Bryant hosts political forum

Kenneth Wakefield
Archway Staff Writer

On Wednesday October 23, at 7 p.m., a very important night in the history of any Bryant student's life will be occurring in rm. 2B of the Bryant Center. On this night, many of the candidates running for public office in Rhode Island will take part in "Candidates Night." This is a very good opportunity for students to come and ask questions of the candidates and their views on issues that are important to us, the college students (i.e. federal loans, private vs. public education, etc.). The major candidates from the two major parties that will attending this function are as follows: Jack Reed, Nancy Mayer, Giovanni Cicione, and Rick Wild. Representatives will be sent from the candidates running for President of the United States, including a representative for Ralph Nader (Green party candidate) and one for Ross Perot (Reform party candidate). There will also be representatives from the Cool Moose party and the Libertarians. The people who go to this event don't just sit back and watch after each candidate makes a brief presentation; he/she will take questions from the audience, and, just to keep things in check and fair, there will be one or two moderators at the event. There will also be a literature table at the event, giving the position of the candidates on many different issues. Everybody should thank the Student Senate and Professor Posusney's Class "Electoral Systems and Electoral Reform," for organizing this great event. Following the event in two weeks will be a night entitled "The 1996 Elections and Beyond: Where Do We Go From Here?" This night will feature the Chair of the Political Science Department at Brown University, Darrell West; M. Charles Bakst, political commentator for the Providence Journal-Bulletin; and Rob Richie, executive director of the Center for Voting and Democracy, in Washington DC. This will be a great event for all, a chance to broaden your horizons and to feel that your vote counts, so please come and enjoy yourself. One final note: this event is open to the public, and 2B is not exactly the largest room on campus, so try to arrive a little early.

Smithfield man grows 680 lb. pumpkin

SMITHFIELD, R.I. (AP) — And the winner is ... John Castellucci at 680 pounds.

No, Castellucci doesn't weigh 680 pounds. But a pumpkin he grew does, and that was enough to take the title and set a record at the third annual Rhode Island State Pumpkin Championship.

Castellucci, who played host to the event at his Smithfield farm last weekend, beat out 22 other contestants and won $500.

Alden Holdridge of Ledyard, Conn., grew a 664-pound pumpkin. The keys to growing huge vegetables are daily care, good soil, plenty of water and the right mixture of cow manure and chemical fertilizer, he said.

Computer program does in hours what woman couldn't in 10 years

MISSOULA (AP) — Using a computer program bought at a discount store, a 43-year-old woman did in hours what she couldn't do in the previous 10 years: find her lost family.

"It was remarkable," said Dona Cahala.

Cahala hadn't heard from her biological father since he and her mother split up when Cahala was less than a year old. After her mother's death, Cahala decided to look for her father. For 10 years she had no success.

Her luck changed when her husband went to the Target discount store and bought a software program known as The Family Tree Maker.

Almost immediately, she found her father's name and where he lived. Unfortunately, she found it under death benefits.

But she also found the name and number of one of his sons, her half brother. She called him that night and found out that she had nine half brothers and sisters.

Only four days later, she met five of her siblings, who lived 300 miles away in Pasco, Wash.

She'd last heard that her father was living in Illinois, so she was surprised to learn he had lived so close to her — in Kennewick, Wash.—before he died.

"I guess that he had to be gone before we could all be together,"

Cahala said. "I was sad because I never met him, but I was excited because I gained five half brothers and four half sisters."

The software program includes Social Security death benefits data, selected marriage records and U.S. Census records. There are more than 15 million names appearing in state and federal records.

The speed with which Cahala found her family surprised her, after having searched in vain for a decade. Her siblings had also been looking for her because they knew their father had children from his previous marriage.

Cahala said she was nervous before she met her family. "My stomach was in my throat," she said.

Where is she now?

Over the summer and into the fall, many of the administrative staff at Bryant became displaced workers. Rumors and pigs fly, but it is undeniable that these people were either discontent with their positions in the Bryant community or were forced to leave. The most pronounced case would of course be that which concerns Lynda (spelling varies) Nagle and the reasoning behind her dismissal. No substantial evidence can be drawn from the staff throughout the college; all talk, but no direct quoting allowed. Henceforth, an accurate news write-up could not be done on this hotly debated topic. Nevertheless, since this here article is purely opinion-based, it seems appropriate that the basic consensus among rumors be made public knowledge (as they most likely already are) to those of you out there who have been left in the dark or who did not know Lynda Nagle. Lynda Nagle worked in Undergraduate Programs for close to a decade. When she initially began her position as an academic advisor, a one Timothy Cartwright was the head of the department. Upon his dismissal (for reasons unbeknownst to myself), Nagle's co-worker, Elizabeth Powers, was appointed to Cartwright's former position as Director of Undergraduate Programs. According to prevalent opinion, this is where the problems for Nagle began.

Of course, things were peaches and cream for a long while, seeing as how this position change occurred nearly three years ago. However, Nagle became very popular with students and parents both, causing somewhat of a biased demand for her as an advisor to both new and old students alike, all of which brought on a bit of rivalry amongst the counselors (this I am assuming; no facts here). Friction grew as the years past; culminating into something big this summer which I cannot quite put my finger on.

Once school was out for the summer, Nagle was put under review for her non-conforming actions as an academic advisor; this process is supposed to last three months, a time during which the person under speculation has the opportunity to regain some stature within their office of employment. Yeah right. How can you possibly change opinions that were set in stone from the get-go? Was she really doing anything differently from how she had in previous years? How was she to improve upon a systematic process which she had perfected to her own standards? Was that the problem in itself?

On one summer day in July, Nagle heard from a fellow Bryant employee that her own last day at the college would be July 31, a fact mentioned at a meeting to which she was not an attendee. Upon hearing this, she most certainly panicked. No official notification of her dismissal was ever directly addressed to her, but how could she doubt the very words out of Dean Roger Anderson's mouth? She knew that it wasn't just a rumor.

Despite the urgings of her friends and colleagues, Nagle went about her everyday business without calling in legal counsel or anything of the sort. She most definitely had a case, but what real proof did she have of the malicious back-stabbing occurring just outside her office? Besides, who would care to remain employed in an office where everyone had some sort of vendetta against them? And so, on one sunny day in August, Nagle was told to not come back. Just as simple as that. No good-bye party, no going-away gifts.

