New Potato Plan Proclaimed

Ohld Tymer

Branching out—or at least down—is the way Bryant will move into the future, according to the newest version of the college's strategic plan. Bryant President William E. Trueheart called the new plan, titled Potatoes - A Powerful Economic Resource (PAPER), "an effort to raise revenues, conserve energy, improve the environment, and increase social responsibility all at the same time."

From crops in the fields to computers in the classroom, potatoes will pervade every part of campus life with new activities ranging from promotion through production. Besides the promotional campaign begun earlier this year, Bryant will use its crops to sell three new products, raw potatoes, vodka, and french fries, and to produce energy to power the campus.

"Potatoes are the fourth largest crop in the world," Trueheart said, "but the leading potato growing countries are Russia and Poland, with the U.S. only in third. As a business school, we have a responsibility to show U.S. industry the way back to number one."

Raw potatoes will be the first product Bryant produces, once the campus conversion process is complete. Potatoes will be grown on "every square foot of available land, including the track. It'll take about 3 months to switch over to potato production, but we can do it on time if everyone cooperates," said physical plant director Ed Richards, who added that he was looking forward to the change because it would bring his responsibilities closer to nature. "Growing potatoes puts the plant back in physical plant," he said.

The mysterious object seen hovering over the Unistructure

Vodka and french fries will have to wait until completion of the Potato Processing Plant (PPP) later this year. The PPP is currently under construction on the other side of Route 7. Marketed under the new Bryant's Own brand name, vodka will be "the flagship in a new line of collegiate affiliation products, the fastest growing segment of the alcohol industry," Marketing Professor Frank Bingham said.

French fries should do nearly as well, say analysts who are betting that the recently signed contract with Nicholas Janikies, Bryant alumnus and leading Burger King franchiser, will put Bryant "on top of the french fry heap."

Energy production can begin almost immediately, though, as soon two electrodes himself.

To promote PAPER, Bryant is changing its look, with a new advertising campaign and a new spokesman, Mr. Potato Head. Critics charge that although PAPER may look good in print, it will never fly because of the down-to-earth nature of Bryant students, several of whom have already voiced their disapproval of "such a half-baked scheme."

According to critics, no normal human being could come up with such an idea. In fact, some believe the potato phenomenon to be of extraterrestrial origin, prompting Trueheart to deny rumors that the campus potato frenzy was started by a group of aliens who have secretly taken over the college, despite repeated unconfirmed sightings of an unusual potato-like object hovering over the Unistructure.

"I like Mr. Potato Head," Trueheart said, "but I'm not about to become one."

as the potatoes begin popping out of the ground. "All we have to do is stick two electrodes in each spud," Richards said, "and we'll have plenty of juice in no time." The first project scheduled for completion is the Potato Powered Information Super Highway (PPISH), the new campus computer network funded by a grant from the Clinton Whitehouse under the supervision of Vice President Al Gore, who is rumored to have

Spring Weekend Band Selected

After many difficulties in securing a popular band for this year's Spring Weekend festivities, it was announced yesterday that The Au Gratins will perform.

The Potato Skins will open with their rendition of, "All That She Wants Is Another Baby Yam."

The Au Gratins will perform many of their top ten hits including "Once Peeled, Twice Baked," "Sour Creamy," and "My Baby Was Baked."

"I am pleased to have contracted such an accomplished and popular band," stated Michelle Jaccodine, SPB Spring Weekend co-chair. "Actually," Jaccodine added, "I'm pleased to have contracted any band at all."

According to Student Senate President Rob Fontanella, some students have expressed concern over the credibility of the chosen bands.

"One student felt The Au Gratins were just too cheesy and a waste of the students' valuable resources," said Fontanella.

Because of this negative feedback, the Spring Weekend Policy Committee has taken the appropriate precautions for possible student up-risings. Additional G.I. Joe's Storm Troopers and a brigade of Transformers will be on hand to control the crowd. Even if no riots ensue, security hopes their presence will prevent the possibly rowdy and often dangerous dances, such as the Mashed Potato, which are a traditional companion to The Au Gratin's yams.

