Drury Dilemma Put to Rest, FINALLY

Mark Plihcik
Archway Staff Writer

After 11 years at the helm of the men's basketball team, Leon Drury has resigned his post in order to devote more time to his Athletic Director Post. The move comes after a review of the organization of the Athletic Department by the College and an outside athletic consultant. The review also included considerable dialogue with the other Athletic Directors of the NE-10 conference. The consultant identified a critical imbalance in the staffing of the Athletic Department, and in an attempt to address this problem, a number of recommendations were made. To begin the implementation of the recommendations, Drury will resign his basketball position effective today. The move will also begin an upgrading of the athletic and recreational programs at Bryant. Because of the resignation, the athletic department will begin a nation wide search for a replacement men's basketball coach.

Drury commented that, "over the past few years, it has become increasingly obvious to me and the College administration that the duties of our continually growing varsity and intramural athletic programs require the attention of a full time athletic director."

Bryant's varsity athletic program, which includes 16 teams, is the third largest in the NE-10 conference. In addition, 85 percent of the students here participate in intramurals. "This year Bryant was one of only two schools in the Northeast 10 Conference where the men's basketball coach also served as athletic director. I'm pleased that I now can direct all my attention to our overall athletic program and we will have a basketball coach who can direct his full attention to a successful men's basketball program."

Drury will leave behind a 127-181 record as the Indian's coach. He was far more successful in the first half of his career, compiling a 56-27 record in his first three years at the helm of the men, including a 20-7 mark in 1980, when he was named Rhode Island Coach of the Year after directing the men to a national Division II ranking. Over the last three years, Drury has posted a 17-67 record, including a 5-22 mark this season.

Elevator Permits and Excuses Expire

Campus elevator permits expired on February 18th, almost a month ago. There are elevators located in the Bryant Center, Koffler Center, Library, MAC, and Unistructure.

On the top of each permit reads the following:

"State of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations Department of Occupational Safety."

It's Physical Plant's duty to make sure that all the elevators are working properly, complying with Rhode Island standards. There is no excuse for failing to inspect the elevators.

The entire Bryant community deserves a safe elevator system. But if the inspection permits have expired, how can we be sure that the elevators are still safe? It's been over a year since the elevator permits have been validated.

Physical Plant could have at least closed all of the elevators until they were properly inspected and approved by the state. But this never happened. Maybe an accident would have caused Physical Plant to respond to the problem.

If a problem developed in one of the elevators and people were injured, how would Bryant's insurance company handle this? Furthermore, a lawsuit could damage Bryant's reputation.

Physical Plant has neglected to do their job. There is no excuse for this. But more importantly, when are they going to solve this problem?

Would you feel secure riding in one of these elevators?

Alumnus Defends Drury

To the Editor:

After having the opportunity to review the article in the Archway regarding Leon Drury, I thought it appropriate to respond in the same manner to the four individuals who co-authored the lengthy criticism.

First and foremost, as a 1988 graduate who spent a less than illustrious four year basketball career at Bryant, I share in many of the frustrations that exist.

However, I do question the integrity of four people who find it necessary to go public with their criticism. If the intent of the article was not meant to smear the reputation of the athletic department (more appropriately—Lee Drury), why then have it printed in the Archway? Why not address your concerns to someone who has the ability to make an impact? Maybe your next step will be to publish a monthly evaluation of all Bryant employees who you feel are not performing up to standard.

Bryant College does an excellent job of teaching a sense of responsibility and business professionalism to its students; somewhere along the line, the four of you missed the boat.

Sincerely,
 Tom Larranaga

Accreditation Causes Confusion

To the Editor:

In the "Up Front" column of last week's The Archway, while writing regarding accreditation, Vice President James W. Robinson wrote, "The Bryant Board of Trustees decided several years ago to seek additional specialized business accreditation from the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of business (sic)..."

This statement is inconsistent with my understanding of the College's position as explained to me this semester by Executive Vice President William Trueheart and members of the Board of trustees. Their explanation of the College's AACSB effort is that Bryant is in the process of positioning itself for this additional accreditation, but that the final decision on pursuit of this accreditation has not yet been made.

Sincerely,
 Joseph A. Iacqua
 President, Bryant Faculty
 Federation

What is Accreditation Doing For Bryant?

by The Bryant Faculty Federation

James Robinson, Bryant's Vice President for Academic Affairs, in an Archway article of March 2nd, gave his views on the meaning of Bryant's pursuit of accreditation by the American Assembly of Colleges and Schools of Business (AACSB). His views were understandably positive, an attempt to associate AACSB with a broader effort "to enhance the character of the College." The Bryant Faculty Federation (BFF) submits that those views are at best controversial; that the AACSB accreditation process has narrowed Bryant's character, dangerously cutting it adrift from its historical mission, forcing it to engage in practices that some may conclude constitute fraud. The BFF has no official position on AACSB accreditation it does feel, however, that all sides of the issue should be openly discussed. The following and later articles are offered to the Bryant community in the interest of this open discussion.

VP Robinson starts his thesis by noting that AACSB accreditation "is enjoyed by approximately 15% of the business programs in the nation." While the word "enjoy" may be an overstatement considering the drain accreditation puts on an institutions financial resources, the clear inference in Robinson's phrase is that by obtaining accreditation Bryant would be joining an elite group. But he doesn't tell us anything about this group.

