Be a mighty oak to a young acorn.

Making a successful transition from Bryant College into the business world requires preparedness and career planning. The Office of Career Services at Bryant College sponsors an innovative program called the Alumni Career Network. The network is composed of Bryant alumni involved in programs designed to help students prepare for their future. With a variety of options to chose from, you can become involved in:

Careers in . . . Series: Return to campus to speak to students about your career in . . . and to share your experiences.

Telephone interviews: An over-the-phone source of information for students who have questions about a particular career field.

Student visitations: Meet with students at your place of employment to answer questions students have about your career field.

You have the experience and expertise that Bryant students need. Interested? Simply fill out and return the form below to: Office of Career Services, Bryant College, 450 Douglas Pike, Smithfield, RI, 02917-1284. Join the Alumni Career Network—mighty oaks helping young acorns grow.

The Class of '86 sat respectfully and thoughtfully as Dr. John O. Pastore, a physician and founder of International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War, outlined the responsibilities of a graduating class in the nuclear age. Each graduate, he said, has an "obligation to return to the community and the world some service." Calling the nuclear arms race the "greatest public health threat the world has ever faced," he referred to nuclear war as the "final epidemic." As he headed to West Germany for the sixth congress of IPPNW, and in the shadow of the Chernobyl disaster, Dr. Pastore said the following to Bryant's graduating class (excerpted from a transcript of his speech):

There is enormous interest in this problem, especially now because of the Chernobyl disaster. Having been in Switzerland, I was struck that pregnant women are not eating fresh vegetables, children are not allowed to play outside in the sun, and dairy products are highly suspect and not being consumed. There is understandable apprehension throughout all Western and Eastern Europe because of what happened at Chernobyl as the result, the Soviets admit, of a terrible human error.

Where is the world's outrage over the genocide that lurks in each one of the 55,000 nuclear weapons now in the hands of the world's superpowers? If we are so concerned

Dr. John O. Pastore

“Nuclear war is bad business”

Commencement speaker

over a terrible but relatively minor nuclear accident which will result in perhaps hundreds of deaths, but not millions of deaths, where is the world's outrage? This is a challenge for me, this is a challenge for you, and to all honest-loving people to consider.

Besides the nuclear arms race and our struggle against it, we must be aware that there are many other issues which would provide opportunities with which you could serve your community and your world. There is an organization called Business Executives for National Security which I recommend to you. They have done research which indicates that the nuclear arms race is not good for business. Japan spends 1 percent of its GNP on defense and has a 10 percent annual growth rate. The U.S. spends 6 percent of its GNP on defense and has only a 3 percent annual growth rate. The Soviet Union, which has a lower GNP, spends 10 percent of it on defense and has only a 3 percent annual growth rate.

Recently, the Singer Sewing Machine Company decided to stop making sewing machines and go into the aerospace business. This has been widely characterized as a faulty move, both in a business sense and a philosophical sense. When you are in business you should look critically upon such statements, supposedly that nuclear arms race is good for business. Be critical when you hear such things.

Every day, the world spends a billion dollars on arms. That comes down to $100 million per hour and this is happening at the same time that 40,000 children are dying each day of malnutrition and preventable diseases. It is an unconscionable misallocation of the world's resources to be spent on instruments of destruction and death as opposed to instruments of health and peace.

Dwight Eisenhower once said that “every rifle, every bullet that is manufactured represents a theft from the world's hungry and the world's poor.” It is a complex economic issue and one you should work on.

Many of you will become involved in organizations like Amnesty International, the purpose of which is to free, wherever possible, political prisoners around the world in a non-violent way whether they exist in so-called capitalist or so-called communist countries. I recommend that organization to you.

Many of you will become involved in working to preserve or protect what is left of our environment, not only from nuclear destruction, but from destruction by pollutants, acid rain, sulfur dioxide, and the other by-products of a sometimes reckless civilization. There remains enormous work to be done in race relations, against anti-semitism, against prejudice, against women, and against blacks. Sometimes we have the impression that these issues are so much better now than they were a few decades ago, but more work remains to be done.

As you gather, a lot of this represents dissent and, hopefully, responsible dissent against many of the governments of the world. Sometimes it may represent or result in criticism of yourself or your families which is unjustified, and may result in charges that you are not patriotic. I urge you to disregard that sort of criticism as long as your dissent is responsible and in keeping with the patriotism we all feel. Dissent is the strong right arm of any democracy, and like the muscle in the arm, if it is not used, it atrophies and becomes useless when one needs it.

Henry David Thoreau was a proponent of civil disobedience and at one point he was put into jail. His good friend, Ralph Waldo Emerson, came by the jail and as Thoreau was looking out the window said, “Henry, what are you doing in there?” And Thoreau looked out and smiled and said, “Waldo, what are you doing out there?”

If you are true to yourself, true to your sense of justice that resides in your heart, confident of your judgment, sure in your patriotism, strong with your family and friends, then you have nothing to fear.

Trustees have a new chairman: Judge Bruce M. Selya

U.S. District Court Judge for Rhode Island, the Honorable Bruce M. Selya, was elected chairman of the Bryant College Board of Trustees at the May meeting of the board. He assumed the chairmanship from Karl Ericson on August 1.

