ROTUNDA ROUND-UP

Students tour eleven countries

The International Management Seminar, a three week three credit European adventure for six Bryant students and their teacher/guide Dr. John Williams, was offered for the first time by the management department during spring intersession. The class left on May 29 for a study tour of 11 countries including Great Britain, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Switzerland, Liechtenstein, Austria, San Marino, Italy, Monaco and France.

The seminar is based on direct observation and analysis of business and managerial practices abroad. It was designed to examine philosophies and practices from the international viewpoint, explore import and export procedures, examine possibilities for opening branches of American-based industries, initiate subsidiary companies and participate in overseas ventures. Students worked within a scheduled framework of tours, discussions and observations, and met with members of overseas business firms and institutions.

Among the numerous stops made, students attended a management seminar at Richmond College in London and visited with Xerox Company's vice-president of international affairs, John Drew. Mr. Drew is the author of Doing Business in the European Community, a text being used as a study tool in the course. Students also observed management techniques of a diamond factory in Holland, a perfume factory in Germany and a distillery in France.

This course will be offered next year during winter and spring intersessions. The winter intersession course will examine Latin American countries and the spring intersession course will examine European countries. Undergraduate and graduate students are eligible to enroll in the course.

Graduate school faculty honored at reception

Dr. George de Tarnowsky, dean of the Graduate School, honored with teaching service awards, twelve faculty members who have taught in the Graduate School for at least five years.

Those faculty members who were honored were David W. Claire, Robert E. Harding, Joseph E. Hoffman, Jr., Richmond M. Lloyd, Edward A. McLaughlin, Jr., Gerald F. Morris, Eugene R. Primeau, Kenneth M. Racette, Daniel Ryan, George W. Schuster, Leo W. Spaight and William E. Turcotte.

Dr. de Tarnowsky presented these faculty members with a teaching certificate in honor of their continued service to the Graduate School. Full-time faculty and administrators were on hand to honor the Graduate School faculty and meet alumni of the Graduate School. A wine and cheese reception followed the presentation.

Bryant's youngest alumni establish an endowed scholarship

The Class of '82, which now has the distinction of being the youngest of the Bryant alumni body, has established a $10,000 endowed scholarship in memory of Kevin C. McArdle, a classmate who was killed in a car accident last summer.

The senior class gift committee, chaired by Senior Senator John Stockholm and Kevin's close friend and roommate, Tom Foley, began to work towards the goal last fall. Everything from steak raffles and basketball games to seniors donating their dorm deposit refund helped to make the scholarship a reality and push it over the goal.

President William T. O'Hara was so impressed with the attitude, actions and commitment of the class that it was decided to shift the emphasis of the Parent's Campaign of the Bryant Fund to the Kevin C. McArdle Scholarship. With this added support it may be possible to endow a full tuition scholarship. As the gift of the Class of '82, the scholarship will be awarded each year to an incoming freshman.

Fees compare favorably to other institutions

A comparison of tuition fees and room and board charges collected by similar educational institutions in New England shows that Bryant College offers quite a deal. A survey of Bryant, Bentley College, Providence College, Babson College and Northeastern University shows a difference of $3,000 between the highest — Babson — and the lowest — Bryant.

The figures show that the cost of attending Bryant in the 1982-83 school year will be $6,380 (double occupancy with a 19 meal plan). The most recent figures show that a year at Babson would cost $9,485.

Bryant's closest competitor is Bentley College, which costs a student $8,050.

An average figure indicates that Bryant costs $2,304 less than the average institution per year, or close to one third less.

The following chart shows the comparison. Note that the figures listed for other colleges are the most recent available and may not reflect increases for the fall of 1982.

From tap dancing to tight rope walking

The Performing Arts Series kicks off its 1982-83 season on Sunday, September 19, 1982 at 7:30 p.m. with Broadway's longest running musical, The Fantastiks. Daedalus Productions of New York City is the touring company responsible for this production.

During Parents' Weekend on Sunday, October 17, 1982, the National Marionette Theater will be on campus to entertain parents and students in an evening performance at 7:30 p.m. A children's show is also scheduled for the afternoon, so plan now to bring your children.

November and December's performances are of the musical variety with Mozart on Fifth, Beethoven to the Beatles, and the Peloquin Chorale Holiday Music for Christmas and Hanukkah.

Tap dancing, theatre and a Chinese circus are on tap for February, March and April. This year's program was put together in response to a student survey. The student body indicated that its interests in priority order lie in the areas of theatre, dance and music.

All alumni are entitled to a discounted rate. Tickets are available at $3.00 per person through the Office of Student Activities. For further information call 231-1200, ext. 328.

Advisory council on accounting formed

A new council, the Accounting Advisory Council, has been created for the purpose of advising the students, faculty and academic administrators on this program's development.

The council's interests will include curricular study and review, opportunities in the accounting profession today, and other areas of common concern. The charter group, which includes many alumni, is composed of accounting professionals and executives.

Members of the new council include: Karl F. Ericson '58, partner, Peat, Marwick and Mitchell (chairman of the council);

Raymond A. Chauvin '77, controller, R. N. Koch, Inc.; Alfred J. Corso '66, partner, Ernst & Whinney; Vincent L. DelNero '70, financial vice-president, Balfour; Steven E. Pascarella '43, of Pascarella & Trench; William J. Piccerelli '64, partner, Piccerelli & Gilstein; John S. Renza, Jr. '70, of John Renza, Inc.; Daniel J. Ryan, partner, San-siveri, Ryan, Sullivan and Co.; Ronald A. Van Brocklyn '56, vice-president and controller, Textron; Robert A. Weigner '57, partner, Deloitte, Haskins and Sells; and Thomas J. Westgate '72, partner, Murphy and Co.

The Accounting Advisory Council has already begun to meet at the College discussing, among other things, the perceptions of recent Bryant accounting graduates and the development of accounting information systems study at the College.

