William Trueheart Inaugurated As Bryant's Sixth President

"We must set as one of our highest priorities the preparation of our students for functioning effectively in an increasingly global society," asserted Dr. William Trueheart in his inaugural address. If not, Trueheart forewarned, "We run the risk of training leaders who could ultimately be considered irrelevant in our world society. That won't happen at Bryant."

Trueheart, former executive vice president of Bryant, was inaugurated as the College's sixth president this past Sunday in the gymnasium. According to Bryant's archives, this was probably the College's first inauguration since there are no records of one in the past.

About 1,500 people filled most of the floor seating, while the bleachers remained virtually empty. The American Band performed all of the musical selections in the processional, music interlude and recessional.

Claiborne Pell, U.S. Senator of Rhode Island, began his remarks by saying how much of a joy it was for him to return to Bryant. Thirty years ago he received his first honorary degree from the College.

"Technology is becoming increasingly sophisticated. We do not have sufficient skilled labor...But education is the only answer and we are more reliant on the educated than ever before," said Pell.

President William Trueheart receives the Presidential Medallion from the Honorable Bruce M. Selya, Chairman of the Bryant College Board of Trustees at his inauguration last Sunday

inauguration. "Dr. William Trueheart is a fine man and he will be a fine president," said Begin, who is also a '76 alumnus and a Trustee. "He brings a sense of purpose and a commitment of excellence for Bryant College." As President of the Smithfield

Town Council, Anthony Simeone brought greetings on behalf of the

Ice Reveals Its Dangers

WASHINGTON—It's possible a more treacherous drug than crystal methamphetamine has come down the pike over the years, but Dr. Joseph Giannasio in Honolulu can't think of one.

"It's an extraordinarily dangerous drug, psychologically and physically," said Giannasio, who as director of Castle Medical Center's Alcohol and Addictions Program in Hawaii has become one of the nation's experts on the exotic stimulant.

"It's dominating the environment here, and the rest of the world is frightened, for good reason."

On Tuesday, the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control will hold a hearing to learn how crystal "meth" gained such popularity in Hawaii and how drug fighters can counter its inevitable proliferation on the West Coast.

Committee Chairman Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., called the hearing amid reports of a "particularly severe crisis" in Hawaii and the threat of a new national drug epidemic.

Police, prosecutors and drug experts from Hawaii, California, Texas, Pennsylvania and Florida will address crystal meth, better known as "ice," and the less potent but more popular methamphetamine, known as "speed" or "crank."

Unlike cocaine and its smokable derivative, "crack," which flows primarily from South America, meth is brewed in thousands of clandestine labs across the United States. Using mostly commercial ingredients, "crank cookers" produce enough meth to satisfy the country's craving for what's been dubbed the working man's cocaine.

The significance of the white, powdery meth is that it's close to the nearly pure form of ice.

Prereg Compromise

Melissa Wood
Archway Staff Writer

"We have reached a compromise that benefits all sides," explained Harry Franks, Student Senate president, during a short, but enthusiastic preregistration rally held yesterday morning. The compromise, Harry said, has led to a change in the preregistration schedule, thereby allowing seniors to register first. The crowd responded with cheers and a round of applause.

Seniors and juniors (SCN 4, 5, 6, and 7) will register first, as opposed to the old schedule in which freshmen and sophomores would have registered first. Harry stressed, however, that juniors and seniors will only be able to register for upper-level courses. Only students with classification numbers 1, 2, and 3 will be allowed to register for lower division courses. Juniors and seniors will be able to add into these lower-level classes only if there are seats open. An exception will be made for students with SCNs four through seven only if their audits sheets display a need for a required lower division course.

In a statement given to The Archway by Registrar Tim Cartwright, he explained that before preregistration, all students, except freshmen, should pick up their audit sheets from the registrar's office. He went on to say that students should bring those sheets to registration so that the counselors can assist students if necessary. Because students will be allowed a maximum of five minutes at the terminal, they should have a schedule and one or two revisions ready.

Cartwright pointed out that the random numbers table application is unchanged. He also said that this revision will continue each semester. The seniors will preregister first.

The rally, held in the Rotunda, was arranged by the Student Senate. Franks said he was pleased with the number of people who attended and the support they showed.

Ice: Mainland drug threat

"Ice," a highly addictive drug, is turning up in Hawaii in epidemic proportions. Officials want to counter its arrival on the mainland.

SOURCE: Most ice entering the United States originates in the Philippines, South Korea and other Asian nations. For now, the drug seems to be limited to Hawaii, where Filipino gangs created the demand.

PRICE: Expensive. About $50 for a tenth of a gram. Sold on the street for up to $400 a gram, about three times the cost of crack cocaine.

CHEMISTRY: Ice is the purest form of methamphetamine. Its most important ingredient is ephedrine, a legal component sharply controlled by states.

EFFECTS: Smoked in glass pipes, a modest dose of ice can carry the user for an average of seven to 10 hours. Early stages of abuse result in a lack of sleep and appetite and a feeling of increased energy. Eventually, users suffer lethargy, weight loss, increased agitation and irritation, and ultimately paranoia and visual and audio hallucinations.

Bad Journalism

On the front page of this past Monday's Providence Journal, an article titled "Bryant College holds historic inaugural" appeared. Given that the inauguration was on Sunday, the article was of no surprise, but its content was.

The first sidebar read "William E. Trueheart is first black to head a private N.E. College." As I read on, I realized that the entire article was about the fact that Trueheart is a person of color and the discrimination he had to contend with.

I think it is great for minorities to excel in their endeavors. As a matter of fact, I think it is great for anyone to excel.

Bryant College is predominantly a white campus, although we do not see it as such. These days it doesn't matter what color you are, but what you have achieved. After all, President Trueheart is very qualified to lead Bryant College into the next decade.

The Providence Journal article was a drawback to a past trend that is no longer or hardly recognized, especially at Bryant College. Maybe we should tell the author of that article, D. Morgan McVicar, that we are on the verge of entering the 1990's.

Anyone who attended the inauguration would have realized that the remarks made by guests and college officials were the highlights of the inauguration. Every speaker praised President Trueheart and mentioned how qualified he is. Paul Ylvisaker, Dean Emeritus and Charles William Eliot Professor of Education at Harvard University, perhaps said the most personal messages to Trueheart. Before Ylvisaker spoke, the Bryant Community didn't know how mechanically inclined the president is. But is this what The Providence Journal related? No!

Bryant has an excellent image in this state, even though some recent incidents may have tarnished that image. But overall, this institution is seen as a strong business college where there is a lot of room for opportunity. For anyone to portray this College as anything less, wouldn't be fair. It might be a milestone for a person of color to become the first person of color to head a New England college, but it should not be an issue that is beat to death.

In journalism one should strive to report exactly what happened. But to simply blow the inauguration out of perspective with racism, is a drawback to the National Inquirer, and of a different era.

You Don't Know Until It's You

To the Editor:

One of the letters in the October 19th issue of The Archway really upset me. A reader wrote about how "abortion cheapens women's rights." This is to all of the Mary Alice Conlons out there.

Dear Mary Alice:

When I was a sophomore in high school, my best friend confronted me about the issue of abortion. At 16 years old, she was faced with an unwanted pregnancy. Now, the details of her situation are not the point here. The point is, I can remember how I felt when she told me about her abortion. I remember how horrified I was at even the thought of it. I remember telling her in no uncertain terms that I would never, no matter what the situation, never, ever, get an abortion. I've always heard people say "you never know what you'll do until it's actually you who has to do it." This wasn't me, but it was as close as it could be without being me. This was my best friend- we're still the best friends ever.

Almost three years later, I made a phone call I never thought I would be making. I called that friend; I said, "I think I'm pregnant and I don't know what I'm going to do." I still felt the same way about abortion. It was my freshman year here at Bryant and my life was just beginning. Now I felt it coming to a terrifying halt. My parents hated my boyfriend. We had been together and were practicing "safe sex." Safe does not mean immune. Birth control can be up to 99% effective, some only 96 or 98%. But what about the 2 or 3%? I am living proof that those few do exist.

