America's Super Bowl

Hostage Anger vs. Common Sense

By Charles Schumacher

I was quite choked up watching the Super Bowl Sunday night, and I am sure I was not alone. Not that seeing Philadelphia get crushed by the Raiders was a particularly gut-wrenching experience. It wasn't. There was something else going on in New Orleans that grasped my emotions—something more important than a football game. It was an act of compassion, love and caring that was shown by both teams and the crowd of seventy-five thousand in attendance, not to mention the rest of the country. The act, of course, was the honoring of the fifty-two ex-hostages on their safe return home. It was touching to see the mass display of yellow ribbons: The Superdome was adorned with a giant one, everyone in the crowd had clusters of them over their hearts, and the players and officials wore them on their uniforms. There were the little things, rich in symbolism, that meant so much: huge John Matuszak singing the National Anthem, the massive score board displaying greetings to the ex-hostages, and Dick Enberg saying "To the ex-hostages who are watching the game right now . . . welcome home." America finally had something with which it could rally behind and use to unite the country.

Almost as quickly as we gained this euphoric national sentiment, a problem has arisen that threatens to shatter it. When stories of mistreatment finally hit the front pages, a faction formed calling for retaliation. Anger, rage, and calls for not honoring the accords were quickly countered with pleas from Capitol Hill to remain calm. The country is split between a desire for revenge and reasoned self-interest.

No doubt reason will triumph, since President Reagan has stated that the accords will be honored on the grounds that we should not follow the Ayatollah's example of violating international agreements. This is the best decision the Reagan administration could have made, but it will surely stir up the already present feelings of anger in many, and threatens to shatter our new-found unity.

This would be devastating to President Reagan, not to mention the country as a whole. We are headed towards a turbulent decade, with the economy and domestic status in decay. Any further actions of instability would only hasten the destructive trend.

A good solution would be to forget any harsh decisions about "making Iran pay"; to push them off page one and use our manic national spirit to solve our domestic problems. This is the only reasonable thing to do, because we have to start solving our own problems instead of trying to solve those of other nations. This is why Ronald Reagan was elected in the first place. We must capitalize on the huge plus we have at this time, namely the togetherness of all Americans.

It will be a hard task, because many more horror tales will hit us as the weeks of freedom go by. But this country has done it before, and it can most certainly do it now. If this can be accomplished, it will be the best homecoming present that Paul Lewis and the other fifty-one could ever ask for.

The town of Homer is anxiously awaiting the coming home of former hostage, Paul Lewis. They have decorated the town with yellow ribbons to show their appreciation.

Letter to the editor

Election chairperson speaks up

To the Editor:

As the election chairperson for the spring 1981 Student Government Elections, I would like to urge all students to take an active role in the elections by supporting the candidates of your choice on February 4 and 5 by getting out and voting.

Student apathy on campus has always been a serious problem.

Most students could care less about what goes on at school. As I see it, there are five types of students attending Parkland College; the students that are at Parkland only because they failed to be accepted to the U of I, the students who are at Parkland only to party, and the students who are at Parkland for the sole purpose of finding a spouse. These three types are in the majority, while the other two groups, the working students and the active students, are in the minority.

There is much to be offered to the students at Parkland College in the form of extra-curricular activities. Athletics, journalism, speech/drama/debate, and Student Government are just a few outlets for students to involve themselves other than studying or drinking beer. There are many clubs and organizations on campus that are worth taking the time to become involved in. The ways a student can become involved on campus are endless.

In closing, I would like to challenge all students at Parkland College to prove me wrong by showing me that there is not excessive apathy on campus by supporting the candidate of his or her choice on February 4 and 5. The polls will be open from 10 to 2 during the day and from 6 to 8 during the evening both days. Voting only takes a few minutes of a person's time, yet can be so important when a person takes the time to do it.

Prove me wrong by voting on February 4 and 5 and by taking an active role in on-campus activities.