College raises tuition, room and board fees

The Board of Trustees, at its February quarterly meeting, approved raises in tuition and room and board fees for the 1982-83 school year.

Day school tuition was raised $375, from $3,375 to $3,750. Evening Division and special session tuition was raised $12 per course, from $126 to $138. Tuition for graduate courses was raised by $21 from $225 to $246.

The cost of a meal plan went up $115, from $1,125 to $1,240.

Dormitory rates were increased as follows: townhouse fees increased $270 from $1,790 to $2,060 for a single, and from $1,640 to $1,910 for a double. Dormitory village fee was raised by $140 from $1,250 to $1,390. Dormitory III rates were increased $170 from $1,370 to $1,540.

Wedekind on advisory council

William Wedekind '79 has been named to Bryant's Systems/Management Advisory Council. A senior systems analyst for Vantage Systems of Connecticut, he joins other EDP professionals, including several Bryant alumni, who serve on the advisory body.

Accounting grads commend program

Over ninety percent of accounting graduates responding to a survey feel that their education at Bryant prepared them for their career choice. In addition, 98 out of 115 said that they are currently engaged in the accounting profession.

The survey, conducted by the Dean of Undergraduate Faculty, Stanley J. Kozikowski, saw a response rate of 20 percent — considered excellent for a survey of this type.

Although most who answered had not yet sat for CPA exams, a majority of those who have — 58 vs. 49 — said they felt that the Bryant education prepared them sufficiently for those exams. In a question that asked which areas should be stressed in the course program, a solid majority felt that CPA problems and EDP controls and more auditing courses should be offered. A great majority also felt that accounting labs should be offered as part of the curriculum — 84 yes, 26 no.

In general comments about the major, strengths mentioned were experienced teachers, the three semester format for intermediate accounting, Bryant's internship program and the high caliber of the auditing and cost accounting courses.

Among weaknesses listed were a lack of emphasis on aspects of accounting other than CPA study; a need for more courses in planning and budgeting, financial management, non-profit accounting and municipal accounting; a need for more internships; a need for more EDP courses and report-writing courses; and a need for more courses in taxation.

In announcing the results, Dean Kozikowski mentioned that some changes have been made in the accounting program since the survey was taken. Specifically, there is a new course in accounting information systems and the College's new computer hardware will be used in this course of study. Also, distributive requirements have been changed so that students now have 12 unrestricted electives, instead of 6 liberal arts and 6 professional electives.

Also, the internship program has been expanded, and this past semester the College ran three sections of report writing for accountants.

Professor Keeley first recipient of Distinguished Faculty Award

Patrick J. Keeley, professor of English, was honored recently as the first recipient of the Alumni Association's Distinguished Faculty Award. Professor Keeley was selected by ballot which was mailed to Bryant's 20,000 alumni.

As recipient of the award, Professor Keeley received a plaque and citation from Michael T. Martin '72, president of the Alumni Association for 1981-82. Many of Professor Keeley's former students were on hand to see him receive the award which was presented during the Saturday evening dinner of Bryant '82.

Professor Keeley has been a member of the faculty of Bryant College for the past fifteen years. He has served on numerous College committees including the Faculty Negotiating Committee, the Committee on College Organization, the Faculty Development Committee, the Scholastic Standing Committee and the Alumni Awards Selection Committee, to name only a few. His interest in drama has him serving as advisor to the Bryant Players Drama Club and as a former consultant to the Providence Barker Players. In Rhode Island, he has been a member of the Executive Committee of the R.I. Council of Teachers of English, a fund-raising coordinator for the educational television network Channel 36 and an educational consultant for the R.I. Jaycees.

In his town of residence, North Smithfield, he serves on the Democratic Town Committee and the Finance Committee. He has also served on the R.I. Democratic Council.

Business, education, communication experts honored with doctoral degrees

Undergraduate and graduate degrees were conferred upon Bryant's largest graduating class ever on Saturday, May 22. Honorary doctoral degrees were conferred upon six outstanding personalities.

The commencement address, given by Austin H. Kiplinger, president of the Kiplinger Washington Editors, Inc. and editor-in-chief of the Kiplinger Letters, addressed the topic "What's Ahead for America — Problems and Opportunities." Kiplinger, a life-long writer and editor, developed the Changing Times magazine in 1947 with his father, Willard M. Kiplinger, the original founder of the Washington Letter. Mr. Kiplinger publishes a Tax Letter and Agricultural Letter, plus special monthly letters on the economies of California, Florida and Texas. A graduate of Cornell and Harvard Universities, Mr. Kiplinger resides with his wife in Maryland.

Dr. An Wang is chairman of the board and president of Wang Laboratories, Inc., a research and development based manufacturer of computers and word processing equipment. His first breakthrough, which gained him recognition in the scientific community, was the invention of a magnetic core memory. The device was a basic component of the modern computer for over 20 years. The money from the sale of the core memory to IBM in 1954 was used to found Wang Laboratories. Dr. Wang devotes most of his time to new product development such as the world's first electronic scoreboard installed at Shea Stadium, N.Y., a desktop computer called LOCI and "Wangnet" now in the development stages. Dr. Wang, born in Shanghai, received a Bachelor of Science degree from Chaio Tung University, Shanghai. He recently established and endowed the Wang Institute, an education center for computer engineers, of which he serves as President and Trustee. He resides near the company's headquarters in Lowell, MA.

Maynard Jackson, vice-chairman of the board and general counsel to the Dobbs Corporation, is the first black man ever to serve as chief executive of a major southern city in the U.S., the Queen City of Atlanta. During his administration, Jackson reorganized the city's government on a more efficient basis and is credited with decreasing Atlanta's crime rate. His urban leadership has brought him international recognition, national acclaim and positions of national and local prominence. Mr. Jackson received a B.A. in political science and history from Morehouse College at the age of 18. He earned a Juris Doctorate from the North Carolina Central University School of Law in 1964. He holds honorary Doctor of Law degrees from Morehouse College, Delaware State College, Howard University and Babson College.