When I found out that I was pregnant, my views on abortion slowly began to change. Like I said, you don't really know until it's you. Mary Alice, have you ever been pregnant? People march in front of clinics protesting abortion. Why do I feel like none of those people have ever been faced with that decision? They don't know. I said I would never get an abortion; that was when I didn't know either. But I found out. Like thousands of other women, I found out the hard way. But at least I found out the safe way- what's going to happen if they take that choice away?

Three years ago, I had a safe, legal, and funded abortion. It was, by far, the hardest thing I've ever done. Making that decision is not easy. People don't say, "Well, if I get pregnant, I'll just have an abortion." It's not that simple. It took my boyfriend and I almost four months to make that choice. I want to point out that it was a choice we made together, although I do believe ultimately it is the women's choice. But it must remain a choice, not a plan or dependency. Abortion is not and should not be a form of birth control. Believe me, it's not a pleasant experience. It's not the "easy way out" at all. Anyone who has been faced with it knows that; anyone who hasn't doesn't know. I'm tired of the Mary Alice Conlons telling me what's right and what's wrong with my life, my body. When it came right down to it, there was no other choice for me.

I want to be clear about the fact that I support pro-choice, not abortion as the answer to every situation. Abortion is a complicated issue, and it's not always the answer. I'm not proud of what I did and I would never do it again. I'll never let myself get in the situation again where I have to go through that pain. I still feel the pain from three years ago and will live with it for the rest of my life. I'm finally at the point now where I can talk about it without crying. I went through countless sleepless nights. I cried- all the time. I couldn't look at a baby, or a pregnant woman without my heart aching. It was over a year before I could even say the word "abortion." It was a choice I made to put myself through that pain rather than to put a baby through a life he would have led. We couldn't afford a baby, and we were also having other problems- we wouldn't have been able to give him a happy home, my parents would have rejected him. I know what you are thinking. I could never give my baby away. I think that's cruel. See, the decision depends on so much- the values and morals of the two people involved, the whole situation- it doesn't have to be incest or rape.

My boyfriend and I are no longer together. His fiance just had a baby and everything is working out. When I was pregnant, it wasn't right. What happened to us happens to thousands of young people across the country and none of us plan for it. We dealt with it in the best way we could for us and the choice we had to make was painfully difficult. But I thank God we had that choice.

It's ARA, Not Top of the Hub

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to the "Two Hungry Students" who felt the need to insult and tear apart ARA in last week's issue of The Archway. I have sat idly by for the past three years viewing this type of letter which puts down the system, and I feel compelled to defend ARA.

For starters, I will agree that the display was exceptionally good on Parents' Weekend, but isn't it true that we all are on our best behavior when the folks are around? Well, ARA is no exception! Also, I feel that as intelligent, college-level students, we should realize that this is a cafeteria, NOT Top of the Hub! The purpose of a cafeteria is to serve a large number of students, in a short period of time, with as much variety and quality as possible given the circumstances and time limitation. I think that ARA handles this task quite efficiently, and might I add that it is not as easy as it appears.

Secondly, the "Two Hungry Students" said that they "walked over garbage and food" to get to their "dirty" table that was of course covered with napkins. Well, who can we blame for this but ourselves? If there exist students who feel that it is beneath them to clear their tables, then we by all means deserve to live with it as is.

Lastly, let me mention that ARA has implemented a Food Operations Committee, where students and ARA management meet bimonthly to discuss the problems, and make suggestions on ways to better the service and food, and implement new programs for the improvement of ARA. On September 28th I attended one of these meetings, and do you know how many students were there? Six, and I don't think that "The Two Hungry Students" were two of them; I'm sure I would have noticed them withering away in the corner from lack of adequate nutrition.

Sincerely,
Gina Francesconi

Abortion is a Woman's Right

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to a letter written by Mary Alice Conlon entitled "Abortion Cheapens Women's Rights."

First, Miss Conlon says "many women do not feel abortion is their 'right'." Well, for those women who do not feel abortion is their "right," then don't have an abortion. But the option should be left open for those women who do feel abortion is their right to do with their body as they so choose!

Then Miss Conlon goes on to say, "I believe every woman has a right to make choices about her body. But the choice that must be made is whether or not to be responsible about one's own body, about sex, about birth control." Well Miss Conlon, abortion is one of those choices a woman makes about her body. True, couples should be responsible and use birth control, but what about when birth control is used and fails?

Should a woman be forced to have a baby she doesn't want especially if she is still in school or is incapable of caring for a child financially or emotionally? What about in the case of rape? Here a woman's rights are violated and she wouldn't be forced to have a child conceived out of such a violent and hateful act. There are enough unwanted and abused children in the world, why add more!

What would happen if abortion became illegal? Would women stop having abortions? No, they would not! Women would start having their abortions in back alleys with hangers or other unsanitary and fatal methods. Would this help matters? I think not!! This would just cause many women to die. So as you can see, giving women a choice to have a safe abortion is a woman's right.

Sincerely,
Yvette Gold

Thanks For Pre-Reg Support

Dear Bryant Community,

The Student Senate thanks all those who supported the efforts to resolve the confusion concerning the pre-registration process. We greatly appreciated the understanding of Leo Mahoney and the Faculty Federation. A special thanks to Mr. Tim Cartwright, Registrar, for his willingness to listen, work and meet at times outside of his normal work day.

Through a combined effort between Tim Bovat, Sophomore Class Chairperson; Michelle Duprey, Senior Class Chairperson;

The Senate is pleased to see the Administration and the student body work together towards a resolution. Thanks for everyone's support.

Sincerely,
The Student Senate

Hurray for Bryant Players

To the Editor:

Once in a lifetime does a person feel so proud and happy as I have on two occasions. I was invited to see Grease which blew me away. To think that these students who performed were actually students who go through the line at the Bryant Center were on that stage and performing in the most professional way. I work for ARA, and I have the pleasure of serving these students. My point is that a lot of people see college students as fun-loving, beer drinking, etc. You have to admit that you can't put them one category. They are polite, courteous, kind, and they show respect. So, in their spare time (Ha-Ha) they channel their energy into constructive ways-like building sets, painting and performing. They deserve a lot of credit. I can't single anyone and say he or she was awesome, totally awesome. However, John,

Kevin, and David and the director of Grease, Katherine had put a lot of effort and time and should all be commended. How about a Tony Jr. Award for these talented students who have given the word talent a whole new dimension. I hope you print this letter in your paper to let them know that some people think they're O.K.. So what do they do for an encore? I was invited Saturday to see the play and again I say "BRAVO." I enjoyed it immensely. They give Bryant College a good name. So, for the record, I give John, Kevin, and Dave and all the others three sausages (inside joke!). If I knew all of their names I would do the same. I hope that I will be allowed to see their next production. You were all marvelous.

Thanks,
Phyllis
ARA

Surprise ARA

To the Editor:

I would appreciate it if you would please print this letter as a formal, public apology to my daughter and her friends. You see, I have been accusing them of exaggerating about the poor quality of food being served on campus. Each week, I have grudgingly provided my daughter with "Care Packages" so that she wouldn't "starve." I simply could not believe that I am working two jobs to pay for her education, housing and meals, only to be told that the food was not edible. Well, I apologize for this.

SURPRISE ARA !!! This parent started Parents' Weekend early. I arrived on campus Thursday and had the dubious pleasure of experiencing ARA food at its "best" (!!!) Now the only thing that I can't believe is that my hard-earned money is paying for that GARBAGE! Not only did the food lack flavor (of any kind), but it also lacked nutrition. What little fresh fruit there was, happened to NOT be fresh by any stretch of the imagination. I really had to use mine to try to identify the vegetables at noon on Friday - they were so over-cooked and withered that I never did figure out what they were! And even my vivid imagination could not help with the macaroni and cheese casserole. The macaroni was shaped like macaroni. The sauce was the color of cheese. But, now get ready for this, the whole thing tasted like lumpy water!! No flavor at all! How this can be accomplished must be some kind of miracle. For supper, the choice of "fish" or "fish" totally turned me off. I found myself at the Grill with the other people who didn't want to either starve or have their "iron stomachs" rust out. Why wasn't the menu offering a choice of fish, meat or poultry? Saturday, as the rest of the parents arrived, so did fresh food.

