ROMULUS, MICH. — All three crew members were killed early Tuesday when their DC-8 cargo plane exploded and crashed into a swamp on take-off from Detroit Metropolitan Airport. The plane was carrying five pounds of Americium 241 in a 9-pound lead container. The low-level radioactive substance was unharmed and posed no danger, according to FAA investigators.

Witnesses said the engine on the plane apparently exploded in the air. The plane disintegrated on impact and wreckage was strewn over 6,000 feet.

RANTOUL — A plan to improve school-owned land for a public fitness park was announced by the Rantoul Township High School Board last Monday. The proposal to improve the 10-acre tract just east of the Wabash Avenue Village Park, was submitted last month by the park district. Additional uses of the park will not interfere with school programs.

***

MAHOMET — Owners of areas subject to flooding may find they qualify for reduced insurance rates on their property. An updated version of the flood ordinance will make the village of Mahomet eligible for the federal insurance program.

***

MONTICELLO — Piatt county board members Tuesday morning accepted the resignation of death examiner Dwight Mackey and named local physician William Mundt to replace him. Mackey, reappointed to another 2-year term two months ago, served the county since 1952.

Questions were raised last year about Mackey's handling of several death investigations, but a report by a special prosecutor recommended no charges be filed.

Mackey's resignation came after an ordinance restricting his office's activities was passed.

CHAMPAIGN — A new zip code went into effect last Monday for all residents and businesses west of Prospect Avenue. The new area also includes several rural routes. Instead of the previous 61820, the new zip is 61821.

FLORIDA — Lady Cobras were 3-0 over the holidays in their Florida games.

CHAMPAIGN CO. — Tuesday's snow flurries left icy highways that caused many fender-benders and one fatal accident near Monticello when a semi jack-knifed on the highway and a passenger car slid underneath. The passenger of the auto was killed, but the semi-driver was unharmed.

ARCOLA — The East Central Illinois Microcomputer Consortium received another member last Monday. The Arcola School Board voted unanimously to accept an invitation to become a member of this computer group that serves Champaign, Douglas, Piatt, Vermilion, Ford, and Iroquois counties.

***

SPRINGFIELD — Governor James R. Thompson was sworn into office Monday for his third consecutive term, a first in Illinois history.

Thompson used parts of an inaugural speech given 50 years ago during the Great Depression.

There was only one inaugural ball to celebrate the occasion instead of the usual three. The director of the Inaugural Committee felt there was "no sense to have such a big ceremony."

CHAMPAIGN-URBANA — After years of service to the twin cities, Busey Bank's time and temperature number is no longer in service. However, those wishing to obtain time and temperature information can still call toll-free 1-893-4101.

Begin semester with involvement

A new semester and a new year should obviously be a time for new beginnings.

First-time students at Parkland have the opportunity to be involved in their school from the beginning, which may become a habit in time.

One of the best ways of becoming actively involved is to vote, or run, in the Parkland Student Government elections coming up the first week in February. This is one way to make your voice heard.

Activities covering almost every imaginable area of interest are also available at Parkland. If you can't find a club or organization that includes your special interest, you have the right to seek authorization to start one yourself.

Parkland also offers a variety of athletics and sports as an outlet for all that excess energy. Whether you decide on conference or intramural play, whether you participate actively as a player or as a supportive spectator, the opportunity for involvement is here at Parkland.

Your Student Government, the Activities Office, or even the Prospectus can provide or suggest ways that new students can get involved.

As for returning students . . . well, you should know what's available at Parkland. If you haven't already found your area of interest, why not make that your belated New Year's resolution.

Welcome to Parkland!

Christmas Day heroes UI vets save pet

On Christmas Eve we had the sad experience of having a veterinarian analyze a problem with our Dachshund as a slipped disk.

We were informed she would have to be operated on within 24 to 36 hours. Since it was Christmas Eve we were sure that no one would be available at the Small Animal Unit at the University of Illinois to perform this operation on Christmas Day.