Sincerely,
Larry Williams
Spring 1981 Election Chairperson

Learn to communicate with your children: PACT sponsors study

Want to learn to communicate better with your children? Parents and Children Together, PACT, is sponsoring an 8-week Parent Study Group for parents of children one to fourteen years old. The group will meet on Tuesdays, February 3 through March 31, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. in room B233 at Parkland College.

Two counselors at the Champaign County Mental Health Center, Dell Tierney and Dan Brinkman, will act as facilitators for the group. A variety of approaches to dealing with children's behavior will be discussed. The group's focus will be on developing good communication between parent and child.

Additional sponsors for this special program are the Parkland Women's Program, the Center for Health Information and the Champaign County Mental Health Center.

The Parent Study Group is free and open to the public. The size of the group will be limited, so registration is required. A $5.00 book rental fee will be refundable at the last session. To obtain further information, or to register for the group, contact the Center for Health Information at Parkland, 351-2334.

Are you victim of Poortalk

While the current economic situation, particularly inflation, has seemingly impoverished many aspects of our lives, it has enriched American English. It has created a new word. Poortalk.

I was aware of the phenomenon but not aware that it had a name until I ran across a magazine article on the subject.

"Poortalk" is affluent people talking as if they are poor. It is the expression by people that as their spending strips their income they begin to feel and talk as if they are poor.

One of the shining examples of "poortalk" is the title of the currently popular book, "How to Get By on $100,000 a Year."

There is no doubt that inflation has hurt the rich, the middle class. But as we spend more and more time worrying about what inflation has done, we spend less and less time thinking about what inflation has done to those who are really poor. If the affluent have developed "poortalk," what do the poor have in response to new economic problems?

The political trends of the 1980 election show clearly that people are very concerned with economics. The nation's economy was a major issue of the campaign. It is logical that people are upset that what they thought would be gains in earning have not kept up with either prices or people's expectations of what they deserve in life.

Yet perhaps we should spend less time with "poortalk" and more time asking ourselves if our expectations are valid. Are we entitled to steak or are we entitled to enough to eat.

In mission work, we find a lot of people who do not have enough to eat. What does "poortalk" mean to them?

A speech by the former Prime Minister of Jamaica, Michael Manley, puts our economic problems into a better perspective.

"One has every sympathy with the predicament of the two-car family trying to trade in one big car for one smaller car to help offset the price of fuel. This predicament is, or course, a little remote from the concern of people who cannot view the prospect of their first bicycle because they have not yet been able to afford their first shoes."

"Poortalk" may help the affluent deal with reduced buying power. But it does little to overcome the widening gap between the haves and have nots. What is needed in our nation is a realistic appraisal of the social role of wealth, both at home and abroad.

PC Women's Program offers workshops

This spring women will have an opportunity to explore career possibilities, learn basic construction and home maintenance skills, or use dances as a creative outlet by participating in a wide variety of special workshops being offered by the Parkland Women's Program.

Relax and Vitalize, WKS 240, will emphasize exercise and relaxation techniques, body toning and improved vitality. An analysis of individual posture and movement problems will be included. This workshop will meet on Mondays and Thursdays, beginning February 2, from 8:15 to 9:45 p.m. Women will have an opportunity to gain self-understanding through an exploration of individual strengths, abilities and interests in Self Concept and Personal Growth, WKS 401. This workshop is offered from 7-9 p.m. Mondays at Parkland, and from 9 a.m. to noon on Thursdays at the Myna Thompson Learning Center, Rantoul. The first meetings will be February 2 and February 5 respectively.

WKS 402, Assertive Communications, will study interpersonal interactions. Participants will work on assertive responses leading to self-rewarding behavior. It is being offered on Tuesday afternoons, 1-4 p.m., beginning February 3, and on Thursdays from 7-10 p.m. beginning February 5. This workshop is also being offered at Lincoln Square, Urbana, on Tuesdays from 9 a.m. to noon beginning February 3.

Women will learn how to make those needed household repairs in The Handywomen, WKS 409. An orientation to tools will be given, and participants will learn basic home maintenance skills.

Beginning February 3, this workshop will meet on Tuesdays either from 1 to 3:30 p.m. or from 6:30 to 9 p.m.