Parents, I challenge you to respond and question what your money is being spent on.

Dr. Trueheart, I also offer you a challenge. Minds and bodies do not function at maximum capabilities unless they are fed properly. Minds are fed facts, knowledge, "input" if you want to call it that. Bodies require a balance of rest, exercise and proper nutrition. Rest and exercise are the students' responsibilities. Nutrition, however, is the responsibility of the college, as long as it is a mandatory part of the students' tuition.

To sum up - if ARA can't shape up, if they are incapable of the job of feeding our children, then find a company who can and will perform this service adequately. Otherwise, I for one, would happily accept a rebate for all the inedible meals.

Again, my apologies for doubting you and your friends. This is one parent who DOES believe your complaints.

Love,
Mum

Senate Inhibits Uncharted Organizations

To the Bryant Community:

I am writing to inform you of the amount of red tape that exists on this campus. A Pro-Choice Coalition was formed on the Bryant campus this past fall and has been totally discouraged by a bureaucracy we know as the Student Senate.

First, the Senate was nice enough to recognize our right to exist. However, they did stop us from posting petitions "illegally placed" around campus. The only real concern that I have is that this is a college, not a high school. This was a harmless petition posted by a group of students who wanted to see if there was interest in forming a new organization. Do we really need somebody to regulate our right to free speech? I realize that this rule was set up by the Senate to protect us from God only knows what, but do we really need a rule for it?

Next, the Senate was kind enough to allow us to meet in the M.R.C. Lecture Hall every Wednesday. Since then, however, they have taken away this right because we do not have a charter. This organization was only set up to inform students about the abortion issue, and organize a march in Washington D.C. on November 12. We did not feel it was necessary for an organization that would only exist for six weeks, to go through the long, red tape ridden process of forming a charter. We are students of this college and should have a right to meet for any purpose as long as it is legal. Does it really do anyone harm if we meet in the M.R.C. Lecture Hall? Why does the Senate make it so difficult for an "un-chartered" organization to exist? I personally believe that it is anybody's right to form any temporary organization he or she wants as long as it is legal, and be able to meet on school property. After all, we do pay the tuition, why shouldn't we be allowed to take full advantage of the resources available to us?

I appreciate the Senate's efforts to help us have a better life at Bryant, but some of their rules make me feel like I'm back in high school, and I'm about to get three hours detention for cutting math class.

Sincerely,
Andy Lucas

Bryant Trustee Dies at 52

Charles B. Healy, trustee of Bryant College and president of Bank of New England-Old Colony died Tuesday after being stricken with a heart attack while at lunch.

Mr. Healy was taken by ambulance from a Richmond Street restaurant to St. Joseph Hospital where he was pronounced dead.

Mr. Healy began his banking career in 1964 and was employed with the Bank of New England most of his life.

Mr. Healy was credited with transforming Old Colony-Newport National Bank from a troubled savings and loan institution into a profitable commercial bank geared to serving business clients.

Old Colony-Newport National

had lost money in each of the five years prior to his arrival in January 1987, when the Bank of New England Corp. acquired the Rhode Island banking company.

The new institution, Bank of New England-Old Colony, earned $3 million in its first quarter under Mr. Healy's direction, and during his administration the bank grew in assets from $850 million to $1.2 billion, becoming the fifth largest bank in the state.

Healy was a 1959 graduate of The Citadel in Charleston, S.C. where he received his bachelor's degree in economics.

Mr. Healy, a resident of Portsmouth, R.I., leaves behind his wife Maryann and their four daughters.

One of Mr. Healy's daughters, Mary Kate Healy, is currently enrolled in Bryant's M.B.A. program.

Ice

The seduction of ice is as clear as the pea-sized crystals: It delivers an immediate blast to the central nervous system without the risks of using needles. Unlike crack, which debilitates the addict for 30 minutes, ice triggers a flow of brain transmitters and a sense of euphoria for up to 10 hours. The effects of ice seem to be more cumulative; new users are not incapacitated.

"You feel energized," said Giannasio. "But you also get a loss of appetite and a loss of sleep. Then, as the use becomes more chronic, you develop paranoid thinking and auditory and visual hallucinations. Your frustration tolerance drops very low, and you can become aggressive and violent in toxic states."

Giannasio said the drug has been in Hawaii for years, but the number of users didn't increase significantly until recently. Most of those he treats are severely addicted. Many haven't slept in three to five days.

Ice and cocaine have much in common, but Giannasio said ice "is at least as addictive and has more dangerous effects."

"You can kill yourself with a gun or kill yourself with a knife, but you still die. The intensity seems to be greater with cocaine, but crystal has a longer high."

Ice came to Hawaii largely with the help of Filipino gangs. Once confined to ethnic Oahu neighborhoods, it now blankets Oahu and has crossed the channels to neighbor islands.

Giannasio said many women are lured to ice as a weight-loss method, realizing too late how quickly the addictive hook takes hold. Queen's Medical Center in Honolulu averages six ice-related emergency room treatments daily.

While speed is swallowed, snorted or injected, ice is smoked through a glass pipe.

At $5,000 an ounce or $50 for a tenth-of-a-gram dose that lasts a user a couple days, the drug is

At the GLC meeting on Tuesday evening the sisters of Sigma Iota Beta proudly announced that we are soon to be the next pledgeclass of the national sorority — Delta Zeta. The sisters (as well as Jane) were a group of very happy campers, as of Sunday evening. Perma-grin for a week!
Friday the sisters spent a rather enjoyable afternoon with Phi-Sig and their alumni. Monday night was an out-of-the-ordinary kind of night for the "lame Sibbies", we celebrated the end of our long search for "The Perfect One."

We hope everyone can make it for a horrifying night at the Haunted House with the Sibs and Sig-Ep, TONIGHT. It'll be interesting to see who is more horrified. Friday afternoon we'll be gearing ourselves up for the beginning of a great weekend at TEP. Later in the evening we'll be dressing in our best/worst costumes for our Halloween celebration with Sig-Ep... Good luck to APK, TKE, KT, and BEX, for a very successful weekend.

The Brothers of Sigma Phi Epsilon enjoyed tropical reggae music and coconuts Saturday night. Friday's retreat was informative and the night was cool, hangin' out with our national rep, John. Thanks Philllll for letting Frank use his house. The Club welcomes two new members — Bulb Head 1 & 2. Negative Nice. The Bulls beat Delta B, 7-Zip.... Keep up the winning streak! Brothers are looking forward to tonight's HAUNTED HOUSE experience with the Sibbies, and Friday night's Halloween Bash!

TEΦ

Saturday we had our alumni up for the day and what a blast it was. Ian great job buddy! And thanks to all those who helped Ian out, and special thanks to all the alumni.
TEP's A football team is doing very well with a record of 3-1 and have 3 games this week. And B seems to be having fun! Let's get them this time!

STUDENT ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

by Liaison Officers
Student Alumni Association

Think back to when you first entered college. Did you have questions about your chosen career? Some doubts about whether it was right for you? Anxious about interviewing for the first time?

To help, the Graduate Alumni Council is in the process of sponsoring a new program to assist Bryant students. This program consists of matching students with Alumni. The objective of this program is for graduates to give guidance, friendship, and understanding to the student when needed. Not only will they help you during your college years, they will help your transition into the business world.

We will match students with alumni from similar backgrounds and careers. The students will have the opportunity to join the program as freshman, sophomores, and/or juniors. The relationship will remain through graduation.