Serving as officers with Selya will be Vice-Chairman Richard T. Dale, president of Davol, Inc.; and Secretary Roger M. Freeman, Jr., a retired Rhode Island insurance executive. Stepping down as vice-chairman is William E. Trueheart, associate secretary at Harvard University.

This is Selya's first term on the board. The Providence native has been District Court Judge since 1982. Before that, he was a judge of probate court in Lincoln, RI and a practicing attorney. He holds degrees from Harvard Law School and Harvard University.

Dale is also in his first term. He has been Davol president since 1980, after serving as the medical products and hospital supply company's senior vice-president for operations. He holds a degree from Dartmouth College.

Freeman, who was re-elected to his office, has been a trustee since 1978. He is the former president and vice-chairman of Allendale Mutual Insurance Company. He holds an engineering degree from MIT.

Fogarty addresses business community on SBDC and trading internationally

Raymond Fogarty, assistant director of the Rhode Island Small Business Development Center at Bryant, was a featured columnist in Business Fortnightly recently on the topic of international trade. The following are excerpts from his article.

For many Rhode Island businesses, exporting can mean a profitable new market for their goods and services and, perhaps, the difference between success and failure. Exporting also can help to slice the United States' staggering foreign trade deficit.

The Small Business Development Center (SBDC) at Bryant recognizes the potential advantages of trading internationally, and operates an International Trade Center for small business firms.

The Trade Center encourages Rhode Island business men and women to explore the benefits of export trade. More importantly, it operates to help them develop and exploit trade opportunities world-wide.

To accomplish this the Trade Center uses a three-pronged approach: training programs, consulting, and research services. This approach covers the areas of export market identification, organization, documentation, logistics, and financing.

Training programs, such as the World Trade Day held at Bryant last spring, provide basic information about importing and exporting and the operational aspects of international trade. These programs also include information on opportunities and procedures involved in exporting, importing, joint ventures, and licensing.

SBDC consultants in international trade provide comprehensive assistance directly to small businesses. They evaluate a company's trade capability and identify and analyze problems and needs that a company may face in exporting or importing.

Available research services provide companies with information about potential markets and define the opportunities and obstacles related to each. Information utilized includes a host of government and college reports, such as data available from the U.S. Department of Commerce and the U.S. Agency for International Development.

The SBDC also publishes Rhode Island's International Trade Guide. The free, 52-page guide, printed in cooperation with the Rhode Island Department of Economic Development, is a source book for international traders, both current and would-be.

Acting as a source of guidance to the SBDC on exporting is its International Trade committee, chaired by Donald Crane of Fleet National Bank, and including Bryant professor Dr. William Hill.

Face-to-face advice on international trade is really the only way to go for many businesses. Consultants like David Rattray, who operated an international marketing consulting firm, have assisted small to medium sized companies to enter the international marketplace by answering basic questions about market analysis, product suitability, distribution, pricing, advertising, trade exhibits, and commerce department export/import regulations. All SBDC consultants provide advice to companies free of charge.

1986 honorary degrees go to scholar, nuclear activist, and burger king

Rosabeth Moss Kanter

Dr. John O. Pastore

Nicholas W. Janikies

Anti-nuclear activist Dr. John O. Pastore, Burger King executive Nicholas W. Janikies, and business scholar Rosabeth Moss Kanter were singled out by Bryant College this year for its highest honor – honorary doctoral degrees.

Dr. Pastore, son of former Rhode Island senator John O. Pastore, spoke at undergraduate commencement and was awarded an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters. A Providence native, he is a cardiologist at St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Boston, and is secretary of International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War (IPPNW), an organization he helped found. IPPNW was awarded the 1985 Nobel Peace Prize.

A graduate of the University of Notre Dame and Yale University Medical School, he has served with the Atomic Bomb Casualty Commission in Japan, Yale-New Haven Hospital, and Massachusetts General Hospital. He is also a professor at Tufts University Medical School, and serves on a variety of medical boards and commissions.

His father received an honorary degree from Bryant, making the Pastores the first father-son team ever so honored.

Janikies is the founder, owner, and president of Jan Co., Inc., which operates 55 Burger King restaurants in Rhode Island and southern New England. A 1957 Bryant accounting graduate, Janikies also owns Quidnesset Country Club, a construction company, and a classic automobile sales company. Jan Co. employs more than 2,500 workers, making it one of the state's top 20 employers. The firm is also the largest publicly owned group of Burger King franchises in the country.

A long-time supporter of the College, Janikies presented the College with a challenge gift of $100,000 in 1981, a challenge which was met and surpassed by alumni that year. The College's auditorium is named in memory of his parents. Janikies received a Doctor of Science in Business Administration degree.

Kanter, best known for her book "The Change Masters: Innovative Entrepreneurship in the American Corporation," is Harvard Business School's first Class of 1960 Professor, an endowed chair dedicated to innovation and entrepreneurship. She is chairman of the board of Goodmeasure, Inc., a management consulting firm whose clients have included Procter & Gamble, Honeywell, IBM, Digital Equipment, General Electric, and Xerox.