PC offers new Contemporary German section

Parkland College is offering a new section of Contemporary German II, GER 102, beginning Monday, January 26. The course will meet on Monday and Wednesday nights from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.—in room X321.

Skills in speaking, listening, conversation and writing will be developed. Readings in simple prose and presentations of the culture of German-speaking countries, emphasizing current events, will be included.

German 101, a year of high school German, or the equivalent, is a prerequisite for the course. Interested students may register at the Parkland Office of Admissions and Records, or at the first class meeting.

PC women sponsor series

The Parkland College Women's Program is sponsoring a four-part series of "Learning to Learn" seminars during the opening weeks of spring semester. Women's Program Coordinator Lee Nettin says the series was designed to assist adult learners who are reentering school or changing careers.

Dates, topics and meeting places for the seminars are: January 27, "Study Skills," X150; February 3, "Basic Anxieties," X150; February 10, "The Learning Resource Center," Library main desk; and February 17, "Listening Skills," X150.

The series is free and open to all interested students.

"Monday Morning with Women"

"Monday Morning with Women," a weekly radio program, is presented by the Parkland College Women's Program at 9:30 a.m. Mondays on WPCD-FM, 88.7. The program features guest speakers and information about events of interest to women.

On this semester's first broadcast, January 26, Mary Ann

Kohut, coordinator of the Parkland Learning Lab, will discuss study skills and the Women's Program's Learning to Learn seminar series.

Future radio program topics include: "Math and Test Anxieties" with Joan Gary, Learning Lab coordinator, on February 2; "Using the Learning Resource Center" with Ann Neely, reference librarian, on February 9; "Approaches to Parenting" with Dell Tierney, counselor at the Champaign County Mental Health Center, on February 16; and "Mother and Daughter: Woman to Woman" with Margaret Stewart of Champaign County Family Services on February 23.

People and the Prospectus—

Springsteen at Assembly Hall Feb. 7

It has been said that an evening with Bruce Springsteen in concert is all that's needed to convince the uninitiated or to bring non-believers into the fold. Springsteen fans and would-be fans will have the opportunity to decide for themselves when the superstar opens the rock season at 8 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 7, at the Assembly Hall.

Backed by the acclaimed E Street Band, Springsteen will be performing such hits as "Born to Run," "Badlands," "The Wild, the Innocent," "E Street Shuffle," "Greetings from Asbury Park" and, of course, selections from his newest album, "The River."

Springsteen, who can boast of both "Time" and "Newsweek" covers, won concert fame building his music to climatic yet controlled frenzy triggering tremendous audience reaction. His enthusiasm throughout his entire show always has been his long suit.

He once told Rolling Stone writer Paul Nelson of his feelings about performing and his attitude toward his fans: "They don't take it lightly, so you have no right to, either. It's something I've never done and I will never do. I'll quit before I do that."

Sprinsteen, 31 a native of Asbury Park, N.J., has been performing for 16 years. Originally inspired by Elvis Presley, he began playing guitar as a teenager and sang in high school bands. When his family moved to California, he stayed behind to perform at clubs, sometimes with a band, other times solo accompanying his original songs on an acoustic guitar.

Tickets for the Bruce Springsteen Concert will be placed on sale to U of I students Jan.

23 after a Jan. 21 sign-up lottery. Tickets will be available to the public at the Assembly Hall and Illini Union box offices Jan. 25.

Although "The River," is probably Springsteen's best selling album, he has made no concessions to commercialism and has sacrificed none of the sentiment that characterizes the best of his work. "The characters he sings of are, like him, products of the working class, people trying to connect and hold on and usually failing, urban loners who cruise the night in search of the illusory romance that beckons in the darkness. . . These have been Springsteen's signature themes for the last few years, though with "The River," his characters have matured and grown. So has Springsteen's range of emotion," says Lyn Van Matre in "Rolling Stone."

