

Student vote should be exercised

by Inger Gire

The right and privilege of a free vote is a concept to which this country has always clung.

Wars have been fought to ensure that this right, the right to determine by ballot who will represent the people, shall not be limited to only those owning property, only those having white skin or only those who are male.

If you asked any ten, or twenty or million Americans what the advantages of their citizenship are, the right to vote would probably rank high on the list of responses.

So what, you ask? What does all this talk about "rights" and "concepts" have to do with our small-scale student government election being held today and tomorrow?

Only this.

Parkland's student body numbers in the thousands, but precious few of those thousands ever take the few minutes necessary to cast their vote in a StuGo election. They simply can't, or won't, take the time to vote for a candidate who wants to represent them.

Do you think that a Parkland student government election isn't as important as a state or national election?

Whatever the scope of the election, or the size of its electorate, the function is the same. It enables you to cast your ballot for someone whose goals are the same as yours and for someone whose voice will represent your voice when issues are decided.

There can never be a small or unimportant election.

It isn't by chance that we are asked to "exercise" our voting privilege. Just as with a muscle, a right or privilege can become useless and die without exercise.

Voting in the student government election today, or tomorrow, will help exercise your rights, and your vote will make your voice heard. And, if you vote in the next election, and the next, voting may even become a habit you can't break.

We couldn't ask for more than that.

news digest

In a statement issued by the Israeli government early Monday morning, Prime Minister Menachem Begin rejected any charges that the government was responsible for the massacre of Palestine civilians that occurred in two Beirut refugee camps.

The massacre that began Friday and lasted until early Saturday, left hundreds of men, women and children dead. Information based on American Embassy witness accounts cites the death toll at 300. More deaths are expected.

The glittering crowd that gathered in Monte Carlo Friday for Saturday's funeral service for Princess Grace of Monaco could not outshine the sadness of her tragic death. European royalty, as well as Hollywood greats, assembled in Monaco's cathedral where, 26 years earlier, a similar crowd had witnessed her fairy-tale wedding to Prince Ranier III. Princess Grace, 52, died Tuesday, Sept. 14, after a family decision was made to take her off a life-support system that had kept her alive 4 hours after she had been declared clinically dead.

In recognition of state's prairie heritage, Gov. Thompson has named Sept. 19 through 25 National Prairie Week. The idea originated in Eureka, Ill., at Davenport Elementary School where a class of fourth-graders expressed concern that 99.9 percent of Illinois prairie land has been plowed.

Election candidates present platforms

Bob Davies

My name is Bob Davies and I am running for a seat on your student senate. I am a newcomer here at Parkland, but this is not a disadvantage, as some might see it. Being a newcomer, I have no preconceived notions of what should be done. I can make clear, fresh decisions and form new ideas to help you, the students of Parkland.

If elected, I will circulate through the school, discussing your ideas and views. There must be a continuous communication system between the students and government, and I feel that this is a senator's job. A job I feel I can fulfill. In addition, my schedule allows me to keep far beyond the four office hours required to be kept by a Senator. This time will be spent talking to you.

I have some ideas, but I will be counting on the student's help as well because it is the student's senate.

Drew Marchetta

Before I even get in to what my intentions are if elected, I would like to comment on the fact that the Prospectus is allowing candidates column space for only 150 words.

That hardly leaves me with enough space to say that I am a sophomore transfer student from Illinois State University, where I was involved in various student organizations.

I also have little space in which to state that I hate red tape, bureaucracy and being treated impersonally. Those are some of the reasons that I transferred from I.S.U. to here.

I'd like to add (if I had enough room) that if it becomes necessary for any one of you to come to Student Government with a problem, I'll take a personal interest and try to make your involvement as trouble free and easy as possible.

Well, I've used up almost all my space (allowing only 150 words probably saved everyone from a lot of boredom anyway).

I suppose I should add that my name is Drew Marchetta and that I am running for Student Government Vice-President.

Martin Maske

Hi! My name is Martin Maske, and I am running for student senator on Sept. 22 and 23.

My qualifications include being an Eagle Scout, being president of two clubs in high school and participating in statewide mock political conventions.

If elected senator I promise to do my best to be aware of student needs, opinions and attitudes. I also promise to be available in the student government office (X-160) four hours every day during regularly scheduled class hours for your benefit.

Also, according to the Student Government Handbook, I would be required to hold at least one informational meeting a semester. But, as your senator, I would hold at least two meetings a semester. I feel the more you are informed, the more input you will put into student government.

All in all I promise to uphold all the duties and responsibilities of a senator and even surpass them to better serve you.

Jill Peckham

Hi, I'm Jill Peckham and I'm running for the office of Vice President of the Student Government. I feel my extensive background and experience in Student Government qualify me for this position. During high school, I was elected Senator and Secretary of the Student Senate. In addition to these posts, I was Chairman of the Activities Committee one year and school representative to District and State Student Council conventions for two consecutive years.

After high school, I worked for two years with the Dean of Students in the Division of Student Affairs at the University of Illinois.