Robin Young, a 1972 graduate of Ithaca College, is presently an NBC news correspondent, filing feature segments for the Today program and substituting during the absences of Today's Jane Pauley. She began her career with NBC working on the documentary "NBC Reports: American Fashion — Rags and Riches," which aired on NBC-TV in November, 1980. Before joining NBC News, Ms. Young was host/producer of Evening Magazine, broadcast on Boston station WBZ-TV. She was the recipient of two Emmy awards for Evening Magazine.

Dr. Paul Ylvisaker serves as dean of the faculty and Charles William Eliot Professor of Education at Harvard Graduate School of Education. A noted lecturer, civil libertarian and urban planner, Dr. Ylvisaker has vast governmental and foundation experience. Dr. Ylvisaker served as the first commissioner of the New Jersey Department of Community Affairs from 1967-70, as President Johnson's chairman of the Task Force on Cities from 1966-67 and as a participant in the U.S. Public Health Services Health Exchange Mission to the USSR in 1964.

Currently, he serves as a member of 14 boards and commissions. He received a Ph.D. from Harvard in 1948 and an MPA from Harvard University in 1945.

Carl W. Christiansen is the founder of the firm Christiansen and Company, Certified Public Accountants which recently merged with Ernst and Whinney. Mr. Christiansen received the first Outstanding Public Service Award in recognition of his service to the community, state, nation and the public interest in 1981. He was the first member of the R.I. Society of Certified Public Accountants to receive this award, which is given by the American Institute of Accountants. In 1974, Christiansen established the Carl W. Christiansen Scholarship Fund, with a present capitalization of $50,000. The fund was established to provide scholarship aid for Rhode Island residents who are pursuing courses of study in the field of accounting and related areas. Mr. Christiansen is best known for his work with the Woonsocket Hospital serving in a variety of capacities. Since 1951, he has chaired three major fundraising drives. The $6.25 million addition to the Woonsocket Hospital dedicated on May 31, 1981, was named in honor of Mr. Christiansen, a Slatersville, Rhode Island native.

Editor's note: The Bryant community mourns the passing of Carl W. Christiansen, who died on July 8 following a lengthy illness.

COMMUNICATION: a business and a pleasure

TRUSTEE PROFILE — G. RUSSELL LeBEAU '50

By Janet E. Chaput

G. Russell LeBeau

Russ LeBeau approaches his business practices at LeBeau, Leicht and Santangini, an advertising agency, and his role as a Bryant College trustee "with equal enthusiasm and intensity." He has managed to take a firm hold of his destiny by extending his expertise to co-workers, students and novices in the business world. He has developed "an innate ability to communicate" and carries it with him to every corner of his life.

Despite his hectic schedule, Mr. LeBeau has managed to integrate his career with his position as a College trustee. "I am part of the communication business. There is a constant exchange of new ideas here (at LeBeau) and an idea has to go through many channels until it becomes reality." He believes his career and his popularity in advertising has aided Bryant College in many ways. He is a sounding board as well as an initiator of new ideas at the College and is quick to discuss the attractive qualities of a business education at Bryant with anyone who will listen. "I get phone calls almost every day from friends, clients and business associates who are interested in attending classes or seminars at Bryant and want to know something more about it."

LeBeau's candid explanation of what Bryant is truly like and what it can offer a goal-oriented man or woman often drives the "motivated" candidate directly to the campus. He offers the example of Bryant's successful graduates (LeBeau himself is a prime example,) the serenity of Smithfield's countryside and the growing number of undergraduate and graduate programs in its offerings as argument for the College's outstanding recruitment records. He believes successful college graduates sport qualities of leadership and professionalism which gracefully lend them to business and society.

Russ LeBeau serves as a member of "a policy setting and controlling group," the Board of Trustees at Bryant College, on such committees as the Finance Committee and the Buildings and Grounds Committee on which he worked as the first chairman. One of his fondest efforts during his service as 1971 Bryant College Fund Drive Chairman was raising funds for renovation and restoration of the Captain Joseph Mowry House.

President of the Rumford, Rhode Island advertising agency LeBeau, Leicht and Santangini, Inc., Mr. LeBeau moved quickly through the ranks to his present position. He joined Bo Bernstein and Co. as comptroller in 1954 and was subsequently named general manager in 1957, assistant treasurer in 1959 and president and treasurer in 1968. In October 1976, upon the retirement of the agency's founder Joseph M. "Bo" Bernstein, a reorganization of the company began with LeBeau, Leicht and Santangini assuming ownership of the 35 year old firm.

A spirited and vital professional, he indulges himself in an impressive array of committee memberships, directorships and community positions. Seldom does he enter a community involvement alone. His 26 member staff jumps in with incredible drive. A young and ambitious staff with varied degrees and backgrounds, all of LeBeau's "co-workers" play an important part in the success of the firm. Russ LeBeau has a unique knack of extracting useful but often hidden talents from his staff members and molding their ideas into rich and effective campaigns. "Our staff is a dynamic group of talented people. They work hard for every cause introduced to LeBeau and we all receive credit." Russ prides himself in the comfortable relationship he maintains with his staff. Several staff members often gather in LeBeau's office after 5 p.m. to interact and exchange ideas. New ideas abound at LeBeau and "brainstorming does not end when we close up shop."

LeBeau's interpretation of what business, society and Bryant College need from him has motivated him to take the initiative. "In my early days in the business, it took a little motivation to involve myself in civic organizations and volunteer situations." Once he realized the vital role he played in working with the United Way and other organizations he stepped in "full force" and enlisted the help of other individuals including his staff members. He is impressed with ambition and drive in others and is often willing to give a person a chance at a job opening not only because of background or education, but because of unique insight and motivation. He does not relish in success but in the zeal that impels it.

Russ LeBeau is like an experienced parent to his firm. He has seen the hardships and the pleasures and he urges "harmony" in his organization. As president of LeBeau, Leicht and Santangini and leader of the "business family," he is a significant link in a long chain of "friends and co-workers." Communication is indeed Russ LeBeau's business as well as his pleasure.