The sociologist has also authored six other books, including "Men and Women of the Corporation" and "Life in Organizations." She has taught at the University of Michigan, Yale, and Brandeis Universities, and MIT. She sits on the board of directors of the Center for a New Democracy, the College Retirement Equities Fund, and the NOW Legal Defense and Education Fund. She received a Doctor of Science in Business Administration degree.

... Dr. Frank Bingham, Jr. was chosen as the top advisor of a marketing club in New England for the past year. The Boston chapter of the American Marketing Association designated the award...

... the economics and finance departments of the College initiated a working paper series this spring. The first papers presented came from Bryant's Prajapati Trivedi ("Surplus Generation by Public Enterprises for National Development") and Providence's College's Paul Cicchette ("Basis Risk in the Treasury Bill Futures Market")...

... Sidney Rollins coordinator of instructional development, offered his ideas on strategies for beginning professional development programs at a business college, at the National Conference on Professional and Personal Renewal for Faculty. The April conference was held in Atlanta...

... a second gathering of experts in computer artificial intelligence occurred on Bryant campus in June. The attendants saw and heard a satellite-broadcast symposium on starting a business in this field. The symposium was broadcast by Texas Instruments, and professor Thomas Burke handled arrangements at the College...

... in a continuing effort by the Rhode Island Small Business Development Center to help encourage foreign trade, the SBDC co-sponsored the second annual World Trade Day for state businesses in May. By bringing together dozens of experts in the area of international trade, the SBDC and its co-sponsors provided vital information for would-be and current exporters...

"Politicians, educators, the media, our young people are dependent on your counsel"

The Honorable Bruce M. Selya, U.S. District Judge for the District of Rhode Island, delivered the commencement address to the Graduate School graduating class on Friday, May 23. In the following excerpts from his speech, Judge Selya impresses on the students the need to be socially responsible and proud of being a business person:

Most of you are probably too modest to consider that your labors in the marketplace advance the causes of freedom and justice and social welfare. Aside from your family, your primary concern has been, and will continue to be, making your company more successful and more profitable. But the true measure of a business man or woman is no longer a cold column of numbers on a P and L statement. In doing business honestly and well, you assume a role that is absolutely fundamental to the success of our democracy and the quality of life in our society.

Any enterprise conducted selfishly sows the seeds of its own destruction. The paradox is starkly apparent: if selfishness equates with success, but success requires a sensitivity to broader concerns, then the most personally gratifying of rewards will attend upon those who are selfishly unselfish. That captures the heart and soul of American capitalism.

Too many otherwise intelligent people think the business world is a place where profit is king, where "equity" refers only to ownership and not to fairness, and where heartless and self-serving decisions are made strictly in terms of the bottom line. These cynics think bigger is better. That industry is a monolith that speaks with one voice, and sometimes a forked tongue.

They are wrongheaded, but they cannot be lightly dismissed. It is you and the people like you who must prevent this negativism from taking hold.

Too many young people do not graduate with a sense of excitement and mission as they enter the world of commerce. They express a willingness to do their part in saving the world, but they visualize such sentiments as separate and apart from their business lives. What is worse, as counterproductive to their success they recognize that the profit motive is the meat and potatoes of industry. But deep down, they view profits as being without humanitarian social purpose.

Nobody has told them that profit is an unavoidable cost of capital, that it is a suitable reward for risk. They have not seen the eternal truth that hard work and common sense and lofty scruples can lead to a satisfying and productive life. They think that property is something which is owned by somebody else, therefore they are not "responsible" for the state of the world or their neighbors.

Two centuries ago, the rule of law was laid down by men who understood that social justice and economic progress, like Siamese twins, are inseparable. They replaced the power of kings with the power of ideas. A constitutional scholar will tell you that putting authority above the law makes a mockery of individual liberties. An economist points out that the system that ruled the nations of the world before the American Revolution stifled not social justice alone, but economic progress as well.

The great discoveries and inventions which have changed the world originated in those lands that have historically been most free. They have come from industry - and I do not refer to a monolith because our industry itself is diverse with sometimes conflicting interests. Competition in a free and enlightened era is based on constitutional principles guaranteeing freedom of choice. And these freedoms are so fundamental to economic progress that we have woven their threads into the fabric of our laws.

Totalitarianism emerges when people are hungry and cannot harvest the fruits of their labors. And totalitarianism most often falters, as has lately happened in the Philippines and in Argentina, when the middle class is vigorous enough to fight for free enterprise. The recent decision by China's leaders to give the free enterprise system a whirl reflects a recognition that statism has brought the Chinese people a classless equality of mutual poverty and despair.

Industry today is more productive, more efficient, more farsighted, and more human. You can be proud to take your rightful places in those ranks, confident that your obligations to society can simultaneously be fulfilled.

A century ago, major businesses were, in the old phrase, the lengthened shadow of one man - Armour, Pillsbury, Rockefeller, McCormick - but no longer. Conglomerate industry has led to agglomerate achievement: business moves forward by teamwork, and our civilization benefits. The process of converting discoveries and ideas into products that people can afford and use is social work of the highest order.

As you go about the business of business, I hope that you will keep in mind that society needs you. Because a robust industry is the best medicine to create jobs and taxes and investment, but we also need you in the arena of public debate. Politicians, educators, the media, and our young people are dependent on your counsel. This is the mission which I hope you will accept.