In actuality the AACSB is little more than a trade association that aspires, through accreditation, to control the delivery of business education in the United States. Like any good trade association it tries to keep the cost of entry for outsiders high enough to discourage new members from joining in order to protect the marketplace for its present members. But there is more to the picture than that of a simple trade association. The AACSB reflects the past history of politics in American universities.

Higher education systems and universities have been traditionally controlled by liberal arts faculty who, rightly or wrongly, have viewed business education as an anathema to the purpose of higher education in the U.S. For these faculty, and Americans in general, the purpose is to provide a "liberal" education; i.e. an education focusing on the development of critical thinking skills, a sensitivity to other cultures, and an awareness of the political, social and broad economic dimensions of life. Professional schools, like business schools, are clearly not within this parameter. Thus, for years, business schools have had to fight for budget scraps with colleges of education, junior colleges, technical schools, etc. while the arts and science colleges got the gravy: smaller class sizes, greater research support, lighter teaching loads, etc. In fact, the AACSB was formed earlier in this century to provide support for the mere acceptance of business programs on collegiate campuses. But that's another story.

Let the Tournament Begin

by Andrew Malgieri
Bryant Center Game Room Mng.

"My hoarse-sounding hour invites thee to the chase, the sport of kings; image of war without its guilt."

-William Somerville
Competition is merely a battle, a battle whose soldiers are armed with the tools of their sport. During the weekend of February 25th and 26th, bearing paddles, cue-sticks, dice, and finally tuned strategies, ten Bryant College warriors engaged in a regional confrontation at Fitchburg State College.

These ten competitors represented Bryant College in New England, Canada, and England at the Association of Collegiate Unions International (ACU-I) Games Tournament. They earned this privilege by eliminating seventy-six students at the Bryant Center Games Tournament held in early February.

Won Sang Yoon, Michelle "Rocky" Moncho, Mike Komorowski, and Chris Niedzinski competed in table-tennis while John DeSimone, Rob "Digger" Shoneck, and Paul Laverdiere demonstrated their skills in men's billiards. Joe DeQuattro represented the college in chess. Outstanding performances were shown by Jackie Rezza who placed fifth in women's billiards and David Broyles who is the new ACU-I Region One Backgammon Champion. A plaque will be placed in the Game Room to recognize his accomplishment.

Career Savvy: Graduate Options Discussed

by Melissa Barnes

Q. How can I improve my scores on the GMAT exam?

A. There are several ways. One is to use the GMAT prep. software newly installed in the Actuarial Science Lab at the Koffler Center. This software includes many sample questions for each of the six exam sections, as well as practice exams. It also provides explanations for any wrong answers.

There are also two GMAT prep. courses available locally. The Princeton Review program is new to Providence, so I have no student feedback on it yet, but it's reputed to be the course that prepared students so well it forced the Educational Testing Service to change the LSAT. The Stanley Kaplan Educational Center also has a course, and student feedback on this one has been positive.

If you'd rather learn from a book than pay $500-$600 for a prep. course or use the software, you can pick up a GMAT prep. book at the Bryant bookstore. Some students who are really motivated take advantage of two or more of these options.

Q. Do you have a list of the top MBA programs? What about law schools?

A. I have two up-to-date ratings of MBA programs. The most current one was recently published by Business Week. It lists the top 20 schools as rated through a survey of students and corporate recruiters. A more extensive list is published in the new Gourman Report, available in Career Services. Gourman selects 100 schools which he deems acceptable or better, and ranks them nationally and by state. Boston University, for instance, is ranked 52nd nationally and 3rd for Massachusetts.

The Gourman Report also takes 74 international law schools and 175 national law schools. For example, Suffolk University, ranked 109th in the nation, is rated as "adequate".

Q. I heard the LSAT is being changed. Is this true?

A. Yes. The new test will be administered for the first time on June 12, 1989. A former section of the test known as Facts and Issues has been omitted because it was found to be too coachable. The new test will consist of one experimental section not included in scoring, an essay not included in scoring, and lengthened sections in Reading Comprehension, Logical Reasoning and Analytical Reasoning. Since the Facts and Issues section was the easiest for most test takers, the new test will be somewhat more difficult.

"Underwear Is..."

by STEPHANIE BRUSH
Washington Post Writers' Group

It's been a traumatic week for America, with the anxiety about who our next defense secretary will be and all Sears stores closing their doors for 24 hours.

There was a rash of TV commercials where Sears piqued our curiosity by showing millions of Americans throwing down their newspapers, sewing machines and jackhammers, abandoning their cars in ditches, cocking a collective ear and saying, "What is going on inside

Sears?"

I'll tell you exactly what was happening: They had gotten together all the models-male and female-who had ever posed for the Sears underwear catalog, and asked them the question that has plagued all America for untold years: "What are these people pointing at?"

Admit it: When no one is looking, you, too, have probably perused the R-rated portions of the Sears catalog, and wondered what it must be like to want to be a fashion model so desperately that you would appear in the world's stupidest undies, in the world's most inexplicable poses.

