

Severns recalls term as mayor

by Jan Alexander

Mayor Joan Severns has many accomplishments to look back on in her years as one of the few women mayors in the state of Illinois as her term in office comes to a close.

During her term in office, she and the city council have had to deal with many issues of great importance to Champaign, such as the building of a new landfill and police facility, passing the hotel/motel tax, and renovating the downtown area.

As mayor, Severns is also in charge of issuing liquor licences for the city, and it has been a complicated and time-consuming job.

Severns will not be running for mayor in this election and hasn't endorsed any of the other three candidates for her position because no one has asked her to do so.

She will not rate or compare the three candidates for mayor, but says, "It takes two solid years of being a council member before you know what's going on...When somebody calls you at two o'clock in the morning and says, 'The street lights are out. What do I do now?' you'd better know whom to call."

Being called at all hours of the day and night did not come as a surprise to Severns because she had served on the Council and knew what she was getting into.

Severns has this advice for the future mayor of Champaign: Be prepared to spend large amounts of time at the job. Severns is the only mayor in recent history to work full-time instead of parttime at being mayor. She believes in public service, having been a "professional volunteer" for 30

Family offers thanks

To Parkland friends:

In times of such tragic situations as we have experienced, the loyalty and love our friends adds to comfort and peace back to our lives.

We want to give our heartfelt thanks to all who provided food, flowers, visits, comforting words, prayers, thoughts, cards, and other acts of kindness.

We deeply appreciate the loyal tribute paid to Jeff by the young people of these communities.

'Nonsense' was nonsense

Dear Prospectus,

In the January 26 edition, there was an article in the Entertainment page entitled "Nonsense makes sense."

Now I realize the article is a record review, and that some of the songs are "Fish Heads," "Party in my Pants," and "I had Sex on TV," but I have only one question.

Is this part of the entertainment trivia quiz?

Are we supposed to guess the name of this record?

As I scanned the article I failed to notice the name of the record being reviewed. It just isn't there.

"Nonsense makes sense," but this article certainly doesn't.

sincerely

MSLC held

Minority students from Illinois colleges and universities studied leadership strategies and skills recently at the University of Illinois.

About 200 students, most of them leaders of black or Hispanic groups, took part in the fourth annual Minority Student Leadership Conference at Illinois, said Glenn Jordan, staff associate in the U. of I. Afro-American Studies and Research Program.

Students from Parkland College, the U. of I. at Chicago Circle and other schools as well as from Illinois took part in the conference.

Conference sessions covered the history of black and Latino student movements, survival in predominately white institutions, building coalitions and campus resources.

Eleven units at Illinois, Parkland College and the U. of I. at Chicago Circle sponsored the conference, Jordan said.

Candidates present views

John Brooks

Q: Hey who the heck is John Brooks?

A: John Brooks is a student here at Parkland College.

Q: Who the heck cares?

A: You should, since he is running for senator in the upcoming StuGo Election.

Q: So what? I didn't vote last time!

A: That's what we are counting on this time.

Last semester only 2% of the total 9,000 students voted, meaning I could win the election with only 65 votes.

Q: Well you're supposed to be representing all 9,000 students.

A: So what! Like I said before, since only about 200 students vote I can win one of the six positions with only 65 votes.

FACT: Seventy-five cents of every credit hour you pay for goes to the student activities of which a good size sum goes to student government.

Q: Who cares now?

A: I do! I also enjoy working in the student government and getting involved in the student services area. I hope some of these statements have motivated you to get up and vote, especially for me:

JOHN BROOKS #22

Don Dayton

Platform not available at presstime.

John Dixon

Students,

I feel that by my taking both day and evening courses I would be able to represent the students well. I believe that Student Government should be easily attainable to all parties, regardless of the time they attend class.

Student Government should be a mirror image of the students' feelings.

Sincerely
John Dixon

Scott Friedlein

Hello, my name is Scott Friedlein and I am a candidate for Senator of your student government.

My background includes holding numerous offices in high school, student council, and exploring. I am also currently president of Parkland's Criminal Justice Club.

I have been a student at Parkland College for the last three and one-half years. I have become dedicated to serving the students and listening to the problems that occur. I have seen many student governments come and go and I feel it's time that the students voice is REALLY heard.

I wish to continue serving you by listening to your problems, needs, and suggestions, and I will do my best to keep you the students informed.