THE PRESIDENTIAL PERSPECTIVE

By William T. O'Hara
President

If I were to characterize the recent history of Bryant College, it would be in terms of optimism, awareness of our potential as an institution and growing recognition of the important role we play in serving a wide and diverse group of constituencies.

The future will hold equal success for Bryant. However, in the past year there have been developments that cause me deep concern in seeing the future as more exacting and formidable.

There is the problem of demographics. High school graduates will decrease in Rhode Island by 45% by the year 1995. Our sister states and those that feed the Bryant applicant pool will be better but not by much: Connecticut 41%, Massachusetts 42%, New York 42% and New Jersey 37%.

Plans to fortify our admissions efforts are under way to offset these changes.

Last fall a potentially lethal problem cast its shadow across Bryant's horizon: the threatened cutbacks of federal student financial aid. If President Reagan's proposals are adopted by the Congress, the entire system of higher education, based on the premise of providing opportunity and assistance to any qualified student wishing to matriculate in our colleges and universities, will be imperiled. Enrollments, particularly in our independent colleges, will be directly and dramatically affected if the White House proposals are enacted into law.

There is a bright ray in this gloomy setting, however. Thanks to the cooperative efforts and commitment of trustees, faculty and students, our united voice in opposition is being heard and it appears that Congress is responding with a sympathetic ear. Much remains to be done.

No less important to Bryant and its people is a situation that has recently created anxiety within our six-state New England region, detailed in a study by the New England Board of Higher Education entitled "A Threat to Excellence." The report indicates that the preeminence of New England colleges and universities as the nation's major center for higher education is being threatened.

Three fundamental reasons are identified to explain this changing condition:

- Our public schools are failing to properly educate our students.
- The six states are insufficiently supporting the cost of higher education.
- The competition from the sunbelt is attracting students and scholars and the perception is that the greatest opportunities lay in these areas.

The study commission recommends a wide range of attainable and reasonable steps to counter this drift away from excellence in New England higher education. There are some uniquely fitted to Bryant's role and future. They include:

1. More cooperation among institutions of higher education within the state. I intend to propose that the Rhode Island Independent Higher Education Association undertake an effort to seek better and expanded cooperation among the private colleges and universities in Rhode Island. These collaborative efforts should be extended to sister institutions in the public sector.

Related to this cooperation should be (a) the pooling of common resources, (b) the elimination of curricula redundancies, and above all (c) a shared vision that the student is the essential consideration in providing the very best from within education to meet his or her educational needs.

2. A greater cooperation between industry and the higher education community. The commission's recommendation seems uniquely suited for Bryant College with its long experience in business education. Its field of study lends itself beautifully to a partnership that could be productive for industry and our students, as they prepare for a position of leadership in the business world.

I have been concerned over the last five or ten years with the development of independent efforts by corporations to provide for the educational needs of their personnel by such companies as Arthur D. Little and Wang. There are other such activities taking place throughout the U.S. and it signals to me a dissatisfaction with the performance of colleges and universities in providing this training to the satisfaction of the business world.

Other recommendations and observations are made throughout the report, but those that I have identified have unique applicability to Bryant and its future. In sum, I see the report as identifying a critical issue of the diminishing prestige of higher education in New England and the role that it has traditionally played throughout the nation. On the other hand, I see that it provides excellent recommendations to reverse this trend and to provide opportunities for us individually and collectively to grasp, in looking toward the 21st century, opportunities for us to exceed even the highest level of our past accomplishments which by any standards are impressive.

Bryant brings computer center into adulthood

By Joanne McEttrick

Publications and Public Information Intern

Bryant College's computer system has advanced over the past ten years the way a child matures into adulthood. Born in 1969, the Computer Center consisted of the IBM 1130 and a two-person staff — a director and an operator/keypunch clerk. During the early seventies the center accommodated academic and administrative computing such as grades and registration. The system, however, was inadequate for the College's growing needs. The IBM 1130 could only offer computer classes which utilized keypunching. Also, students were relied upon heavily to do the programming and operations for administrative offices. The center was as sophisticated as an infant is worldly.

But the center grew and in 1976 the College purchased the BTI 4000. A software package was added to support student record keeping from admissions to alumni and most of the college administrative offices went on-line. The BTI 4000 was used for all introductory data processing courses from 1976 to 1979. Although it wasn't on the same level as contemporary computers, Neal Koski, director of the Computer Center, referred to it as a "respectable" system. Like a child, it was capable to a point but still was inadequate in many ways.

In its adolescence, the computer center underwent some physical changes as evidenced by the purchase of the Data General Eclipse M/600 and the phasing out of the IBM 1130. It allowed for a major increase in the number of computer classes and also some additional administrative data processing. The M/600 earned the reputation of being "contemporary," but like a teenager, the center had potential yet to be developed. The Center faced further administrative and academic demands. Something in addition to the M/600 was needed.

With the expansion of the Data General system through the purchase of the MV/8000, the computer center has reached sophisticated adulthood. Neal Koski says, "With the expansion of the computer center, we have a leading edge. We are now equipped to move into the future."

What can this computer do that makes it so indispensable? The major benefit of the MV/8000 is that now the center can handle the substantial growth in academic computing. The number of students in the systems/management major has more than tripled since 1979, according to Stanley J. Kozikowski, dean of undergraduate faculty, and he predicts an annual increase of twenty-five percent. In addition, the needs from other academic departments, graduate school and the evening division can now be supported with the MV/8000. It is the primary academic machine. In the computer room in 1978, there were seven terminals. Today there are 50. The number of computer classes has jumped from eight to 40. Printing speed has increased from a mere 300 lines per minute to an impressive 2100 lines per minute. The number of concurrent student/faculty users was formerly 33. Presently it is up to 70.