Maybe if you have a probing, incisive intelligence, you have tried to assign a story to the little scenes portrayed in the Sears catalog:

"Three men with the excellent posture and strong jawlines get together with prop books." ("Hey, Hank—Let's go down to the public library in our underpants!")

"Two men and an adolescent boy get together with prop fishing lures." ("Hey, Corky! Let's go reel in some Mako shark in our underpants.")

And there our women here, too, wandering around in longline brassieres and half-slips, holding prop cups of coffee which no one has ever drunk in Sears' entire history.

Sometimes, I'll admit, my real life corresponds amazingly well with these scenarios: I may call up my friends and say, "Let's strip down to our unmentionables and stand in a frozen position, with our heads thrown back in simulated mirth."

Then someone will pipe up, "Say, then let's do it in the Fall Coats!" And then somebody would volunteer, "Now I'm going to point at something that isn't there," and all of us would gaze festively in that direction.

You are probably too young to know this, but people didn't even wear underwear before Sears came

Health News

Mononucleosis

by Teresa Daigle R.N.

Mono must be one of the most misunderstood illnesses that health professionals must treat.

It is an acute, and usually benign disease caused by the Epstein-Barr virus. Mono usually affects persons between the ages of 15 and 25 and is particularly prevalent where young people live together closely, as in dormitories.

Mono is infectious but apparently not very much so. Transmission probably occurs through saliva during close personal contact. Kissing, sharing utensils, bottles, and dishes should be discouraged especially during the first few weeks of the illness.

The first symptoms are vague: chills, weakness, headache, and fatigue. These symptoms are followed by sore throat, extreme fatigue, fever, and swollen glands. The symptoms last from 4 to 20 days.

There is no specific treatment for mono, just as there is no specific treatment for other viral illnesses. The majority of students are advised to do what they feel like doing, to get plenty of sleep and eat well. We must emphasize the need to refrain from contact sports, because of an enlarged spleen. It is imperative not to drink alcohol or take other drugs because these drugs are metabolized by an already sluggish liver and jaundice may result.

Studies show that the length of illness in mono is related to the students' attitude. Students who are discouraged or depressed do not get well as quickly as those who are determined to get well.

Dr. Robert L. Taylor Visits Campus

Dr. Robert L. Taylor was the first presidential candidate to visit the campus. He is the dean of the school of business at the University of Louisville. He and his wife had the opportunity to meet with the Bryant community at a reception on Monday. The next candidate will be on campus on Friday. Everyone is welcome to meet the candidate at a reception in the North Dining Room from 3:30-5:30 pm.

along. And people didn't have sex, either, until the Sears underwear catalog made the idea into their heads.

Sears would always be trusted to portray mysteriously "safe" underwear that you could never really understand the function of, such as half-slips. A half-slip was something you wore to your first junior-high dance because your mother forced you to, and during the course of the dance, it fell down to your ankles in front of Jimmy LaGrazia, and you had to run into the girls' room and hope to be struck by lightning and spontaneously die.

Underwear is a powerful moral idea.

It has always been my strategy, as an adult, whenever I start to feel intimidated by another person, to say, "This person has to buy and wear underwear, too. Because, if he doesn't, someone has to buy and wear it for him, which is worse."

I think that in the early years of mankind, man said to the Almighty, "Oh Lord, how can I remain humble in Your eyes, and know my place? What, in truth, separates me, a mere mortal, from Thee in the long run?"

And the Almighty replied, "Underwear. Briefs, particularly."

And I say this to you: When you feel the need to pass judgment on another human, say a business colleague or a wicked friend or a former chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee.....

"Let he who is without sin and vice, be the one to point the finger."

And let him do it in his underwear.

Now, as a trade association lobbying for acceptance of business programs on college campuses, the AACSB has been quite successful: 1/3 of all colleges and universities in the U.S. have a business program in their undergraduate curriculum. But, the fact is that Bryant has never had to fight for budgets with other schools in a university arena or a state system of higher education. We've always been a stand-alone business school, attracting students with a unique curriculum, strong faculty, and pleasant setting. However, trade associations do other things beside lobby for the acceptance of their members' product; they keep the membership abreast of developments in that product field.

Bryant's membership in the AACSB, (did you know that we were already a member?), helps us keep up with new trends in business education, prescribing subtle changes in its curriculum model, its curriculum "standards," to meet the changing dynamics of the business world. But even on this score the past ten years performance of American business in the international marketplace has raised questions as to the value of AACSB model. Business schools have already been roundly criticized for not properly preparing business school students for effective action in the modern business world. Thus, in light of constant criticism by the business community of the state of business education in the U.S., Bryant might do well to seek advice from other sources. Therefore, one should question the desirability of seeking AACSB accreditation when to do so simply puts us in league with an elite that is not well received by the community, the American business community, it purports to serve.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

FALSE FIRE ALARM POLICY

After consultation with the Student Senate, the Residence Hall Association, and the Resident Staff, Bryant College has adopted the following policy:

FALSE FIRE ALARMS

In order to comply with the Town of Smithfield's ordinance with regard to fire alarms, the following regulation will apply to the Bryant College residence halls:

Each residence hall will be responsible for the secure and appropriate use of its fire alarm system. False alarms not clearly connected to system malfunctions will be charged to the residents of each building, or townhouse block, in graduated increments of one hundred dollars ($100.00) not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00) per fire alarm, i.e., first false alarm in academic year ($100.00), second false alarm ($200.00), third false alarm ($300.00), fourth false alarm ($400.00), fifth false alarm and thereafter ($500.00).