Remember, my name is Scott, I'm #28 on the ballot, and I am "HERE TO SERVE YOU."

Michael Holt

I am Michael Holt and I am running for a seat on your student senate. I have been at Parkland for two years now and have a very good idea of how to get students and student government closer together.

I am running for senate because I feel that students should know where and how their money is being used. I also believe that students should improve their understanding of their community by getting involved in life. I realize that not everyone can run for an elected post, but I do realize that everyone can vote for someone that represents their views, ideals, hopes and goals.

I feel that I can more than adequately represent your views on the issues that face our college.

Help me to help you, vote for Mike "For the students" Holt February 2 and 3, #30.

Martha Hutchins

"Hi! My name is John Doe and I'm running for Student Government. Will you sign this petition, please?"

As students at Parkland College, this speech is familiar to all of us. Since I am running for re-election, that speech is particularly familiar.

My name is Martha Hutchins and I want to be re-appointed to Student Government. Experience is always the best qualification. I have served on several committees and have been chairperson of the Parkland Bookstore Investigation Committee.

Because of my knowledge and experience, I am asking you to re-elect me, Martha Hutchins, to Student Government.

Julie Janka

Hi, I'm Julie Janka and I'm running for student senator. Through my experience as Student Representative in High School, and as first Vice-President, now President of the Ski Club, I feel I am qualified to serve as student senator.

I am majoring in political science and as such feel I have the background to become a good senator.

I'm running because I feel I could contribute my ideas and the student's ideas to the Student Government and get things done. I feel strongly that the student's opinions and ideas are not being heard. I am easy going and I get along with people; therefore, I feel that I can find out and represent the students' ideas and comments.

Also, I am willing to look into and pursue any complaints the students' have.

Kris Meents

Hi, my name is Kris Meents and I'm running for re-election to the office of Student Government Senator. I feel that I am very well qualified for this position. I am currently serving as an interim senator to fill a position vacated last fall. I was also a Student Government representative in high school. I have learned many things in my term of office that would help me serve the students of Parkland College.

I believe that Student Government should be brought closer to the student body of Parkland College. When elected I will represent the students in the best way possible. So remember to re-elect kris Meents for Student Senate.

Julie Natterstad

Hello! My name is Julie Natterstad and I am a candidate for student senator. If elected, I will make it my responsibility to relay the ideas and concerns of the students to the Parkland student government.

In making changes, I will be very active and involved in upholding all the ideas of the students. I also want to promote more involvement and dedication in the student government by being informed on all issues.

I have had past experience in leadership positions, such as president of the American Field Service program, so I am aware of the duties and the time necessary to make the student government successful.

If I am to receive the position of student senator, I will uphold the respectability of the office and the student government of Parkland College to the fullest. Vote ballot #38! Thank you!

PC radio plays provide a trip down memory land

by Bill Schumacher

Radio has taken a step backwards at Parkland . . . for the better.

With the premiere of "Playhouse 88," you could almost hear the Bromo Seltzer and Roma Wine commercials crackling over the airways for David Jones and a hearty troupe of student actors have resurrected the golden age of radio.

David Jones and a troupe of 'hearty' actors recreate the golden age of radio.

"100,000 Dollars for a Wife," a lighthearted comedy, was just the first of the radio plays to be aired on WPCD (Parkland's local station) in the coming months. Others include: "The Invisible Man," "Alice in Wonderland," "Sherlock Holmes and the Red-Headed League," "Even the Blind," "John Whiffle Concentrates," and "The Old Oaken Bucket."

Airing every Tuesday at 11:30 a.m. and Thursday at 9:30 p.m., "Playhouse 88" has captured the interest of both students and faculty alike, and has evolved from an idea last Spring into a radio-drama listener's gotsend.

"The first problem was finding the scripts," said David Jones, the man behind this idea. "And once we had them, we discovered that many of the parts had to be switched from male to female to accommodate the actors." But this has proved to be no problem. "In fact, the whole series has gone off surprisingly well," said Jones.

But were there any real problems? "Well, one play we had to completely re-record because the equipment malfunctioned the first time around," said Jones. "In 'Sherlock Holmes and the Red-Headed League,' one actor plays both Holmes and Watson, and it actually turned out quite nicely."

The studio for these dramas is the communications conference room. The producer is Dave Gentry. Jerry Brock serves as the technical crew.

"In many of the plays the sound effects had to be fabricated, and to this day I still don't know how some of them were done," said Jones. "But I'm looking forward to the next semester of plays."