Also, in an effort to conserve funds, Jaccodine will perform her very own talent act under the assumed name, "The Divine Miss Jaccodine." Her performance will include juggling hot potatoes.

The infamous Beer Garden will take on a new face this Spring Weekend. Because of the notoriety of Bryant's Own Vodka, the traditional Beer Garden will be transformed into the Vodka Patch. The normal wristband policy will be in effect, however.

"Vodka is not only tastier than beer; it is more potent," said Bill Petti, director of ARA Dining Services. "It is the perfect compliment to Spring Weekend activities," continued Petti.

Throughout Spring Weekend, G.I. Joe's Security Department will be out in full force cruising through the Dorm Village on their fleet of Big Wheels.

Commencement Exercises Moved to Pavement

Other Issues Addressed

*Anal Beancounter and Lois Lane
Apeeler Staff Writer*

"Commencement is hitting the pavement this year as the need for an additional potato patch becomes necessary," stated Dean Richard Alberg.

This announcement comes just one week after Dr. Linda Hackett, in a joint press conference with President William E. Trueheart, announced that the track would be replaced by a new potato field. "An analysis showed that this area of the campus could be better used to cultivate tuber roots," commented Trueheart.

Yesterday, the Commencement Committee decided to relocate the commencement exercises to the C2 parking lot for lack of a more appropriate place. According to the committee, this site will offer a more scenic view of the campus and its potato fields.

During the commencement exercises, graduates will have the opportunity to be photographed with the Cabbage Patch Kid of their choice while proceeding through the Archway.

Because of his recent divorce proceedings, Mr. Potato Head has declined the invitation to be this year's commencement speaker. President Trueheart's office was in a bind last week to obtain another suitable prospect on such short notice. After consulting the Psychic Friends' Network, former U.S. Vice President Dan Quayle came highly recommended.

Finally, Quayle accepted the in-itation to speak after much persuasion. Quayle informed the press of his initial intimidation to speak at a college with such an allegiance to the potato, since he has tremendous difficulty spelling the word.

The President's office has released the honorary degree recipients. Among the illustrious individuals chosen are Batman, Baby Wanna-Walk, and Hulk Hogan.

Batman's fight for justice over crime has won the favor of the office of G.I. Joe. The trustees found it appropriate to award an honorary degree in appreciation for his nocturnal prowess.

Baby Wanna-Walk will be receiving an honorary degree for her efforts to slow down our fast-paced world. While most of us "wanna run," Wanna-Walk has developed innovative methods to return to old-fashioned tradition.

In an effort to move away from the conservatism of a business school, Hulk Hogan will also receive an honorary degree for his "no-brainer" accomplishments with the World Wrestling Federation. Hogan, who is unsure whether to be proud of this accomplishment or not, is awaiting instructions from his trainer. He hopes to take on President Trueheart in the ring to contest Willie's World Heavyweight title soon.

As a final note, all commencement exercises are contingent upon the weather. According to Dean Alberg, Plan XYZ will go into effect to avoid the possibility of "getting fried." In the event of snow, the ceremonies will start two hours ahead of time.

Potatoes and Yams? The Story Unearthed

*Flick-My-Bic
Special to the Apeeler*

SMITHFIELD, RI — In a move certain to have long lasting repercussions throughout Rhode Island and the Bryant College Community, the long loved Mr. Potato Head stunned the toy world and others with the announcement of his divorce from Mrs. Potato Head after 25 years of marriage.

Potato Head (Mr.) made the announcement at a press conference at Bryant College. At his side during the tear-filled conference was Ms. Sandy Yam, Potato Head's (Mr.'s) long time mistress, and now fiancé.

The assembled reporters and journalists from around the world had to be restrained by Bryant Public Safety officers as they attempted to get their questions in.

The big question on everyone's mind was the effect this stunning announcement would have on Potato Head's (Mr.'s) relationship with Bryant College.

