16 saves. Coach Chris Libutti was very impressed with their second half play. "They were tough, made the hits when we needed it, and, most importantly, controlled the ball. These guys deserve to win; they practice and play harder than anyone."

The second game vs. Mount Ida took a different sequence. Bryant went up 3-0 at half-time and was halfway from winning the tournament. However, as they expected, Mt. Ida stepped it up in the second half and, with less than a minute left, tied it up at 5-5. On to overtime, they battled and, with 20 seconds left, Steve Gonacalo found Frank Pepe, who shot the ball with his back to the net, and the Bulldogs won! Bert Alvarado, Steve Tully, and Todd Partridge also had goals in the tournament clincher. These are the first games Bryant has won in five years, and they are not content yet. Next Saturday, November 2, they will close out their fall season with a home game against Nichols College at 3:30 p.m. Please come and support their efforts. Their record stands at 2-2, and with another week of hard work, they should be ready to take on Nichols.