Astronaut comes down to earth to accept Bryant honorary degree

He's spent time drifting in space lifting materials that would weigh hundreds of pounds on Earth, but are lighter than air in orbit. He's seen the sun rise and set in the space of minutes. He's gone where few men have gone before and came to Bryant to tell about it in May. The occasion: the presentation of an honorary degree to Colonel Sherwood C. "Woody" Spring, an astronaut for NASA.

Spring, who rode on the space shuttle Atlantis in 1985, was given an honorary Doctor of Science in a special noon ceremony on May 1. The former Harmony, RI resident accepted his degree from President William T. O'Hara, then showed a series of slides and a film of his journey which depicted the hard work of an astronaut and the grandeur of space – and the Earth. His presentation included gentle lessons about the effect of man on his environment, the results of which are obvious from the vantage point of space.

Fielding questions from the audience, he repeated his statements made at other stops on his swing through Rhode Island that the space program will survive the Challenger disaster and that it was likely a fourth shuttle would eventually be constructed.

Raymond Fogarty, assistant director of the Small Business Development Center and a state representative from Spring's district, hosted the astronaut on this part of his tour through the state.

Familiar faces among those noted for years of College service

Some were being honored for the final time, others were marking important milestones as they continue service to Bryant. But faces familiar to Bryant alumni were visible when the College gave out its annual service awards in May.

Among the retirees was Professor Edward Aptt, who for many years headed the College's criminal justice program. The Captain, as he was known by his students, was not present at the ceremony due to an illness. Part time instructor William Fellner was also honored, as were three men who were known for their behind the scenes work at this campus and the East Side campus: maintenance personnel Manual Pacheco, Ferdinand Laliberte, and Emile Mandeville.

Sharing the honors for 20 years or more of service were Madeline Stetson, graduate counselor; Harry M. Robinson, Jr., professor of science; Fred Reinhardt, Jr., associate professor of mathematics; Mary Jane Pelkey, professor of English; Richard Fontaine, associate professor of accounting; Burton Fischman, professor of English; John Jolley, associate professor of social science; and custodian Barlow Egan.

Professors, administrators, faculty members, and staff personnel who were marking 15, 10, and five years of service were also celebrated.

Colonel Spring displays his Bryant citation and diploma.

Spring is a graduate of Ponaganset High School in Gloucester, and he earned a B.S. degree from the U.S. Military Academy and an M.S. degree in aerospace engineering from the University of Arizona in 1974. This was his first honorary degree.

Selected as an astronaut candidate in 1980, Spring spent a year in training, which qualified him for an assignment as a mission specialist. His first (and, he said, hopefully not last) spaceflight held historic importance, as it marked the first time a person had practiced certain construction techniques in space.

Recognizing the advocates: SBDC presents awards

The Rhode Island Small Business Development Center at Bryant, in conjunction with the U.S. Small Business Administration, honored nine Rhode Islanders for their contributions to the small business community in 1985-86.

Winners were Steven J. Seeche, tax principal of Arthur Young and Company; John Howell, publisher of the Warwick Beacon; Charles Adams, Sr., executive director of the Opportunities Industrialization Center; William C. Martin, veterans coordinator for the state department of employment security; Linda H. Sullivan, executive director of the Cranston Chamber of Commerce; C. Kenneth Wild, Jr., president of Mays/Marshall and Meier Company; Russell F. Godin, vice-president of Eastland Bank; Steven Dodd, president of Tuition Management System; and Martin Kits van Heyningen, marketing director of Sailcomp Industries, Inc.

The awards were given at the SBDC's Providence office.

... Terry Johnson and Hsi Li, professors of finance, co-authored a paper that was presented at the Southeast Financial Association in Dallas last March. Their paper was called "Strategic Dominance in N Degrees versus the Moments Approach in Portfolio Risk Analysis..."

... two forums in May, offered by the Small Business Development Center, gave women the chance to express their concerns about small business ownership. Women delegates who are attending a small business conference this month headed the sessions...

... Bryant Greeks did their best for charity over the spring semester, raising money for various organizations. Tau Epsilon Phi fraternity brothers could be seen riding a teeter-totter to raise money for the City of Hope, a non-profit center for treating patients with catastrophic diseases. And the Greek Letter Council held a dance marathon to benefit the American Cancer Society...

Smallest state needs a lot of care: conference on economic development

Who's keeping an eye on the total picture as $1 billion annually is being spent on residential and business development in Rhode Island?

The need for careful forethought in this process was underscored June 11 when Bryant sponsored "Planning for Rhode Island's Development: Creating a New Agenda," a one-day conference. Dr. Pat Norton, Sarkisian professor of business economics, organized the event.

In opening the conference, Governor Edward DiPrete called for more cooperation among those parties who have an impact on the development of land in the state. Dr. William T. O'Hara, Bryant president, added that innovative management strategies are also necessary in this planning process.

Dan Varin, director of statewide planning for the state of Rhode Island, estimated that in the next 15 years, the population will grow by 46,000. He predicted an increase of 50,000 jobs and the need for 18 - 20,000 new housing units. All of this, he said, will mean between 200 and 350 square miles of land that will be developed.