Springsteen revealed more of his philosophy to Van Matre in the interview: ". . . If you've got your heart and fender on what your dream is, and your dream is true, bound up in people and relationships and communicating and community, then you're goona make it through no matter what. But if you get bent, and all of sudden you think the cars and the house and the things are what's important, that poison. And it's hard to keep your eye on the real issues, because those distractions leap in like icing on the cake. . ."

These relationships have not always been important to Springsteen. "You don't appreciate your parents when you're young," he confides. "It's only lately since I've gotten to be around 30, that my parents started to be really interesting to me. When you're growing up, they're just like another piece of furniture."

His aspirations are to do better shows, write better songs and have better relationships with people. "Those are the things that are important to me," he says.

Entertainment

Desolate, boring: not anymore Chambana

By Mark Hieftje-Conley

Two years ago Champaign-Urbana was a desolate spot, where fun on a Saturday night meant cruising through campus, standing around at any bar, and watching coeds puke. Some fun, eh? Well, it's not the same anymore. Thanks to a few enterprising promoters and especially to the thousands of inhabitants of the twin cities who would rather dance, shout, and sing to a live band rather than hear distorted "Styx" played over a jukebox, Chambana is a music capital. (Well, almost). Sounds from reggae to rock can be heard in places as small as a bathroom or as large as the assembly hall.

You ask yourself, "How did this start? Was it a sudden or gradual change?" Well, it seemed to start when a club, called "Mabel's" situated on Green Street in Champaign, began offering a variety of musical styles in form of live bands. About the same time "Star Course" and the Assembly Hall, who had put on musical shows in past, began to step up the line of concerts booked into the Assembly Hall and its little sister, the Auditorium. As the movement toward live music became apparent, other clubs recognized the need and jumped on the bandwagon. They began promoting local talent as well as nationally known bands. Places that began offering live bands are: "Poison Apple" (Now "Showcase"), "Ultimate" (now closed), "Panama Reds" (a veteran), "Alley Cat", "Colonel's", and "Flannery's". Of these clubs, "Red's", "Colonel's", and "Alley Cat", offer country music. "Mabel's", "Showcase", and "Red's" offer rock. Jazz, Blues, Soul can be heard at "Red's" and "Mabel's." These clubs and the organizations at the U of I have brought and will bring such acts to

CU as: "The Ramones", "Bruce Springsteen," "Talking Heads",

"Z Z Top", "The Bus Boys", "The Romatics", "Muddy Waters", "Commander Cody", "Eddie and the Hot Rods", and the "Hounds". They also feature regional talent like: "The Vertebrats", "Lois Lane", "Bohemia", "George Faber", "Kool Ray", "Pork and the Havana Ducks", and "The Rangers."

So just pick a type of music and a place that plays that music. There's plenty to choose from so you can be choosy. This town has so much to offer in live music there's no reason not to go see a band. If the clubs keep getting the good feedback and draw that good live music brings there is a good chance that the live band situation will get better and better.

Ramblin' . . .

By T. Scott Alender

Ramblin' once again. It seems it never stops but I guess it's good to keep busy. School, job, hobbies and the newspaper occupy most of my time and I'm quite sure that you are very busy too, but not too busy to miss all of the upcoming events that are sure to be going on this semester at Parkland and in Champaign-Urbana. We at the Prospectus will be doing our best to cover the concerts, new albums and whatever else is going on in the entertainment world as it pertains to us.

It is rather early in the semester so there isn't that much happening yet but give it time. What could be the concert of the year has been scheduled already though, the Boss himself, Bruce Springsteen will be appearing at the Assembly Hall the first week in February. He appeared here a couple years ago and should once again satisfy some hungry hearts with one of his shows.

I am doing my best to confirm the rumors about REO Speedwagon appearing here in February but I haven't had any luck as of yet. It has been two and a half years since REO's last concert here so lets hope that they will be performing real soon.

In last weeks opening issue editor Chris said that if you would like to be a part of the staff to stop by the office. Well, I am extending the invitation also. We need help with album reviews, concerts and local events so if you would like to help stop by our office in X-155 and leave a message. Who knows, maybe you could be ramblin' too. A lot of important things to do, talk to you next week.