However, when we contacted the Small Animal Unit Christmas morning they told us to bring our precious pet to them as soon as possible. When we got there at noon Christmas Day two veterinarians were on hand to do what they could. This made such an impression on us we felt we should share this and let all of you know the sacrifice these professionals gave at noon on Christmas Day.

Respectfully,
Roy and Bonnie Freesen

Wet expected

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Most of Illinois is likely to have above normal precipitation in January.

The water survey, located at the University of Illinois, maintains a century-old bank of climatic data from about 100 stations around the state.

"In terms of precipitation, the outlook based on warm, wet Decembers in the past for all of Illinois points strongly toward above normal precipitation in all except the south-central quarter," said Wayne Wendland, head of the survey's climatology section.

The best odds for the south-central section are for near normal wetness conditions in January, he said.

Based on statistics from the past, the odds are that east-central Illinois will continue to experience above normal temperatures, Wendland said.

Everyone has heard of the Energy Crisis. The shortage of supplies of gasoline and oil that occurred just a few years ago brought long lines at the gas stations and fears that we would not be able to heat our homes. My remembrance of that time is one of sweltering during my not-so-air-conditioned summer classes.

Certainly the future holds similar energy crises for us and our descendants. Some will probably be much more severe. But how many of us have stopped to ponder the ultimate energy crisis: the death of the Sun?

That the Sun should not be eternal is a relatively new idea. It has obviously been very stable in its energy output since life gained a start on this planet roughly four billion years ago. If it hadn't, if its energy output had repeatedly seared the earth or plunged the entire earth into the depths of a permanent ice age, life would not have had the opportunity to evolve into its present complexity. But in spite of its history, the Sun's future is quite clear: since it cannot have an infinite supply of energy stored in its interior, eventually it must use up that supply and cease to shine.

In the same way that our supplies of coal, oil, and natural gas will dwindle out of existence over the next few centuries, our supply of solar energy will eventually be used up as well. We have, however, plenty of time to prepare. Our present understanding of the nuclear reactions occurring inside the Sun leads us to conclude that the Sun will remain pretty much the same for the next five billion years. If twenty years constitutes a generation, this is equivalent to 250,000,000 human generations—a thousand times mankind's current tenure on this planet. (It is sobering to realize that of all those millions of generations, past and future, ours is the first to understand the fate of our Sun.)

As this period of stability draws to a close, the nuclear reactions in the Sun will change, causing the Sun to swell into a Red Giant. Over a period of several million years, the Sun's surface will gradually move outward, engulfing first Mercury, then Venus, the Earth, and finally Mars. The oceans of the Earth will boil, the atmosphere will evaporate into space, and the Earth will be left as a charred cinder orbiting beneath the solar surface.

Within about 100 million years following this, the nuclear fires inside the Sun will be extinguished altogether. The Sun's outer layers will be pushed away into space and the core of the Sun will shrink into a dense ball of Carbon only a bit larger than the Earth. This type of star is called a White Dwarf. Like the dying embers of a campfire, the Sun will continue to cool as it grows progressively fainter. What is left of the Earth will be put into a perpetual deep freeze.

The Sun's demise does not mean the end of life as well. If life still occupies the Earth five billion years from now, our descendants will likely choose to go elsewhere. As the Sun becomes a Red Giant, they may seek refuge in the outer solar system. After the Sun has contracted into a White Dwarf, however, the solar system will be home no longer, and our descendants will need to strike out across the interstellar void to find a star that is still in its youth—a star that, as of today, has not yet been born.

StuGo rates PC bookstore: okay

by Martha Hutchins

This is the time of year many students grumble about the cost of textbooks and supplies. The student government members decided to investigate Parkland's bookstore to see if these complaints were justified. The purpose of this investigation was to look into Parkland bookstore's procedures and to compare these procedures to other college bookstores in the area. After thoroughly investigating the Illini Union Bookstore, Danville Area College Bookstore, Lincoln Land College Bookstore and Kankakee Community College Bookstore, we found that their procedures met the guidelines suggested by the National Association of College Bookstores.