Nagle was very involved in the students' (those whom she advised) lives, acting more as a friend than as a simple class schedule coordinator. Perhaps all those long hours at the office really hadn't paid off. If only she had succumbed to the pressure of the average American worker, doing her time at the office simply for the sake of money.

Loving her job became a major setback for Nagle. Had she maintained a non-congenial, plebeian attitude of reading from a manual, would she have remained here until retirement? Heck, would she have wanted to stay if someone had asked her back? One thing is for sure—her absence has not gone unnoticed.

Let students make the choice

To Bryant Community:

This is in response to the column by F.J. Talley last week about the plywood in the Townhouses being a fire hazard and, therefore, illegal. It is the stupidest thing I have ever heard; this is just being used as an excuse to try to curb the drinking on this campus. Five-percent decide not to drink and that is fine, but then they complain that there is nothing else to do on campus because everybody else decides to drink. The students who do not drink have made that choice, and I am happy for them, but if there is nothing for them to do alone, why don't they get together and go see a movie. Their complaints have led the college to decide that drinking games shouldn't be allowed, even though the general consensus of students will still go out and get drunk. The students should have the choice to get drunk if they wish; remember it is their body and their GPA that stumble with the amount of drinking that is done. If people allow such things as this to go through without a fight, other things will follow, and eventually students will be carrying in their allotted six-pack a month and wondering where this all started. This also works backwards for the college and not just the students. If they curb drinking more and more, less and less students will come here. Yes, students want a good education, but they also want a place where they can kick back and enjoy the weekends. That brings up my last point: on campus, most stick to a strict regiment of only getting drunk on the weekends; our friends back home who decided not to move on to college pretty much get wasted every night. So the College does save our liver quite a bit if not totally. If students want to play a few drinking games, let them; they are not hurting anybody but themselves and that is their choice.

Bryant takes stand against domestic abuse

Dear Bryant Community:

The 5th Annual Jane Doe Walk for Women's Safety was held in Boston this past Saturday, October 12. Over 3,000 men, women, and children walked and raised consciousness about domestic violence, memorialized those who have died, and showed support to survivors and loved ones. Bryant walkers were well represented with over 20 people participating. Bryant faculty and students came with friends, siblings, parents and children. The Bryant Team raised nearly 800 dollars for the Massachusetts Coalition for Battered Women Service Groups. It was great to be a part of this event. I would like to thank everyone who came out to walk and those who sponsored and supported us. We also appreciate anyone who had a conversation about domestic violence and those who considered coming to the walk. A special thank you also goes to Meghan Fraleigh, '97, who brought additional attention to this walk and the issue of domestic violence to this campus. She was always there to remind us that breaking the cycle of violence begins with a single step.

Sincerely,
Nanci Weinberger

Appreciation of family

As I write this, our College community is preparing for Parents' and Family Weekend here on campus. I thought it might be a good opportunity to reflect a bit on the importance of family.

We are all, to some degree, products of the families from which we have come. I am often amused as I watch the children in our parish religious education program and notice how some of them not only look like their parents, but also walk and talk introduce us to faith. They influence how we see the world and provide our motivation and drive.

As we grow older and seek to clarify our own individual identities and decide on our life's journey, we can look to our parents to help understand our dynamics and so make sound choices for ourselves. It's usually during this time that we begin to appreciate our parents and families more than we did during those rebellious years and actually develop stronger friendships with them.

This weekend is an opportunity to move along with this process. It's a chance to show appreciation to those who have given us so much. We can develop a deeper sense of the worth of our parents while we grow in greater independence and self-identity.

In-hair-ittance

Thanks to a student in Jerry Montvilo's Biology class for this week's question, "How does Rogaine work?"

I gave my balding grandpa a comb as a gift. "Thanks", he said, "I'll never part with it."

After years and countless millions spent by balding men to disguise their genetic fate, there remains only one drug treatment proven (according to Food and Drug Administration guidelines) to reverse hair loss. Rogaine, formerly available only by prescription, now is available over the counter to anyone with that unfortunate synergy of genetics and gender that we call male pattern baldness. Hemp Dogbane has been teasing me lately about my receding hairline and the increased frequency of sunburn on my pate; since he never washes, combs, or cuts his hair, it's hard to tell if his is falling out or not.

The Independent Television News from London carried a story last week about this year's initiation ceremonies for a "bald man's club" in Europe (Belgium, I think). Among pomp and circumstance equal to our recent coronation, bald men pledge never to attempt by any means whatsoever to reverse their baldness. Fortunately for UpJohn, the makers of Rogaine, that sentiment is reserved to a minority of middle aged balding men. Unfortunately for another baldies club, the hair club, this drug seems to work for many users.

Most male baldness is attributable to the action of male sex hormones in connection with baldness genes. Women with baldness genotypes do not grow bald, though their hair may thin a bit with advancing years. The cell biology of hair production is not sufficiently well understood to enable scientists to design a drug specifically to counteract hair loss. Instead, Rogaine is the chemical that causes arteries to dilate, thereby reducing high blood pressure, and is used in treating hypertensive patients, as a last resort because of significant side effects (in addition to becoming a werewolf.) Since other arterial dilators cause hair growth as a side effect, perhaps increased blood flow to hair-producing follicles is the mechanism of action. It is likely, though unproven, that minoxidil also interferes with the action of testosterone on follicles, either as an inhibitor or inducer of gene expression.

Hair loss is one hot research area yielding to the methods of biotechnology, so more news should be forthcoming. I met a bald Japanese fellow in India last fall who claimed that his country's scientists had perfected the "cure" and that the drug would be commercialized within two years. (one more year to go!) Perhaps it's an example, to borrow the words Samuel Johnson used to describe second marriages, of "the triumph of hope over experience."

If sufficient loyal Archway readers submit topics that we feature in the column, they will be eligible for a drawing worth 25 dollars in points. result of scientific serendipity (luck); patients taking the drug minoxidil for hypertension found, as a side effect, that they grew more and darker hair all over their bodies. UpJohn scientists reasoned that a topical application to the scalp would grow hair just in the right places; that strategy worked well in about 26% of cases and moderately in about 30% of cases during clinical trials of the drug. So Rogaine is simply a topical ointment made from minoxidil. The label specifically warns the user to avoid spilling the drug on the face or hands (except during Halloween).

How does it work? Minoxidil is a

First glance...