Fleming, Tickner joined by stars of the future

Two bright new stars, Lorna Wighton and John Dowding, will be featured along with special guest star Peggy Fleming and Olympic bronze Medalist Charlie Tickner when Ice Capades comes to the Assembly hall Feb. 10-15 for 10 performances.

Canadian figure skating ice dance champions, Wighton and Dowding are recognized as one of the finest dance pairs in the world. They topped their amateur careers with a first class showing at both the 1980 Winter Olympics in Lake Placid as well as the World Competitions in Dortmund, West Germany. They also were winners of the Canadian Dance Championships in 1978, 1979 and 1980.

Performance times will be at 8 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday with matinees at 2 p.m. Thursday, noon and 4 p.m. Saturday and 2 p.m. and 6 p.m. Sunday. Tickets are on sale at the Assembly Hall and Illini Union ticket offices. Major credit cards are accepted for ticket purchases. For additional information call 333-5000.

Dowding, 24, hails fro Oakville, Ontario, a suburb of Toronto. It was his older brother who actually got him started on his skating career. "My brother was always the center of social activity at the local skating rink. I didn't know any other people, so I followed him there," Dowding says.

He decided to go into dance skating because of it's fluidity and gracefulness. With his sister Debbie as his partner, they won the 1973 Canadian Junior Championships. In 1974, his sister retired from amateur competition, and he had to search for a new partner. His new partner-to-be was initially overlooked even though she was practically in his backyard, but he finally did meet Lorna Wighton. She was a member of the Granite Club, John's home skating club, and was also dating John's best friend. By the end of 1974, they were skating together.

Wighton, 22, is a life-long resident of Toronto. She ran competitively in track and still runs to stay in shape. She also loves to swim and "dabble" in art. Dowding, in his spare time, likes to water ski and has acquired his own racing car license.

Ice dancing, in which the couples skate to music in a precisely choreographed routine, demands highly disciplined timing and coordination. In no other form of skating is the sense of rhythm and musical interpretation more important. "Dancers have to completely absorb themselves into the music of a routine," Dowding explains. "That is the key ingredient to performing an outstanding dance number." For their debut in Ice Capades they will add a touch of humor with an interpretation of "Tea for Two," by Spike Milligan.

Both performers are particularly looking forward to traveling this year. "We missed seeing so many places because of the sheltered life we led while we were training. Now we have the opportunity to take the time to experience all the things we missed," Wighton says.

With more than 34 cities on this year's tour, Wighton and Dowding will certainly see more of the U.S. and Canada than most persons see in a lifetime. They have come a long way from their local skating rinks in Southern Ontario.

Ernie Pyle: His courage exemplified American patriotism

Throughout history America has honored its heroes who gave their lives in the fight to preserve freedom. But of all those courageous men there is one who stands out not because he was good with a knife or gun, but because he was good with an ink pen and typewriter.

Ernest Taylor Pyle through his sensitivity, humor, and easy style became one of America's foremost war correspondents during World War II. Ernie's emotions which he expressed in his writing, endeared him to the G.I.'s who were his subjects, and to their families and friends who remained at home.

Ernie was born on August 3, 1900 on the Sam Elder farm located south and west of Dana, Indiana. He lived here until he was 18 months old when his family decided to move into a farmhouse that his grandfather owned.

The Elder family over a period of years had noticed that souvenir seekers were literally picking the house to pieces. Through the efforts of the Indiana Department of the American Legion, Pyle's birthplace was moved to its present location and restored. The restored home became a State Memorial on July 3, 1976, when it was donated to the State of Indiana.

His birthplace is typical of many farmhouses in the rural Midwest in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. It is basically a simple farm structure, but with the addition of the Greek columns and portico there is also a distinct air of grace and comfortable living about the home. The four rooms of the first floor—dining room, kitchen, parlor, and bedroom—have been furnished in the late, "Country Victorian," style that was popular at the time of Pyle's birth. Many of the pieces of furniture, photographs, and other mementos in these rooms originally belonged to the Pyle family and were presented to the Memorial by family and friends.