With the M/600 relieved of academic data processing, it now will function primarily as an administrative machine. Its increased power will serve 50 concurrent users as compared to the past 32. Also the center will be able to support word processing integrated with other data files, something it could not do in the past.

The College spent over a quarter of a million dollars on the new MV/8000 this past fiscal year. In addition, $248,305 was spent on other essentials such as terminals, software and installation. However, Neal Koski feels it is well worth the cost. "There is plenty of untapped potential that will carry us into the future and meet the eventual needs of the College."

So impressive is the MV/8000 that it has been celebrated in Tracey Kidder's bestseller on the non-fiction list, The Soul of the New Machine. "The fact that the general public is reading this type of a book says something about the computer and the contemporary thinking of America," remarks Koski.

BR

IT'S NOT ALL MICKEY MOUSE

By Joan W. Sorensen

As the winter semester was beginning at Bryant, five currently enrolled students were headed south to get a first-hand view of a corporation with a history of thrilling and entertaining millions — and a corporation with a unique management plan.

The most popular trend in the field of management is most commonly known as MBO, Management By Objectives. Other management styles include permissive, authoritarian, and committee management, and the list could go on and on.

Many management plans and theories work and some don't. One plan dating back to 1923 worked so well that it now is the management plan for a company which recorded revenues in 1981 of over a billion dollars. It is commonly referred to as the Disney Way.

Five Bryant College students enrolled in course number BU491, General Business Practicum, have been given the opportunity to see this management style first-hand. Earning anywhere from three to nine college credits, these students have participated in an internship program and spent the past semester enrolled in the Magic Kingdom College Program at Walt Disney World in Florida.

According to Dr. Hinda Pollard, chairman of the Management Department and coordinator of internships at the College, over 75 colleges in the country participate in this program. Dr. Pollard discussed the selection procedure for this internship which is the first off-campus internship for an entire semester for which Bryant has granted academic credit.

The College requires that internship participants be of a junior or senior status. Dean Stanley Kozikowski and each department chairman makes the determination whether the student has the appropriate grade point average and course work completed. The department chairmen also determine the number of course credits to be assigned to the internship. Professors Henry Foley, Finance Department, Wallace Camper, Institutional Management and Ronald DeLuga, Management supervised interns from their particular departments during the spring 1982 semester.

During the fall and spring semesters, personnel from the College Relations Department at Walt Disney World come to campus and interview prospective students. According to Annette Grimpe, College Relations Coordinator for Disney World, "it is important to select students who are enthusiastic and eager to learn about the Walt Disney World operation. Disney World is not interested in someone who wants to have a good time and bask in the sun."

The Magic Kingdom College Program was begun as a pilot program in the summer of 1981 with forty-four colleges and 250 students participating. Students were earning college credits in majors in retailing, recreation, marketing, management and food and hospitality. In January 1982, the program was expanded to include 88 colleges and 350 students, five of whom were Bryant College students.

As Annette Grimpe relates the history of the Magic Kingdom College Program, she refers to it as "an opportunity to work for and learn from some of the finest professionals in the world." The program is aptly described in its brochure as a "unique educational, work, and interpersonal relationship program, specially designed to increase practical knowledge of the leisure industry."

An important part of the Magic Kingdom College Program (MKCP) is the twelve-week classroom experience in Leisure Time Business Management Studies. Each session is taught by a member of the Disney Management team and focuses on each area of operation within Disney World. Seminar topics cover employee relations, finance, operations, merchandising, marketing, resorts, facilities, food administration, entertainment and career planning. Attendance at these weekly seminars is a prerequisite for completion of the MKCP program.

Another segment of the MKCP program is the work experience or the working classroom as it is referred to at Disney World. Students are exposed to a wide variety of job challenges as they work approximately 30 hours a week in four major operating areas of food, merchandise, attractions and custodial. According to Annette Grimpe, "students are placed based upon their major, and where they feel they will perform best." Ms. Grimpe points out that "students get out of the work experience what they put in."

The final portion of the MKCP program is the weekly or bi-weekly reports, problems or projects required by the student's advisor back in Smithfield, Rhode Island. Depending upon the number of credits allocated for the internship, the Bryant College students are given various assignments. Dr. Pollard's management students are required to submit weekly synopses of the seminars and to solve a set of management problems in business report form. Dr. Pollard indicates that MKCP coordinators will not monitor student projects and papers. However, students are encouraged to schedule appointments with members of the Disney management team in order to gather necessary data and information for their reports. The interns' supervisors submit two evaluations of each intern to Dr. Pollard during the semester.

Disney World and MKCP personnel encourage visits from faculty advisors and staff members at the student's College. So when Dr. William T. O'Hara, president, and I were visiting alumni clubs in Florida, we decided to stop by for a visit.

Rick Rochon, Class of 1983, and a management major at Bryant, gave me the "red carpet" tour of Disney World. It began at 4567 Seven Dwarfs' Lane in the Snow White Campground where Rick lives with the other students enrolled in the Magic Kingdom College Program. He lives with 7 other students in a Fleetwood trailer, and they share four bedrooms, two bathrooms and a kitchen. They buy their own food and cook their own meals. Rick admits that living with seven other people is difficult. That in itself is a learning experience in interpersonal relationships.

His roommates, whom I met, are from all over the country and are enrolled in Niagara University, Central Michigan State University, University of New Haven and Monroe Community College to name a few. While living at 4567 Seven Dwarfs' Lane, Rick has learned to deal with people from all walks of life.

Before Rick decided to participate in the MKCP, he investigated every aspect of it. Initially, he thought Disney World: Florida, sunshine and warm weather. The glamour of it overwhelmed him, so he invited his father to attend the introductory session that Annette Grimpe was conducting on Bryant's campus. He wanted to make sure that the program was worthwhile. By enrolling in the program, he would have to attend summer school to earn six additional credits so he could graduate with his class in June, 1983.

Rick's father convinced him that he wasn't "off the wall" and the program appeared to be a valuable learning experience. So, in January 1982, Rick packed his bags and headed south.