Future plays include "The Black Death," "Speak O' the Devil," and "The Cask of Amontillado."

Severns would like to see more women in public office because she says they spend more time on it than men do. She explained that most men in political office already have a career and full-time profession, and they often enter office to increase their businesses or further their careers.

Being a woman has caused problems for Severns, however. "The 'good old boy' system still exists," she said. "I'm not saying a woman can't be a 'good old boy.' I'm just saying I'm not." She added "They don't know what to do with me."

Her mail is often addressed incorrectly, sometimes with humorous results. A letter to her and some other Champaign officials read, "Dear Gentlemen and Madam's..." Most of the time, the senders assume that a mayor must be a man, so she is greeted with "Dear Sir..." or "Dear Mr. Mayor..." she answers most of this type of mail with a "zap paragraph" explaining that more women are entering public office all the time, and that a non-sexist greeting, such as "Dear Public Official" should be used in the future.

Of all her accomplishments while in office, Severns is proudest of her part in passing the sign ordinance and planting hundreds of trees in Champaign. She is also pleased with her part in the renovation of the Cattle Bank and the building of a new police facility, which she feels will contribute to upgrading the surrounding neighborhood.

Severns is optimistic about the future of Champaign, citing its low unemployment rate and healthy city budget.

She hopes that more high-tech industries and corporate headquarters would locate in Champaign. She would also like to see the old landfill converted into a recreational area.

Severns says she has no further political aspirations and would like to get a job in a management position where she could do what she does best: deal with people.

'Seer of Seers' ready for annual appearance

by Jan Alexander

He stands supreme,
Imitated but unchallenged,
Enviied but acknowledged,
King of the Weather Prophets,
Lord High Potenate of all Marmots
Monas,
And WeJack extraordinary

—from Punxsutawney Chamber of Commerce

"He" is Punxsutawney Phil, also known as "His Majesty" and the "Seer of Seers". Some people might also call him a groundhog.

Why does this furry little bushy-tailed and, frankly, ugly creature deserve all this adulation? Because he can do what many scientists and meteorologists can't: predict the weather.

Phil has made Punxsutawney, Pennsylvania the self-proclaimed "Weather Capital of the World" with his extraordinary weather predicting powers.

Each February 2 since 1887, Phil has emerged from his burrow on Gobbler's Knob in the early morning hours after a long winter's nap to tell us how much longer winter will last.

Phil sees his shadow when he comes out to see his fellow Punxsutawneyites, and hundreds of radio and television reporters, he returns to his burrow, because he knows there will be another six weeks of bad winter weather.

The same power of foretelling the weather has been ascribed to the bear and the badger, but you'll never convince a Punxsutawneyite of that fact. What began as a legend brought over by Pennsylvania's earliest settlers, the Germans, has become big business for the town of Punxsutawney, population 10,000.

It began in the early 1880's when a small group of Punxsutawneyites began to celebrate Groundhog's Day, or Candlemas Day, as it's called in Europe, by going into the woods to honor and celebrate their Punxsutawney groundhog as the only true weather prognosticator.

This group named themselves (what else?) The Punxsutawney Groundhog Club, and today its membership numbers in the thousands.

February 2 is a big day in Punxsutawney, with the festivities starting at an early morning breakfast. Throughout the day there are special activities, such as the crowning of the Groundhog King and Queen at the local high school. A Groundhog Day banquet is held in the evening where a Man and Woman of the Year and Punxsutawney Ambassadors are named.

For the year 'round enjoyment of Punxsutawney's groundhog groupies, there is a Groundhog Zoo and a life-size, bronze statue of the Seer of Seers, which is located in the plaza of the community's Civic Center.

And for $20 or less, you can purchase one or more Punxsutawney Phil souvenirs. How about a Punxy Phil or Phyllis doll, or a package of groundhog golf balls? Mom would just love the ceramic groundhog salt and pepper shakers, groundhog cookie cutters, or cookbook called "Gourmets and Groundhogs." And no teenager's room is complete without a Punxy Phil poster.

Yes, Punxy Phil is immortalized on every thing from hand puppets to hi-ball glasses, and sales of these goodies no doubt strengthen the economy in Punxsutawney.