Pyle authored six books and was the subject of three biographies.

A motion picture, "The Story of G.I. Joe," was made from his writings. He received national recognition both before and after his death. Indiana University and the University of New Mexico conferred upon him Honorary Doctor of Humane Letters Degrees, and Indiana University named its School of Journalism for him. The Army, Navy, and State Departments awarded him the Medal of Merit and he was the recipient of the Distinguished Service Medal from the American Legion. Sigma Delta Chi (the National Journalism Fraternity) twice awarded him the Raymond Clapper Award for best war correspondent. In 1943, Pyle received the Pulitzer Prize for Journalism.

Ernie Pyle was killed on April 18, 1945 by a Japanese sniper's bullet during the Ie Shima invasion. But he will always be remembered as the man who brought into focus, for his millions of readers, the terror, drudgery, heroism, and joy that only men in battle can feel. For this, he was honored by his profession, and loved by his readers and subjects alike.

LaBadie hopes for another good year

Despite the obviously painful graduation loss of Parkland track standouts David Patrick, Bill Toland, and Steve Elam, PC coach Lee Labadie has lined up a group of 1981 competitors who will surely rival last year's squad for state and national honors.

The Cobras, who opened their indoor season January 17 at Eastern Illinois University, are paced by a strong core of returning sophomores, many of whom earned state championships last season and competed at the national level both indoors and out.

Labadie and his Cobras are out to win their sixth Region IV title in four years. PC has already captured five of the last six region titles over the past three years.

Heading the list of returners are: State Junior College Triple Jump Champion, Benny Clark; State J.C. High Jump and Long Jump Champ, Junior Cox; Casey Laughlin, who ran on the second place National Two-Mile Relay and fourth-place National Mile Relay squads; Mark Patrick, who was a National finalist in the 800 Meter

Run, and ran on the National-placing mile and Two-Mile Relay teams; and Paul Blissard and Eric Foster, who qualified for Nationals in the Discus and High Jump, respectively.

Other sophomores include Felix Simpkins, a Hurdler and High Jumper; Bill Wilson, a Distance Runner from Centennial; Terry Walker, a Sprinter from Urbana; and Oscar Thomas, a Sprinter who has transferred from Eastern Kentucky.

Freshmen include high school Class A 100 and 200 meter champion Steve Buchholz, of Paxton; Kevin Elam, a National Cross Country qualifier from Champaign; Ray Hampton, Sprinter from Bloom Trail; and Dale Wirth, a Middle-Distance Runner from Mahomet.

Labadie is also working with three women runners and has scheduled a full women's season for the first time in Parkland's history. Any additional women interested in competing should contact Labadie at 351-2297.

Cobras push record to 15-1 with wins

by Chris Slack

Who said college teams can't win on the road. Just ask Coach Tim Wulf and his Parkland women players.

The Cobras came out with two surprisingly easy wins on the road last week as they thumped Rend Lake 96-59, and beat Lincoln Trail by the score of 84-50.

In the Rend Lake game, the Cobras dominated every aspect of the game to win easily. The following is only a small portion of their domination throughout the game: they out-rebounded Rend Lake as a team, 58-23, had 16 more field goals and 32 more shots at the basket, and held their opponents to 40 percent shooting.

Parkland jumped out to a 44-30 lead at half with Abby Ingram scoring half of the points.

The second half only got worse for Rend Lake. Parkland outscored R.L., 52-29 in another one of their second-half blitzes to up their record to 15-1 at the time.

Ingrum wound up with 32 points while Tamy Fortney, the second leading scorer on the team, scored 15. Lori Anda and Fran Stalter added 14 and 11 respectively.

Cobras rebounders literally owned the boards with Ingram leading the pack with 15. Fortney and reserve, Cathy Hammes ripped down 10 apiece. Kari Colravy pulled down nine in another one of those 'blow-outs' for the women's team.

The Lincoln Trail game was even worse, that is for Lincoln Trail.