Please note that these assessments will not be applied to the hall's residents when the individual responsible for the false alarm is identified.

LEARNING FOR LEADERSHIP ID361

2:00-3:15
 Dr. R.J. Deluga
 Tuesday & Thursday
 Faculty Suite F, Room 435
 Fall, 1989
 232-6279

What is ID361?
 Part I of Bryant College's Learning for Leadership program is an intensive examination of leadership from a multidisciplinary perspective.

How do I learn about leaders and leadership?
 A variety of active learning techniques are employed to stimulate your leadership development including: class exercises, case studies, issue debates, written assignments, class lectures/discussions and exams. You also choose a recognized leader as your focus throughout the semester. As we discuss the various leadership issues, you can share the perspective of your chosen leader. The instructional aim is to have you experience success and to discover that both the study and exercise of leadership is a fun, exciting, and demanding endeavor.

What is the leadership speakers forum?
 As a special part of the Learning for Leadership program, successful leaders practitioners and prominent scholars are invited on campus as "a guest leader for the day". The forum enables you to informally interact with the guest leaders.

Instructor Permission Required.
 Information available from:

Dr. R.J. Deluga

HELP WANTED: EXPERIENCE GIVEN!

The Bryant Center is now taking applications for the position of Bryant Center Student Manager. The position provides an excellent opportunity to gain valuable management experience BEFORE you graduate.

Bryant Center Student Managers work approximately 20 hours per week, and are responsible for supervising the Bryant Center in conjunction with the full-time professional staff. Managers are also responsible for the development and training of student staff, and the effective supervision and scheduling of the Bryant Center Operations.

Applications are now available in the Office of Bryant Center Operations, 2nd floor of the Bryant Center. There will be a meeting of all interested applicants on Monday April 3 at 5:00pm in the North Dining Room to answer any questions applicants may have. All applications are due at the Office of Bryant Center Operations by 4:30pm Tuesday April 4.

You miss her sparkling sense of humor. She misses you and your jokes. Even the bad ones. That's one good reason to call long distance. AT&T Long Distance Service is another good reason. Because it costs less than you think to hear your grandmother start to giggle before you even get to the punch line.

So whenever you miss her laughter, bring a smile to her face with AT&T. Reach out and touch someone.®

I hope everyone had a great time last week on Spring Break wherever you were. Our brothers were scattered across the globe and we only had one fatal injury. While Jay was in Florida he was caught in a tuna net and is being held in the Smithsonian for further testing. Now we can only visit him during museum hours. Jim Burns spent his vacation waking up with more farm animals than Old McDonald. Jeff Boutin traveled 29 hours on a train, so that he could get out of this nasty Rhode Island weather and join the rest of the Spring Breakers in the rain of Daytona.

John spent his vacation in the local tanning dome but next year he is going to float on his back and the brothers are going to enjoy a cruise to the Bahamas. So if you want to board the Pacific Load be sure you make reservations early because John only sits 11,000 comfortably. Billy spent his vacation comforting crime victims, walking the elderly across the street and petting the dogs at the SPCA. Brian didn't get a chance to travel anywhere but he scooped more beautiful girls than Daytona has to offer. Brian is still the balls and he can be seen hanging out at our pole or in our suite but please don't bother him for autographs, he is a very busy man.

Hi everyone and welcome back! Hope everyone had a good Spring Break. Some of the sisters ventured down to Florida for the week. (Boca, Ft. Lauderdale, and Daytona) For those of us who were Boca Bound, we should have realized that our trip wasn't going to go as smoothly as planned when we couldn't even leave the campus on time. But overall, we did manage to have great time in spite of a few mishaps along the way...such as the car breaking down, getting lost where ever we went, and the lack of sun from Monday thru Thursday. Even those who stayed at Ft. Lauderdale seemed to run into trouble. They learned of the Eastern Airline strike first-hand and had to switch flights and end their vacation early.

While in Florida, Sandy won the Bounty award for the vacation & the 1st night back. Seems like this late bloomer is trying to keep up with the rest of the competition in her suite. But Frania was voted for a close second runner-up...as long as the guy would kiss "her way." Also, the Mario Andretti in Pam Given seemed to come out on their way home from Disneyland. Unfortunately for her, the Daytona 500 was scheduled for the week before our spring break. As for a general warning: all those planning to drive with McIndoe, BEWARE!!! She has no sense of direction. She has the ability to get lost in a parking lot and takes short cuts thru underground hotel parking lots. Also, we'd like to inform Andrew to move over, Jethro is our new savior. Good thing for him we planned his vacation. All he had to do was decide if he wanted to die inside or outside the bar. Meanwhile, back in Connecticut, Casey finally found a job. She has earned the position of "Official Branch Picker" of Avon-Congratulations!! And as for McQueeney, she found a new way to drive during vacation. But the question is...Isn't it really hard to drive like that?!