Kerri St. Jacques and Frank Margosian

Now that the semester is in full swing, we'd like to introduce to you our new article in The Archway. For those of you who do not know much about Rhode Island, this could be a guide to some of Rhode Island's new places to hang out and some interesting places to visit. For those of you who are from Rhode Island, then this could be a guide for you to check out new places that you never knew existed.

Every other week we will review a new movie, a restaurant, a club, and any other interesting happenings that are going on in Rhode Island or that are kept secrets. This week we decided to keep it simple - saw a movie and eat at a new restaurant. Since our personalities are on opposite ends of the spectrum, some conflicts of views may occur. The movie we (or Kerri actually) decided to see was The First Wives Club. Below is our take of how the movie was perceived.

Frank: I did not want to see this movie because I like adventure movies and did not want to see a movie about a bunch of divorced women. I knew that it wasn't going to go my way, so I went along with my partner anyway. You know how women can be, so I let Kerri make the decisions for the day. The movie is rated PG (I usually don't see anything less than R). Well anyway, enough about that let's get to the movie.

Kerri: I entered the movie excited about writing my first article for The Archway, until the fight occurred about the seating arrangement. First, his seat was broken, and then he sat in a wet seat. So we moved seats about three times before getting comfortable. Then he embarrassed me by shouting out the answers to all of the trivia questions that were shown on the screen of the Showcase Cinema.

Frank: So I like to have fun when I go out. Besides, I don't think that it is relevant. By the way your seat was broken; I was already comfortable. I like trivia, and at least I knew all of the answers. Anyway, the movie starts out with four characters. All four have been friends since college, and grew up to live rich lives. However, the main theme here is that they were all eventually divorced. Bette Midler does an outstanding performance as Brenda - the outgoing, wants to save the world Jewish woman - who cares about others and is sensitive to others' needs. Many of us can identify with her. Annie, portrayed by Diane Keaton, is a timid woman who is afraid to speak her mind and sees a therapist. She seems intimidated by the people around her and likes to please others. Finally, Elise, played by Goldie Hawn, is an actress who is way past her prime and wants to reclaim her past beauty.

Kerri: I basically agree with you, Frank, about the characters of the film. All of them gave excellent performances and none really out did the others. It was almost like buddy films that the men are usually in for action movies. All of the women have the characteristics that Frank explained due to their husband's control. Each one was dumped for a younger woman. The women bond together to get back at their husbands. The popular phrase used throughout the movie was "Don't get mad. Get everything." I thought that the movie was excellent and well worth the time because of the famous cast and due to a well written screenplay.

Frank: I don't think the husbands were in control; I just thought they were pigs. I don't want to give away the gist of the movie, so I won't say anything further, but I will say that this movie is one that is worth seeing. It completely changed my opinion; guys if you get married, don't get divorced! It's a movie filled with joy, sadness, and adventure, too!

Now, for those of you who like dining out, we ventured to the new Ninety Nine Restaurant in Cranston. The manager, John Simoes, took the time to sit down with us and answer some questions concerning the restaurant. He also provided us with some information about the establishment.

The original Ninety Nine Restaurant was established in 1952 by Charles Doe, Sr. at 99 State Street in Boston. On the day the restaurant opened, Doe's wife presented him with a horseshoe for good luck. To this day, the horseshoe has been a symbol of the restaurant. Ninety Nine Restaurants are known as "The Best Deal in Town" for their great food at reasonable prices. It was the first restaurant to provide a casual family atmosphere (before TGIF Fridays, Ground Round, and Applebees). 95% of the items on the menu does not sell for over $10. The Ninety Nine Restaurant to which we went opened on August 19, 1996, at 1171 New London Avenue in Cranston; it's the first in Rhode Island.

Kerri: As I was being seated at our table, I couldn't help but take in the casual atmosphere that Ninety Nine tries so hard to promote. It takes the appearance of a family bar and grill. While one is eating, they are surrounded by TV sets showing sports, and the background music plays today's hits. It targets all ages, catering to family by day and young adults by night.

Frank: As I approached our table, all I could notice was the red blinking Bud-Lite pins that the waitresses were wearing. Since Bud-Lite is my favorite beer, I knew this place would be tasty. Our waitress, Cathy, was very pleasant and knew quite a bit about the menu. She answered my questions with ease, and her service was quick and efficient. To start off, I had a Quesadilla, with spinach, cheese, tomato, sour cream, and salsa. The portion was of good size was filling. For my main meal, I decided on the Buffalo Chicken Sandwich. It was served on a bulky roll with lettuce, tomato, and a side of bleu cheese dressing. The sauce was not hot, but mild, and had a nice taste to it. Instead of french fries, potato chips, soup, or a salad, which are the choices to go along with any "sensational sandwich," the waitress offered me a baked potato, which I chose in place of the above. Although the baked potato was good, I wished it had come sliced with cheese, bacon, and scallions, all of which I like on my baked potatoes. Since it was lunch time, I did not have a beer, but a Coke. I was upset that there were no free refills, as there are at other establishments equal to this one. Overall, my experience was good, and I would recommend it to people who like to go out to eat and are on a budget.

Kerri: I was quite impressed with the service of the restaurant. I ordered a Turkey Club for $4.99. It is my usual when I go out to eat (so I can compare restaurants). The food was very good and the service was prompt. Other foods of interest are appetizers such as Boneless Buffalo Wings for $5.99, pizza (ranging from $4.99 to $6.99), soups and salads (ranging from $2.99 to $6.99), steaks and prime rib (ranging from $8.99 to $12.99), chicken (ranging from $5.49 to $10.99), burgers (ranging from $4.99 to $6.49), seafood (ranging from $6.99 to $9.99), pasta (ranging from $7.99 to $9.29), and sensational sandwiches (ranging from $4.99 to $5.99). To end our meal, we chose the Brownie Sundae for dessert, which I had the unfortunate pleasure of sharing with Frank.

Frank: Thanks, Kerri, for that run-down on prices. However, you are the one who asked me to share your dessert with you.

Kerri: I don't know if you recall, Frank, but you said that you were too full for a sundae after you pigged out, so I ordered one for myself. The waitress came with two spoons, and you just had to jump in and eat it!

Frank: You are the one who suggested that I jump in because you built a wall with the ice cream, saying that "that is your side and this is my side."

Kerri: Whatever, Frank!

Frank: Glad you agree and finally admit it!

Kerri: What do you have to conclude this article?