This time, the defense got better yet. The Cobras made Lincoln Trail put up one bad shot after another and the shooting percentage showed as Lincoln Trail shot a terrible 27 percent from the field and only 35 percent from the free throw line.

The game was over almost as quick as it started when Parkland opened up an insurmountable 48-19 lead at half. From then on, the Cobras played everybody and coasted in for another easy win.

Cobras trounce Danville 74-51

By T. Scott Alender

The Parkland women defeated Danville Friday night by a score of 74-51. The win brings their overall record for the season to 17-1.

Parkland jumped off to a six-point lead to start the game with fine offensive board work by Tammi Fortney keeping Parkland ahead early in the first half. All-state center Abby Ingrum tallied 13 points by halftime followed by Janet Blacker with 10 and Fortney 8 as Parkland built their halftime lead to 44-21.

Each team matched up well in the second half with each scoring 30 but Parkland's early lead allowed them substantial breathing room. Danville tried to make a run at Parkland midway in the second half but lost most of their chances due to sloppy ballhandling and bad shot selection.

Abby Ingrum finished with 21 points and 18 rebounds with Janet Blacker scoring 16 and Tammi Fortney 8 points and 12 rebounds. Fran Stalter came off the bench to score 12.

Parkland travels to Kankakee on Tuesday, January 27, for their next game. The next home game is Friday, January 30 at 5:30 p.m. against Lake Land Junior College.

Abby Ingrum (25) and Janet Blacker (10) try and save a ball before it goes out of bounds. Ingrum scored 21 points as she continues to dominate everybody she plays. The Cobras won handily, 74-51.

PC hangs on; beat Jaguars, 82-73

By T. Scott Alender

Tired but tough best sums up the Cobras effort here Friday night as they defeated Danville 82-73. They had played three games in the last five days with this contest being the first at home.

Parkland got off to a four-point lead to start the game and led throughout the first half. Dana Dunson and Mike Martin paced the Cobras with 14 and 12 points respectively as they built the halftime score to 47-32.

Fatigue began to show early in the second half as Mike Martin fouled out and Dana Dunson picked up his fourth shortly thereafter. At this time, it looked as though Danville would make a run at the Parkland lead with hot shooting from forward John Houpt (17 second half points) and guard Simmie Cobbs but Parkland's bench and remaining starters held back the Danville rally. Danville was able to pull within seven at 12:25 but never got any closer. The win brings Parkland's record to 15-5 overall and 3-0 in conference play.

Parkland's entire starting lineup scored in double figures led by Dana Dunson with 22, Mark Makeever 17, Russell Pratt 14, Mike Martin 12 and Greg Havlin 12.

Danville was led by Simmie Cobbs with 22 and John Houpt with 19.

Parkland travels to Kankakee Tuesday, January 27 to take on the No. 1 ranked junior college team in the nation. Kankakee is also 3-0 in conference play. The winner will be in sole possession of first place in the C.I.A.C. Parkland's next home game is Friday, January 30, at 7:30 p.m. against Lake Land.

It's FF basketball!

Duke vs. Virginia

Overall: Duke has lost two key players off of last year's team. Mike Giminski and Bob Bender were two big losses and the Blue Devils aren't as strong as in the past. They still have a fine offense but no big man to anchor it. Play some world association. Who comes to mind when you think of Virginia? He's ONLY 7-4 and can handle the ball like a forward. His name is Ralph Sampson. He has made Virginia the top ranked team in the nation.

Edge: Virginia

Who to Watch: Duke has All-American Eugene Banks. After gaining recognition as a freshman in the NCAA championship, Banks has done nothing but improve. He will be a number 1 draft pick this year.

Virginia does have Sampson, who no doubt could go pro whenever he chooses, but they also have fine balance behind him. Jeff Lamp is actually averaging more points than Sampson and has been consistent throughout.

Game Edge: Virginia by 8.

Iowa vs. Illinois

Overall: This game is a toss-up. That is, if Illinois decides to play the basketball they're capable of. Eddie Johnson and Mark Smith can be dominating if they want to be, but at times they do not concentrate and that hurts Illinois.