And finally before signing off, we'd like to wish Jennifer Ellert good luck in running for Senate Vice-President. Have a good weekend everyone!!

Ring. Woke up. Got out of bed. Dragged a comb across my head. Yup, its tough to get used to classes after a fun week in a sunny part of the world.

Alas, here's what the brothers did: I did my Lane Meyer impression (again) at Loon Mtn., Fatman went home and partied with his mother, Brendan went to a circus, and some people worked.

While a lot of brothers went through detailed planning to get to their destinations, Lou, Molk, Gabe, and Mellow preferred the spontaneous decision. So with barely an ounce of preparation, they left with a box of Jerry tapes in the speedy Fairmont to Florida.

Meanwhile, while everyone already in Daytona was going to bars, Double D was trying not to be thrown behind them. The result: APK was given the boot, but in leaving Bruce E. Babes managed to save the beer.

Leaving the U.S., TKE invaded the tropical island of Barbados, where the festivities were similar to the floor: A few ventilation holes were put into the walls due to the humid temperatures, and Dish opened the door to get some air in. A native tried to barter with Lumberjack and Johan. Upon checking out the goods, however, at 10 U.S. survey said uh, no thanks. Zero tried to impress the girls by jetskiing on the beach, but still ended up going 0 for 85. A few nicknames surfaced this week. Slabber can be called the Calypso Teddy Bear, Rambo is Mr. Nice Guy, and pinky is Gungleman.

Here's an update on TKE sports: The B hoop team pulled off its first real victory of the year with the help of some draft picks, and is now three and one, but played back to back games Tuesday-talk about seized! The Snowmen are undefeated at 3-0 and the Gutmen are 2-2 and looking for a playoff spot.

Hopefully we'll have a meeting sometime this semester - - most likely to discuss the new fundraising effort. Raffle tickets will be going on sale soon. Whoever gets closest to guessing the cost of door #1-without going over win an all expenses paid trip to TKE's formal to be held at ... well, maybe we'll know by next week...

Hi everyone! Glad to be back?! We hope you all had a fun filled break! WE did! The Sibbies traveled all over the country last week—Stetson and Dasher danced with some REAL cowboys in San Antonio, and they'll never forget the Alamo! Lacey and Electra went to Florida—so they say! We don't see any tans though! And Rosay, Amber and Felony came back as braided Bahamian beach bums!

Despite what TE said before travelling to Killington about partying with some "snow-bunnies and not the Sibbies," we seem to think they wouldn't have had near as good a time without us!! We want to thank TE for the use of their condo and not ours — the pretzels added a nicer touch to yours than they would have to ours anyways! Mexican seemed to be the game of the week along with a—e! Ferris and Fribble had a little trouble with Mexican one night (OLE!) while Treble had some trouble with a—e!

The Sibbies and TE did create a new winter olympic sport—cardboard box sledding! Thanks to Stack for bringing Brinkley ("Suzie Chapstick") down the slopes—even though it took 3 hours! You get the Good Samaritan award for the week! Shrub: how did it feel living with 10 girls?! Thanks for keeping us warm all week!!!

All in all we had an awesome week—even though some sisters encountered PINK and GREEN creatures and tv—land !! Thanks Treble for getting everything together—we couldn't have done it without you!

P.S. Remember: never lie to the Brethren—(words of wisdom from the Nunnery!)

TE

Welcome back everyone, the brothers hope everyone had a great break. The majority of the brothers headed up to Killington to party and they managed to get some skiing in also. The sibbies felt the wrath of the brethren in the course of the nightly activities which included multiple games of mexican. The brothers felt the wrath of the nunnery of the sledding slopes where jingles couldn't stay straight and the other sisters managed to cause the brothers more pain in 1 hour than they did all week. Shrub you ski too in control for TE but we wish to thank you for the Michelob on wed. night. Overall the brothers were drunk, the sisters were loud, Tiny was falling down, Quigs was out of control, Punch was praying to JB, Lick was dropping the hammer, Harington was hitting things, KATO was rolling cigars, Galgano was getting housed, spades were flying, Klous is a fool, Randy is cool, sledding is out, Punch can't ski, Jingles is ready for outer limits, Bonnie is ready for the lodge, Reina skis on her thumb, Karen went chin diving, Kato has bent skis, Stack has no poles, Marshall has no clue, Hess has no life and Doc and JB were kissing — . Thanks Sibbies and Shrub for a great week. Other brothers headed south but they were new brothers so they don't count. Sayings of the week: Lick it up, the brethren made a mistake, Shrub skis like Phi Ep, Reina is a thief, and KATO where are the Garcia Vegas. For the goodwill of the greek community the events of thurs night are a blur, it was ugly. Have a good week.- THE BRETHERN.

Yet another Spring Break has come and gone. Those of us lucky ones who STAYED home feel "real bad" about the weather down South. It really is a shame that your tans aren't darker. Seriously though, the sisters who did get to escape greater New England had a super time. The Daytona girls got dogged at the Whitehall and Jen missed out being with her Maine man. Oh, that's cool, pick on the fat girls. KDR, APK and Bogie sauced it up playing pyramid nightly (and daily). As usual the sisters had a great time with TKE. Double D, what is it with APK and the cops? Spoot and Dice Woman the Cars-Loaded with a Lumpy Bag-A-Bones and J-bakes chugging sauce. The Daytona girls would like to say that "it's all fun in the sun until you're evicted at 4:00 a.m.!"