I believe that no representative body can exist without the participation of the people being represented. Consequently, my goals as Vice President would include building better communication between students and the student government, the representation of the views and concerns of all students to the government and promotion of student input and participation in college activities.

Regina Rassi

To the Parkland Students: Vote for me! I promise to respectfully listen to anything you have to say, to help make necessary changes, to represent your voices actively, and to get the job done.

Mike Schoepflein

Going into this Student Government election, I feel confident that I have the necessary enthusiasm, dedication, and experience to do the job well. My experience as a representative of the student body extends back five years and includes a long list of contributions and responsibilities.

Although I'm in my first year at Parkland, I feel that with my enthusiasm I would be a great benefit to the students here and to the activities program.

I have a strong interest in encouraging student interactions and I feel that the student activities program is the heart of student involvement in areas other than just academics here at Parkland. My goals for the year are to examine the present activities program, and with input from the student body, make the necessary changes that will increase its appeal.

I feel all students at Parkland would benefit from an expanded and revised activities program. Thank you.

Ken Silverman

Hello! My name is Ken Silverman, and I am running for the office of Treasurer of Student Government.

I am the kind of person who goes out of my way to do what I feel is right and to get the job done the correct way. I am a fighter, and I will fight for our rights as students.

My previous experience at Parkland includes serving Phi Beta Lambda as membership & fund raising chairperson. I am also a member of the Ski Club.

My major is Business Management and have taken several accounting classes. I have six years experience in bookkeeping and accounting at a camp where I was assistant to the director. I also have three years of experience as a cashier in a currency exchange.

Remember: Vote for someone on your side as Treasurer for your Student Government. Save the silver. Vote Silverman for Treasurer.

Eddie Simpson

I am running for the office of Senator because I enjoy people, and I like helping anyone if it is within my power to do so.

I have held many offices in the past.

I was a class president in high school and have held administrative offices in several business, fraternal and veterans organizations as well as union offices. I am an active officer of the Champaign County Bowling Association.

I am a 35-year-old native of Urbana, married, and have no children. (Although Noopy & Friskie, my dogs, THINK they're children.)

I am a very open-minded person, responsive to the feelings of others. I am an excellent listener, and I have no trouble expressing myself. I am usually very out-going and easy to talk to. I neither put myself above, nor below, any other individual.

I feel I can represent each member of the student body equally, regardless of age, race, physical disability, physical appearance, or make of car. (I do, however, draw the line at body odor).

If elected, I promise to be accessible to anyone who should wish to be heard, and to express their sentiments to the Senate. If not elected, I'll probably be found loitering around the hallways, flirting with the girls, and getting into trouble.

Kim VanWinkle

I am running for a position on the Student Government Senate. The position I would like to hold is that of a Senator. My qualifications for this position are: four years as Senator, two years President of Student Body, one year Vice-president, and one year Secretary for Student Government in my high school.

I am a Freshmen here at Parkland and would like to have direct contact with the students. I feel that our communication is the best way for me to know how to vote intelligently.

Remember to vote for "RIP", Number 54.

I won't fall asleep on the job!

Jon Vercellono

Hello, my name is Jon Vercellono and I am running for senator in student government. The reason I am running is partially just because I want to get involved in student politics but primarily because I believe that there are a great many unseen problems in the operation of student-government.

I do not wish to make the same boring repetitious promises found in so many student government elections each year. This is because I have learned in my years in a student government in high school that these promises rarely turn out the way you expect them to. It is for this reason that I wish to avoid committing myself in any way.

My main concern at this time is feeling that unfortunately there is little mixing of full time, part time, and night students. My objective, upon election would be this: to insure that all of every student's thoughts and ideas and views would be thoroughly incorporated into each and every meeting.

One apparent problem at Parkland is lack of identification between the majority of the student body and the student government. If elected I would certainly try to make myself known in order to hear every student's ideas and feelings. If elected I will do my best to bring the operations of student government into clear focus. In other words, I think that the voting as well as the non-voting students should have an idea of who is working for them and making decisions that affect them.

In closing, the one promise I can honestly make is to keep myself as available for students as much as possible.

Children's theater group performs new play

by Inger Gire

For the Parkland Department it began in May of this year with a phone call from the library in Ogden.

The theme for the Lincoln

Trails Library System summer program for children was "From A to Zebra." Could Parkland provide performance material that would fit in with this theme?

Within a short time Children's Reader's Theater had produced a 40-minute program designed for children from pre-school to high school age and "From A to Zebra" was ready to go on the road.

The Lincoln Trails System publicized the event and, says David

Jones, "Within two or three days we had a dozen bookings set up."

Jones, a Parkland speech instructor, and Paula Gray share writing, producing and directing credit for the production.

The play is made up from a combination of literary styles Jones said, and includes poetry, prose, limericks and tongue-twisters.

The cast consists of five Parkland students, Traci Suhor, Cheryl Zimmerman, Jim Adams, Ronny Buni and Veronica Petrillo. All have been with the production since the beginning.

