Hey there. And welcome to our short episode wrapping up the Spring 2023 season at Futures in Languages, a podcast showcasing stories from UCF's Modern Languages and Literatures Department alumni. I'm your host, Christina Torres, and on behalf of the Modern Languages Alumni Engagement Committee, I'd like to say thank you for listening to the alumni stories in the spring 2023 season. I hope you'll join me for more alumni stories in our upcoming fall 2023 season. Sound recording and editing for this podcast is brought to you by yours truly. Special thank you to my colleague Anne Pucha for her support with alumni recruitment. Thank you also to our undergraduate student volunteers, Cassidy Menk and Miley Sangria, for their help with the "Ask our Alumni" segments and promotional assistance this season. As usual, I'd like to give a shout out to DaVideo Guy for our intro and outro music, folk guitar music track downloaded from freesound.org. Finally, I'd like to give our biggest thank yous to our alumni guests for joining me on Zoom to share their stories. Virginia Vasquez, Amy Crawford Weschler, Megan Wasserman, Emily Irogoyen, Tyler Fisher, Cristal Ramirez, and Daniella Sauri. Thank you for being a part of our fourth season. Tune in again in August 2023 to hear more alumni stories from the Modern Languages department. If you have a question about language learning, or opportunities that can come from language learning, please send us a message at modernlanguages@ucf.edu with the subject title Questions for Alumni. Who knows, you might hear your question answered by a guest in a future podcast. Here's wishing all our listeners a safe and happy summer.