Last year, the venerable old spud made his advertising debut in a series of print ads promoting Bryant College. Although he was Mainely vague in his explanations, Potato Head indicated his desire to remain a part of the Bryant Community.

"Though I have received a small amount of negative feedback about my performance from a tiny minority of the students on campus, the ungrateful jerks, the majority of the people have been overwhelmingly positive about my role as a Bryant spokespotato."

Regina Ryan, Bryant Associate V.P. of Communications, agreed with the Iowan native's assessment. "We have been very happy with his performance thus far and refute any half-baked rumors about our ending the hand-in-root relationship we've had for the last eight months."

Executives at Hasbro, the original giver of life to the Potato Heads refused to be interviewed for this story. But unnamed sources at the Pawtucket toy maker have indicated they are reviewing their relationship with Mr. Potato Head on the heels of revelations that Ms. Yam is a product of Lego Systems of Connecticut. "We're examining the issue closely, but we're not about to fry our brains over it," the source noted.

The former Mrs. Potato Head was unavailable for comment, but in a statement read by her lawyer Mr. Aii M. Abaked following the stunning press conference, she said "I can't believe that annoying little spud did this to me. I gave him the best years of my life, keeping him in butter and sour cream, and he has the gall to run off with that tramp of yam! I want the house, the car, and the rights to those special Wendy's baked potatoes."

While reporting the stunning news to the Bryant Community on the newly established Potato Powered Information Super Highway, or PPISH (see related story on Bryant College's new electrical system), Coach Robert Reall, after asking viewers to adjust their sets to compensate for the loudness of his jacket, said "We here at PPISH wish the new Potato Heads well, and look forward to their continuing relationship with the College."

Bryant College President William E. Trueheart noted Bryant's expanding potato related industries as an example of the college's desire to continue their relationship with the potato.

"I think our dedication to potato power, our new relationship with Nick Janikies to produce potatoes for his Burger King restaurants' French fries, and our venture to market Bryant's own vodka is clear evidence of our enthusiasm for Mr. Potato Head. We welcome he and his beautiful new bride to the Bryant Community."

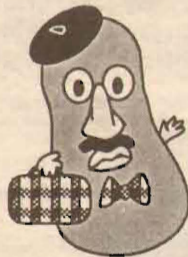

In a related story, former Bryant President Donald Trump (see The Apeeler April 1, 1989) announced he would provide shelter for Mrs. Potato Head at one of his New York City penthouses until the divorce proceedings were complete and the settlement awarded.

Spuditis Epidemic Hits Bryant

Health Services

*Smart One
Apeeler Staff Writer*

Health Services has recently announced an epidemic of spuditis on Bryant's campus.

This disease is caused by the toxic chemical called solainin, the green substance sometimes found on potato chips.

Health Services became aware of this outbreak when students began complaining of symptoms including dirty, gritty skin and a greenish glow of the face. As it is a very rare disease, the medical staff was uncertain as to how to treat it.

Because solainin forms on potatoes exposed to excessive sunlight, some medical experts believe that in order to reverse the process, the patient must avoid contact with all forms of light.

In addition, this condition is extremely contagious.

According to Doris Horridge of Health Services, "Students must remain in bed and should not attend classes for 2-3 weeks, thereby avoiding both contact with others and exposure to daylight."

To keep symptoms from becoming life-threatening, students are advised to drink plenty of vodka. The alcohol content of potatoes and, as a result, contains many of the antibodies necessary to fight off the disease.

Horridge added, "Excessive use of alcohol often has adverse repercussions, such as hangovers.

This is not a problem however, as students are advised to stay in bed all day anyway."

In response to this problem, Bryant Dining Services has become very selective in potato chip distribution on campus.

ARA staff members are now required to arrive an hour earlier than originally scheduled in order to sort through potato chips one by one.

Any questionable chips are sent to the spuditis lab for further inspection.