The group also has been asked to appear at the 3rd annual WEFT street festival promotion on Sept. 25. This live-broadcast performance will also be shown on local cable access Channel 24 at 12:45 p.m.

Cast member Traci Suhor said they all enjoyed playing for children. "From A to Zebras" is designed for children, she said, "But we find that adults enjoy it as much, if not more, than the children do."

Jones said he believed the experience had been a good one for the cast and audience alike. "Children's Theater is a good area for our department to explore," he said. "It seems to be a very popular medium."

College remark causes reaction

by Scott Gissing

With the upcoming gubernatorial race, I believe that this piece of information might interest Parkland students. During the last Parkland College Board of Trustees' meeting, an article was presented to me. The article came from an issue of the "Illinois Times," a weekly newspaper published in Springfield, and consisted of an interview with the democratic candidate for Governor, Adlai Stevenson.

Since Adlai Stevenson is campaigning for the highest political office in the state, you would think that he would know about the vital function of the community college system in Illinois. But after reading his interview, I seriously believe that Stevenson is dangerously misguided.

Stevenson stated, "I go to those community colleges. The most popular course in Illinois is secretarial services. The second most popular is law enforcement. There are no jobs that exist now, let alone those that are going to exist twenty years from now. It's a great place to learn how to be a bartender if you want, but a word processor specialist or health technician or a computer programmer, no. We're just beginning in Illinois. The reactions I get are, 'Help us, we'd like to anticipate the market. We'd like to help the state, and if there is going to have any bearing on how much money we get from the state, then they get even more enthusiastic.'"

Putting Stevenson's statement in perspective to Parkland College, and my position as your Student Government President, I might as well direct my senators to forget about working on new picture I.D. cards and instead purchase each of you a shot glass.

Obviously from Stevenson's statement, he is totally ignorant of the community college system. Stevenson seems to be unfairly comparing community colleges to larger educational facilities like the University of Illinois. Community colleges, such as our own Parkland College, are vital to the education of the American public.

Parkland is a major stepping stone for many students who may not have the money to go the University of Illinois or other four-year colleges but plan on transferring there after their sophomore year. Parkland and other community colleges in the state also give an opportunity for individuals to go back to better education. (The median age at Parkland is 26.)

Looking through the Parkland College 1982-1983 catalogue, I was not able to find any courses pertaining to bartending, while there were two year associate degrees offered in applied science, nursing, radiologic technology, respiratory therapy, therapeutic recreation, dental hygiene, animal health technology, surgical technology, data processing, pharmacy technology, and awards of proficiency were offered in the fields of nurse assistant, visual screen word processing, IBM displaywriter and word processing. This list also does not include the other 15 transfer programs, 35 two-year associate degrees, and 21 one-year certificates for other Parkland educational programs that Stevenson did not attack.

It is unfortunate that such a candidate is running for Governor of Illinois. Stevenson is totally ignorant of Parkland College and the other community college programs throughout the state. Stevenson should reconsider his opinion of community colleges for the sake of the students, faculty, and administrators.

Ironically, today I received a request from Adlai Stevenson's campaign manager to help in his running for Governor. He's got to be joking.

Scott Gissing, President
Student Government

Club designed for business students

Are you creative, ambitious, or do you enjoy meeting new people? If so, then Phi Beta Lambda is the club for you! Phi Beta Lambda is a national organization formed for the betterment of present and future business students and people interested in business.

"Phi" stands for future. Each one of us is looking into our future and trying to make a sensible decision in choosing a career of our liking. Phi Beta Lambda follows a set of goals that include the "development of competent, assertive business leadership; a better understanding of the American Business Enterprise" and gets involved in projects that are beneficial to business and citizens in the community. "Future" is represented by a crystal ball in our title.

"Beta" stands for business. Most of us would eventually like a prominent place in the business world. Phi Beta believes that to be successful in that endeavor a good education and knowledge of business methods and procedures are necessary. By being involved in Phi Beta Lambda it is possible to become aware of ways to improve standards of conduct in business so that "the greatest good comes to the greatest number." "Business" is represented by a typewriter in our title.

Leadership is a skill that we cannot be without. It is necessary in every phase of business today. By becoming involved in Phi Beta Lambda, you can work on the skills necessary to become a leader. Leadership implies honor, foresight, tact, competency, dependability, discretion, and integrity. "Leadership" stands for graduates in our title.

Our goals last year were met with much satisfaction. We attended the State Convention last April in Springfield with fees paid by funds raised in our club sales. The other goal was met by being named Club of the Year.

The members also enjoyed several other activities. We had guest speakers, such as: Eastern and ISU PBL Officers; Mr. Norman Barnett, owner of local liquor stores; and Brad Bramer, U of I Business major. The social activities we participated in were: a cook-out and hayride; a Baskin Robbins pig-out; a party after the Math Contest sale; the Variety Show; and a Hawaiian Party. As a civic duty the club visited with patients at the Greenbriar Nursing Home.

The club plans to attend several other conventions this year, including the State Convention. Several fund-raising and social activities are being planned. We welcome and encourage all new members to participate in our club. Our meetings are held every Tuesday at 11:00 in Room B226. Everybody is welcome.