Parkland's bookstore, managed by Leah Wightman, met or surpassed the policies of all the bookstores investigated. During the interview with Leah Wightman, we found her to be cooperative and eager to talk with the students. Wightman said she wants any students with complaints or suggestions to come in and talk to her.

For more details, or any suggestions about the investigation, contact Martha Hutchins or Ed Young in the Student Government offices, X160.

Pet shelter seeks adoptive homes

by Danny Lattimore

It was a gloomy Christmas for the unwanted, unloved pets at the Champaign County Humane Society pet shelter at Bondville.

Santa did remember the pets, though; he left a few extra treats received from the pet food drive held by area supermarkets. But the outlook for permanent homes, the real wish of every pet, still looks bleak because there are more pets than homes.

If you are a kitten, puppy, or other small animal, chances are that you may find that awaited home. But if you are an adult cat or older dog you don't have much of a chance for adoption.

Every year thousands of unwanted pets are destroyed because they have been discarded by owners for one reason or another, many just because they have become an inconvenience to their owners.

Older cats seldom adjust to new surroundings well and sit huddled in the back of cages, hissing, meowing, and frightened. They present little attraction for adoption while kittens climb bars, reach through and try to catch visitors as they pass by. They seem to say, "Here I am. Take me."

The Humane Society Shelter at Bondville, which works with the Parkland College Animal Technology Program training students in veterinary care, is planning to build a new facility in 1983. More centrally-located than the present shelter, it is expected to cost $900,000.

The Humane Society stresses that every pet should be neutered to cut down on the pet population explosion as surplus animals without homes must be destroyed. Dr. Leroy Nietzel, DVM, President of the Board of the Champaign County Humane Society says, "We have the best system of euthanasia in the U.S. We use phenobarbital by injection, which is an anesthetic given in overdose form."

One of the conditions of adoption is that the pet being adopted is neutered. That way the chances of more unwanted animals being returned to the shelter to be disposed of are lessened.

There are several things to consider before adopting a pet: Do you have time to feed, groom, play with, and train an animal? Can you afford the cost of food, shots, medicines, toys, litter, and bedding? Do you have the patience to train an animal? Are all the members of your household in agreement to the adoption? If the answer is yes to all these questions, then you are ready to adopt.

Why not go out to Bondville and make 1983 a Happy New Year for a pet by giving him, or her, a home.

Ron Wilson installs insulating panels to ensure students and faculty a warm winter in the Annex. Work on the Annex is still underway and Business Manager Don Moran announced this past weekend that classes would not meet there today, as previously anticipated. Moran cited weather and delivery of building materials for the delay. Although the date has not yet been firmly set, January 31 should see classes meeting in the new building.

Game honors FC-Mansfield

Parkland College has designated Friday, Jan. 21 "Farmer City-Mansfield Night" at the College's men's and women's basketball games. The Cobra women will face Spoon River College of Canton, Ill., in the opener of the doubleheader at 5:30 p.m., and the men will take on Illinois Central College of East Peoria in the nitecap. Tip-off time for the men's game is 7:30 p.m.

Farmer City can claim one Parkland athlete as a native. Sophomore forward Lisa Cole, the daughter of David and Sherry Cole, is a two-year starter on Coach Tim Wulf's Cobra women's squad. She currently is averaging approximately ten points and seven rebounds per game this season. Cole played four years of basketball under Coach Mike Hendricks at Farmer City-Mansfield High School before enrolling at Parkland in Champaign.

As an added bonus, all residents of the Farmer City-Mansfield area will be admitted to the evening's games free of charge. The Farmer City-Mansfield High School pep band will provide pre-game and half-time entertainment.

Donors needed

January is National Volunteer Blood Donor Month. First instituted in 1971, National Volunteer Blood Donor Month helps publicize the need for blood, especially after the holidays—a time of chronic blood shortages.

President Reagan, Mayor Markland, Mayor Severns, and the Chancellor of the University of Illinois have each proclaimed January as National Volunteer Blood Donor Month.