Robert Bendick, director of the Rhode Island Department of Environmental Management, stressed that in the next five years, serious attention must be given to the following areas: watersheds and aquifers, wetlands, Narragansett Bay, the state's rivers, barrier beaches and coastal ponds, prime farmland, major landmarks, and public access to the shore. He pointed to individual communities, who, he said, must have a mechanism to decide what needs to be saved.

Save the Bay, an environmental organization, was represented by Trudy Coxé, executive director, who said that Save the Bay takes an interest in land-use decisions because land-use is key to water quality and the condition of Narragansett Bay. In 1986, she noted, the state still lacks a land-use bill and most towns do not have a full-time planner or a comprehensive development plan.

Thomas Mulhearn, executive vice-president of the Rhode Island Association of Realtors, spoke for his industry, going on record as being opposed to no-growth zoning. He endorsed cluster and public utility district zoning, condominiums, and multi-family housing over 2 - 5 acre minimum lot zoning. This, he said, would allow for open space and farmland to survive.

Richard Baccari, representing the Downing Corporation of developers, criticized the existing process for getting government approval for developing economically sensitive areas. He said the process ends up adding about $10,000 to the cost of each housing unit. The industry, he said, would be willing to fund a Review Board to make the process "more rational and less adversarial."

Also speaking was Anna Prager, town planner for South Kingstown, who outlined a process of development in that town which seems to meet the ideas of both developers and environmentalists, and Robert Lemire, author of Creative Land Development: Bridge to the Future. He stated that in order for less adversarial relationships to occur in development processes, each party needs to find a "larger vision of the desired results." He stressed the need in Rhode Island for preferred assessment for farmlands, more state funding to cope with the $1 billion in development annually, and a real estate transfer tax to fund land banks for open space.

Ralph Papitto '47 honored by his other alma mater: Suffolk University

Bryant alumnus Ralph R. Papitto, who was the subject of a Bryant Review cover profile last year, picked up an unusual honor this spring as Suffolk University granted him an honorary degree.

The founder, chairman, and chief executive officer of Nortek, Inc. received the award from Suffolk president Daniel H. Perlman, who said that "your life and career are signal examples of the American success story."

Papitto graduated magna cum laude from Bryant in 1947, and now leads a diversified company listed on the New York Stock Exchange and recognized in Fortune Magazine's 500 outstanding corporations. He attended Suffolk's Law School for two years after his graduation from Bryant.

In addition to his business expertise, Papitto was cited for his contributions to public service.

CPA review produces award winner

The Center for Management Development's annual CPA review course has produced an award-winning student. Donald A. Pease '80 was named the Nicholas Picchione Gold Medal Award winner and the Peat, Marwick, Mitchell Award winner for 1985.

Both are awards given for highest achievement on CPA examinations - the Picchione award for highest combined average on the State of Rhode Island exam, the Peat, Marwick, Mitchell award for the highest score attained among examinees of both the May and November exam.

Pease is employed by Collamati Gouveia & Company of Providence. He was honored on April 22 at a dinner hosted by the Rhode Island Society of CPAs. On hand to congratulate him was Robert Provost, coordinator of the CPA review program at Bryant.

David Brooks assumes new position as director, alumni relations

David Ross Brooks, a Bryant graduate and an employee at the College for seven years, has accepted the position of director of alumni relations, according to Dr. Robert Harrill, vice-president for institutional advancement.

Brooks, who received a bachelor's degree from the College in 1976, moves from the position of assistant director of financial aid/student employment. He has served in the financial aid office since 1979, after working as assistant branch manager of Pawtucket Savings and Trust. While working at Bryant, he also achieved a master's degree in student personnel services from the University of Rhode Island.

Brooks has been professionally active through a number of organizations and conferences related to financial aid and student employment.

"I'm anxious to get reacquainted with all of the alumni I got to know through the student employment office," he said upon his appointment. "I'm also eager to get out and see all of those alumni I haven't yet had the opportunity to meet."

1988: 125 years for Bryant

It will be the biggest celebration in the history of Bryant College, and rightfully so. 1988 will mark the 125th year of the institution, and alumni, faculty, and staff are joining together to plan a year's worth of activities to mark the occasion.

"The anniversary year will be a time of celebration, introspection, and education on the history, import, and impact of Bryant College on its community, its people, and the business world," wrote the members of the 125th anniversary steering committee in their synopsis of ideas for the event. Serving on the committee representing alumni is Paula Iacono '69.

Tentatively scheduled to begin in the spring of 1988 (to coincide with the first offering of classes at Bryant in February of 1863), the anniversary will "rededicate Bryant to its mission, and rededicate its alumni, students, staff, faculty, and the business public to Bryant's causes and goals," wrote the anniversary committee.

Alumni, as well as all other members of the Bryant community, are invited to submit their ideas on how best to celebrate this historic date. These ideas can be submitted either through Paula Iacono, or to the chairman of the committee, William Rupp, at the Office of Public Information at the College.

Corporate fundraiser appointed

Homer C. Shirley has joined the Development Office to specialize in advancing corporate support of the College.

The Providence resident most recently served as assistant director of development at the Rhode Island School of Design. Before coming to Rhode Island the Texas native was assistant director for the Drew Institute for Archaeological Research at Drew University in New Jersey. He also has been the owner and operator of two small businesses in New Jersey.