But in case any other small towns have the idea that they can create their own groundhog empire with, say, a Sadorous Sam or a Thomasboro Tom, the Punxsutawney Chamber of Commerce has these words of warning:

"Naturally, as with all great things, attempts are made by others to try and cash in on the groundhog fame created in Punxsutawney Pa. Of course, they have all fizzled as they're imposters, pretenders fakers, and johnny-come-latelys attempting to ride the glory train on Punxsutawney Phil's tail...We pity and tolerate these imitators, as they attempt to gain publicity in the shadows of the original, one and only Punxsutawney groundhog."

We would like to extend our sincere apologies to the Closet stores in Champaign and Urbana, and to their customers, for the error that appeared in the Closet ad last week.

We often spend so much time looking for the small errors in copy that monumental errors slip right past us.

We have offered the Closet a free ad, to be run at their convenience, in a future issue of the Prospectus.

We assure the Closet, their customers, and our general readers that we will be especially careful in checking it for any possible errors.

We thank the Closet for their understanding of the situation and we thank the countless number of conscientious readers who brought the mistake to our attention.

Student responsible for campus posters

by Chris Heffley

X-153, a small, walk-in, closet-size room, unknown to most Parkland students, holds one old-fashioned printing press, stacks of various colored posters, and the one Parkland student responsible for the output of approximately 1,000 posters on campus per semester.

Larry Wilson seems surprised that anyone would want to photograph him at work.

Larry J. Wilson, a second semester student in the Law Enforcement program, has been the "man behind the scenes" or shall we say the "man behind the press" for the past eight months.

Wilson says that making the posters is "pretty simple." However, after sorting through the reverse, cast-iron, and wooden blocks of letter and numbers, the mind begins to see everything backwards. For instance, Wilson recalls that several times he has printed simple words, such as "college" without one of the l's. "After looking at those reverse letters for a few hours, you start seeing things," says Wilson.

To keep his mind off the loud clatter of the old-time press, Wilson often plays music, which also makes the time go by faster when there are several signs to be printed.

On the average, Wilson works in the small room located next to the newspaper office between 15 and 20 hours weekly under direction of Dean of Activities Richard Karch, and Sherl Zamary, secretary.

At times, he may produce 50 to 60 signs a week. The beginning of a new semester usually means printing a lot of organizational information. The printing service is offered free to all Parkland College organizations.

Bundling and mailing Parkland Prospectus newspapers is another weekly duty Wilson must attend to. He usually spends two to three hours on Thursday afternoons preparing the papers to be sent to local and out-of-town businesses.

Wilson's posters not only inform the thousands of people who read their newspapers ever day, but their colors brighten dozens of the bulletin boards and kiosks on campus.

Kabuki performance brings ancient art form to PC

Composed of three elements: ka meaning music, bu meaning dance, and ki meaning acting, this exciting form of performing art originated in 16th Century Japan and has remained popular through the centuries as its traditional theatre.

The University of Illinois Kabuki Theatre under the direction of Shozo Sato, features student actors in meticulously prepared productions specially translated by Professor Sato from original Japanese scripts.

All elements of production—wigs, makeup, costumes, scenery, music, performance style—strictly adhere to the artistic prescriptions developed through 400 years of tradition.

Artist-in-Residence at the University of Illinois Krannert Center for the Performing Arts, Shozo Sato has achieved an international reputation as a performer, director, and teacher.

His dramatic training took place at Toho Academy, Tokyo, and he was a special student of the revered Kabuki actor Nakamura Kanzaburo XVII, recently named a living national treasure of Japan.

At the University of Illinois, Mr. Sato has recreated a number of traditional Kabuki plays in English for the first time. He has also developed startlingly original new works such as his highly acclaimed Kabuki Macbeth. Each tour performance is enhanced by a special introductory explanation of Kabuki Theatre delivered personally by Shozo Sato.

Kabuki Theatre appeared at Parkland last week as part of the Parkland College Art Gallery "Art of the Far East" exhibition.

Children urged to write

Parkland College is sponsoring its Eighth Annual Story Shop for young writers. The aim of this program is to stimulate children to learn more about the principles of good writing.

Any child in grades 1-5 who lives in the Parkland district, exclusive of Champaign County, may submit one story of his/her own creation. All stories will be evaluated by a Parkland teacher of literature and writing.

Because of the large number of entries, children in Champaign County schools participate in the program biannually, with children from the other 11 counties in Parkland's district submitting entries in the alternate years.

Each entrant will receive a Certificate of Participation and written evaluation of their story. Special certificates will be awarded to authors of merit at each grade level who will be invited to Parkland in the late spring for a morning award and writing experience.