Frank: Well first of all, since this weekend is Parents' weekend, I thought we could share some other tidbits about Rhode Island, such as other places to eat and see.

Another restaurant to visit this weekend is the always popular Parente's, right next door to Bryant. For Italian food, I recommend Marchetti's in Cranston. For pizza, there is Caserta's Pizza on Federal Hill, off Atwells Avenue in Providence. For hot wieners, there is the New York System in Olneyville in Providence, or on Reservoir Ave in Cranston. For breakfast, I like the ever popular Bickford's or Shoney's. For Chinese food, there are many, but my favorite is the Phoenix Inn in West Warwick. For late night dining or drinking, there is the Players' Corner Pub in Providence as well.

For students and parents alike, you may want to check out some of Rhode Island's favorites, you can visit these places this weekend if you feel like exploring Rhode Island or coming back for a vacation. With a re-invented city of Providence, there is lots going on. For the site-seeing individual, one may want to check out "Providence by Foot," which explores Providence's old and new sites. Call 751-6643 for more information.

Also check out Waterplace Park - a nice place to walk, run, relax, or even take a kayak ride down the river. Providence is a great city to visit. If you like the theater, there is much going on in Providence. At the Providence Performing Arts Center, Les Miserables is coming. This classic Broadway original makes it way to PPAC from October 22-27. Also check out Trinity Repertory Company's Sylvia, Angels in America Part I: Millennium, and Angels in America Part II: Perestroika. Also, if you want to travel back to medieval times, check out King Richard's Faire in Cumberland. Times vary, but it runs through much of the fall months.

If comedy is your thing, check out the Comedy Connection in East Providence. Every Friday night, Frank Santos, the R-rated hypnotist, will make you laugh so hard that it hurts. Also, if you don't know too much about Rhode Island, there is Charlie Hall's Ocean State Follies, a musical/satirical look at Rhode Island. It runs every Friday and Saturday night at the Great House in Warwick and at other selected locations during the week.

For those of you looking for something scary, but with a dinner/theater theme, you may want to look at Murder on Us Murder Mystery Theater at The Barnsider on South Main Street in Providence. The production this year is "Murder at Frankenstein's Castle." If you really want to be scared, then I suggest visiting Halloween Land and The Enchanted Playground on 575 Centerville Road in Warwick. For information, please call 823-5566. All proceeds from this haunted happening go to benefit the ImPossible Dream, an organization that makes dreams come true for children who are disabled or terminally ill. On a side note, let me mention that this location is also the home of the John Florio Memorial Park, Rhode Island's only playground that is accessible for disabled and terminally ill children. Volunteers are always needed for events and donations are always in need, so if you want to help call the number above.

Rhode Island is a well-rounded place with many interesting things to see and do. Throughout the course of the year, we will bring to you new places that are unknown to both out-of-staters and natives. So parents, if you want an alternative to the great events that Parents' Weekend provides, check out the rest of Rhode Island. If anyone needs more information about anything mentioned or you have questions, comments, ideas and/or suggestions, feel free to e-mail Kerri at KSS1@acad.bryant.edu or Frank at FAM333@aol.com.

Toward an ethic of responsibility and altruism

As we enter Parents' and Family Weekend, it is important to reflect on the relationships that are important to us. Certainly our relationships with our parents, siblings and other relatives are important to us. Also important are those people who are not related to us, but who have become important to us over time, such as significant others and mentors. Today I'm going to suggest that we consider our contributions to the relationships that are important to us and suggest that we consider expanding our circle of important people to include more members of our campus community.

Some weeks ago, I commented on my concerns regarding those students among us who instead of using compassion and reason to solve their problems, prefer to use "fighting words" or physical violence. In truth, this is not the most important issue facing our campus, but it is reflective of the need for an ethic of responsibility and altruism at Bryant - an ethic that has been lacking far too often. By an ethic of responsibility and altruism, I am not referring to the need for more students to involve themselves in public service activities. We have our Greek community to hold as an example of a significant commitment to public service. Instead, I am referring to the ways we speak to each other on campus, the way we carry ourselves on the intramural fields, and the respect we show to other students, staff and faculty. These windows on our behavior and attitudes tell much more about our character than our willingness to participate in public service activity, important as those activities are.

From My Corner

F. J. Talley
Dean of Students

It is my belief that all relationships need to be nurtured to grow to their full potential. Just as our relationships with our family members have required nurturing and sacrifice, particularly by our parents, so will our current relationships require that we give of ourselves unselfishly if they are to grow in ways beneficial to everyone. Perhaps this is what we're not doing - giving unselfishly to those around us. And perhaps this small change can improve the quality of our relationships and our lives at Bryant. If so, the next step to improving the quality of relationships here belongs to all of us.

The next time we find ourselves in a disagreement with another person, student, staff or faculty member, let's resolve to spend more time trying to understand the other person's point of view, rather than finding more forceful ways to explain our own. We have a right to take from our relationships only as much as we've given to them. This give and take is what weaves the wonderful fabric of human relationships. If we resolve to listen just one more time before responding, or to think of another person's needs rather than our own, we may gain a glimpse of what Bryant can be with a true ethic of responsibility and altruism. And we'll gain that glimpse through putting other people first.

Putting other people first can really help improve the quality of relationships. It can make Bryant a much better place in which to live and work. And this tremendous benefit can result from only a little bit of sacrifice from each one of us. Just ask your parents - they know all about that.

FEATURES

Avoid the freshmen fifteen: change your eating habits

Food ranks right up there with the great sensual pleasures of life. But, for those of us who are trying to control our weight, our relationship with food all too often is a love-hate one. Sometimes we feel like "we can't live with it, but can't live without it." The good news is that you can live happily with your favorite foods and still control your weight by making simple changes in the way that you think about eating in general.

Why You Eat?

If we ate when we were truly hungry, chances are that few of us would have weight problems. But we often eat when we are bored, frustrated, lonely, sad, and so on. We may also eat to be polite- we don't want to "offend" our hostess, our mother, whomever. When we regularly use food as a substitute "solution" for the real problem at hand, weight gain almost always follows. Begin by changing your relationship with food by asking yourself "Why do I want to eat? Am I really hungry?" Be honest with yourself, and if you're not really hungry, don't eat.