Bike is victim of 'dastardly deed'

Although I'm sure this will be filed away as a "Letter to the Editor" it's actually a letter to the coward(s) that were instrumental in causing damage to my motorcycle in the A-7 parking lot on September 16th.

I suppose it would be appropriate for me to rave on about how hard I work for my money and how much my bike means to me, not to mention the hellacious price tags they put on Harley-Davidson's nowadays, but I shan't.

I would instead like to urge those social sewer rats responsible for this dastardly deed to, if they can not control their subconscious jealousy of those of us who enjoy the freedom of motorcycling, please seek some psychiatric help or counseling. Although you may consider it close enough to 1984 to quell the non-chemical free spirit of modern man, you and people like you could not be more wrong.

May your Detroit four poster, rolling cage leave you stranded in an Urbana underpass in a driving rain storm, and may you someday heed your mother's childhood advice and LEAVE OTHER PEOPLE'S THINGS ALONE!!!

Annex gets approval

by Bob Brunner

"Space to face the future" is one reason for the Parkland College Board of Trustees approval to start construction of the College's "Phase IV" program.

Citing lack of space to handle the increasing student population, the Board unanimously approved bidding to begin for the new annex on the east side of campus.

According to Parkland President William Staerkel the annex plan, titled "Phase IV", will cost approximately $1.4 million and, if bidding goes as expected, construction will begin later this year. Completion is set for the spring of 1983.

Staerkel discussed problems of over-crowding due to lack of classroom space and a shortage of office space for the college's part-time faculty. The new annex will help ease these problems, as the new building will house seven classrooms on its top floor and the bottom floor will accommodate offices for the college's administration staff.

In other Board action, for the first time in Parkland's history the Board approved a budget deficit. The $3 million deficit for the upcoming 1984 fiscal year is in part due to a major decrease in state funding for community colleges. A portion of the deficit includes money for the construction of the new annex.

The meeting was last Wednesday night, Sept. 15.

Microprecision department one of few in U.S.

by Jon Vercellono

Micro is defined in the dictionary as small or minute. Precision is the quality or state of being precise. Coupled together, these definitions give one a working definition of the Parkland Microprecision program. The Parkland catalogue goes one step further:

"...the microprecision department consists of a theoretical and practical study of electro-mechanical instrumentation." It continues, "...the department puts emphasis on the design, construction, and manufacture of micro-precision instruments such as time-fuse mechanisms for space craft, computers and photography equipment."

the program itself is one of the few of its kind in the United States. Will Risley, acting head of the Measuring Department at the U of I, is a member of the program's advisory council. Risley stated that, "The program was started because of a very real lack of teaching in the field."

Risley added that, "Today's technological advances in photography equipment, watches, and computers is another prime reason for the program's inception."

"The field is certainly not one of the glamour areas in high-tech, but there is a very real need for these people," Risley continued.

"The field will change and expand in new directions as the need becomes known," he concluded.

The program became real when the University of Illinois received a grant from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. The grant was for research on feasibility study for a Horology and Microprecision curriculum to be taught at either a four year or community college.

Fortunately, as the study was done Parkland picked up the program. This was primarily a result of Parkland's luck in being so close to the UI. Along with getting the program, Parkland was also able to get the man responsible for the program. William O. Smith, Jr., is the current head and coordinator of the Parkland Microprecision program.

Smith is a master watchmaker from the Western Pennsylvania Horological Institute, an institution founded by his father. Smith also holds a teaching certificate from the University of Pittsburgh. Smith stated that the department's main objective was "to train students to go into the instrument fields of service."

To find out more, we asked Rosalie Haines, Career Center counselor about salaries in the entry level position. Haines said, "It starts at about thirteen thousand a year; however, it also depends upon the corporation and the individual's schooling. Haines also said she felt that in the future there would be an enormous market for these people.

The field itself is definitely not one of the larger fields at Parkland. This is apparent when you learn that in 1981 there were three graduates in the field. These were Cathy Brinkman, who is employed by Kissler Institute in Elmhurst, New York as an instrument technician; Phyllis Raven, who is employed in Georgia, and Mark Venturi. Venturi is employed as an assistant energy instrument manager in Lake Geneva, Wisconsin.

As these statistics tell us, there are many more females than males in the field. Homer Foster, Placement Councillor at Parkland said, "Of fields to go into, this one certainly has a great many ups and downs."

"Especially in the watch repair aspect of it," he continued "Many people buy very inexpensive watches and when they are through they are just thrown away."

We like to think that the field will work out any flaws and will work itself around to accomodate any new trends," Foster continued.

"Many of our graduates are employed by really major companies. Among these are the Boeing Corporation of Seattle, and the Ampex Corporation of Redwood City, California. We place almost every one of our people," Foster concluded.

This field will continue to grow and change both now and in the future. It will accomodate new trends and will be a stable area to go into. As Smith said, "Microprecision is unique from a standpoint that it trains young people for a world of increasing technology. We are dealing with the world of tomorrow today."