Iowa has no stars, but they are one of the better disciplined teams in the country. They are one of the best defensive teams around and work for the good shot on offense.

Who to Watch: As I said before, Illinois has talent when they want to use it. Derek Harper has been a good floor leader all year but has not shown his scoring ability yet. The center position is always going to be a problem at Illinois; Holcomb and Griffin can't take charge and they never will.

Lute Olson's Iowa team is loaded with scrappers. Kevin Boyle, Vince Brookins, Steve Krafcsin and Co. will just keep coming at you. That's why they are winners. That's why I pick Iowa over Illinois by 5 points even though it is at the Assembly Hall.

Purdue vs. Indiana

Overall: Every time you think Purdue is going down, they bounce right back. But, Indiana is going to give the Boilers problems with that aggressive defense.

Bobby Knight, although his coaching ethics are often questioned, has been one of the most successful coaches in the past 7 or 8 years. Indiana has a definite overall edge.

Who to Watch: Indiana has the talent, Isiah Thomas does it all. He's what the pros are looking for. A combination of offense, defense, smarts, Thomas has what it takes to lead the Hoosiers to a National Championship.

Russell Cross has aptly replaced Joe Barry Carroll for Purdue but the loss of Arnette Hallman has been a problem. They're not as talented as last year.

Game Edge: Indiana by 8 especially since they are at home.

Other picks—

- Tennessee over Alabama
- Bradley over New Mexico State
- Utah over Brigham Young
- Wake Forest over Marquette
- North Carolina over North Carolina State
- Ohio State over Michigan State
- DePaul over Syracuse
- Notre Dame over South Carolina
- South Alabama over Alabama-Birmingham

Cobras can't win 'em all

By Chris Slack

It was a busy week for the Parkland men's basketball team and that may have accounted for one their few losses of the year.

Last Monday, Greg Havlin and Dana Dunson combined to score 38 points while three others scored in double figures to lead Parkland to a convincing 88-65 win over Rend Lake down in Ina, Ill.

The Cobras were in control throughout as they shot a torrid 55 percent compared to Rend Lake's 39 percent.

Havlin led all scorers with 20 points and Dunson scored 18 while also pulling down 10 rebounds. Russell Pratt added 13 points while Martin and Makeever contributed 12 and 10 respectively.

Then on Wednesday, all of that traveling in the past couple of weeks finally got to Parkland as they lost 80-75 to Lincoln Trail ending their five game winning streak.

The game was close all the way and Lincoln Trail led at halftime 39-37 after scoring the last six points of the half.

In the second-half, the Cobras ran out of gas. After taking a 51-50 lead on two Dunson free throws at the 14 minute mark, Lincoln Trail with Willie McKinney scoring six straight points, went ahead to stay and the closest Parkland could get was 64-61. At that point Lincoln Trail put on another one of their spurts to put the game away.

Greg Havlin once again led scoring with 22 points. Pratt and Mike Martin were next with 13 points apiece while Makeever added 12 markers.

After beating Danville on Friday, the Cobras record now stands at 15-5 and 3-0 in the Central Illinois Athletic Conference.

Parkland took their 3-0 conference record up to Kankakee last night. If anybody doesn't know about Kankakee, they are not only the number one team in the state, but they are number one in the NATION. This game is up at Kankakee's place and take it from this reporter, it is very hard to win with roaring fans flooding the place, but Parkland will give them all they can handle if they play their game.

The Unity Pep Band to be featured Friday before Lake Land game

The Unity High School Pep Band will be featured during pre-game and half-time activities on "Unity Night" at Parkland College, Friday, January 30.

The Parkland College Cobras will take on the teams from Lake Land Community College. The women's basketball game will begin at 5:30 p.m. and the men's game will begin at 7:30 p.m.

All Unity High School students and residents of the Unity High School District will be admitted to the basketball games free by showing their student I.D. or other identification. WPCD, 88.7 FM, will broadcast the entire game, including the Unity Pep Band performance, beginning at 5:30 p.m.