The amount of time required will be mutually decided upon between the alum and the student. It may be by a telephone call once a month, shadowing the alum on a day at the office, or maybe dinner with the alum's family. The time spent probably will not be significant, but the effect on you, the student, will be.

If you have some interest in joining this program, please contact the office of Alumni Relations (232-6040) for additional information.

Parents' Weekend started off with an array of music on Friday night. Minority Business Student Association co-sponsored the event in Salmonson Dining Hall. The group called "The Marsels" performed the oldies but goodies. Parents and students danced the night away.
MBSA held a reception Saturday afternoon. It was a great time for everyone to get acquainted with Robeta Hysell's new assistant, Laura Latimer. We had numerous guests stop by. President Trueheart made an appearance early in the afternoon. Les LaFond, Vice-President of Student Affairs, came to speak to parents of the minority and international students.

Saturday evening was a time for the students and parents to get together for a quiet dinner. Members did this by taking their parents to "Brass Horse" restaurant in Providence. Everyone had a great time, and just sat down and relaxed. Parents' Weekend was a big success for the members of MBSA, and for the other organizations that helped sponsor events. The members of MBSA would like to thank our President LaTricia Russell, and Chairperson of Social Activities, Stacey Paine, for making the reception and dinner Saturday memorable events.

PRO-CHOICE COALITION

by Noel Hamilton
Treasurer, Pro-Choice Coalition

Over the past few weeks, I have been asked this question by quite a few people. The sole purpose of our group, at this time, is to organize people who want to travel to Washington, D.C. on November 11 at 10 p.m. and attend the scheduled rally for women's rights on November 12. This rally will be at the Lincoln Memorial.

Bryant College has two buses going to the rally. They will accommodate 94 people. If you are interested in going to Washington to stand up for the right to choice, join us on November 12. For tickets, send $40 to Box 1851, c/o Noel Hamilton. We are having informational meetings every Wednesday until the rally. The meetings are in Dorm 14, second floor, south side lounge at 7 p.m. If you have further questions, please contact me at Box 1851, or Lisa Maloney, president, at Box 4196.

Have A Good Life

Andrew Melmed
Archway Staff Writer

Life, what's it all about? It is one of those questions that does not have a definite answer. However, students at Bryant College recently received several suggestions on how to contend with various aspects of life when Mrs. Ellen Rosenberg visited Bryant last Thursday.

Mrs. Rosenberg, a sex therapist who lectures on health and sexuality at the college level, advised students in such areas as how to get along with friends, communicate with boyfriends and girlfriends, and coping with college roommates.

Mrs. Rosenberg began addressing the problems that arise among boyfriends and girlfriends, including long-distance relationships, knowing when someone has found the right person, deciding when it's time to attempt the first kiss, and learning to trust one another.

Mrs. Rosenberg also spoke on the subject of college roommates and how to get along with one another. She explained that roommates do not have to be best friends, but it is essential that they learn to communicate with one another to reduce the tension and anxiety that often occurs with such live-in situations.

"Say what you feel. Communicate and be honest with yourself and others," Mrs. Rosenberg suggested. This is the best way to achieve pleasantries with people. "There is someone out there for everyone," she exclaimed. No one has to be alone. Just look around your college campus and when you see someone interesting, talk to them, ask them on a date. "You have nothing to lose," Mrs. Rosenberg said. "If they say no, then repeat ten times to yourself, it's their loss. If they don't take the opportunity to get to know the kind of person you are, then they are not the right person for you."

Mrs. Rosenberg welcomed questions throughout her discussion, and when she was finished speaking, she took time to answer any questions students had about life.

S.A.D.D. Established at Bryant

by Sheryl Canis
Secretary, Residence Life

It's awfully "sadd" to think that Bryant didn't have one before now. But, thanks to a determined group of students, an exciting new chapter in Bryant's history is about to begin. These students are working diligently to establish a S.A.D.D. chapter here at Bryant College.

S.A.D.D. (Students Against Driving Drunk) recognizes that drinking has always been and continues to be a part of college social life. "S.A.D.D. is not a crusade against drinking, but a crusade for common sense," claims Tom Scanlan, Resident Director of Dorm 16 who is spearheading to move to establish a S.A.D.D. chapter at Bryant. Scanlan spoke briefly to a group of about 50 students who attended the first organizational meeting in Dorm 15 on October 5. He told the group he lost 11 friends to drunk driving accidents during his high school and college years. His life-long commitment to S.A.D.D. was made on January 4, 1986 when his best friend was killed in a drunk driving accident. Since that day Scanlan has dedicated himself to educating students about alcohol misuse and encouraging responsible alcohol use. Scanlan has spoken on behalf of S.A.D.D. at more than 380 schools across the nation and has co-authored a collegiate program for S.A.D.D.

S.A.D.D. began in 1981 as a high school program in Wayland, Massachusetts. It has grown from a single high school chapter to a successful nationwide organization with chapters at both the high school and college levels. S.A.D.D.'s main objective is to help eliminate the drunk driver, thus reducing alcohol-related deaths, injuries and arrests. S.A.D.D. also encourages responsible use of alcoholic beverages by students of legal age who choose to drink. Finally, S.A.D.D. aims to demonstrate that the majority of college students are responsible adults with a genuine concern for alleviating the DWI issue.

Statistics tell a "sadd" story. Over half of all highway deaths are alcohol-related, and motor vehicle accidents represent the leading cause of death for young adults in this country. Considering these overwhelming facts, Robert Anastas, S.A.D.D.'s founder, realized that something needed to be done. S.A.D.D. is getting it done. Once students are provided with the hard facts about drinking and driving, the concept of positive peer pressure takes over.

Positive peer pressure occurs when students convey the dangers of drinking and driving to fellow students. They begin to encourage and expect responsible alcohol use from their friends. Positive peer pressure breaks down the barriers of apathy and boredom which exists in professional lectures; students motivate each other to steer clear of potential DWI situations. Educators across America now recognize students as a practical and cost effective resource for alcohol education.

Scanlan's goals for S.A.D.D. here at Bryant are simple for the short term. He hopes to get more students involved with S.A.D.D. and interested in spread S.A.D.D.'s important message. Most importantly, Scanlan is anxious to see more responsible alcohol use on campus in the near future. The Student Senate will be asked to recognize and support the establishment of a S.A.D.D. chapter on the Bryant campus. Faculty and staff support is also being requested.

Once Bryant is recognized by national S.A.D.D. headquarters as a chapter, the group will elect officers and hold regular meetings. Leadership, managerial and public speaking opportunities exist for students who join S.A.D.D. Scanlan expects that members will create a video about drinking and driving. Also, programs such as a week-long BeerFast will be planned. Long-term plans for S.A.D.D. here at Bryant include expanding to area high schools and colleges, bringing the message that "friends don't let friends drive drunk."

A key element of the S.A.D.D. program is the "Contract for Life" which enables students to avoid driving while intoxicated or becoming the passenger of someone else who is drunk. Two friends enter into this "contract," agreeing to provide or arrange safe, sober transportation home for each other should either of them face a situation where they have had too much to drink.

At the October 5 organizational meeting, someone referred to S.A.D.D. as Students Against Drunk Drivers. She was quickly corrected by a S.A.D.D. committee member who said, "The real name of the organization is Students Against Driving Drunk." "What's the difference?" someone asked. The member quickly clarified herself by explaining that the purpose of S.A.D.D. is to stop people from driving drunk not to classify drunk drivers into a group by themselves.

S.A.D.D. promotional activities took place on the Bryant campus during National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness week which ran October 15-21. The theme of the week was "Think if you Drink!" If you have questions or ideas relating to having a S.A.D.D. chapter here at Bryant College, please call Tom Scanlan at 232-6140 or visit him in Dorm 16. A final organizational meeting will be held Wednesday, November 1 at 7:00 pm in the main lobby of Dorm 16. Chapter officers will be elected and plans for future S.A.D.D. activities will be discussed. It's "sadd" to think you might not be there.