All stories should be received by the Parkland Communications Division by Feb. 18. Copies of the 1983 Story Shop rules were sent to all elementary school teachers, and additional information may be obtained from the Parkland Communications Division.

'Gandhi' is brilliant, an event to experience

by Brian Lindstrand

To say that "Gandhi" is brilliant is an understatement. To say it is stunning is an insult. It is, as the ads are proclaiming, an "event." It is not only a film to see, but to experience. Every level of production in this film is of such high standard it is staggering.

The film tells the story of the life of Mohandas K. Gandhi (Ben Kingsley), and his struggle for equality for Indians. The film opens at Gandhi's last public appearance before he was to go to Pakistan. At this appearance he is assassinated, and we are then treated to the spectacle of Gandhi's funeral (which utilized a stunning 300,000 extras).

From the funeral procession, we begin a flashback which will tell the story of the man of whom Albert Einstein stated: "Generations to come will scarred believe that such a one as this ever in flesh and blood walked upon this earth . . ."

The audience is then whisked to South Africa. We see the young Gandhi on board a train on his way to try a case in Pretoria when a disgruntled passenger tells him to move. Gandhi points out his position, to which the passenger replies, "There are no colored attorneys in South Africa."

The conductor shows up and, even though Gandhi does have a first class ticket, he is told to move his "black arse" or be thrown off the train. Gandhi sticks to his guns, pointing out that he always rides first class, but this argument falls on deaf ears and he is thrown off the train.

From there, Gandhi sets out to bring down a law which states that all Indians who are traveling outside India must carry special passes with them at all times. He still believes that Indians are citizens of the British empire and should be treated as equal members of the empire.

After being arrested for burning travel passes, he is released, and he returns to India. Back in his home country Gandhi receives a hero's welcome and is introduced to a group of prominent Indians who are trying to get India her independence.

Gandhi sets out to see the "real" India and finds horrible poverty and despair. He has discarded his suits and slacks for the simple home-woven clothing of his people and started an ashram (a fore-runner of the communes of later years).

Gandhi begins his crusade to get the British out of India and have India declared an independent country by becoming a "father" to the poor and destitute of the country. The people call him "mahatma" or "great soul" (it should be pointed out that Gandhi never liked being called that).

What follows is a series of encounters with the authorities that sometimes end up with Gandhi in jail, but throughout all those encounters, Gandhi's belief in the practice of non-violence and peaceful demonstration shine through.

While the story of Gandhi's life is enthralling enough, the actors and technicians gathered by director Sir Richard Attenborough truly demand attention.

Of course the role that is the most demanding is the part of Gandhi himself.

Ben Kingsley plays the part brilliantly. He fleshs out the man and turns him into something that none of the books about Gandhi have ever been able to do. Kingsley turns Gandhi into a living, breathing human being.

Through Kingsley, Gandhi lives again. There are touches of humor to his portrayal, and while that may sound a bit "sacrilegious" it does not seem out of place.

Kingsley brings Gandhi to life in a number of ways; he gives the character little things, such as a walk or how he carried on a conversation, which greatly help the feeling of reality.

While Kingsley practically steals the film, Attenborough has assembled one of the most distinguished supporting casts of recent memory.

First, there is Indian actress Rohini Hattangady, who plays Gandhi's wife, Kasturba. She nearly equals Kingsley's performance and should get an Academy Award Nomination for her excellent performance in this film.

There are two other Indian actors worth noting for their large supporting roles: Saeed Jaffrey and Roshan Seth.

Jaffrey plays Sadar Patel, "the prosperous lawyer who gave up his practice to support the struggle for independence and later became Pandit Nehru's (India's first Prime Minister) deputy." Seth plays Nehru himself. Says Richard Attenborough, "Apart from Gandhi, Nehru was the most difficult part to cast because his face and demeanor were familiar to so many people around the world."

Most of the rest of the major supporting cast is made up of some extremely talented British actors. The two exceptions are Candice Bergen, as Life photographer Margaret Bourke-White, and Martin Sheen as American Journalist Walker.

Of the two, Sheen fares the best. Sheen's character is an amalgam of Louis Fischer, Vincent Sheean and William Shirer, "the farseeing and understanding band of western pressmen who were advocating Gandhi's philosophies long before he was accepted by the world at large."