How You Eat

Are you a snacker? Do you munch while you are watching TV? Sample while you cook? If so, you may be taking in far more calories that you realize. A cookie here and a bag of chips there can add up to excess weight. One way to avoid "automatic" eating is to agree to only eat while seated at a dining table- in a kitchen, restaurant, or cafeteria. You'll eliminate unnecessary snacking and will probably only make the effort to eat when you are really hungry.

What You Eat

You may still have weight problems if you don't consider what you eat. When choosing foods, remember that the main reason we need to eat is to supply our bodies with fuel for energy. Sugary snacks and refined processed foods are generally low in nutrients, high in calories, and fail to satisfy hunger for a significant length of time. For weight control and health, select complex carbohydrates (fresh fruit, vegetables, and whole grains) and low-fat foods such as lean meat, poultry without skin, fish, dried beans and peas, and low- or non-fat dairy products.

How To Burn Calories

Are you active? Do you exercise vigorously for at least 20 minutes three times a week? If so, you know the second half of the weight control story-burning calories through activity. In addition to exercising regularly, you learn to burn excess calories by sneaking in extra activity throughout your day (see last week's article). Increasing your activity level increases the amount of calories you burn and is a critical part of healthy weight control.

Weighing The Benefits

Once you have made some simple changes in your eating and exercise habits, you'll be on your way to becoming a trimmer, fitter, healthier you. By changing the way that you think about eating and by becoming more active throughout your day, you can help yourself lose weight and keep it off for good.

What is NAICS?

The Standard Industrial Classification (SIC) code system, developed by our government in the 1930's, has been used since then as a tool for classifying products and industries in order to determine the growth or decline of particular industries and the overall health of the general economy. It has also been a vital marketing tool for any businessperson attempting to discern market potential in a particular industry. This classification system was adequate for describing industries and products existing within a manufacturing and agricultural economy, but it has now become obsolete for two reasons: (1.) The dynamic growth of new service, information, and technology industries, which do not easily fit into the current revised code development have been written in ECPC issues papers and published in the Federal Register. A fundamental debate centered around the question of whether to develop the code for uses that imply a production-oriented concept or for uses that imply a demand-based concept. Along with this central issue, three other questions were posted to the public, industry groups, and advisory committees: (1.) Is a consistent concept for economic classification desirable?; (2.) Are multiple systems feasible or desirable; and (3.) Is the implementation of a consistent economic concept in a classification system feasible? Why should business owners be concerned with how the code develops? One good reason for concern is the fact that the codes are used by policy makers to define regulations affecting particular industries. Such definitions describe which businesses will classify in particular industries eligible for bids or grants.

Off the Shelf

Colleen Anderson
Reference Librarian

According to a recent article by Jennifer Boettcher, Business Reference Librarian at Texas A&M University, the ECPC has decided to use the following guidelines for developing the new system:

(1.) NAICS will use a production-oriented conceptual framework; i.e., the establishment classification will be based on similar production processes.

(2.) Special attention will be given to emerging industries, service industries, and industries engaged in advanced technologies.

(3.) Time series continuity will try to be maintained.

(4.) Compatibility with the two-digit level of the International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities (ISIC, Rev. 3) of the United Nations will be attempted.

To learn more about the transition from SIC to NAICS, see the NAICS homepage at <<http://blue.census.gov/epcd/www/naics.html>>.

The Mad Sage Moves On

Myron Gorham
Archway Staff Writer

He entered the town with the enthusiasm of a young child entering an amusement park. He had a pocket full of cash, but you could smell his odorous stench permeating through the air. He must not have bathed in days.

He walked to the center of the town and stopped. He looked around and decided, that was where he was to rest before continuing his journey to his new life. He was unbothered by people's reactions to his stink; he took it as a compliment. One man, putting aside his politeness and manners, blurted-out, "You stink so bad that you just scared off a skunk."

He replied, "I smell sweeter than a rose. You say I stink because you can't stand my smell. But I want my smell to spread, even beyond this place. I want my smell to infect the world, as you want your smell to disinfect me so that we will be of the same. Smell my stink.... Take it in through the nose and let it travel up."

"You are a bum. Why don't you just get a job?.... here get a shower somewhere because your smell doesn't go up but down, and I think I'm getting sick to my stomach." The man gave him a dollar, more as a joke than to actually help.

He took the dollar and put it in his pocket. The man, who was watching saw that his pockets were full of money. "What's this? You have all that money and smell so bad.... You must be a drunk."

"Yes I am drunk on my smell, and soon the rest of the world will be also."

"You mean passed-out, don't you?"

"Have you noticed that you have become immune to my smell now. It is in you. Soon you too will be drunk on my smell."

"I don't think so! What I do think is that you're crazy."

"Yes, in a sane world.... I guess I am."

The man then left, reluctant to ask for his dollar back. Besides, it was just a dollar. He left this poor fool to ponder in his own deluded filth.

After resting for a little while, he got up off the bench, which he just took a nap on with his smell prompting people to call the police on him for vagrancy. But before the police could arrive, he was gone.

His smell lingered but he had moved on.

Six Encounters With A Wise Man

"He who crosses the line in darkness often encounters the brightest light."

"Life is a circle; it never truly ends."

"You might be as solid as a mountain, but even a mountain can crumble to the ground."

"Only when your mind is free like the ocean can it sustain life."

"Like the bird, you can fly, but only, if first, you clip your wings."

"The mirror is a liar to self-forged eyes."

UNITED WAY AND FUND FOR COMMUNITY PROGRESS CAMPAIGN

The United Way and Fund for Community Progress Campaign is well underway. At this time approximately 90 employees have contributed, bringing us to 57% of our goal, but we can do more. As you know, these two organizations have a significant impact on several health, human service, and educational agencies throughout this region. Their effectiveness depends heavily upon our generosity.

Payroll deduction is a convenient and painless way to make a contribution. Donor forms can be obtained from any of the committee members. Forms should be returned no later than November 18, to one of the members of the committee listed below.

Thanks to all who have participated!

Committee members: Bill Baker, Carla Gardner, Guimar Melo, Rosanne Dana, Frank Arena, Leslie Bucci, Jane St. Onge, and Patrick Keeley.

We would like welcome our new pledge class of this year. Congrats to Geno, Colter, Nick, Gus, A.J., Dan, Nole, Greg, Charlie, and Rich. This week, Bush Gardens was the place to be. BOAC

Bryan D. Magnus

Hey you! Yeah you; the one who doesn't think BOAC has anything to offer them. Let me tell you a little secret: YOU ARE WRONG! The only reason that people get to thinking that clubs on this campus don't have any reason to exist is because they never get around to finding exactly what the club is all about. Interested in BOAC yet? Probably not, because I haven't told you about the free money give away yet. But you are going to have to come to one of our meetings to find out about that.