He holds a B.A. from Trinity University in Texas and an M.A. from Drew University. He is a member of the boards of Rhode Island Arts Advocates and Sojourner House, Inc., and a trustee of the New Jersey Museum of Archaeology.

Shirley's title will be director of corporate giving.

David Brooks '76, director of alumni relations

Brooks took his position on July 1, and through the summer has begun planning regional club and other events for the fall, and is looking ahead to the 1987 alumni weekend to be held in June.

Five from Bryant author new books

Five individuals from the Bryant faculty and administration have seen their books published recently, and the College threw a party in their honor.

Dr. Robert Behling, professor of computer information systems, wrote "Computers and Information Processing," an introductory textbook. The book was designed as a "user friendly" text for anyone teaching introductory data processing courses.

"American Midwives: 1860s to the Present" has been written by Dr. Judy Litoff, associate professor of history. Long noted for her expertise in this area, Litoff wrote a book that examines the history of midwives since the Civil War. The book is part of a series on medical history.

Dr. Mary Lyons, associate professor of English, wrote "Report Writing for Business," the seventh edition of a text she co-authored with Raymond Lesikar of North Texas State University. The book is intended for college juniors, seniors, and graduate students to help them present business information in report form.

"Statistics: A First Course" was published by Dr. Richard Smith, professor of mathematics. He co-authored the book with John E. Freund of Arizona State University. Scores of colleges nationwide are using the text, considered one of the most successful introductory books on statistics ever published.

Administrator E. Joseph Guay, director of academic computing, has written "Programming in VAX-BASIC." The book presents an introduction to the BASIC language designed specifically for VAX computers.

Summer ghost town?

Spirits are alive at Bryant in summer

by Dr. William T. O'Hara
President

Beaches, boardwalks, and backyard barbecues— that's what summers are made of. Once commencement passes late in May, Bryant faculty, administrators, staff, and students pack up their briefcases and backpacks and head for their summer vacations, right?

Well, not really. Many of us do take vacations during the summer months. However, contrary to popular belief, Bryant does not close its doors and become a ghost town during June, July, and August.

"Actually, I'm busier in the summer than I am any other time of the year," says Bill Angel, superintendent of housekeeping. What keeps Bill so busy is the amount of activity at the College, ranging from summer school to residential conferences to basketball camps. He sums up Bryant's success in these programs with one word: preparation.

Bill and his staff are continually setting up for the various seminars and conferences that come to Bryant during the summer. This year six residential conferences drew more than 500 people. Residential and one-day conferences are booked through the Center for Management Development. The Center's staff keeps busy coordinating dormitories and food service, providing transportation, planning special activities and logistical support, not to mention coordinating the programs.

"The Center is a hub of activity in the summer," according to Kathy Ashton, assistant director of operations.

"We have people coming here from all over the country and sometimes overseas." The majority of residential conferences at the Center are regional or national in scope and include organizations like Textron, Josten's American Yearbook, L.G. Balfour Company, and the Professional Insurance Agents of New England. "From executives to high school students," Kathy said, "you really get to meet a terrific cross-section of people." The Center's sponsorship of these programs gives Bryant excellent regional and national exposure. Many of the participants request undergraduate catalogs for their children because they have developed an appreciation of Bryant during their stay.

Individual faculty members also take advantage of the summer to sponsor special conferences on unusual topics, such as managing the development of Rhode Island, and artificial intelligence.

Besides the numerous conferences over the summer, faculty are still teaching courses. This summer about 600 graduate students and 700 undergraduate students attended classes until the end of July. More than 850 entering freshmen were introduced to the campus in three orientation sessions in June and July.

Speaking of the class of 1990, the new freshman dormitory will be opening in September and the Bryant Center later in the fall. Both construction projects have generated lots of summer activity.

The groundskeeping department also prepared for the arrival of the New England Patriots. When the Patriots reported in July, bringing with them 150 people, our staff had to have the gym and playing fields for practice in tip-top condition.

And finally, many of you attended one of summer's biggest events – alumni weekend. This year over 500 people attended the reunion in June. It was a rousing weekend for all from the record number of over 100 from the Class of '81 to this year's oldest participant from the Class of '15. The returning alumni sensed the many changes and saw a Bryant on the move.

Bryant is very much alive during the summer months. Although the Unistructure may be quieter, and you may get to park more easily, it's far from being a ghost town. "But," as Bill Angell says, "once everyone leaves, our job is to put everything back in place and make sure Bryant is ready in September for a new student generation."

Drury adding three promising players to basketball team

Three noteworthy high school players will be joining the Bryant men's basketball team when they begin studies here in the fall, according to coach Leon Drury.

Brian O'Donnell, a 6'8" center from Easthampton, MA, Bob Arnemann, a 6'7" forward from Stonybrook, NY, and Jarrard Bradley, a 6'3" forward from Centerreach, NY are the new additions.

Arnemann was an All-League selection at Ward Melville High in Setauket, Long Island last year. He was the league's leading rebounder with an average of 12 rebounds per game. He also averaged 12 points per game.