Another sisters adventure was to the far regions of Waterloo, Canada, where Lou who finally fulfilled her deepest darkest fantasies in Guelph, and Kris learned to scoop Canadian style.

LuAnn enjoyed a romantic week for two, but came home with another man, or is he just a "Figment" of your imagination?

A very Happy (belated) Birthday to Kari, who is now in the higher ranks of the 21ers.

We had a great sisters party before break. Fougé worked on building our relations with Residence Life, while Janeen continued to make everyone PAY!

There are quite a few of us who are still in search of PPF's. Anyone interested, see the Steve and Steve Escorting Service for tips on impressing us.

Happy St. Patrick's Day to everyone. Celebrate like the Irish and drink up!

Quote of the week: "I'm not gonna scoop, but you know me."
APK TOP CAT!!!

To the female who left that present on Vic and Partch's carpet, they thank you. The tradition continued but it wasn't one of the original who regurgitated so your contribution was not official.

I'm glad to report that the brothers celebrated the coming of March with great fervor. The swine were out in droves like festering dung beetles on a humid summer night.

Well Phi Sig tried to take the title away from Trout with "I Bet You Can't," but they failed miserably. There was a little excitement in Homer's room which left bone biting anything in sight. However, few left uninjured.

Stork maintained the integrity of his position by representing Beta in the best way possible...off his a_s.

Well Hanz your new friend's bed betrayed you, it set you up for a fall, couldn't we all just see it coming, leaving you on a heap in the floor with nothing but a carpet and a lava lamp. We're glad to see that you climbed back up there and kept on snoozing.

Cheek: Partch

Dog: Rex

No sports, have a nice day.

BΣO

Welcome back everybody!!! We hope everybody had an awesome Spring Break!! Most of us either tripped to Florida, went skiing, stayed home, or, and what could be better than this...went to Kentucky!! A couple of interesting things happened over break....Congratulations BRUZR!! Barb Garton, was he really 60?!! Bechster, how was your date with the geek?? Turtle, are you sure you're old enough to buy those cigarettes?? Others were on the prowl for PFD's-no, not pledge formal dresses-Pledge Formal Dates!!

We'd like to congratulate the new brothers of Delta Sigma Chi on finally becoming Greeks the night before break. We're proud to say that now all of the "true" Greeks have EARNED their colors.

Sunday night marked the return to the true spirit of Bryant College as we headed to the townhouse for a few drinks and to catch up on the week's activities.

Then it was time to head out and some of us were off to Delta (where else?) while others headed straight for the Comfort. Sue, why is it that we can always find you on Delta's floor but never our own floor?

This weekend we are sponsoring a "Luck of the Draw" weekend with TE and TEP. We hope to get a lot of Greek support at the events! Wednesday is magician, Craig Karges. Thursday night is Comfort night from 9pm to 1am. Friday night is the Suitcase mixer in the South Dining Hall at 9pm. Pack your bag ahead of time because we are having a raffle and you may find yourself off to Boston for the weekend-leaving that night!!! Saturday night is Win, Lose, or Draw in the South Dining hall at 9pm — get a team of 3 together and join the fun!!

We hope that everyone has a Happy St. Patrick's Day and enjoys the events of our weekend.

Finally, congratulations to Jackson who celebrated her 21st birthday this week and is now legal to join Raul in many of his favorite hang-outs.

Watch out, Raul!!!!

Until next time.....

ΔΣΧ

Congratulations are in order for our new brothers: Shoebagger, Opus, Stevo, Sambo, No Card (alias Cardiac Kid) and Shrubber. Y.I.T.B.O.S. The hard work is over, let the fun begin. Also, congratulations to Jeff and Curt on a job well done.

Spring Break started off Friday with an interfraternal snowball fight between dorms 1 and 2. Various assorted brothers led the attack along with Phi Sig to overtake some basically nonexistent competition from dorm 2. Peters turned out to be more of a liability than an asset as he seemed to get hit from every angle. But the real fun started when Lambda, Lambda, Lambda appeared on the scene. All of the true greeks joined forces to give them a cold send off into spring break.

Now, let's talk about Spring Break and the Bahamas! Mel, Moss, Dan, Ogre, Jeff, Obo, Chris, Ted, and Cockroach journeyed on a cruise to the Bahamas. Great times, burns, and fun was had by all. Chris turned out to be the Party Animal of the trip. He went to bed at 11:00, complained all day, didn't drink, and caused heartache for the entire ship. Boy that Chris sure knows how to have a great time.

Of course, there are some disappointments. It seemed like a retirement home so Mel felt right at home. Dan, Ogre, and Ted looked like lobsters. Emily was looking for heat seeking missiles on the island, but not one of the brothers wanted to show her, except Verna but she said no way.

Ogre went out of his way to talk to the natives on the island. After talking to Paco, Ogre found out that the both new Jimmie, an old friend of Ogres' who was left back in the U.S. It's a small world.