Well, I can't force you to come to our meetings, at least not through the paper, but I can tell you what you are missing out on. We are in the process of planning several different trips, for skiing, hiking, biking, etc. We are also looking to see what kind of demonstrations (like bike repair) people would be interested in seeing, and so much more.

Whether you come to this Thursday's meeting at 5 p.m. in room 2B or not, my life will go unchanged, however, so will yours.

Delta Zeta

Nicole Greenlaw

The Sisters of Delta Zeta are excited to tuck you in. See your favorite sister for a good TUCK! I hope everyone had a great weekend. J2 - We're glad that you all are OK.

Thanks Damian for playing Mr. FixIt last week. Apollo. Thanks to Dorm 10 for Thursday. We'll definitely have to do it again. Back Suite brought out the animal in us all. Mark showed us the full moon; the bathroom is out of order.

Phi Kap-Thirsty? Bazil finally met Moulder. Derrick, there was no film in the camera-Bazil. To Meridian: My hero-Darbi. Thanks to Philly and Alberto for Friday- the three of us. Congrats TKE for a successful rush! Charles thanks for a place to crash-Jaycee. Cleo, SIX times!?! Reggie wants to thank "Spike" for Saturday night; you better watch out.

Wesli, now that we know RI like the back of our hands, I hope we never have to do it again-Joker.

GAMMA

Emmanuelle Accad

Hello everybody! I hope that everyone enjoyed the long weekend. Now it's back to business. Let me begin by thanking Delta Zeta, Sigma Sigma Sigma, Theta Phi Alpha, Delta Chi, Phi Kappa Tau, Kappa Delta Phi, Tau Epsilon Phi and Beta Theta Pi for representing themselves at our meeting last week and getting involved with our future events.

We are all busy getting prepared for Eileen Stevens to come speak next Wednesday October 23, at 8:00 p.m. in Janikies Auditorium. We hope to see every organization there to support our co-sponsored event with Student Activities' membership education series. In addition to the speaker next week, we have a meeting on Thursday, October 24. Watch for signs with details as far as time and place are concerned.

Until next week, thanks to all for your support and best of luck to all chapters and new members through the new membership education process.

Kappa Delta Phi

We are still waiting for additional possible top ten suggestions... If anybody has any, please call 4030, and there is a good chance that it will get in the paper. In the meantime, we have just finished off Columbus Day weekend, and everyone went home.... When this paper is read on Thursday, October 17, 1996, I, David Kaplan (Flow-Bee) will be 21. That's right, and I'll be in hiding... Anyway, let's do last weekend...

Last Thursday was a kickin' good time. We started off with a Happy Hour with Tri Sig. We then had a brief intermission and checked out the townhouses, only to move back to our party with Tri-Sig. It was a blast. There was the usual amount of table hopping, only there were some new faces... Latenight, there was one straggler in particular who earned a lot of Delta Points. We all had a great time and hope to do it again.

Friday brought about good news. Wheeler came up from Georgia to say he will be spending the rest of the semester up in Rhode Island. This news has us all excited. The rest of Friday saw all of us take off in all different directions with gigantic laundry bags (people holding out on laundry). Chris and I shot down to New Haven/Woodbridge, and then back... Saturday... Flounder, Ben, Ryan, and Chase rolled a game; I heard that Chase lost, although there are no real losers. Speaking of which, Stressy still owes me and Rinaldo a game.... Things on my mind... Should someone get kicked off of someone else's floor for spilling water? I don't think so. And you thought water was bad... Well, I know what you are all saying: "Get to it." Well, here we go... Coming straight out of Cleveland, Ohio, Delta's top 10 list... TOP 10 REASONS WHY NOBODY ISEVERSEENSWIMMINGIN THE POOL.

10) There's a pool?
9) You just never really have your bathing suit on when you are in the Unistructure, do you?

8) The Science Department is always dumping their hydrochloric acid in there.

7) Under the slight possibility that it is connected to the pond, people tend to be apprehensive about going in (a complex syndrome commonly referred to as pondophobia).

6) It's not the water but, instead, the security clearance to get in the pool area that's the real problem.

5) POOL RULES: You have to be under 5 feet tall, or of a minimum sixty years of age to jump in.

4) People do actually go swimming all of the time, but Sandy, with a little help from his computer, can unrefract the light, and in doing so, manipulate the images of the people in the pool to the effect that they are virtually invisible to the naked eye. In order to see people in the pool, look for motion in the water, a clear giveaway.

3) Do you know anybody who went swimming.... and lived to tell about it?

2) People at Bryant fear the waterways of this school. There is a prevalent nightmare that causes all of this anxiety, which involves being sucked through the pool and out of the fountain. Although there is no proof that the pool has anything to do with the fountain, it is more than just coincidence that the pool has a lot of water and the fountain shoots a lot of water; sketchy, isn't it?

1) Its deep man... really really deep man... You dig, Daddio?

Remember... I need suggestions. Call 4030, and leave your suggestion for future top 10 lists. Say, "Hey, Flow-Bee, tell me the top ten reasons why..... (you fill in this part)," and then I'll get back to you in next week's paper... Well, good luck to all!

Men's Rugby

Mike Bailey

What was left of the rugby team lost it's first home game this past Saturday. Thanks to all of the ruggers who stayed. The team should have known that the weekend would be bad by how it started. The lucky streak went through the weekend. Brian, Snoop, and Half-time scored their first Tries during the B game. Pat had good luck at the Strand and bad luck on the way back. The Friday crew had fun watching the paint dry. Their was no one home at JW on Sunday. The patty wagon pulled over the full boat. Timmy is a Californian at heart, the boy loves to surf. Got caught low-riding, to end off this lucky weekend.

some opportunities for employment that exist in their organization. It certainly was quite an experience for us all. We were allowed to ask questions on the demands that State Troopers face in the law enforcement field. If you'd like further information on the employment opportunities available through the RI State Police, please contact the Multicultural Student Services Office in the Unistruecture.

Our next meeting will be held on Wednesday in Bryant Center Room 2A. As always, everyone is welcome to come!

of a 300 pound Simoan. At the show we saw some of our long lost brothers; Chiggi and Sean, where have you been?