O'Donnell was an All Western Massachusetts selection last year at Easthampton High. He averaged 15 points per game and led the league in shot blocking with 164 blocks.

Bradley was a first-team All Suffolk County selection for Centerreach High where he averaged 22 points per game.

The three newcomers will join seven lettermen that Drury is expecting to have in the lineup for the season. The Indians open their fall campaign on November 22 against Lowell University.

Quinnipiac, St. Michael's to join Bryant in Northeast-10 conference

Bryant will be competing against two new schools beginning this fall when Quinnipiac College and St. Michael's College join the Northeast-8 Conference, effectively changing the name to the Northeast-10 Conference.

Other schools in the conference are American International College, Assumption College, Bentley College, Merrimack College, Saint Anselm College, Springfield College, and Stonehill College.

Al Shields, conference commissioner, said that "both colleges have outstanding all-around athletic programs and have been competing with most Northeast-8 members for years." He said the addition of these two institutions would greatly increase the regional and national visibility of the conference, with representation in Vermont and Connecticut.

Bryant was a charter member of the conference, which was founded in 1979. Sports in which teams compete include baseball, men's and women's basketball, men's and women's cross country, men's golf, men's and women's soccer, softball, men's and women's tennis and women's volleyball.

In 1985-86, Bryant was conference champion in both golf and women's basketball.

BRYANT ATHLETIC HALL OF FAME

The Bryant athletic program has come along way. What once was a few informal teams is now one of the most successful NCAA Division II programs in the East.

Much of the credit for that success belongs to the former athletes, coaches, and friends of the College.

To honor these former athletes, the Athletic Department has announced the creation of a Bryant Athletic Hall of Fame.

The Hall will be open to all former Bryant athletes, coaches, and individuals associated with the athletic program. Selection will be based upon athletic achievement while at Bryant; or by athletic, business, or public service achievements by former athletes after their graduation from the College or significant contributions to the world of athletics by a former Bryant student.

The first inductions will be held in February, 1987. But to make the Hall a success we need your help. Over the next few months, we will be gathering nominations for the Hall's first inductees. Make sure your class is represented. Send your nominations on this form.

Attendance doubles at reunion; five receive College honors

Nearly 500 alumni, staff, faculty members, and friends attended this year's alumni weekend on June 6, 7, and 8, doubling attendance from last year. In events in the Unistructure, outdoors, and under a colorful circus tent, the College community got reacquainted with its alumni, especially those from the reunion classes (those ending in 1 or 6).

The awards dinner on Saturday evening was again the centerpiece for the weekend, where six individuals were honored by Bryant.

Michael F. Filippelli, accounting professor, was honored by the alumni with the Distinguished Faculty Award for 1986. A certified public accountant, Filippelli served as chairman of the accounting department for 13 years. He has also taught at Providence College and has held accounting posts with Brown University and Ernst & Whinney.

The Nelson Gulski '26 Alumni Service Award was presented to a familiar face at reunion weekends - Helen C. Bochenek of the Class of '34. A retired real estate broker and a long-time friend of the College, she is currently serving as chairperson of the Emeritus Society. The Gulski Award is presented each year to an individual who has served the College in a special way.

Three alumni were honored with the Distinguished Alumni Award. They are Robert H. Sweet '49, Jean M. Belhumeur, Jr. '54, and James D. Baird '61.

Sweet, a resident of Ridgefield, CT, is the owner, chairman of the board, and president of the Robbins Company, custom manufacturers of recognition and award jewelry. He is also a trustee of the Silvermine Guild, a member of the Sales Executives Club and International Mint, and a trustee of the King School in Stamford.

Belhumeur is president, chief executive officer, and chairman of the board of Scan-Optics, Inc. The East Hartford executive joined the manufacturer of automated data entry systems in 1973. A certified public accountant, he was Connecticut's Small Business Person of the Year in 1984. He's a member of the board of the University of Hartford Associates and president of the East Hartford Chamber of Commerce.

Baird is partner and principal of Baird, Fletcher, & Associates, a consulting firm which specializes in capital formation, divestments and acquisitions, marketing, and finance. Before that he was associated with Advanced Terminals Inc. and Lamson Corporation. The Syracuse, NY resident is a member of the board of the Huntington Family Center, secretary and board member of the University Club of Syracuse, and a member of the Syracuse Chamber of Commerce and Manufacturers Association of Central New York.

For the first time in history, the Chancellor's Bowl and the President's Cup were awarded to the same class: the Class of '36. The Chancellor's Cup, given by the late E. Gardner Jacobs, is awarded to the class achieving the highest level of donor participation for the Bryant Fund. Thirty-six percent of the Class of '36 made donations to the Bryant Fund this year. The President's Cup, given by President William T. O'Hara in memory of his mother, Kathryn Armstrong O'Hara, honors the class with the highest dollar contribution. The Class of '36 donated $7,302 this year. Second place for the Chancellor's Bowl this year went to the Class of '56; second place for the President's Cup to the Class of '61.

Among the weekend's highlights was a performance by hypnotist Frank Santos, a jazz cabaret, campus tours, a financial planning seminar conducted by finance professor Chantee Lewis, a dance sponsored by the Class of '81, the Loyal Guard Luncheon, in which the Class of '36 was formally inducted into that group, and the dance - featuring alumus Glenn Jordan's band - following Saturday's award dinner.