He hasn't regretted it for a minute. Rick admits that he's getting a lot out of the program, but "you get out of it what you put into it." He has put in long hours and lots of hard work.

Before Rick and I left for my tour of Disney World, he showed me the weekly assignments that he receives from Dr. Ronald J. DeLuga, a management professor at Bryant. Rick submits a weekly synopsis of the seminars to Dr. DeLuga, and in return he receives comments and feedback from him. As a long-term project, Dr. DeLuga has given Rick some case problems to solve. They cover such topics as the long-range goals of Disney World, and the Chamber of Commerce's opinions/views on Disney World. Is it an asset to the City of Orlando? Rick also keeps a daily journal containing personal thoughts and views of his Disney experience.

As we drove over to Disney World about five miles away, Rick told me a little about his work experience at Disney World. His job description reads "meet and greet our guests in a friendly manner. Present the attraction in a positive manner."

Rick works thirty hours a week on the Jungle Cruise in Adventureland which was temporarily closed for rehabilitation while I was there. However, Rick took me beneath the jungle vines to glimpse the popular Jungle Cruise. Rick is the skipper of one of the river launches which cruises through the jungle lands past scores of beasts like gorillas, elephants and hippos. Rick has a set talk sprinkled with humorous, dry jokes that lasts throughout the ten-minute ride. He admits it is difficult, but challenging to repeat the talk about five times every hour and still make it sound interesting. It is especially difficult when no one laughs at his jokes.

Rick works with ten other students. Throughout the day he alternates positions with the other students. He will leave his position as skipper and assist in loading and unloading the boat. Crowd control is an important part of the job. He plays quite a public relations role as he tries to make people feel at home and keep them happy while they stand in sometimes hour-long lines.

One day, Rick and the other students spent a day "shadowing their supervisor." They spent the whole day with him and watched him open up the entire Adventureland. It gave the students an opportunity to ask all the questions that they wanted.

Rick says that there is "more to it than cheap labor." Rick sees the Magic College Kingdom Program as a management trainee program. He is learning all about the Walt Disney World corporation. He hopes to be able to transfer his skills to another job when he graduates from Bryant.

In general, Rick states that "the seminars are very helpful. Most instructors are middle management at Disney World. The seminar leaders are always willing to stay after class to answer as many questions as possible."

Rick has learned through the work experience, the seminars and his weekly assignments the operation of attractions, management techniques and the Disney philosophy.

Rick admits that the MKCP has also been a lot of fun, and the social life is great. The MKCP students are able to enjoy a large array of recreational activities. Rick and I stopped by Little Lake Bryan, a private company-sponsored recreational facility provided for the Disney World cast members (not employees) and their families. Sailing, water skiing, tennis, golf, archery, swimming and jogging are all available to the MKCP students.

At 11:00 p.m., Rick and I took a tour of the underground operation of Disney World. It was most impressive to see how everything operates below the ground in a massive system of color-coded tunnels. It is easy to get lost, and we did!

While touring the underground, we spotted Mark Karolkiewicz, a junior finance major from Worcester, Massachusetts. He had just gotten off-duty from the Haunted Mansion Shop and was grabbing a midnight snack before heading back to the Snow White Campground.

I never got an opportunity to meet the other three students. Karyn Hitner, an institutional management major from Merrick, New York, was supposed to be working overtime hours in the Grand Prix attraction, but she had been released earlier than expected.

Our tour ended with a midnight snack (dinner) at a fast-food restaurant on our way back to the Snow White Campground. It was an exhausting whirlwind tour of Disney World conducted by a very proud Disney employee. In a short three months, Rick Rochon had captured the Disney Way. As Walt Disney once said, "you can dream, create, design and build the most wonderful place in the world, but it requires people to make that dream a reality." The Bryant students are part of that dream.

Together again

A weekend journey back to Bryant

Hundreds of Bryant alums returned to the Smithfield campus on the weekend of June 25 for three days to remember days of college gone by and create some memorable new ones. Some of the weekend's events are represented on these pages. On this page, the groundbreaking ceremony (top) for the beautification of the front circle was held, with President William T. O'Hara and Stephen E. Pascarella and Michael Hammer, both members of the class of '77, doing the honors. The beautification is a gift of the class of '77. Below, Elvira Knight '26 of the Bryant '82 committee selects a lobster during an evening barbecue.

Tax and financial planning available

The Development Office is available to alumni for assistance in the planning of your estate and in formulating specific plans of giving to Bryant College. One method is making an outright gift. This type of gift includes gifts of cash, personal property, appreciated property and securities.

In some instances, life income gifts may be appropriate and advantageous to the donor. They include a charitable remainder annuity trust, charitable remainder unitrust or a pooled income fund. These types of gifts could lower federal income taxes, minimize capital gains, increase spendable income and offer federal estate tax savings.

Gifts of life insurance are also a popular way to help Bryant.

When considering your will, it may be appropriate to include Bryant. This can be accomplished by the creation of a charitable trust or several forms of bequests.

To assist you in determining which area you need to emphasize, contact the Director of Development, at (401) 231-1200, Ext. 214.

Alumni and their spouses are eligible to apply for various amounts of insurance up to $160,000 (lower maximum starting at age 66) and smaller amounts are available for the eligible children of insured alumni. The spouse can apply whether or not the alumnus does. The insurance cannot be cancelled (unless the premiums are not paid on time). Coverage terminates at age 75.

Alumni: Recruiters in the field

Each year the Admissions Office receives numerous requests to attend college nights and fairs throughout the country. Send a student to Bryant

Do you know a qualified high school student who would like to apply to Bryant? To arrange for an individual interview and/or campus tour, send the student's name and address and your name and address to the Admissions Office. Group information sessions are also offered many Saturdays in the fall. These sessions include tours of the campus, a slide show, and a question and answer period with assistant deans and members of the Financial Aid Department. This program is a valuable experience for all prospective students. For more information or to arrange for an appointment, please write or call the Admissions Office, Bryant College, Smithfield, RI, 02917; (401) 231-1200, Ext. 235.