Last Thursday, we watched the movie "Rumble in the Bronx," starring Chuck D. The movie ended up with Chuck D being stuck in a box AGAIN. For some unknown reason, every week Chucky seems to be stuck in some kind of box.

Last Friday night, we had a surprise for all the rushes and they seemed to enjoy themselves more than the brothers. Jon where did your buttons go? Nick and Brian had a sweet road soda as well as Reeves; hope you guys enjoyed it. Irish, you can't come and get off of my hood. Tommy had a banana split for desert last Friday as well; he said it was the best of his life—too bad it cost 5 bucks. Wista has a new lucky quarter. "Wow look at all of those beads." It was a wild night; hope that everyone had a good time.

Last Saturday was a slow evening for all but a few of us. Tommy, some advice for you: "7th grade, that's right 7th grade."

On a more serious note we would like to congratulate the new associate members Jon, Billy, Reeves, Greg, Brian, Nick, and the two Mikes. KT TOP DOG!

The Bryant Players

Meagan Mirkovich

Happy Parents' Weekend! The Bryant Players will be performing two plays this weekend. "The Trysting Place" will be performed on Friday at 7 p.m. and Saturday at 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. "Country Gothic" will be performed on Friday at 8 p.m. and Saturday at 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. All performances will take place in Janikies Auditorium. The casts have worked hard to bring these fine performances to you, and we hope that everyone stops by with their families.

A special "Break a Leg" goes out to both casts! Congratulations to the cast members who will be making their debut with the Players: Heather Martin, Jen Warren, Kerri St. Jacques, Jessica Trent, Ken Wakefield, Robert Eddy, Christina Moreno, Erik Stumpf, Rick Boles, and Jeff Grover!

In other news: South Dining Hall definitely brings out the talent in the cast. Phil, Rob, Bryan, and Don didn't have to go far to get their shopping done. Outsiders are afraid of the amount of milk and cookies J1 has. David's going out next year, it really won't be easy! Baseball anyone?

Overheard: "The emotion award goes to...Rob!"

Congratulations to all newly selected committee chairpeople. All of your help is greatly appreciated. A reminder to the Bryant Community, this Thursday is SAA Night at the Junction. Cover Charge is $1 and Brian Apple's Band, Warehouse will be performing. At next week's SAA meeting, we will be participating in the Challenge by Choice Course. For this reason, next week's meeting will be held at 3:30 instead of 5:00. We will be meeting at the Alumni House first.

This Thursday before the Junction, the Rhode Island Chapter will hold a meeting at 6:30 p.m. in Papitto. All who are interested are urged to contact Susan or Liisa. Finally, any Bryant student who is interested in participating in Junior Achievement may contact Susan Detri-Souve at the Alumni House. Good luck on mid-terms. We'll see you next week!

week. Rick Smith, Vice President of Human Resources at Fleet Bank, will be our Guest Speaker. Mr. Smith will be discussing "Climbing the Corporate Ladder and What to do When You Get There." Free pizza and soda will be served. Don't forget, Tuesday, October 22, at 4 p.m., in the Bryant Center, Room 2A. One more thing, if you are interested in becoming a member, it is not too late; stop by the meeting for an application. Hope to see you all there.

Delta. Hey guys, they're just like us. Hey Heidi, I thought you said you could do it. You all were great, you kept going and going and going... Thanks Delta for our mini get-together Saturday. We hope that we weren't any trouble; we owe you one. Hey Sarah, "yah, I'm She-ra." I swear, everything is a project! No, we just want the ten bucks. "I can't stay out of trouble."

Now for this week. From what I hear, Thursday night was a blast, we're gonna have to make it an annual tradition. You're all under arrest. I wish I could have been there but Dave Matthew's was definitely worth the trip, right Stacey (Mario Andretti), Levy, and Bartlett? How about those cab rides? Guys, I think we're a little too crazy for this place; I christened the bathroom. Gina, I heard you were a mad woman that night, you too Angela. Hey Christina, he wants you, I know it. Thanks Delta for the happy time!

Gina, I'm sorry, Huey and I thought no one was around - Susan. Hey Tonya, there's a no trespassing sign across this - Nikki. Who ever has my dolphin, I want it back—that means you J8. To all my sisters, have a great week, and I love you all! - Tonya. Thanks Jamie for Sunday, I had a good time; love them apples. Happy 21st Maureen, you finally made it; make it a good one!

That's it for this week, have a great week, and, if you're not already, eat a banana, things might change! Check ya later - Ivy May!

SPB

Jeff Hill

Hello again everyone. I hope you all enjoyed the long weekend and are all ready to get back to work.

Parents' weekend is coming up. Make sure you check out all of the fun activities that will be going on all over campus. As for the Student Programming Board, we would like to thank everyone who came out to see "Courage Under Fire" this past weekend. We hope you enjoyed it. For this upcoming week, SPB has Pumpkin Decorating on Thursday the 24, from 11 a.m. till 2 p.m. on the Bryant Center Commons. Make sure you come down and check it out. Also, the weekend starting the 26, SPB will be showing the major motion picture hit "The Rock."

Our next meeting will be held on Monday the 21, at 4:30 p.m. in Papitto Dining Hall. Hope to see you all there. Have a great week.

Theta Phi Alpha

Francis Housman

Hey Theta! I hope everyone had a good week. I'm tired of studying. Exams will be over soon. Come meet the Sisters on Thursday October 17, at 7:30 p.m. We live on the third floor of Dorm 3, and on Thursday you will find us in the 330's.

Congratulations to the new pledge brothers of Beta! Thanks for coming up on Thursday—it was nice to meet everyone! We had fun at the townhouses later. Otovic was in the bathroom looking for a pony-o (a scrunchie to the rest of the world). Pixie, just go in the shower! Kendall, thanks for walking me home—love Otovic.

For those who were still here on Friday we had a lot of fun. It was good to see Rajah—even though she cheats with Murrae! Orange juice was a good idea, although everything was a little sticky later! Thanks for coming, Beta and TEP! All you can eat KFC is a waste of money!

Happy Birthday to Kianna again!

Larry was looking out for you, but those of us who didn't get you a present on Sunday will bring you to Parente's next weekend!