Open call to alumni and friends for September golf tournament

Once again, Quidnessett Country Club will be the setting for the Southeastern New England Alumni Chapter's fourth annual golf tournament on Monday, September 8. A $55 fee includes lunch, green fees, cart rental, locker room facilities, and a steamship round buffet dinner.

A hole-in-one on 5 will win a new Alfa Romeo car donated by Miranda Toyota. Wayne Distributors will provide free refreshments. SNEAC welcomes other donations of products, with no item too small.

Lunch begins at 11:30 a.m. followed by a shotgun start at 1 p.m. For more information, call the Office of Alumni Relations at (401) 232-6040.

Check your diplomas

If you graduated in a year ending in a 2 or a 7, 1987 is going to be a special year for you. That makes you a member of a reunion class year, and a special guest at the 1987 Alumni Weekend.

According to Mary Dupre, assistant director of alumni relations, plans for this weekend are being discussed early to make the weekend even more special. Anyone from the classes of 1937, 1942, 1947, 1952, 1957, 1962, 1967, 1972, 1977, or 1982 who wants to participate in planning events should call her at (401) 232-6040.

Also, anyone who was a member of any fraternity or sorority at Bryant should look towards June as a time for reunion, too. Special events are being scheduled for you at Alumni Weekend. Call Mary Dupre for further details, or to express your ideas.

And the alumni shall lead . . .

With alumni interest in Bryant growing at unprecedented rates (keeping in step with the rapid growth in Bryant activities and mission), a leadership conference was held in March to coordinate the ideas of key alumni as to how the College can best be served by alumni activities.

Volunteers representing the New York, New Haven, Hartford, and Rhode Island/

Southeastern Massachusetts regional chapters attended, discussing ways to strengthen communication between the College and alumni chapters, and examining the purpose of chapters, how they are established, and how they grow.

Based on reaction from the attendees that the conference was very productive, similar conferences may be repeated annually.

Four Bryant alumni who brought their management expertise to help seniors in their career searches

Four alumni map out management for Bryant seniors

Four Bryant alumni fielded the questions of management majors in February. The questions answered concerns about what can be done with a management major, descriptions of job responsibilities, career paths, necessary skills, and time demands, among other topics.

Speaking were Susan Mattarocci '78, manager of services for American Tourister;

John Lipa '68, manager of union relations for General Electric; David Wall '74, senior vice-president and manager of Rhode Island Hospital Trust National Bank; and Joseph Winthrop '79, branch manager of Computer Assistance, Inc.

The Society for the Advancement of Management co-sponsored the informal forum with the Office of Career Services.

Wide field narrows to Allegretti as Graduate School honors its Businessman of the Year

The Bryant College Graduate Alumni Association this year chose a Providence accountant as Businessperson of the Year for 1986, and honored him at an April 5 dinner.

Anthony T. Allegretti '58 '85 MST, managing partner of Allegretti Major & Company, was chosen in the second year of the awarding of this honor. Currently enrolled in Bryant's certificate of advanced graduate studies program, he has been a CPA since 1961 and a partner in his own firm since 1967. He began his career with Blackman & Blackman of Providence in 1959.

Allegretti, a Lincoln, RI resident, has been active in many community activities, including the North Providence Little League and Babe Ruth League, the Lincoln Rotary Club, and the Rhode Island Society and the American Institute of CPAs.

Also honored at the dinner were graduate faculty members with long years of service to the College, and the 1986 inductees into Delta Mu Delta, the honor society for business.

What's up with alumni?

Dear Alumni:

The 1986-87 year promises to be a blockbuster, both academically and alumni-wise, if I may coin a phrase. Bryant is alive and well and gearing up for an exciting year.

The first Alumni Chapter Leadership Conference held in March of '86 was so well received and attended, it was requested that we hold this worthwhile activity annually in the fall.

This year's Alumni Reunion Weekend was attended by more alumni from more diverse geographical areas than any in Bryant's history. I know this activity will continue to grow in '87.

Many, many more innovative alumni programs are planned for this year. I wish I could take all of you on a personal tour of our contemporary, growing, scenic campus and explain in greater detail what's in store for Bryant and its alumni. Since this is impossible, I'm going to rely on the Bryant Review's new section, "What's Up with Alumni." Be sure to look for this column near the Class Notes section in your next issue.

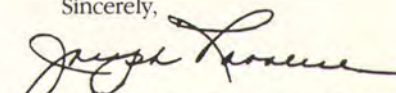

There will be other communications to you, keeping you up-to-date on alumni news and chapter activities. But I also need one other very important avenue of communication: you.

Each and every one of you is important to the success of the Association. I need your thoughts and opinions. I need you to keep in touch with your classmates, get involved in your local chapters. If there isn't one in your area, let us know; we'll help you start one. If you have any suggestions at all of what you'd like to see happen with Bryant and your Association, please send them to me directly at: P.O. Box 302, S. Windsor, CT 06074.

I promise you an exciting, challenging year as your President. But remember, I represent you. Help me make you a proud member of the Bryant College Alumni Association.

Sincerely,

Joseph R. Ravalese, Class of '54
President