Festival Ballet Dances into Inauguration Weekend

Melissa Wood
Archway Staff Writer

It wasn't just an evening of traditional fluffy costumes, pink slippers, and classical-sounding music. It was, however, an evening of enjoyable entertainment provided by the Festival Ballet. Saturday night's performance and the dessert buffet that followed it were part of the Inauguration Weekend festivities.

The evening began with "Grand Pas de Quatre," a ballet created to honor the four celebrated dancers of the Romantic era. Choreographer Sir Anton Dolin hoped to convey the intense rivalry between the dancers during their famous performance at Drury Lane in London.

The performers moved the audience into more contemporary times with a piece called "The Greatest." It was set to The Greatest Love of All, a song written by George Benson, and made popular more recently by Whitney Houston. "The Greatest," choreographed by the Artistic Director of the Dance Theater of Harlem, suggested the uncertainties of a couple discovering love.

Following intermission, the lights were dimmed and the dancers did a "Tango for Three." Two women and a man made up the threesome in this work which explored the difficulties of a triangle relationship. Each wore a black, tight-fitting costume which gave them the appearance of slinky cats. They danced as a group yet each had their own distinct style. A Rhode Island premiere, the piece was a new work in the company's repertoire.

In a matter of minutes, the music went from haunting tango to upbeat jazz. The early '80s movie Victor/Victoria starring Julie Andrews and James Gardner was the source of music for the next piece, "Le Jazz Hot." The two dancers, dressed in costumes from the 1920s, put aside their slow, graceful, and precise ballet movements in favor of more lively, fast-paced dance steps.

Michael Boyd

Glenn Miller's 1940s arrangement, In The Mood, brought the performance to a close. The entire company joined together in a piece reminiscent of a makes-you-feel-good, sock hop. The costumes were casual: short skirts and matching t-shirts for the women, pants, short sleeves, and loosened neckties for the men. During this piece, also a new work in the company's repertoire, well-executed dancing, although unconventional for a ballet, made the audience appreciate the diversity of the dancers.

Formed in 1978, the Festival Ballet is located in North Providence, and regularly performs at the Providence Performing Arts Center. The Ballet is committed to bringing the best of dance to Rhode Island audiences and developing the talents of the state's dancers.

The inauguration day of William E. Trueheart, October 22, opened up with the dedication of the President's Walkway, located just north of the Unistructure. The walkway consists of seven commemorative stones, each bearing the name and image of one of Bryant's former presidents as well as one for Dr. Trueheart.

"It is indeed fitting," stated Alumni Association President Alan Wardyga '77, "that this morning the alumni association has chosen this occasion to dedicate this first commemorative preservation of a physical structure on the Smithfield campus. This walkway is a tribute to the men who have guided Bryant to the forefront of excellence in business education. It is important not only to the Alumni Association but also to the college. We can find no better way to acknowledge them than this lasting tribute to our understanding of their outstanding leadership over the past 126 years." He stated that the Alumni Association feels confident that President Bill Trueheart "will continue to innovate and show the college a global approach to its future growth."

The new First Lady of Bryant, Carol Word Trueheart, unveiled the Alumni Commemorative Marker to start the presidential tribute. Following the revealing of the largest marker, various members of the Alumni Association unveiled the stones dedicated to each of Bryant's former leaders. President Trueheart was thankful for this "extraordinary gift." "I understand," he said, "this is the very first time that... gift has been given to Bryant College [by the Alumni Association]. I am flattered and honored that they chose this date of my inauguration to make this presentation."

As President of the Smithfield Town Council, Anthony Simone brought greetings on behalf of the town of Smithfield. Simone spoke of his first meeting with Dr. Trueheart several years back, recalling that he "recognized this man was really something special." He went on further to explain that of the eighteen years Bryant's campus has been located in Smithfield, he has been a member of the Smithfield Town Council for the last sixteen. The favorable relationship that the town and Bryant have enjoyed will continue as the town keeps pace with the Bryant's advancement, Simone pledged.

Les Lafond, vice president of Student Affairs, noted that Dr. Trueheart has been a member of the Bryant community for some time. As a result, "many of us knew Dr. Trueheart as an old friend and now we know him as our new president."

The goal of the faculty of Bryant College, according to Leo Mahoney, president of the Faculty Federation, is to make the minds of its students as good as possible.

"In this institution, like cathedrals and temples of old, is not the stone and mortar and brick from its buildings, but the minds of its young adults and not so young adults that sit in its classrooms, walk its corridors and play on its athletic fields," said Mahoney, basing his commentary on a contemporary novel. "That's what we believe in, and we, the faculty of Bryant College, sincerely believe that's what Bill Trueheart stands for."

Professor Patrick Keeley, presiding, said humorously after Mahoney finished his remarks: "You give a work of literature to an economics professor and you never know where it's going to end."

Harry Franks, president of the Student Senate, represented the student body at the inauguration. "He (Trueheart) serves us as a model of leadership, both here at Bryant and later in our careers," said Franks. "We look forward to working with you and learning from you."

A very close friend and mentor to Trueheart, Paul Ylvisaker, Dean Emeritus and Charles William Eliot Professor of Education at Harvard University, remarked: "I want to assure you, having been his advisor through the doctoral dissertation, that his dissertation was one of the finest and most meaningful pieces of scholarship."

Ylvisaker referred to Trueheart as a "brother" since they are so close to each other. He also stated that Trueheart is a remarkable human being.

"And he also stores things sometimes for a long period of time. Any time you need a car part or some plumbing fixture, Bill will have it," said Ylvisaker. "And he will install it for you as well — now that he is president, at a price."

Ylvisaker concluded his remarks by stating the following:

"Bill, there will be lonely moments and that comes with the territory. But I want you to know that you will never be alone."

The two hugged each other after Ylvisaker's comments, as the audience gave a round of applause.

When Bruce Selya, chairman of the Board of Trustees, installed the president by placing the medallion on him, the audience gave him a standing ovation. Then Trueheart sat in the first-ever official presidential chair.

Alan Wardyga, president of the Alumni Association, and Ernest Fay, Co-chair of the Parents' Council also congratulated the president on behalf of their perspective organizations.

On August 1 Trueheart began his term as the sixth president of the College. The five presidents of Bryant that preceded Trueheart were: William T. O'Hara (1976-1989), Harry F. Evarts (1970-1975), Schuyler D. Hoslett (1968-1969), E. Gardner Jacobs (1961-1968) and Henry L. Jacobs (1916-1961).

From 1981 to 1986, Trueheart served on the board of trustees and was also a vice-chairman of the committee.

Dating in the Eighties

Donald Thomas
Archway Staff Writer

Being a twenty-nine-year-old college junior is not easy. Finding a peer group can be rather difficult and the thought of meeting interesting, engaging, and vibrant women is almost a fantasy. Now don't get me wrong, there are copious numbers of attractive, nubile young women here at Bryant, but the operative word here is young. At twenty-nine, I'm about 8-10 years older than most of my classmates.

Most of the available women my age are corporate yuppies and I don't have any social contact with them. Couple with this equation the fact that I don't drink, and problems with meeting people multiply. I am not sure why it increases the difficulty of meeting someone, but it does. I meet few contemporaries at work and I have no family around here so being alone has become my primary mode. I do find myself rather good company though, so being alone is not a death sentence. I often go to the movies and even to restaurants sans companionship.

Being single and alone does have certain benefits. On a recent weekend I wanted to see Fiddler on the Roof at The Wang Center in Boston. The only pair of tickets to be had were in the second balcony. Watching this touching musical from the second balcony and being affected by it is about as likely as George Bush endorsing a capital gains tax increase.

In addition to not being able to get good tickets, I labored for days over who to ask. I then realized that I didn't know one suitable companion to take to the theatre. The next day I found to my delight that single tickets were available in the orchestra. I went solo.

I'm not saying that I don't want to date, because I do. The problem is (I think you have to be at least twenty-five to understand this) that with the eighties coming to a close, it has become almost unacceptable to be human and vulnerable. A sensitive guy like myself doesn't know how to handle these new developments. How does one meet available, engaging companions?