Bryant College seeks students who show the greatest likelihood of completing the College's program of studies. Candidates are considered individually by the Admissions Committee. Acceptances are based upon the quality of scholastic achievement shown by the applicant and the scores the applicant has earned on the Scholastic Aptitude Test of the College Board Entrance Examination or on the ACT examination of the American College Testing Program. The committee places great weight on recommendations from the high school guidance department concerning character and personal qualifications not shown on the academic record.

A CALL TO ARMS

Fighting financial aid cuts

By C. Ralph Adler

A new tenseness could be felt on the Bryant College campus during the last few months before school ended this year. It was not nervousness about upcoming exams, or leaving boy-friends and girlfriends for the summer, or wondering about what kind of summer job would appear. For close to half of the students at Bryant, the question was "Will I be able to come back here next year?"

The question was not rhetorical — it was real and it was frightening. About seventy-five percent of the students at Bryant receive some kind of financial aid to make their higher education possible. President Ronald Reagan's proposed cuts in loans and grants to students sent shivers of fear up the spines of educators and students, as they perceived a drastic reversal in the country's commitment to making higher education available to everyone, regardless of their ability to pay for it personally. Bryant students, along with their Rhode Island peers, organized rallies of protest at the state capitol, and student representatives voiced their opinions at hearings in Washington. President O'Hara convened a meeting of Rhode Island college and university presidents to devise a plan to prevent the cuts.

At the time of this writing, the President's budget cuts are in negotiation in Congress. Although serious cuts are anticipated, it is unlikely that his wide ranging plan will be approved. However, it is generally perceived by administrators and educators that strong cuts are still a threat.

During the late summer months, Congress will be deciding exactly where those cuts in financial aid should be made. What follows is a rundown of the five major programs that are in danger, and how the office of Financial Aid at Bryant anticipates they will affect this campus:

Guaranteed Student Loans. These loans are entitlements which go from the federal government to the student through the banks. The maximum loans are for $2,500, and the current level for approval is a family income of $30,000 or lower. Above that figure, you must demonstrate need. Graduate students have, in the past, been able to borrow $5,000 under this program, but one of Reagan's proposals (since denied) was to make graduate students ineligible.

In 1982-83, 1,456 Bryant students will be getting these loans, about 200 less than last year, representing a $1 million loss to Bryant students.

Pell Grants. Also entitlements, Pell Grants are given to students on a need basis. The Secretary of Education is responsible for devising the mechanism of allotment, to stay within the level of funding approved for these grants. Although the maximum awarded next year to any one student — $1,800 — is above the $1,670 of last year, it is likely that there will be changes in eligibility requirements to make fewer people able to receive the grants.

At Bryant, the 1981-82 school year saw 764 recipients for a total of $751,700. Projected for 1982-83 are 701 recipients for a total of $725,000, a loss of about $25,000.

Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants. A campus based program, this is one of the programs that will feel the most cuts. Once for extremely needy students only, these grants have become more available over the past few years but need must still be demonstrated. Reagan's original proposal was to eliminate this program entirely.

In 1981-82, Bryant awarded $207,791 in SEOG grants. Projected for 1982-83 is a total of $154,322 — a loss of over $50,000.

National Direct Student Loans. These low interest loans — the interest rate is five percent — are paid back only after the student has completed his education. While the student is enrolled, there is no interest accrued. This is one area where more funding is expected in the next year. The College was allocated $174,000 in 1981-82, and $214,245 is earmarked for the coming year.

College Work Study Program. Many students who receive financial assistance at Bryant are under this program. The government gives money to the College for the institution to use for hiring students for on-campus work. The College pays twenty percent of the student's salary, with eighty percent paid by the government. Two hundred and ninety-eight students had work study at Bryant last year. Beginning in the fall, only 100 will have this kind of assistance. In dollars, $117,369 was earned in 1981-82. In 1982-83, $98,827 is anticipated. Bryant is making extra efforts to offset these work-study cuts. Under the College-initiated Student Occupational Services program (SOS) Bryant is allocating $25,000 in additional funds, but recipients must demonstrate need. The students will work in College jobs, with the institution paying the entire hourly wage.

Bryant is also planning on injecting close to $250,000 in institutional grants next year, through various means. One of the primary beneficiaries of this year's Bryant Fund campaign is student financial aid. Some funds from the tuition increase will go towards student aid. And finally, the presidential scholarship of $1,000, which in the past has been a one-time award, is now renewable if the student maintains a good grade point average.

Rosemary D'Arcy, assistant director of financial aid, said that student grants and loans coming from the state of Rhode Island have held up very well. "The Governor of Rhode Island, at least, is committed to student welfare," Ms. D'Arcy stated. Governor J. Joseph Garrahy recently signed into legislation a bill which would put $107 million into the guaranteed student loan program — funds which go to local banks for lending purposes.

In addition, Ms. D'Arcy stated, Rhode Island state grants remain "fully portable" — allowing state residents who receive these grants to go out of state to the college of their choice. "There may be political pressure," she says, to keep loans and grants in-state.

Ms. D'Arcy shares the frustration of educators and administrators around the country when she speaks of the current federal administration and the proposed cuts. "Reagan is not in touch with the ramifications of what he is trying to do. If his proposed cuts go through, it could change the nature of higher education in the United States. In New England, it is estimated that fifty percent of private institutions, and some public institutions, could go out of business in the next ten years. That estimate might not be far off.

"Reagan believes in people paying their own way, but he's naive in believing they can do it.

"This country could lose its spot as the leader in technology and growth. An educated population is our salvation."