Students in microprecision have the opportunity to learn the various steps involved in manufacturing a gear.

Hough now teaches class

by Rosalind Weber

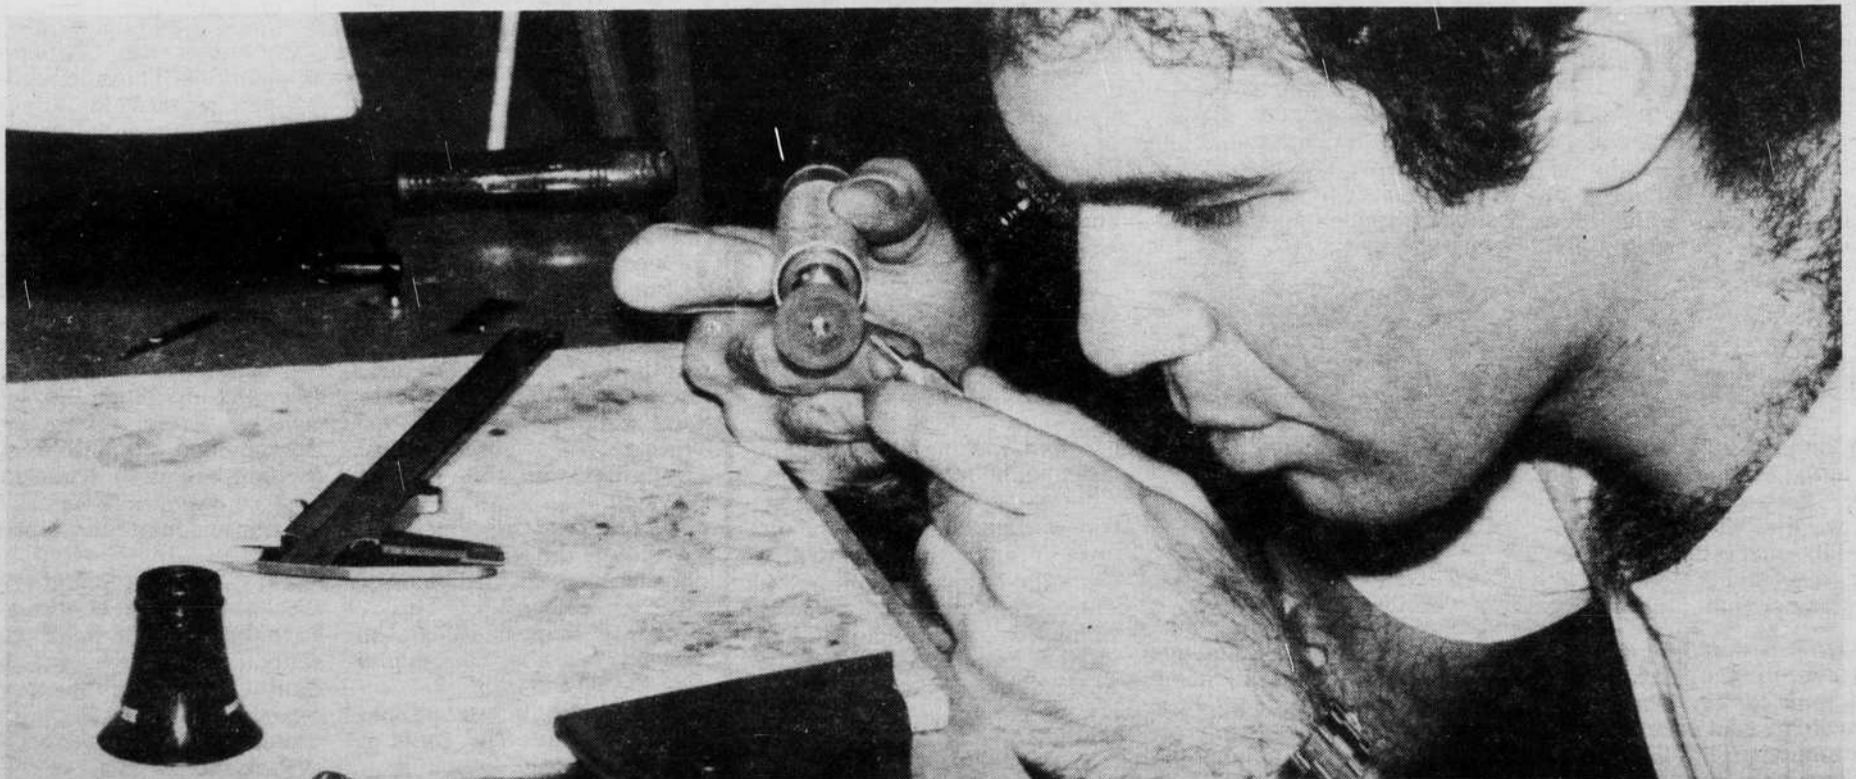

The microprecision field is taught by William O. Smith, and Gerald Hough, who himself graduated from Parkland, and is proof that the program actually does work. Hough also holds a Bachelor of Science degree, as well as a Master of Education from the U of I.