This summer out of desperation, I decided to respond to one of those Phoenix Newspaper advertisements. Not wanting to encounter any embarrassment, I opted for Phoenix's Boston edition. The ad which I chose to respond to went something like this: "Amazing, attractive, athletic, energetic, vibrant, holistic woman of passion, humor, charm and grace seeks non-smoking man of similar ilk."

We were to meet in Cambridge and so I packed an elegant picnic of brie and French bread with kiwis, strawberries, and Perrier, complete with champagne flutes and linen napkins. I hoped it would be a lovely, enchanting picnic with a soul mate.

The minute we met at a bistro in Harvard Square I wanted to run. I realize that sometimes people exaggerate, but this was ridiculous. The athletics she engaged in had to be alligator wrestling or something similar. I think I saw a tattoo of a naked man on her forearm, and her name was Mack. The next hour was the longest in recorded history. Things had gone too far.

After some intense soul searching I uncovered some startling facts. Dating had long since ceased to be a pleasurable experience. It had become something more akin to war. Two single gladiators would prepare (he by doing push-ups, she at aerobics) to enter battle. His tie had to be perfectly knotted and her dress must be stunning. Each must stay on guard to keep from saying or doing the wrong thing, or appearing to be lonely at all. The pressure to use the proper spoons and forks made that first homecoming date seem like an amusement park ride.

And thus, each prospective date, fewer and farther between as they increasingly become, would be sized up as a potential mate. Would she be a good mother, would she be a good provider (the greatest part of equal rights), were there any buried neuroses, how many skeletons in the closet had to be cleared, and most importantly of all, did I like her.

On top of all of this, we need to know the sexual histories of our partner's past seven partners (and the past seven partners, past seven partners). So in addition to finding an amenable personality, making a good impression and engaging in conversation, and finding common ground, we now have to meet people and develop relationships.

Lately, I have gone on a few dates. One was a dinner in Newport (a starving student does this about once a year so it is hopefully fun) that was a travesty. She regaled me with the details of her most recent dates. Now I think I'm an eighties kind of guy - you know, sensitive and open-minded. Even for an open-minded liberal, this was not acceptable.

My next date was almost fun, almost.

I have come to believe that if I just kind of bounce happily through life, doing the things I enjoy, the rest will take care of itself. This could be termed blind faith or maybe fool's faith. It really isn't so bad going to the theatre or even dinner alone. Maybe some fed up femme fatale will have the same ideas as I do and I'll meet her at Steel Magnolias of Andreas.

Maybe the linchpin is an attitudinal change on my part. Going back to the days of high school when dating was fun, not a battle. When a movie and a pizza was high living. When a date just had to laugh at your jokes and make you laugh back.

I want to go back to the days when the really important question was "Do you want butter on your popcorn." Back when a goodnight peck on the cheek was something to pine for.

Somewhere out there I have a soul mate - somewhere. She is most likely struggling with the same questions and problems as I. This thought, however fleeting, is, I suppose, what hope really is.

"I don't want a lot of hype. I just want something I can count on."

The Personal Side of Trueheart

"Gross Anatomy" Won't Gross You Out

Archway Staff Writer

Archway: What are your favorite areas of interest?

Trueheart: Business and government. I am concerned about corporate social responsibility and business ethics, but mainly with corporate social responsibility and trying to recognize, identify, and model proper business behavior. Whether it is doing good as a corporation by helping some non-profit organization or by helping public officials design a public policy that is important to the community, state or nation.

One of my priorities is making sure in education, that our students are as rich as possible. I think it is our responsibility to ensure that the environment in which our students learn is exciting and intellectually stimulating. And, part of that is making the faculty and the student body as diverse as we possibly can. It is important for us to set a priority of internationalizing the college not only by curriculum changes but also by identifying and recruiting foreign students, faculty and administration.

Archway: What are your hobbies?

Trueheart: I like to read and as my mentor said at inauguration, I am a tinkerer. I like to fix things that are broken because it is a challenge. It's my therapy. I like to create and build things. Also, I like to swim for exercise and relaxation.

Archway: Where is your favorite vacation spot?

Trueheart: I have a favorite spot in Massachusetts in Plymouth at the end of Duxbury Beach where we have a cottage. It's a lovely place. In terms of a favorite, I would say St.

John's in the Virgin Islands because it is relatively untouched. Also, Jamaica because of its variety and beaches. I really just like the Caribbean. I really enjoy sailing. I love the ocean.

Archway: Where were you originally from?

Trueheart: Stamford, CT.

Archway: Have you lived in other places for a length of time? If yes, where?

Trueheart: Yes. I have lived in Washington, D.C., Cambridge, MA, West Newton, MA and Storrs, CT.

Archway: What is your favorite color?

Trueheart: Aqua, the combination of blue and green. There is a strong connection there with the color of the ocean.

Archway: Tell us a bit about your wife.

Trueheart: Her name is Carol. She is a wonderful, wonderful person, a great companion, bright, talented, sensitive, sensible and has good taste. Professionally, she was first a Peace Corps volunteer in Tanzania and in other countries in East Africa; she was country director in the Gambia in Africa and in Thailand. She later went to graduate school at George Washington University and Harvard University. She finished her degree and became an official at the World Bank in Washington, D.C. for a few years. On a more personal note, she is an extremely independent person. She fixes and build things as much as I do...she is also a tinkerer. We make a great team at our cottage at the shore. Both of us are strongly committed to our families which creates a strong bond between us. Another thing, she loves yellow tulips.

Archway: Describe how you felt the day you were told you would be Bryant's next president?

Trueheart: Aah! It sounds so trite, but I was absolutely ecstatic. I hoped and hoped and hoped and never thought it would be. The competition was tough.

Archway: Do you have plans to redecorate the official residence?

Trueheart: Yes. The Trustees had authorized funds for redecoration since it had not been redecorated since it was built in 1970. Carol, my wife, worked with a committee appointed by the Board of Trustees to oversee the renovation of the official residence. The reason it is called the official residence is because it is owned by the college. Carol actually did much of the leg work and it almost became a full-time job.

Archway: What did you think of Inauguration Weekend?

Trueheart: I thought it was just superb. It marked the beginning of a tradition at Bryant that I was pleased to join my colleagues in starting.

The Inauguration Committee did an absolutely first-class job of planning the inauguration events. It took weeks and weeks of hard work.

Beyond the Inauguration Committee, the whole Bryant Community took part. The maintenance men and women did an extra special job making the campus extra clean. The place looked like a postcard. The Public Safety folks, Administration and Clerical staff all came to work on Sunday and helped in a lot of different ways.

It was really a first class event...it initiated a tradition here at Bryant.

"Gross Anatomy" is not the sophomoric comedy commercials make it out to be. Rather, it is a romantic drama with a sense of humor. The film stars Mathew Modine as Joe Slovak, the son of a fisherman who is searching for upward mobility, and Christine Lahti as the stern Professor Woodruff. Joe Slovak is a pompous, self-centered character, who is shooting for mediocrity and just wants to get rich.

Professor Woodruff tries to straighten Joe out and make him strive for excellence. She plays a very strong authoritative figure. The plot centers around the constant conflict between Slovak's goals and that of Professor Woodruff's. She challenges him to succeed and care about his studies, while he is too thick headed and belligerent towards her to listen. It takes several tragedies to make him realize that becoming a Doctor does not just involve studying to become rich, but caring and dedication are much more important.

The movie centers around a first year medical gross human anatomy course. The course brings Joe together with a five person team whose main job is to dissect an entire cadaver and learn in great detail the entire human body. This movie is taken beyond the ordinary by giving each member of the group depth that is not usually found in secondary characters. One understands the problems of the overworked pregnant student to make it through classes, and of Joe's roommate, David, who must take speed just to keep up with the work and ultimately flunks out. As a college student, it is easy to identify with problems associated with medical school.