Oh yeah, some brothers were lucky enough to party with Hans over the break.

Welcome back dudes! Hope everybody had a good week. For those of us that didn't go away...well, we don't have to adjust to the cold weather. Thursday night's brother's party before break was a blast. Even the Roadrunner made an appearance, with some friends. The Delta class showed its strength, they did finish first. The anchors were dropped once again. Somebody is going to have to teach Magilla new song, not that we don't like it but 43 times is plenty. Whitey tried out a new way to get people's attention. IDIOT! Go to bed Whitey.

The majority of us arrived back Sunday night. We are lucky to still have Manzy. AAAAHHH! Where did that guardrail come from? That isn't like him. Fun was had at Parente's Sunday night. Florence spent the night in Dorm 3 under a Coca-Colasign. Good Florence. Our best wishes go out to our most active alumnus who is very inactive in the hospital. See ya soon Droid.

Until then, Coop
ΦΕΠ

Well Awamassabout that, finally a historian with a sense of humor!! And now, presenting the years weeks in review, through the eyes of Jeffrey "the scoop" Kid, with the nose for the news about the bros!

Welcome new E- heads, keep the party atmosphere alive, and Phi Ep #1 forever. SURPRISE!! Colin for winning the presidency-don't forget Kegger was a shoe in too. The big race for the election evening left us with Steve "doesn't have a care about anything in the world all he wants to do is win the vice-presidency" Kane. And of course congrats to all the new positions. Sorry Miles maybe next year. Don't worry new brothers if you didn't get one there are always those glorious appointed positions.

We kicked off our first Bro's party for the new brothers of '89, you finally made the brothers proud by taking advantage of the situation and drank, drank, drank till the...!! Stay Puff's broken wing put a damper on things - suck it up fat boy!

Fun in the sun Spring Break proved eventful for most of the Brothers. Dopes took to the slopes and those who were smarter took the Florida water. Congrats to Margerine on his golden tan and winning the well deserved bronze god award, but most of all for finally getting out of New England. Labs was Jimmey Buffettized. Glad to see you finally broke out of that accountant, nerd image- see what can happen when you get away from the wife!? Rapper Snapper beware of the wrath of the mean and angry one, I know you just didn't want to pick him up. There is a contract out on Guipe's head for trashing the apartment and any other miscellaneous things brothers want to blame on him. Spank WHY the dead head??

The Brothers returned from their glorious vacations to a quassi gig. However potential formal dates were on the prowl. Sooters better half was up for a visit. You are the biggest stud in your lame pledge class - better work harder Pa's.

Formal dates beware....BROTHERS NEED WOMEN!!!... except, of course, Gilli.

Black Belt Strikes Again

Susan Torti
Archway Staff Writer

On March 5, 1989, Daniel Cohen, second degree black belt and member of the Bryant Karate Club, took second place in the men's middle weight black belt fighting division. The event was the Krane Rhode Island Open Karate Championship Tournament. Daniel was victorious in his first two fights, winning 5-1, 5-4. The win qualified him to fight for first place. After taking a couple of hard punches he finished in second by a 3-5 defeat.

This tournament was Daniel's second time fighting in the men's division. In his career he won several trophies while competing as a junior. Daniel explained how difficult it is to compete in tournaments even for good fighters because the best preparation is experience and that means going to many tournaments.

Daniel Cohen

Daniel started karate at age ten while at the army base in Germany where his father was stationed. When his family relocated to East Hartford, Connecticut, his present home, he continued taking classes nights at his high school. His style is Tae Kwon Do. While he is home, he teaches the Chung Do Kwan branch.

Daniel told me that he enjoys being a member of the karate club. One reason is he loves sparring more than any other aspect of the sport. Another reason is instructor Ron Renaud reminds him of his instructor from home. He said, "they both have the same respect for the martial arts and devote a great deal of time to it and make it a main part of their lives. I admire each for their dedication." Daniel is planning to compete in future tournaments, for the experience, but mostly for the fun of it.

Athletes of the Week

John Beldy and Scott Gonzalez

The Athletes of the Week this week are Scott Gonzalez and John Beldy, both members of the Bryant Bowling Team. They had sparkling performances at the ACUI regional tournament two weeks ago. Scott won the individual all events with a 211 average and the singles title with a 704 series. John placed second in the individual all events bowling a 205, and second in the singles competition, with a 636 series. The two will represent the Region I bowlers at the National Singles Collegiate Championship at Wichita, Kansas in May. Their strong performances powered Bryant to a first place finish at the ACUI tournament.

Intramural Update:

Bryant "Hoopsters" Go To the Garden

Bryant "Super Hoopsters" move on to Boston Garden.

The four Bryant students who represented us at Northeastern University on Saturday, March 4 in the Schick Super Hoops 3 on 3 competition, marched through six opponents to qualify for the finals at the Garden Monday night, March 20, during the Celtics-Spurs NBA game.

Dennis Bruce, John Ventura,

Dennis McCollum and Ken Lynch proved to four Division I and two Division II schools that teamwork and hustle will outdo size and individuality in the clutch. The Bryantians eeked out their first win over Boston University by two points. They then went on a tear, pouncing on North Adams State by 12 points, Castleton State by 20, a squeaker over Siena by one point, before they were edged by UMass at the buzzer. The last game of the day was a crushing victory over neighborhood rival Providence College. The margin of victory was 15.