Sadly, Bergen as Bourke-White fares the worst of all the supporting cast. She does not have enough of a character to bring Bourke-White to life and seems to function, for the most part, as decoration.

The rest of the major supporting cast is made up of some very distinguished names from the British acting "family."

There is Sir John Gielgud who plays Lord Irwin, Viceroy to India between 1928 and 1931. Next comes Trevor Howard who portrays Judge Broomfield, the man who sentenced Gandhi to six years in jail. Sir John Mills plays the Viceroy of India in the years after the first World War who had to deal with huge strikes by the populace of India.

Ian Charleson (best known in America for his performance as Olympic runner Eric Liddell in "Chariots of Fire") plays British missionary Charlie Andrews, whom Gandhi met in South Africa and who became a lifelong friend of Gandhi.

Then there is Geraldine James who plays Madeleine Slade (or Mirabehn, the name she was given by Gandhi), a British admiral's daughter who became one of Gandhi's followers.

All these actors turn in effective performances, but it is Edward Fox, as British Brigadier-General Dyer, who steals the film with a performance which is less than a half hour long. Dyer was the army officer who was responsible for the massacre of Indian men, women, and children attending a peaceful meeting in Amritsar.

Fox gives a truly chilling performance as Dyer, an officer who was just trying to teach the Indians a "lesson." The real kudos must go to director Attenborough, however, for bringing this cast together and for just being able to pull this monumental project off.

Attenborough had tried to get "Gandhi" made for over twenty years. Finally, in the mid-seventies, he received the necessary funding for the project and proceeded to assemble the actors and technicians necessary to carry off the monumental project.

"Gandhi" is an event and should be treated as such.

If this film is not even nominated for any Academy Award it will be a crime. "Gandhi" richly deserves any and all awards it receives.

Actor Ben Kingsley, as Mohandas K. Gandhi, and director Sir Richard Attenborough confer on the set of "Gandhi," the epic telling of the great man's life.

Bad script overrides excellent cast, acting

by Bill Schumacher

Last Saturday at 9 p.m. I entered the Virginia Theatre. At 11:05 p.m., I exited.

The time spent in between is hardly worth mentioning.

The movie in question is "Time Rider," the latest release from former Monkee Mike Nesmith, and although the acting is excellent, the script drags it down to the bottom rung of the ladder of mediocrity.

The script has problems in the form of predictability, continuity, and lackluster dialogue, but the major faults are the stereotyped plasticity of the characters and the indecision between drama and comedy.

Each character is like a clockwork animal, moving blindly and mechanically throughout the entire movie. There appears to be no real depth, no real motivation for what each person does, and this is in essence the major problem.

The acting, however, is superb. Among the many actors are Richard Masur and Tracy Walter as the villainous Dorsett brothers. (Tracy Walter, many people may remember, played the part of "Frog" in the television series "Best of the West.")

But by far the best acting comes from the main "Bad Guy," Reese, played superbly by Peter Cayote, best known as "The investigator with the keys" from "E.T."

Coyote plays this part with the Snake-like cunning of an Eastwood or Bronson, and his death is one of the most idiotic gags in the whole film.

The music, by Nesmith, deserves some mention, but although it is very good, doesn't quite fit the mood of the film.

"Time Rider" would be perfect for a television series, but lengthened to two hours, this film moves like a tricycle: very slowly.

Missing Persons: don't miss this

by Jimm Scott

Now it is widely known fact that Frank Zappa's backing group, (the Mothers of Invention), have a habit of throwing out a major star every few years.

But, it is very seldom that they come up with a complete group this painfully hot!

After Missing Person's stint with Zappa, they decided to go into the music business on their own. To say that they went about it well would be an understatement.

"Spring Session M" signals an abrupt end to New Wave as it is known, (throughout the current trends enter New wave Rock and Roll).

At the group's inception they released a 7-inch EP featuring the song "Destination Unknown." After this was added to the airplay list of a majority of radio stations across the nation, EMI America wasted no time in drawing up a contract for national distribution, and Missing Persons' debut EP topped the charts, becoming a success in every way imaginable.

Suddenly Missing Persons were no longer an "unknown group." They were on the lips and minds of everyone within earshot.

"Spring Session M" will be the group's first attempt at an album and what an album it has become!

A single would be kind of hard to cull from this record, and I defy you to name a bad song on this song cycle. Missing Persons could be one of those "once in a lifetime groups" that we seem to have in such short supply of at the present time.