This was an entertaining movie with a strong point. We are made to learn that a job is not just a task or list of duties, but involves real people with real problems. Also, an education is not a game, it requires dedication, but there is no sense in restricting yourself from fun because "tomorrow is tomorrow."

My Mailbox Runneth Over

by Andy Rooney

The red sticker on the cover of the catalog read: "THIS MAY BE YOU LAST CATALOG!"

And, in smaller print, "Our latest computer report shows you haven't ordered in a while. Place an order now and you'll continue to receive every issue of our catalog!"

Is this a threat or a promise?

I wouldn't be happy to pay a modest amount if I could be assured of never again getting a catalog that I didn't ask for. My mailbox runneth over. Not one in 10 pieces of mail is anything I want to look at, and I'm not including bills. When it comes to catalogs, not one in 50 has anything I want to order.

Last year, I suppose we got an average of 25 catalogs a week in the mail. That's 1,300 catalogs and I ordered one thing from one of them. Two actually. I ordered one pair of shoes from a place that specializes in wide shoes. The other 1,299 catalogs, with postage, represent several thousand dollars — wasted on me.

It's not always possible to tell how you got on a catalog list but there are several things that do it.

- Having a hobby.
- Having a baby.
- Winning the lottery.
- Being old.
- Buying a house.
- Giving to charity.
- Using a credit card.
- Being listed in the telephone book.

Giving you name and address to a store when you buy something.

There ought to be a law compelling any company that sends out unsolicited catalogs or advertising material to include a stamped, self-addressed return postcard. It would say simply: "REMOVE MY NAME AND ADDRESS FROM YOUR MAILING LIST OR BE FINED $100 FOR EVERY PIECE OF LITERATURE YOU SEND ME AFTER TWO WEEKS FROM THE DATE OF THIS NOTICE!"

The catalogs we get most of are in three categories. The clothes catalogs are mostly Margie's and they got her name off the charge cards she has with those stores. She also gets a lot of seed catalogs. Many of the catalogs that come for me are from woodworking tool companies.

There's a similarity in the literature of many of the catalogs. The catalog I get from a company that sells wide shoes, for example, may have the same catalog writer that another company uses to try to sell me woodworking tools.

Some of their favorite phrases are:

- "Once you've used our..."
- "Ordinary (blanks) are made from (blank) but our (blanks) are designed specially for us and made by old world craftsmen from the finest (blank) money can buy."
- "Try our (blank) once and you'll never use any other (blank) again."

Banks, credit card companies and insurance agents abuse the mails. Yesterday I got an official-looking letter from a large New York bank. On the envelope it said, "IMPORTANT! PERSONAL!" (They always use a lot of exclamation points. Nothing that claims it's important and has a lot of exclamation points in it is ever important at all.)

If you get a letter from a bank, you should be able to trust the bank not to con you. Some of what you get from banks is important and there shouldn't be any confusion about what is and what isn't.

Anything from a bank that doesn't pertain to your account, should be clearly labelled on the envelope, "SALES PITCH!"

Then we could throw out that stuff from the bank with the catalogs without worrying about it.

I object to the devaluation of the importance of our mail. Mail is special when it's personal and when it's serious business. It ought not be diluted with junk that diminishes the satisfaction we all get from our mail.

expensive. Police say the burgeoning group of young users typically pitch in for a dose to share.

"We know it's coming from the Philippines," said Honolulu Police Department Maj. Mike Carvalho, commander of the Narcotics Division. In the past week alone, he said, the U.S. Customs Service made their third-largest crystal-meth bust at the Honolulu Airport, where a couple was stopped after flying in from Manila. Two pounds of ice were seized in that arrest. Customs officers seized another pound at the airport last week, arresting three men who had arrived from Manila.

One reason most ice is imported is because Americans don't know the formula, "and whoever has the formula is keeping it pretty secret," Carvalho said.

Carvalho, who said Honolulu police have made 500 speed and ice arrests so far this year compared to 400 in all of last year, predicted the mainland will see the drug in increased proportions soon.

"Sure, it's going to come over there; no question."

The traditional form of meth has long been a staple among drug users in California, where drug labs litter the rural landscape. But police there say ice hasn't shown up in major quantities.

Ron Garibotto, a DEA agent in San Diego, was exasperated at even being asked about the drug, saying his office hasn't made a single seizure.

Garibotto said he's concerned that, if ice continues to get the publicity in California that it is now, speed users will be tempted to give it a try.

"It could be a self-fulfilling prophecy," he said, adding the many California labs could be converted from speed to ice kitchens.

but I don't think they're that good. Key players: Mark Price is an excellent passer, and Brad Daughtery and Larry Nance are excellent big men.

Question: Will Ron Harper ever play real basketball? He's got talent, but we rarely see glimpses of it.

3. Chicago Bulls. That's right. Chicago. Home of Mr. Wonderful, Michael Jordan. If the rookies blend in quickly, Chicago will be a big threat in post-season play.

Key players besides Michael Jordan: Horace Grant and Scottie Pippen can lead the team, and rookies Stacy King and B.J. Armstrong are looking good.

Question: Will Bill Cartwright ever admit he's old and retire gracefully or will he pull another Jim Rice?

4. Atlanta Hawks. Whenever Dominique is playing, the Hawks are contenders. But this year the Hawks need a bit of luck as well.

Key players: Dominique is the offense. Moses Malone is the defense. Any questions?

Question: Why aren't the Hawks asking for a transfer? They could win or place higher in any other division.

5. Milwaukee Bucks. The sneaky Bucks won 49 games last year. But in the Central Division, that's just not enough. Milwaukee will make the playoffs, however, seeing how weak the Atlantic Division.

Key players: The Bucks got a gift from San Antonio. Alvin Robertson and Greg Anderson will work wonders in Milwaukee.

Question: Why did San Antonio trade Robertson and Anderson for Terry "I'll do better next year" Cummings?

6. Indiana Pacers. Once again, a basement team has lucked out by the arrival of an expansion club. They will be in sixth, thanks to Orlando.

Key Players: Rik Smits may be the only bright light in Indiana.

Question: Why do millions of fans go to see Indiana play? Oh, I forgot, they're from Indiana.

7. Orlando Magic. I wish I could put Orlando over Indiana, but I just can't. They have some good talent, and should have one of the best records of any of the four expansion teams.

Key players: Reggie Theus and Michael Ansley could be very interesting rookies.

Question: If by fluke Orlando wins the championship, where are they going to go next? They're already in Disney World.

Next week: The West.

Roger Stevens

This week's athlete of the week is Roger Stevens of the men's cross country team. Steven's a sophomore accounting major from Oakland, ME, has been the Indian's most consistent performer over the past two seasons, regularly crossing the line as the first Bryant runner. This past weekend, Stevens was named a Northeast-10 first team all conference runner for his performance in Saturday's NE-10 conference meet at Quinnipiac. Stevens finished sixth with a time of 27:45.7, about 45 seconds off the pace set by Shawn Oles of Merrimack College.

Practice With the Pats

Mark Plihcik
Archway Staff Writer

Despite the rain and cold last Thursday afternoon, the New England Patriots left the plush confines of Sullivan Stadium in Foxboro and trucked down 295 to practice on the not-nearly-as-soaked practice field offered by the track.

Most of the squad came down for the two and a half hour workout, which was to be their last practice on the east coast before heading out to Stanford where they were defeated by San Francisco.

Many questions were answered by the impromptu trip, not the least of which was whether or not the Pats would be returning here next summer for camp. Patriots P.R. spokesman Jim Moser said, "As far as I know, they'll be back. They've been here for a lot of years and they like it here."

Patriots starting quarterback Steve Grogan expressed a positive outlook on the remainder of the season saying, "This is a veteran team that's been backed against the wall before and has responded well, and I think this team will play hard and play to win every week."

The sorely depleted defensive team of the Patriots has been pointed to by many fans as the reason why the Pats are only 2-5 going into the halfway point of the season. Says Grogan, "I think our defense has adjusted well to missing some great players. They've been playing extremely well the last three or four weeks. But our offense is also missing some great players and we haven't been making the plays and getting the plays out of guys that are replacing starters."