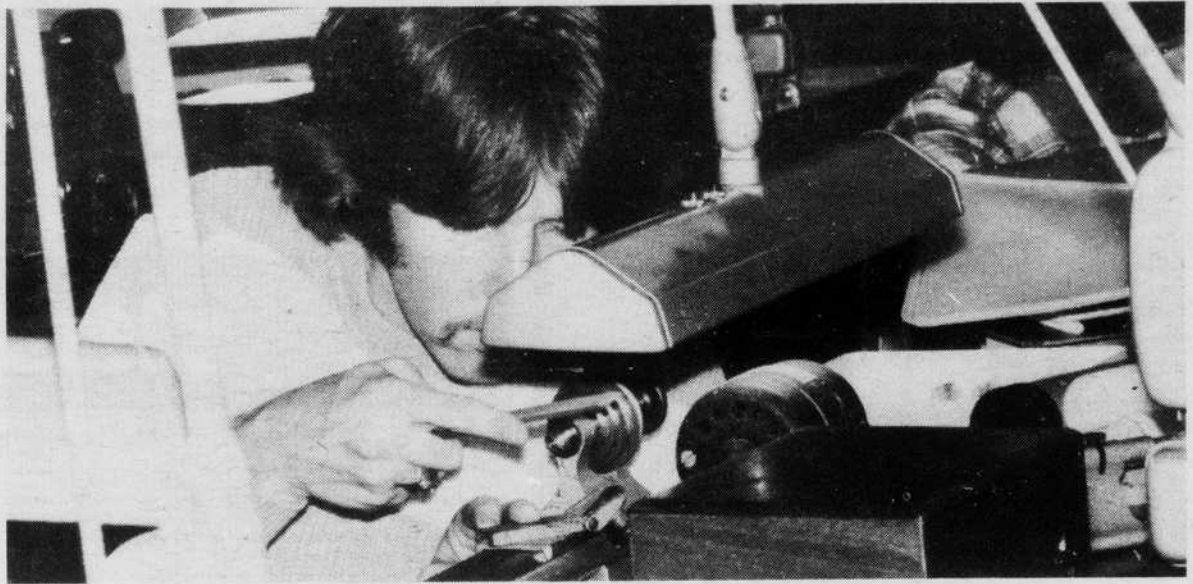

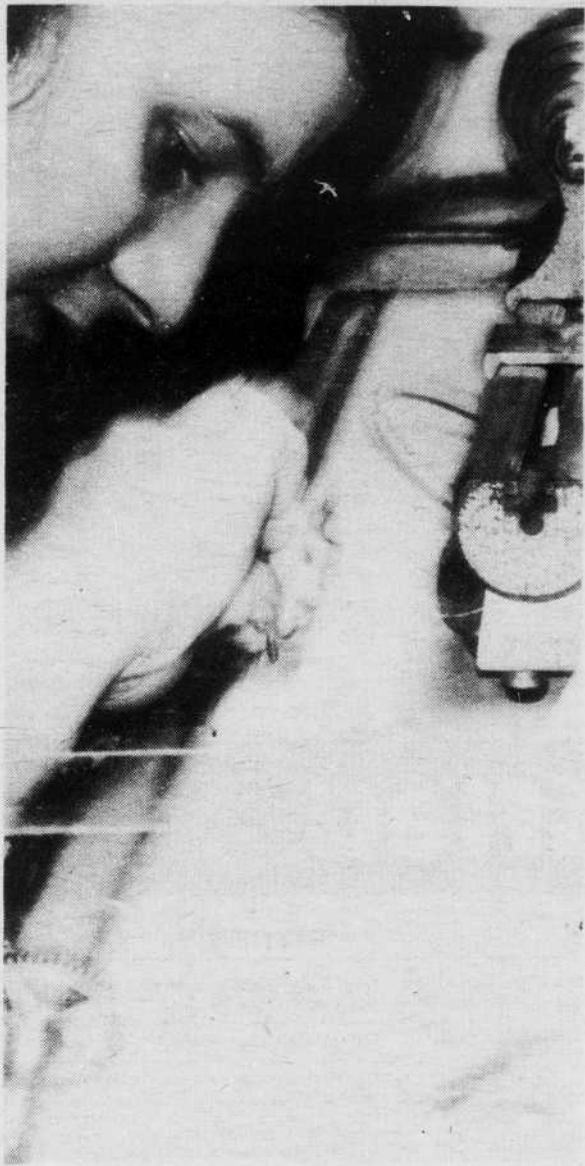

Within the field, 68 credit hours are offered. There is a charge of $17 per credit hour, which would put the cost at $1246 for the entire program. The book prices are; for MPT111, a book entitled Watch Repairers Manuel $17.95, and for MPT115 Photofabrication Methods at $.75.

The book prices are not as high as one would expect, explained Smith, because most of the courses rely on printed handouts. Altogether the average price, including books and materials would be approximately $1300.

At present, there are 25 students enrolled in the program, and openings exist for any interested students.