The Champaign County Blood Bank would also like to thank all current volunteer donors for their unselfish support and encourage others to give blood.

'Airplane II' almost equal in lunacy to predecessor

by Brian Lindstrand

In 1980, a comedy masterpiece was released by Paramount Pictures, Inc. This film, entitled "Airplane!" went on to make over $10 million dollars, making up its $10 million cost handily.

The film's "plot" dealt with the poisoning and subsequent incapacitation of an airliner's crew. A pacifist, Ted Striker (Robert Hays), who hasn't flown since "the war," has to take control of the plane and land it.

"Airplane!" was a riotously funny film, and now comes the inevitable sequel, entitled simply enough, "Airplane II: The Sequel."

The setting is the future, and because of advances made in the area of space travel, the first Earth to the Moon (there is a lunar base there) commercial space shuttle, Mayflower 1, is about to embark on its maiden voyage.

On board are Ted's estranged ex-girlfriend Elaine Dickinson (Julie Hagerty), and her fiancée Simon (Chad Everett).

Ted has been framed for a crash of a test shuttle several weeks earlier and is now residing in the Ronald Reagan Home for the Mentally Ill. He escapes from the hospital and makes his way toward the Mayflower 1's launch site. The reason? If the shuttle goes up, it may develop problems in its guidance system and catastrophe will result.

Ted makes it on board, and sure enough, something goes wrong. The computer develops a short-out in its circuitry which throws the Mayflower 1 "slightly" off course (which, in space terms, means about a million miles).

The ship begins a journey of certain destruction as it plunges toward the sun. The only hope for the ship and its hapless passengers (who are more shocked to learn that the ship's stores have run out of coffee) is if Ted can put the shuttle back on manual control and land it safely back on the moon.

Will our hero succeed and land the shuttle safely?? Will he win back the hand of Elaine?? And, most important, can that heroic little dog Scraps save the shuttle from a bomb???

To say that "Airplane II" equals its predecessor is wrong; however, it is a very funny film that, at times, equals the original's sense of mindless lunacy.

Most of the credit for this goes to the film's cast. Robert Hays proves once again that he has a brilliant sense of comic timing. Julie Hagerty is at her bubble-headed best as Elaine and is exceptionally funny here. Also notable are Peter Graves as Captain Oveur (remember him from the original?) who is now in command of the Mayflower 1. Lloyd Bridges returns in his role of air traffic controller (now retired) McCroskey. Also back from the original film is Johnny Henshaw (Steven Stucker); you remember him don't you, the controller who went around uttering such phrases as "The tower? The tower? Rapunzel, Rapunzel!" Also along for the ride is Chuck Connors as "the Sarge," plus Sonny Bono as an impotent bomber.

But the actor who practically steals the film is William Shatner as Command Buck Murdock, in charge of Moonbase Alpha Beta. Shatner plays Murdock as Captain Kirk gone mad, and he has the best sight gag of the whole film.

The original "Airplane!" was written and directed by Jim Abrahams and David and Jerry Zucker. The sequel is the work of one man, Ken Segal. Finkleman's script is funny and even downright hilarious at times, but it lacks the completely off the wall lunacy of the original.

All in all, "Airplane II: The Sequel" is a very good sequel, and a very funny movie, but it just doesn't equal the original "Airplane!"

Of note is a little message which is presented right before the credits start rolling; this message reads "Coming from Paramount Pictures... 'Airplane III.'"

I hope that the studio can keep the level of quality that is evident in "Airplane II."

Lindstrand awards make debut

by Brian Lindstrand

First there was the Oscar, and it was good. But something was lacking, for you Oscars were commercial and essentially a popularity contest.

And so were created... The Lindstrand Awards!!! One lone critic sets out to do battle with the over-glamorized, over-emphasized, over-whatevered movies (and television shows) of the year.