Defensive superstar Raymond Clayborn stated, "We've been playing better now with some of the younger ball players." He attributed the defense's play minus such players as Andre Tippett, Ronnie Lippett and Garin Veris to "the younger players getting playing time and realizing what they have to do within the scheme of our defense."

Coach Raymond Berry said "we don't have much room for error in any more. I think we can turn it around, but we have to do it now."

Former Patriot Reggie Dupard (21) practices at Bryant last week. (More pictures, page 19)

Rick's Picks for the 1989 NBA Season

Richard Miner
Archway Staff Writer

The Eastern Conference

The Atlantic Division

1. New York Knicks. Sure, this is a tough pick to make. With the decline of the Celtics, the Knicks are left as the only contender in this division. With the help of rookie coach Stu Jackson, the Knicks should put together a strong season.

Key players: Patrick Ewing will obviously bring instant offense to nearly every game. Charles Oakley gives the Knicks a strong rebounder, and Johnny Newman gives them an outside threat.

"Make or break" question: Can the Knicks control Mark Jackson's cocky attitude long enough to win the division?

2. Philadelphia 76ers. O.K. all you Boston fans, shoot me down, but the Sixers will overtake the Celtics this season. If Charles Barkley has anything to say about it, the Sixers will win a few more games this season.

Key players: There is only one - Charles Barkley, but youngsters Johnny Dawkins and Hershey Hawkins won't hurt their chances any.

Question: Will the Sixers pull up their proverbial "skirts" and start playing defense? Philadelphia had one of the worst defenses last season, allowing opposing offenses to score over 50% of the time.)

3. Boston Celtics. Only third, you say. Be realistic. With the departure of the "Italian dynamo" Brian Shaw, and the poor rookie crop, the Celtics will have to rely on the new Larry Bird far too much to ask for a title this year. Unless Larry performs miracles, look for Boston in third.

Key players: Larry is back, enough said. Reggie Lewis and Robert Parrish should add offense to the team, and Kevin McHale will provide his lanky arms for defense.

Question: Is Brian Shaw enjoying Italy?

4. Washington Bullets. Not much to say about this team except that they're better than New Jersey or Miami. Washington will finish fourth.

Key players: Bernard King and Jeff Malone will consistently give 40 point a game combined. Besides that, you got me.

Question: Could the Bullets bore us any more this year?

5. New Jersey Nets. One word describes why New Jersey won't finish last again. Miami. The Heat will help the Nets stay out of the cellar this season.

Key players: None.

Question: Does anyone want to play for New Jersey? If so call 1-800-STARTER. They'll put you at point guard.

6. Miami Heat. Heat? Sounds like a contradiction of terms to me. The only reason why the Heat will finish sixth is because there is no seventh place.

Key players: Glen Rice, maybe.

Question: Will the Heat lose the first 17 games of the season again this year?

The Central Division

1. Detroit Pistons. Even without Rick Mahorn, the Pistons are still better than Cleveland. They won't run away with it, but Detroit will win the Central Division again.

Key Players: Isiah Thomas, Joe Dumars, Vinnie Johnson, Dennis Rodman, Bill Laimbeer...need I say more?

Question: Will the bad boys be sore winners again this year?

2. Cleveland Cavaliers. This pick is for all the magazines picking Cleveland to win it all. They're good,

With the NHL season just underway, it's time to try and predict what will happen in the unpredictable world of hockey. I'm not about to predict a Stanley Cup match-up of Winnipeg v. Quebec, but some of the predictions will seem about as improbable as a the above mentioned final. Well, here they are:

Wales Conference Patrick Division

Pittsburgh Penguins
N.Y. Rangers
New Jersey Devils
N.Y. Islanders
Philadelphia Flyers
Adams Division
Montreal Canadiens
Buffalo Sabres
Boston Bruins
Hartford Whalers
Quebec Nordiques

Campbell Conference

Norris Division
Chicago Blackhawks
Detroit Red Wings
St. Louis Blues
Minnesota North Stars
Toronto Maple Leafs
Smythe Division
Calgary Flames
Los Angeles Kings

Vancouver Canucks
Edmonton Oilers
Winnipeg Jets

The individual awards will end up in these players hands:

The scoring title and Hart Trophy for MVP will go to Wayne Gretzky. Gretzky will continue his magical offensive ability. Mario Lemieux will have a tougher time putting the puck in the net, since his team will be too busy playing defense.

The Vezina will go to Montreal's Patrick Roy. He will post an even lower GAA than last year.

The rookie race is a very difficult area to choose. With the introduction of the Soviets to the NHL, it is very difficult to overlook them. Sergei Makarov, the "M" force from the famous KLM line is a good choice, but so are many other players. Alexander Mogilny of the Sabres, Stephane Lebeau of the Canadiens, Igor Larinov of the Canucks are possible candidates. There really is no stand-out choice here.

The Norris Trophy will be a race between Chris Chelios and Al MacInnis. Chelios won the Norris last year, while MacInnis showed his defensive power by helping the Flames win the cup.

There they are, the 1989 picks. Now let's just sit back and enjoy what should prove to be one of the most NHL seasons in a long time.

Sports Rap:

Mark Plihcik
Archway Staff Writer

By now, we have all become painfully aware of the tragedy of the San Francisco earthquake and the death and destruction that it has caused. However, there is no reason for this disaster to take the life of an American institution - the World Series. Yes, people have been talking about the cancellation of the Fall Classic out of 'respect' for the people of the Bay area.

But stop and think about it a minute. The last thing the victims of the earthquake want to do is think about the disaster. This is exactly what would happen if the series was cancelled. By allowing the A's and the Giants to play on, the focus of attention will be somewhat removed from the earthquake and back onto the World Series. It'll give the people of the Bay area something to take their minds off their losses and allow the recovery process to go that much smoother.

Certain people point to the condition of the various roads in and out of San Francisco and Candlestick Park as reasons why the series should be cancelled. This is by far one of the weakest and most superficial excuses currently making the rounds of sports pages across the country. Candlestick park is structurally sound and ready to go. The Bay Bridge, although the location of significant damage, has been made quick work by the Army Corps of Engineers and is expected to be ready for traffic by game time Friday night. There are other ways in and out of San Francisco, including the undamaged Golden Gate Bridge, so traffic, although it will be heavier than normal, should not cause anybody any problems if they leave for the game earlier. Coming out of Oakland, Interstate 880 can be bypassed using Interstate 580.

Baseball commissioner Fay Vincent had all of these reasons in mind when making the correct decision to allow the games to continue. Baseball has suffered through enough setbacks this year, from the Pete Rose scandal, to the death of Commissioner Bart Giamatti to last week's tragedy, and the new commissioner has shown that he wants to extricate baseball from the pool uncertainty that it is mired in. By calling for the continuation of the games in the Bay area he has asserted his position as the leader of America's pastime and shown his confidence that San Francisco and Oakland can recover from a tragedy as great as this and show the world the heartiness of American citizens when faced with disaster.

Had Vincent called for the series to continue in a neutral location, say St. Louis, he would have caused irreparable damage to not only the Bay community but to the game of baseball. The flavor of the game would be lost upon the neutral fans, for although all baseball fans love the World Series, the series just isn't the series without the antics of the hometown fans. Would Minnesota have won in 1987 without the support of the Minneapolis fans and their homer hankies? How about Pittsburgh in 1979 and the "We are family" atmosphere? Or the 1948 World Champion Indians? Probably not on all three counts. It takes an aspect away from the game that has become not only a tradition in the regular sense, but an institution in the greatest sense of the word.

San Francisco has shown that they are ready to put the earthquake behind them by the 80,000+ turnout at the Patriots-Forty Niners football game at Stanford stadium on Sunday. Now it's time for the media and the pessimistic baseball fans to recognize that the Bay area is ready to get on with the games.