Microprecision... world of tomorrow

Problem lyrics can't overshadow great music

Until 1981, the Go-Go's were just another L.A. band who had managed to get a strong following from playing the numerous L.A. nightclubs and hang-outs. The group started their career as a pseudo-punk band whose members could not even play the instruments they used.

The Go-Go's (made up of Belinda Carlisle, Kathy Valentine, Gina Schock, Charlotte Caffey, and Jane Weidlin) achieved modest success through their performances in and around Los Angeles and eventually signed a contract with I.R.S. (International Record Syndicate) and released two singles, "We Got The Beat," and "Our Lips Are Sealed." However, these two songs were only available in England so American audiences did not get to hear the songs until the release of the Go-Go's first album, "Beauty and the Beat." The group had a unique blend of New Wave and Pop Rock which found a huge audience.

Now comes the group's second album, "Vacation." "Vacation" can best be described by using a line from one of the album's songs, "It's Everything But Partytime":

"We're all looking for a good time but what we get is empty rhyme"

The Go-Go's have never been accused of having socially relevant songs, but every group or singer knows that he/she/they cannot hold an audience long with lines like:

"beatnik beach it's really neat limbo down hit the ground"

"Empty rhyme" is indeed the order of the day in this album. "Vacation" may seem socially relevant to a Valley Girl (apologies to Moon Zappa) but not to the average human being.

However, the album does have its merits. For one, the Go-Go's music has never sounded better. Drummer Gina Schock is brought to the forefront sometimes and really shows her stuff, and Charlotte Caffey's work on the keyboards, especially on the songs "Vacation" and "Get Up and Go," shines through on this record. It is a shame that their song lyrics aren't up to the quality of their music.

While their musical and singing ability seem to have taken a quantum leap in quality, the Go-Go's song writing capabilities need much improvement. The group still sings about problems and issues that only a pimple-faced adolescent would understand. To be even more specific, a California pimple-faced adolescent. For example:

"he's rapping 'bout his meditating she's dying for some medication and though I shouldn't be complaining what's lacking here is entertaining"

Totally.

Even the album's concept seems to be in doubt. There are more songs obviously designed to get on the top forty, yet there are the distinctive Beach Boy sounds of "Beatnik Beach."

The Go-Go's are a good group, and I am a fan, but what they really need is a little time to figure out where they stand. The group cannot spend the rest of their career performing nothing but beach party music. I am not calling for heavy commentary on our social status or morality songs, but I am asking that a little more thought go into their next LP.

If they take the time and do not attempt to hurry it up, the Go-Go's could be great.

The Go-Go's come out with new album.

TV season may bring surprises

by Jan Alexander

Well, the new television season is upon us. The seemingly endless summer reruns won't be there to haunt us anymore.

The beginning of the new fall season is especially welcomed by the underprivileged few of us who don't have cable, for finally we can look forward to some new and different programs to watch. Right?

Well, yes and no. This season's new network programs are new, all right, but not very much different from shows you've seen in the past. Just as record companies turn out remake after remake, the television networks turn out rehash after rehash of shows that have been successful in the past. It's called playing it safe, and it's understandable in these troubled economic times.

No matter how safe the networks play it, though, there will undoubtedly be the usual four or five shows each season that bomb after the first few episodes. But never fear! Each network has mid-season replacements ready to go in case the bomb drops.

Through the help of a few inside sources, the Prospectus has obtained a sneak preview list of some of the shows you may be seeing soon:

"That's Ridiculous"—Ex-contestants from the old show "Let's Make a Deal" are back, in their original costumes, to compete for the "I'll Make a Deal with Monty" Award. To win, they must wear humiliating costumes, scream and jump up and down like kangaroos, and stuff large amounts of money into Monty's pocket before the show. Good clean fun for everyone!

"The Earls of Hickville"—Uncle Homer, his two nephews, Biff and Dip, and his niece, Floozy operate a family junkyard in Hickville, North Carolina. The nephews try their best to help out old Uncle Homer by supplying him with wrecked ten-year-old race cars almost daily. Action-packed fun for the whole family!

"Erma"—The trials and tribulations of Erma Grublinger, a 50-year-old car hop struggling to make a living for herself and her 32-year-old son Irvie, an unemployed used car salesman. Erma keeps a smile on her face while her boss, Alvin, curses, kicks, and throws milkshakes at her and the other car hops. Sure to be a laugh-a-minute.

"Flamingo Dynasty"—The weekly saga which tells the story of the Duelling family! Big Daddy Duelling, who made his fortune in the 50's selling the pink plastic flamingos people put in their front yards; Miss Willa Duelling, Big Daddy's wife, who drinks lots of bourbon and gives advice that no one listens to; B.S. Duelling, only son of Big Daddy, who lies, schemes, and beds down with just about anyone, and Janey Lou Duelling, B.S.'s wife, who gives useless advice, lies, schemes, drinks, and beds down with anyone. Who will cheat on whom this week? Watch and see!