Though a budget figure will probably have been reached by August, there are still things that can be done by alumni to temper the cuts and help preserve the quality of higher education at Bryant and across the country. Ms. D'Arcy states that hearings to determine precisely where cuts will be made, and to what degree, will be held in the late summer and early fall in Congress. "If you are concerned as proud alums and parents, don't sit back and complain," she suggests, "because you can't complain in the future." You are urged to write to your state senators and representatives and voice your opinion. Most of them will be home for work periods between August 20 and September 7, and attempts to reach them personally can be made at that time.

SPRING SPORTS REVIEW

By John Gillooly
Sports Information Director

Despite a lack of cooperation from Mother Nature, Bryant College enjoyed its best spring sports season in history. A long winter forced the cancellation of numerous events and seriously curtailed pre-season practice time. But when the weather finally cooperated, the Indians made the most of their opportunities.

GOLF — Once again the golf team was the most successful team on campus. Coach Archie Boulet's linkmen brought home three tournament championships, including Bryant's first Northeast-8 Conference title.

The key to the success, once again, was junior Jimmy Hallet. The South Yarmouth, Mass. native proved beyond the shadow of a doubt that he is the best collegiate golfer in the northeast as he captured his third straight New England individual championship, took top honors in the Northeast-8 Conference Tournament and the Northeastern Invitational Collegiate Tournament and shared the individual title with teammate Tony Gerardi in the Jess Dow Invitational.

Hallet's performance in the New England Tournament, where he captured the individual title by six strokes after leading by only one after the first day, marked the first time in 44 years any one person has won three straight New England titles.

Hallet's championship helped the Indians finish second in the 41-school battle for the regional team title.

The Indians totally dominated the Northeast-8 Tournament, capturing the top three individual spots. Following Hallet in the individual title race were Gerardi and Bill Walthouse. Hallet and Gerardi's co-championship also led the Indians to the team title in the Jess Dow Invitational at the Yale Country Club in New Haven, and Hallet's individual championship led the Indians to the title in the Northeast Collegiate Championships in New York. Hallet also qualified for the national NCAA Division-II Championships for the third consecutive year where he finished 10th in the 48 player field, earning his third consecutive All-American honor.

BASEBALL — The 1982 baseball team set a Bryant record for the most victories in a season as coach Mike McGuinn's nine posted an 11-15 record. Included among that record-setting number of victories was a 5-0 triumph over Providence College, the first victory in Bryant history over a Division-I team.

Paul Perry, the junior outfielder from Riverside, CT led the offense once again with a .329 batting average. But McGuinn also received substantial offensive contributions from Paul Mangano, .325 and Neal Taylor, .310.

Sean Chalmers, a freshman from Bridgewater, MA, was the ace of the mound staff. Chalmers posted an impressive 5-1 record in his initial collegiate campaign with a 4.46 ERA.

MEN'S TENNIS — After two successive losing seasons, the men's tennis team finally enjoyed a winning campaign as coach John Gillooly's netmen posted a 6-4 record.

Each of the Indians' six singles players recorded winning individual records, led by freshman Kevin Ledversis of Cranston, RI. Ledversis became the first Bryant player in four years to enjoy a winning slate at the number one singles spot as he posted a 7-3 dual match record.

Ledversis also created Bryant athletic history when, in late May, he played in the Eastern Collegiate Tennis Championships in Rochester, NY. Ledversis gave Bryant its first athletic contest with Notre Dame University when he dropped a 6-2, 6-2 decision to Jim Falvey, the Irish's number-two singles player.

Other players recording winning singles records were Paul Capazzli, Bill Kaufman, John Krieder, Jack Murphy and Keith Schneider.

WOMEN'S SOFTBALL — The women's softball team registered its first winning season in history with a 12-7 record. The Indians also earned their first regional ranking as they finished sixth in the final New England Division-II coach's poll.

The key to the Indians' successful campaign was the impressive performance of pitcher Barbara Schroeder. The junior southpaw began virtually a one-woman pitching corps midway through the season and finished with 11 victories in 16 decisions.

WOMEN'S TRACK — A winning dual meet record and a co-championship tie in the first Bryant relay carnival highlighted the season for the women's track team.

Three new school records were set with the star once again being Jenny Proud. The senior distance runner, who qualified for the national NCAA Cross-Country championships in the fall, set Bryant records in the 1,500 and 3,000 meter runs during the spring.

Janet Cook, another senior, created a new mark in the 800 meters with a time of 2:29.0.

MEN'S TRACK — The surprise performance of senior Tony Testa was the highlight of the season for the men's track team. Testa, a former hockey player, ran track for the first time in his life this spring and became the fastest runner in Bryant history. The Warwick, R.I. native set Bryant records in both the 100 and 200 meters and helped the Indians 4 X 100 meter relay team also set a new mark in that event.

His performance also qualified Testa for the New England Championships in both the 100 and 200 and helped the relay team qualify for the regional competition.

Joining Testa in the New England competition were his relay teammates Pete Marcello, Dave Kelly and Mike Harris. Kelly also qualified for the 400 intermediate hurdles and Harris joined Testa in the 100 and 200. The Indians 4 X 400 relay team of Dave Timbrell, Mike Cassano, Harris and Kelly also earned a birth in the regional competition. The six qualifying spots gave Bryant its largest representation in history in the New England event.

Alumni directory telephone phase to begin

Shortly, the Harris Publishing Company will conduct telephone follow-ups to alumni for verification of the information that you submitted to be printed in the directory tentatively slated for release in late 1982. At the same time, you will have an opportunity to place your order for a personal copy of the directory.

The telephone call is a follow-up to the two questionnaire cards sent in March and April to all alumni with verified addresses. If you did not receive your questionnaire, please contact the Office of Alumni Relations immediately.

Since the cost of the directory is selfliquidating through sales, the Harris Publishing Company has our complete approval to contact you. These procedures enable us to make the directory available to alumni at no cost or obligation to the College and in turn the Harris Publishing Company provides us with completely updated alumni records.

The directory will provide a complete listing of all living alumni with current addresses including information on each alumnus such as class year, degree(s), residence address and phone number and business or professional information when available.