That win put the Cats into the final on the parquet floor, in front of 14,986 fans with a chance to avenge the loss to UMass. Go get 'em, Indian Wildcats.

Roster reminder:
Softball (Men and Women) - Rosters due on Thursday, March 23. 15 player limit
Indoor Soccer (Men and Women) - Rosters due on Monday, March 20. 12 player limit

Sports Rap:

To Weight Or Not To Weight?

Mark Plihcik
Archway Staff Writer

How many people out there lift weights on any kind of a regular basis? My guess is quite a few, myself included. And how many people lift at one of the area's fine gyms? I'd say the answer to this is probably very similar to the first question's answer. Is there any particular reason why you don't use the weight room here on campus? Let me throw a couple of possibilities at you.

Maybe you don't like the fact that there's only one Universal machine and no free weights. Or maybe that unless you bring your own radio, it's lift in silence time. How about the fact that the room is so big for the amount of equipment in it, that a yodeling champion from Switzerland could hardly find a better place to practice his craft? Whatever reason you have for not lifting on campus, I'm sure that if it is not listed above, it would have been if I had brainstormed a little longer before writing this column.

So exactly what is our problem? Why doesn't the Bryant administration get it's act together and get some real equipment? I mean, lets face it, the two gyms that most of us go to (Gold and World) are making a killing on poor schmucks like us who are willing to pay 75 bucks per semester to use their free weights. And of that semester that we paid for, how many weeks do we actually use the weights? Well, lets figure it out. The average Bryant lifter probably lifts about three times a week, just to stay in shape. So there's our working limitation. Now the semester starts on January 21. Keeping in mind that the average lifter (lets call him Joe Bigguy) lifts three times a week (say Monday, Wednesday and Friday) Joe will lift twice that first week, because chances are astronomically high that he spent all of Monday in line at the Bookstore. So that brings us straight up to the first week of February. We have one long weekend (Washington's birthday), so that cuts two more lifting days off the semester - Friday because everybody is trying to get off campus as fast as possible, and Monday because nobody in his right mind would be caught dead on campus before say about 3 or 4 pm. Then there is hell week, as professors try to get as many exams as possible in before Spring Break. There goes another week to studying.

Now along comes Joe Bigguy's favorite time of year. Spring Break. He goes to Mexico or Florida, or some other place where the sun is very, very warm, and gets an awesome tan. Subtract one more week from the lifting schedule. So that makes, what, about three weeks of lifting days total gone? Just for kicks, lets assume that Joe has a professor that's a real pain in the ass, and gives him an exam on the Tuesday after break. Scratch one more day to studying. After that Joe gets back to a pretty regular lifting schedule for a while. But in April, there's Easter break and another long weekend. Two more weeks down the tube.

You begin to see my point. During the so-called semester, which we paid 75 bucks for, there are many days which add to many weeks in which we don't lift. In fact it works out that given exams, holidays, and a couple of previous commitments, Joe Bigguy misses about six weeks worth of lifting. Wait a minute! Doesn't it cost like $30 for a month of lifting? Now assuming that the guy who runs the gym prorates his charges, we should be able to take off say about $25 for the six weeks we missed, right? Yeah, OK! No chance ever!

A little quick math tells you that on the average, Joe Bigguy will end up losing 200 greenbacks over his four years here at Bryant. Why should we tolerate this? We shouldn't! A little bit more quick math will tell us that if we raised the Student Activities Fee by $5, we could raise $15,000, enough to buy another Universal machine and a good set of free weights, not to mention life cycles and maybe a couple of tread mills. Wouldn't that fill up all that empty space in the basement of the MAC nicely? Of course it would!

But you are probably saying, how many students would support a raise in the SAF? Didn't we just raise it this last fall? Well, yes we did. But think for a minute. Remember the football poll that was taken a couple of weeks ago? A majority of the students polled said that they would support raising the SAF for a football team, a thing that they would be able to watch. Do you really believe that there would be angry protests outside Dr. O'Hara's if we raised in order to buy equipment that the entire campus would benefit from? Probably not. And besides that, when and if we get a football team on campus, we're going to need a good weight room for strength training. Perhaps the possibility of asking for support from the Patriots (who hold their training camp here) could be looked into to help pay for some of the more expensive pieces of equipment that raising the SAF would not pay for. Right now, the Patriots have to truck in all of their strength equipment, set it up, use it, break it down, and pack it up every summer. This, needless to say, is a rather expensive proposition, especially for a team that has just been bought by the razor king of the world, Victor Kiam. Wouldn't it make more sense to have a weight room on campus that they could use? Well of course it would! Don't be ridiculous!

No matter how you look at it, the Bryant College weight room needs some serious help. There has been talk of moving it to the basement of Dorm 16 (when construction is completed.) Then instead of having a very empty MAC basement, we'll have a very, very empty MAC basement and a three-fourths empty Dorm 16 basement. You would think that a school that professes to prepare it's students to be future executives would be able to better manage space, wouldn't you?