As a precautionary measure, ARA has also installed Hasbro's Easy Bake Ovens to prepare other potato products on campus.

French fries and mashed potatoes are now cooked in these ovens to alleviate toxins and prevent the disease from spreading.

Introducing the Bryant Potato Chips

*Toby Jean
Apeeler Sports Writer*

A few weeks ago, the Athletic Advisory Committee announced that they were going to change the name of Bryant's mascot. The "Indians" was said to be degrading to Native Americans.

After much debate, a new name was selected yesterday: the Bryant College PotatoChips. Suzie Spud submitted the name to the committee of administrators, faculty, students, and alumni. In a closed door meeting of the group, the final vote came down to the Potato Chips.

Spud stated, "I thought the name the Bryant Potato Chips was fitting because potatoes have done so much to enhance the quality of the campus. They are also a great symbol for the College."

Committee members agreed the Potatoes best represented Bryant and is definitely a name everyone can identify with.

Cheerleaders have already begun designing new cheers incorporating the potato theme. The cheerleaders were overheard yesterday screaming, "Spud! Spud! He's our man! If he can't scallop them no one can!"

New jackets are in the making which will incorporate the new name and goose logo on them.

No longer the Bryant Indians...let's here it for the Bryant Potato Chips! Hopefully, the Chips will not get crushed. Go Potato Chips!

Brazilian Soccer Legend Pelé to Take Helm as Men's Soccer Coach

Don Messierewig
Apeeler Sports Writer

The men's soccer team ended their long search for a coach when soccer legend Pelé accepted the job yesterday.

Pelé will be taking over for Len Mercurio who stepped down after last season.

"It was hard to lose Len, but I think Pelé is just what Bryant needs," Dr. Linda Hackett said. "The soccer program is definitely heading in the right direction."

Shortly after Pelé accepted the job, New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner offered to build a domed stadium for the home games. This stadium, which will be modeled after Toronto's Skydome, will be located on Route 7 next to Parentes.

"If you have a big star like Pelé, you need an even bigger stadium," Steinbrenner added. "Besides, if Pelé decides to leave I could always move the Yankees to Smithfield."

Pelé will not officially start until next month, but the campus is already preparing for his arrival. The men's and women's soccer team are already gearing up for next season.

"It is great to finally have a coach who knows what he is doing," one soccer player, who chose to remain nameless, said. "All Mercurio did was fight with his players and he could not coach in the playoffs."

Pelé's first test will be an indoor tournament prior to Spring Week-end. Division I and II powerhouses will be at this tournament and Bryant can really make a name for itself if they are successful.

"I am sorry I am graduating, and will not be able to play for him next year," goalie Scott Calabrese commented. "Pelé is the best player to ever play the game, Bryant will only become better with his help."

In addition to Pelé coaching the soccer team he will also teach a cooking class specializing in Brazilian cuisine.

"Potatoes are big in South America, we use them in almost ever dish," Pelé stated.

As for the soccer aspect of Pelé job, he is looking to take Bryant to a national championship in the next few years.

"Once the word gets out I am coaching at Bryant, players will be flocking to Bryant to play for me," Pelé added.

Next year's captains are already preparing for the upcoming season. They will be returning to campus before the rest of the fall athletes to get a head start on Pelé's programs.

"Coach Pelé will expect us to be in top shape. If we are not, he will look for other players who are," sweeper Damon Del Monte stated.

Once the season begins there will be a few more changes to the program as a whole. Reebok has offered to supply the team with brand new uniforms. These uniforms will have the traditional Reebok symbol in addition to the potato head label.

"We expect these jerseys will take the San Jose Sharks' spot for the most wanted sports jersey in the country," one Reebok spokesperson said.

Other changes include WJMF increasing their power in order to broadcast home and away games.

"We don't have a football team, so soccer is the next best thing," Scott Terrien, WJMF general manager, said.

The team also plans to travel to Brazil, Pelé's home country, to play the national team in a charity game. The proceeds from this game will go to the Dan Quayle's Potatoe Fund, which benefits the victims of the potato famine of the late 19th century.