The Who is winding down; the Rolling Stones might as well.

All the groups that were our heroes in the sixties have either broken up or are too apathetic to care about anything.

This "Spring Session M" is the type of album you want to relax with after work.

It doesn't bring you down, it peps you up and keeps you awake for the duration.

I decided to save the best for last and introduce the members of the group individually, along with their function, so you can be familiar with them when they attain stardom.

First there is Dale Bozzio on lead vocals, then Terry Bozzio on drums, keyboards and vocals, Warren Curecurullo on guitar, Chuck Wild as keyboardist, and Patrick O'Hearn on bass and synthesized bass.

So, is there life after Rock and Roll?

Skylines

by Dave Linton

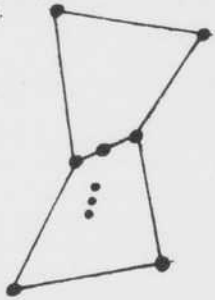

The winter weather we now experience seems ample reason to spend our evenings huddled near the fireplace in the comfort of our homes. In doing so, however, we turn our backs on the beauty of nature visible from just outside our walls.

On a clear (and consequently cold) winter night, the stars shine for us as they do at no other time of the year. One reason for this is that the cold atmosphere cannot hold as much moisture as it can at higher temperatures. The haziness of a humid summer day is not at all present as the winter's temperatures drop down near zero. One other reason is that nature has put its grandest objects up for display at this time of year.

Consider the most prominent constellation in the sky — Orion, the hunter. Orion is a collection of stars seen halfway between the southern horizon and straight overhead, when viewed at approximately nine PM, on a winter's evening.

Orion appears as four stars forming a box, three in a close straight line inside that box, and several fainter stars below the line but inside the box. To those who imagine this to be a hunter (with club, not gun), the box is an outline of head and feet, the line of three stars is his belt, and the stars below the belt represent his sword and scabbard.

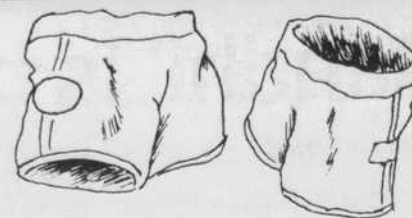

Three of the four stars in the box are among the twenty brightest stars seen throughout the year from Champaign. These are Rigel in the lower right, Betelgeuse in the upper left, and Bellatrix in the upper right. Rigel is a brilliant blue star almost 900 light years away. (One light year is the distance light will travel in one year — about six trillion miles). Rigel puts out 80,000 times as much light as does our sun.

Betelgeuse, noticeably redder than Rigel, puts out 18,000 times as much light does the sun, but its closer distance of 650 light years results in it not being too much fainter than Rigel. Betelgeuse is what we call a Red Giant star. If it could be placed in our solar system in place of our sun, its surface would extend well beyond the orbit of the earth. The earth would actually be inside the star! Not only should this give you an idea of the size of that star, but it also hints at the ultimate fate of the earth, five billion years into the future. For at that time the sun will swell in size, engulfing the earth and ending all life on this planet.

Not only is the fate of the earth suggested to us by the Orion constellation, but our origins are hinted at also. For in Orion's sword is a gas cloud 2000 light years away in which stars are coming into existence. Gravitation is pulling the cloud together in certain spots, forming stars in the same way the sun was formed over four billion years ago. Perhaps as many as one thousand stars will eventually be formed from this cloud, many of which will have planets circling them. Maybe, just maybe, some of those planets will eventually harbor life, even intelligent life — we can only guess.

In order to see this cloud, called the Orion Nebula, all you will need is a pair of binoculars or a small telescope. Also, dress in the warmest clothes you own.

MIAMI—Mercury Morris, the star running back for the '72, '73, '74 Miami Dolphins SuperBowl teams, was convicted for cocaine trafficking and cocaine conspiracy and sentenced to 20 years in prison, of which he must serve 15 before he is eligible for parole. In an interview with the San Diego Tribune, Morris said "I wanted to get away from it (cocaine), but the demons wouldn't let me."

ALABAMA—Paul "Bear" Bryant, die at age 69 last Thursday of an apparent heart attack. Bryant coached his last game Dec. 29, 1982 in the Liberty Bowl vs. the Illini. Earlier, Bryant stated that if he ever left coaching, he would "croak within a week". Twenty seven days after his last game, the Bear is dead.