1. The If At First You Don't Succeed, Try, Try, Again Award:

Winner: "Star Trek II: The Wrath of Khan"
Honorable mention: the re-release of "Tron"

"Monty Python Live at the Hollywood Bowl"

"E.T. the Extraterrestrial"

"Dead Men Don't Wear Plaid"

15. Best Visual Effects:

"Blade Runner"

16. Worst Visual Effects:

"Firefox"

Well, that's all for this year (partially because I cannot think up any more awards). But just wait until next year, when such films like "Superman III," "Revenge of the Jedi," and "Star Trek III" come out.

Heh, Heh, Heh...

John Femina and Merritt Buttrick star in "Square Pegs," one of the best shows of the new television season.

Wez (Vernon Wells) stars in "The Road Warrior," an excellent "Post-Holocaust" motion picture.

Pop no has-been

Assuming that most of you can remember the Stooges during their prime, they were most notorious for a front-man they had named Iggy Pop.

His self-destructive tendencies were seminal in forming stage personalities of performers such as Jim Morrison (late of the Doors) and spawned quite a few people who emulated him.

Iggy's post-Stooges career though has been somewhat erratic.

His first solo effort was 1973's "Raw Power" (which he still counts as one of his best works), along with 1977's "The Idiot" and 1980's "Soldier."

Now he is also keen on adding "Zombie Birdhouse" to the list. Flitting from producer to producer, the last time I saw Iggy in performance was last year when he had fragments of the Patti Smith Group with him.

While he is touring for his current release, two members of his band are former members of the group "Blondie." Clem Burke and Chris Stein, and Rob duPrey play most of the guitars and sings some backup vocals.

Starting off the LP is a song called "Run Like A Villain," a loud rumbling and rockin' song which somehow pushes poignancy to the forefront. Side one is very low on the Rocking side with most of the tunes, favoring more gentle ballads and twangy country numbers.

However, side two takes on a quite different attitude, the opening song being "Eat or Be Eaten," a herky-jerky-bizarre-Iggy-like song about the food-chain.

The next song on the second side, which is titled "Bulldozer," is reminiscent of some of Iggy's earlier works with The Stooges, showing Iggy able to build a mood of fear using only his voice, almost like Lon Chaney or Boris Karloff in a vintage horror film.

"Watching the News" and "Street Crazies" are both the final songs on the album, after "The Horse Song."

Both of these tunes remind one of radio static, although the songs are interesting because of Iggy's incessant recitation of his own brand of offbeat poetry overlapping itself. During these two selections he does more for electronic music without using synthesizers than a complete orchestra armed with gadgets could do.

Showing that even without being trendy Iggy Pop is no has-been.

Bruce better with band

by Jimm Scott

So Bruce Springsteen has a solo album out, huh?

It's mostly acoustic, huh?

SO WHAT?

Bruce Springsteen belongs on a stage with a band behind him, not sitting with an acoustic guitar playing folk singer.

Even though a good number of these songs are good ones, this album is downright depressing, though it's interesting to hear these ten songs performed with a band behind them.

It's not the quality of the songs which is lacking, it's the performance. It is a shame that this album received such a lame treatment performance-wise because the songs are brilliant. Springsteen and his songwriting abilities have been compared to Bob Dylan.

I think most everyone will agree with me when I say that Bruce would've had a much better product if he had a band behind him.

Holiday movies no go

by Brian Lindstrand

Twas the season to be jolly and see movies. Sadly, out of the films that are in town, I was able to see only three: "Airplane II: The Sequel," "The Dark Crystal," and "Tootsie." Because of a lack of monetary financing, I was unable to see films like "The Verdict" and "Peter Pan" (I know that it was a re-release, but I had wanted to see it).

There were also films that I had no desire whatsoever to see: "Honkeytonk Man" (I am not a Clint Eastwood fan), "Best Friends" (I do like Goldie Hawn, but I don't care much for Burt Reynolds), and "Six Weeks" (from what I have read about this film... well, let's just say that my sugar content is already approaching the danger level and I don't want to risk a horrible death).

Anyway, here are my reactions (if anyone out there really cares) to the three films I did see.