All-Star Arm Wrestling—For the sports buff, a weekly contest of strength and showmanship. Each week, you will see world-champion arm wrestlers wear funny wigs and flashy clothes while they grunt, yell, and groan their way to the Golden Thumb Award. You will see such world-renowned athletes as Big Fist Fegorra, Boris the Bone Crusher, Hefty Hands Hank, and Mauler Moe. Don't miss a minute of the hard-hitting action!

TH's delight CU at AH

First let me make my position clear: I am not a Talking Heads fan, nor do I know much about them.

I went to the concert because their music—at least what I have heard on the radio—is interesting.

From what I had heard, the Talking Head's main thing is rhythm. Rhythm was what this concert was all about. And, although the rhythm guitarist, bassist, keyboardist and percussionists all played their own intricate rhythms, they fit very well. gether fit very well.

David Byrne is the main man in the Talking Heads. He is the lead singer, writes most of the material and almost all the lyrics. His antics on stage were very bizarre and amusing with his hopping up and down for at least 4 minutes (and I mean hopping), jumping rope with his mike cord and his jogging completely around the stage numerous times.

I have to mention that this was the first concert I have ever seen where there was a seven-month pregnant bass player.

They played most of their FM hits like "Psychokiller," "This Ain't No Disco," and "Take Me To The River," the latter closed the show as the second encore.

To sum this up, the concert was bizarre and very different, but I found it entertaining. I think that's what they wanted.

Abbey's job has variety

by Mark Brownfield

Joe Abbey, division chairman of physical education at Parkland, is a 15 year veteran of the Parkland athletic department and is the only person to have served as director of athletics in Parkland's history. A graduate of North Texas State University where he received his B.S. and M.S. degrees, Abbey began his coaching career at Tarleton State College. At Tarleton, a community college in Texas, he was head football coach and assistant track coach for two years. From there he went to Arlington Heights High School, a suburb of Dallas, where he also coached football and track for an additional four years.

His last position before joining the Parkland faculty was in California where he served as a high school athletic director for seven years.

According to Abbey the responsibilities of being athletic director are varied. "My responsibilities can range from making sure the bathrooms are clean before the basketball games to making sure Parkland College has an adequate physical education program," he said. Abbey is also responsible for making up the sport schedules, planning travel arrangements for the teams, seeing that the needed referees and umpires are present at each game, and overseeing the team coaches and their personnel.

Abbey has recently had to find a replacement for baseball coach Jim Reed, who resigned after taking the Cobras to the Illinois playoffs last year. Reed was replaced by a graduate of Parkland, Marty Kirby.

Abbey said he thought the sport's

Athletic Director Joe Abbey

program would be just as successful, or better, than last year. "Our win/loss record may not be (any) better this year," Abbey said "but that will be because the level of our competition might be a step better."

Fast Freddy is back for the second week with my record standing at 6-10—60% winning percentage. Winner of the first week's competition was Tom Harriman, with nine of the ten games correct.

We won't have any Pro games this week since there is still a chance for a strike.

Now for this week's picks. Pittsburgh at Illinois: although Pitt is ranked high in the polls, this game will be decided by whichever Hiesman trophy candidate has the best game, Moreno or Eason. If Illinois' secondary can hold Pittsburgh's passing attack, Illinois should come out on top. I pick Illinois in a close one.

In the UCLA at Michigan game, a battle of two top-20 teams, Michigan has the stronger ground game, but the Bruins have the air show. I'll take Michigan with the home field advantage.

Northern Illinois at Northwestern: the losing streak is at 34 now, but Northwestern is going to start a new winning streak at some time or another (it's about time) and this time the Cats are playing their own level of competition. I pick Northwestern.

Other Fast Freddy picks: Syracuse over Indiana, Iowa over Arizona, Miami-Florida over Michigan State, Minnesota should cruise by Washington State and Stanford will beat Ohio State. Wisconsin should roll by Toledo and, in the tie-breaker, I'll pick Notre Dame over Purdue.

Good luck, fans!

ISU transfer looks like an asset

by K C

The Parkland women's volleyball team is into their season with a 5-1-1 record in matches. Finishing 9-1 in the opening Black Hawk Tournament at Moline, the nine-member team turned in an impressive performance, losing only to the Black Hawks, 15-13. The very consistent and good combination of Linda Sinder, a outside hitter, and Paula Jones, a blocker, put the hot and humid day behind them with Sinder serving 95 percent and spiking 92 percent.

Jennine Miller, formerly of Champaign Central and a transfer from I.S.U., is just learning our system and will probably become an asset for the Cobras' Sisters Donna and Bonnie Beyers are blockers for the team and Bonnie received a second in the nationals last year.

With the skills of only two players, Sandy Berkland, Paxton, and Tracy Norton, Deland-Weldon, as starters, the team looked a little thin over last year's 13 members.

Martha Sallee, Urbana, a blocker, is our tallest member. Hitting tough against a tall Joliet team, Norton, looking for the setter's position did a fine job in 3 out of 4 game results Tuesday.

Our toughest competition in the Parkland region is Illinois Central College, which was sixth in the nation last year. The Cobras met I.C.C. Wednesday night for a loss of 15-3, 16-4, 15-3.