Nikki and Jolie commentate on movies! And they also got two small pets—The Shumachers (Sylvia and Sydney!). I just hope they don't die, because they certainly can't be flushed! And last but not least, Comixx has a secret! You didn't hear it from me! Lata Theta!

Hello everyone, I hope that you all had a great Columbus Day weekend. I thought it was good to get away for a few days. Now we must all prepare to see our parents again this weekend, be sure to get rid of any incriminating evidence—just kidding. I'd like to welcome our national representative, Sue Miller, who is visiting us this week. She'll be here until Monday so be sure to say "hi" if you should see her.

Sorry about last week, Tuesday just flew by and I completely forgot, but hey, it happens. So first I have to say a few things that would have gone in last week. Thanks KT for a great time on Thursday; we can definitely tip canoes better, though. I'd like to say thanks to Charles for costing us each $5; you gotta watch those muscles there, tough guy—just kidding, buddy. Friday night was definitely a great time; thanks to everyone who stopped by—Beta, KT, TKE, and

SPORTS

Men's soccer back on track

This past week, the men's soccer team split their last three games, tying Assumption, losing to Lemoyne and beating Saint Rose. Mark Sokolski got Bryant on the board against Assumption off a pass from Mark Gollwitzer. Assumption scored twice to go up 2-1 before Billy Guthrie put home a rebound to tie the game. Assumption went ahead 3-2 before Mark Gollwitzer scored off a Chris Anderson shot to tie the game and send it into overtime, where Assumption scored to take the lead. Mark Sokolski scored his second of the game to even the score 4-4. Chris Benjamin recorded seven saves in net. The team lost to Lemoyne 3-0 before rebounding to stomp Saint Rose College 5-0. Solid defense led the way as freshman Dan Cain stopped all 6 Saint Rose shots. Junior Jared Dewey scored the first two goals of the game off passes from Neal Johnson and Jeff Baker. John Hennessey scored from Johnson to put the Bulldogs up 3-0 at half-time. Bryant came out strong in the second half, as Scott Mann placed a free kick into the left corner of the net. Then Dewey took a pass from Baker and finished off the scoring with his third goal of the game. The men's team will head to Vermont this weekend to play conference foe Saint Michael's. A win here is crucial for the team to qualify for the conference tournament, as the Bulldogs have a 5-6-1 record (1-4-1 conference). Dewey is currently third in the conference in scoring with 12 goals and 2 assists.

Women's tennis holds off Le Moyne

Le Tien
Sports Editor

The Women's Tennis team held on last Sunday to defeat Le Moyne 4-3 in a closely played tennis match. Lisa Sarandopolis (Marblehead, MA) continues to lead the team as she rolled to an easy 6-1, 6-3 victory in first singles. The victory was her fifth in a row and improved the senior captain's record to an impressive 8-3.

Sarandopolis and her doubles partner, sophomore Jen Kiellar, won 8-3 in first doubles improving their overall record to 7-4. Jen Flaherty also won in convincing fashion as she cruised to a 6-0, 6-1 win in sixth doubles.

On her own or with her partner Lisa Sarandopolis gets the job done with her serve.

Women's soccer redeems itself

Deborah Kerr

After a rainy 4-0 loss to Assumption last week, the lady Bulldogs came back strong to beat a tough Lemoyne team 3-0 last Sunday. Lemoyne's defense was no contest for Bryant's controlling offense. All of the Bulldogs scoring occurred in the first half of the game. Senior captain, Beth Guay, scored the only goal- needed to win the game- off an assist from junior captain, Alison Farley. Then sophomore rookie, Kathy Harrison, added two more goals assisted by Rachel Minott and Farley. Stephanie Smith had an outstanding game with 12 recorded saves to earn her second shut out for the season. Bryant's overall record has now improved to 4-6-2.

This Thursday, the women of Bryant soccer will be battling New Haven at an away game, and this Parents' Weekend they will be up in Vermont playing St. Michael's. Congratulations again and good luck this week.

Women's volleyball on a roll

Le Tien
Sports Editor

The Women's Volleyball team sweep of Le Moyne and Quinnipiac last Saturday pushed Bryant right back into the thick of things in the NE-10. Led by junior standout, Jennifer Carvahlo's 72 assists, 26 digs, and three aces, Bryant improved to 9-7 overall and 4-2 in the NE-10. Other top performers include, Janet Ronney and the Alicia Cadlick. The junior and senior forwards added 27 and 25 kills respectively.

After being on the road for most of the season, Bryant will be home for the next two weeks, with matches against Rhode Island College on Friday (Oct. 18), Merrimack (Oct. 22) and the Bryant Halloween Classic next weekend.

Games of the Week

Auburn at Florida

Can anyone stop the Gators? LSU bragged that they could and the Gators handed them a 56-13 beating. But Auburn is different, and they are the only team to have beaten the Gators at the Swamp in the last 24 SEC games. I'm sure Florida coach Steve Spurrier remembers that. Florida big! Florida 45 Auburn 13

USC at Arizona St.

Maybe the Sun Devils are for real after all. Led by QB Jake "The Snake" Plummer, Arizona St. pulled off a great come from behind victory last Saturday against UCLA. As for USC, Jerry Robinson should have his ball club ready for a 60 minute battle. Arizona St. 26 USC 24.

Northwestern at Wisconsin This should be a great Big Ten matchup as two top programs collide in cheese country. Wisconsin come off of a huge emotional effort against Ohio St., where they actually could have and probably should have won the football game. The Badgers dominated the both sides of the line, and this week it should be no different. Northwestern, however, won't fall over to the Wisconsin's steamroll attempt. The Wildcats can play physical ball and they've proven that they know how to win, just ask Michigan if you don't believe me. A close ball game with big plays deciding the outcome. With that, the advantage goes to the Wildcats. Northwestern 18 Wisconsin 17.

New England at Indianapolis

The Pats can gain redemption this week after losing to the 'Skins last week at home. Playing at the RCA dome won't help their cause, neither will facing a confident and division leading Colts team. Newly acquired Keith Byars might be ready to play for the Pats, if so, that's another weapon for Drew Bledsoe, who needs to have a good game for the Pats to win. Indianapolis in a close one. Indy 24 NE 20

ATHLETE of the WEEK

The Sharon, MA native scored three goals in a route of St. Rose (NY) on Monday. In doing so, Dewey recorded his fourth multiple-goal game of the year. The explosive junior forward now leads the team in scoring with 26 points, the most by a Bryant player this decade.