"Airplane II: The Sequel": First off, if you really liked the original "Airplane!," steer clear of this movie. There are several gags which have been taken from the first film which, while they were funny in the original, fall flat in the sequel.

The original writer/directors were Jerry Zuckers and Michael and Philip Abraham. They, however, were not involved with this film and their absence shows. While the work of writer/director Ken Finkleman is good and, at times, very funny, the second film does not match the original's sense of actually having an actual story to tell.

This film's plot is merely an updated and rearranged version of the original's plot. There is no airplane in trouble but rather the first commercial Earth-to-Moon space shuttle (named appropriately enough, Mayflower 1).

Aside from the returning actors, such as Robert Hays as Ted Styker, mentally disturbed ex-pilot, his ex-girlfriend, Elaine Dickinson (Julie Haggerty), air traffic controller Steve McCroskey (Lloyd Bridges) and the irrepressible controller Johnny (Steven Stucker), there are a few new faces in the crowd. Among them are Sonny Bono as a mad bomber, Chuck Connors as "the Sarge," Raymond Burr as a judge, and Will Shatner as Buck Murdock, commander of the Alpha Beta Lunar Base (Shatner is especially notable because he gets the best sight gag in the entire film).

"Airplane II: The Sequel" is not a terrible film, in fact, some of its moments are downright hilarious. However, it just didn't quite make the grade.

"The Dark Crystal": First, let me say, that despite the fact that Muppet masters Jim Henson and Frank Oz directed and produced this film (along with "Star Wars," and "The Empire Strikes Back" producer Garry Kurt) this film is not for little children. It deals with an ancient prophecy that someday, in the land where the story is set, the last survivor of a race known as the Gelflings will "heal" the dark Crystal and end the rule of the Skeksis, a rather evil bunch of nasties who have atrocious table manners. Aiding the Gelfling (Jen) is another member of that race (Kira). Guess which one is the boy and which one is the girl.

Together, along with Kira's scene stealing pet, Fizzgig, they set off to fulfill the prophecy. Along the way they have to fight the Skeksis' "soldiers," the Garthim, and they gain allies in the Podlings, Landstriders, and an old "woman" named Aughra.

The design of the film's world is stunning because it seems so real. Henson and Oz hired British illustrator Brian Froud (one of the authors of the best-seller "Faeries") to design the world of "The Dark Crystal" and the creatures who inhabit it. However, while the care and work do show up on the screen, the film fails on another level... the script.

The basic plotline is a direct take from J.R.R. Tolkien's "Middle-Earth" stories and who knows how many other tales of magical quests. For sheer visual extravagance though, "The Dark Crystal" cannot be beat. It creates a magical world where almost anything can, and usually does, happen.

"Tootsie": This was easily the most enjoyable and the best film I saw. In this movie Dustin Hoffman plays an out-of-work actor who impersonates a woman and lands a job on a soap opera. In a matter of weeks he/she has become a media hero/heroine, has caused his girlfriend to believe he is gay, caused a girl he meets on the soap (Jessica Lange) to think that he is a lesbian, and captured the heart of Lange's father (Charles Durning) who wants to marry her/him.

"Tootsie" is a hilarious film, which not only provides a lot of laughs, but has a message as well (which the movie does not bash over the collective heads of the audience).

The performances are superb; Hoffman does brilliantly as the man turned woman, Lange is great as the actress Hoffman meets and subsequently falls for. Also brilliant are Charles Durning as Lange's father, Dabney Coleman as the director of the soap opera, Bill Murray (doing the best he's ever done in films) as Hoffman's roommate, Teri Garr as Hoffman's tremendously insecure first girlfriend, and "Tootsie" director Sydney Pollack as Hoffman's agent.

The film is funny, serious, sad and dramatic (at times) and makes for the best entertainment for a movie-goer.

Of the three films, "Tootsie" is the "must-see." "The Dark Crystal" comes in a close second, with "Airplane II" trailing in third.

Plus, yet to come here are such critically acclaimed films such as "Gandhi," "Sophie's Choice," and "Frances," so there is still much to look forward to.
