Acknowledgments

The road to this manuscript has been a long and winding one, having taken me through five different countries on two continents. Along this journey, I crossed paths with many people to whom I owe gratitude for helping me reach the desired destination and who have impacted me on either a personal or a professional level (or, in many cases, on both).

First and foremost, I am forever indebted to my family members, who have provided immense support for my every personal and professional endeavour, and without whom I certainly would not be where I am today.

I also owe great thanks to my partner Bojana. Without you, this thesis perhaps could have been finished way earlier – or, much more likely, may never have been finished at all. Maybe I could have done it without you, but I sure am glad I did not have to find out. I hope to be able to return the favour.

I am particularly glad that I got to spend the best part of my PhD years as part of the same project team with two amazing people – Katrine and Heather. Katrine, it was a pleasure to share an office with you – I enjoyed our discussions (and not infrequently heated arguments) about every legal, social and political topic imaginable. I have learned a lot from you. Heather, one of my first memories of this PhD will always be your invitation to Xander’s baby shower before we had even met – I will always be grateful that you set such a welcoming tone in my first days. I always admired the enthusiasm with which you pursue your many interests and talents, and I will forever be grateful that you allowed me to partake in the setting of a Guinness World Record!

Thanks also to everyone else – Flavia, Kerem, Michalis and Devin – who were a part of our research project and/or who participated in our group meetings for making them more stimulating and fun.

Vincent, thanks for being a great office mate and indeed friend – you have been an excellent Dutch ‘host’. I really enjoyed our football (and beer) nights out!

Sophie, I had a lot of fun during our time as flatmates in an apartment with the best canal view of (and rooftop terrace in) Amsterdam! Thanks for making that possible, and for showing me many cool and quirky sides of this great city.

At the University of Amsterdam, there were a lot of people who made lunch breaks and beers after work much more enjoyable – Nik, Chris, Enrico, Merel, Anne, Sanne, Maarten, Anna, Karoline, Nienke, Emma, Eljalill, Or, Mia, Corina, Teresa, Maiko, Wim, Wiebe, Jackson.

While my PhD journey ended at the University of Amsterdam, it started at the Max Planck Institute for Comparative Public Law and International Law in Heidelberg. Those were a fun nine months – in large part thanks to Carolyn, Christos, Giacomo, Daniel, Simon, Ximena, Raffaella, Milan, Franz, Jannika, Pedro, Bajar, Gustavo, Andre, and many others.

An important intermezzo during my PhD time was at Columbia University. I am thankful to Lisa Sachs and George Bermann for sponsoring my stay, as well as to the many great people – George, Antoine, Matteo, Amber, Perrine, Mimi, Laura, Ninoslav, Ana and Roxana – who made New York an experience that I will never forget.

I am also grateful to the wonderful staff who helped me during my many archival visits at The UK National Archives, the University of Manchester Library Special Collections, Foyle Special Collections Library at King’s College London, the National Archives of the Netherlands, the Hagley Museum and Library, the UN Archives at Geneva, the ILO Archives, the Archives of the Graduate Institute in Geneva, the ICC Archives, the SCC Archives, the Archives of Yugoslavia and the Diplomatic Archive of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Serbia.

At the University of Novi Sad, I am thankful to Petar Đundić, Sanja Đajić and Maja Stanivuković, who were very influential in the early stages of my career and who nudged me along towards a career in international law and (investment) arbitration.

I owe much gratitude to Luke Eric Peterson and the team from IARporter. Working with IARporter has been a greatly rewarding experience and has played an important role in getting me to the finish line.

Of course, I am very grateful to the committee members – Christoph Schreuer, Christian Tams, Catherine Brölmann, Yvonne Donders and Vid Prislan – for taking the time to read my work and attend my PhD defence.

Many thanks to my co-supervisor Ingo Venzke for agreeing to jump in and take me on as one of his supervisees. Your writings were instrumental in shaping my thinking, and your comments and practical approach greatly contributed to the final product.

Lastly, but certainly not the least, I am immensely grateful to my supervisor, Stephan Schill. Thank you for your patience both before the start and towards the end of my PhD. You have set a great example with your dedication and relentless hard work, and your support during the various stages of this trying process was of course invaluable. I am grateful for the many professional opportunities that you have put in front of me and the doors that you have opened. The chance to work with you has certainly been a career highlight and a great learning experience.