The NE-10 also announced changes in the season itself. Bryant will now only play each team once, and will automatically host the play-offs.

"With the talent they will have, they should walk away with the conference," an NE-10 official added.

Pelé will be on campus today for a press conference to officially announce his plans for the soccer program. If you can not attend you are unable to attend, you can receive a free video of the conference by calling Roger in AV at 1-800-GETREAL.

The Apeeler Sports Department is looking for a few good men to start a Hot Potato LaCrosse league. All teams will consist of 15 men (or women) to compete on an NCAA level. If you are interested in joining the league please contact Spud I. d'Hoe at 232-Spud

Battle Of The Sexes II

Earvin "Dr. V" Valvano
Apeeler Sports Writer

In response to the over whelming success of last year's battle of the sexes, the men's and women's basketball team once again battle each other for bragging rights.

The men's team grabbed an early lead by scoring the first 14 points of the game. Mary Beth Feeney then started to reign down three pointers to get the women back into the game.

This is when the game became exciting and the crowd became involved.

"It was great to see the women and men play each other, maybe we can see who the real athletes are," one member of the sixth man society stated.

The men's team responded to Feeney's unconscious play with a run of the own. At the half the men were able to grab a two point lead as they went into the locker room.

"We had to do something, Feeney could not miss," coach Ed Reilly added. "We feel if we could have a lead at the half, we could win the game."

When the second half started, Stephanie Meyer took control of the game, and gave the women a 50-43 lead, before the men could respond.

"We could not handle her pressure, she was poking at the ball, and is more aggressive than Charles Barkley," Dave Burrows added.

The intensity continued to increase as the men mounted their own rally to get the game back to a 60 all tie.

"I just called a time-out and calmed my players down," Reilly added. "When they went back out on the floor, it seemed like their was a new team on the floor."

The teams then battled back and fourth, exchanging the lead 12 times in the last 3:45.

With time winding down on the clock, Meyer hit a jumper from downtown to give the women a two-point lead.

The men had just 10.3 seconds to set up a play.

They got the ball down the court into the hands of Herman Thomas who found Jerome Grier beyond the three-point arc. Grier let one fly and hit nothing but net to give the men a 85-84 lead.

"It was a great game, the men worked hard and deserved the win," Jen Closs stated.

High scorers in the game were Dave Burrows with 22; Jerome Grier with 18; and Herman Thomas with 11, for the men. Liz Davies lead the women with 34 points; Beth Conneally poured in 18; and Jen Closs added 14.

"This was a great way for the campus to get involved with the basketball program," Dr. Linda Hackett said. "The fans who only attend the men's games have now seen the women in action. Maybe next year they will come out to their games as well."

Bryant Athletics is working on similar games in other sports. The women's softball team will take on the men's baseball team after their respective seasons conclude.

"It will be a good experience for the us," Jayna Fontaine, softball captain said. "If we can hit the tough pitching of NE-10 softball, we should have no problem with Scott Luca."

The tennis teams have also announced they will battle each other for their own bragging rights.

"I can't wait until the fall when we play our match against the women. I just need to find some to beat (I mean play)," Roman Pavlik added.

However, some students feel this is a waste of time, "Girls can't compete with us, we are better than them," one anonymous athlete said.

Some on campus also have similar feelings, "We can take guys on in any sport, they only think they are better," Shirely Branco said.

Other games the Athletic Department are working on include a battle of the sexes in soccer, racquetball, golf, and track and field.

If you are interested in officiating any of these events please call the sports hotline at 1-800-UR Gullible.

ATHLETE of the WEEK

Red P. Toe

This week's Athlete of the Week is Red P. Toe of the hot potato lacrosse team. In three games, he managed to score three goals and assists on three others. He also was able to avoid being squashed by the tough defense of the New York Candied Yams. For his accomplishments he was named conference spud of the week.

Toe is a junior management major from Bangor, Maine.
