Технологический прогресс стремительно движется вперед. Введение в процесс обучения цифровых технологий способствует дополнительному развитию и становлению современного специалиста. Это особенно важно для повышения уровня подготовки кадров, которые напрямую вовлечены в процесс развития технологий. Современные методы обучения должны быстро и в доступной форме доносить будущим специалистам всю необходимую информацию. Информационные технологии позволяют снизить затраты на технологическое оборудование, повысить уровень образного мышления и восприятия информации, а также позволяют сделать процесс обучения более эффективным и привлекательным для студентов.

LIFE AFTER GRADUATION AND THE DIFFICULTIES WHICH MABE FACED

M.A.E. Hegazy

Egyptian russian university, Tomsk polytechnic university
Butakov research center, group 507I

Who among us, as students, does not dream of this day when we will graduate from the university and receive a certificate of completion of this stage and crown years of fatigue and effort with this joy and ceremony, but with the completion of this beautiful picture, do you see the details of the path that leads to this stage? Do you see what life will look like after graduation?

Life is choices, and each age stage has its limited choices. In childhood, we cannot be independent in our lives or make decisions that are best suited to us. In old age, we are also governed by similar circumstances that sometimes force us to give up some of our desires and goals. There is one stage in your life that opens the doors of all options wide to the point of insanity. It is the post-graduation stage at the university. At this stage of life, you can live as a child or an old man, or assume the life of others, or carve for yourself your own life that you have always wanted and dreamed of it [1].

As this is your choice which all your next life will depend on let us see what are the characteristics and difficulties of the post-graduation period?

Career problem

The first type of problems which you will face is your career problem since we have become living in a world that does not link between study and work [2]. In some situations, you find a person who has studied a field, but when he graduated from the university, he found work in another field and suitable for him, so he decided to make a career shift, and there are many examples around us after The great expansion that took place in the field of online working, so the work became through the Internet, whether in digital marketing or completing tasks and obtaining money remotely. This type of work does not require a certificate from the university, as sometimes students work while they are in the stage of study in such work. So you will find yourself asking should you work on your field or you will simulate what the world around you may require?

Emotional Problems

The other types of problems which you will face after graduation will be Emotional Problems like feeling of lost or losing passion towards everything and all these things are normal at this period of time [2], so don't hesitate to visit a psychologist and pass some tests to understand your career preferences better. Talk about your needs and opportunities. Show all your fears, and be sure that everything runs its course.

Maybe you can find another problems with your friends or family like your friends may find the job faster than you [2] and this leads you to the most important advise you should do, never compare yourself to your friends. Show them that you're glad when they are happy, say words of support when they are disappointed, but never make parallels with your life. Follow your heart and be strong enough to stay higher than all your friends' comments.

Lack of experience

And even if you decided to stay at the same career which you studied you will face another problem which is the lack of experience. Unfortunately, many faculties during the study lack practical training, which is the basis of work and the basis of life later maybe not all the fields but most of them depend more on theoretical study. In order for you to deal with such problems, let's see some tips that can help you:

- Be proactive by knowing your passion and the field in which you want to work. If you can see job opportunities before entering the university and choose the field that you will study, do so. If you have passed this stage, start from where you stand now, see all the opportunities and choose exactly which one you want to continue on it.
- Develop a clear plan to reach what you want and start implementing from where you stand, if you have already graduated or even if you are still a student at the university.
- Practical training is more important, as when you start at any work. You will find things that are completely different from what you thought, as practical life has many secrets. So be careful that you have more practical opportunities on the real life.
- Be patient and persistent, if you find the field and practical opportunities, do not be bored, but rather fight and do your best to reach the highest of what you dream of.
- And the last thing, the field of business is open to everyone now more than ever before, as it may be difficult to find a suitable job at the beginning of your life. If you are passionate about self-employment, you will find more than one field in which you can fight and create your business opportunity instead of waiting for this opportunity from others.

Conclusion

Talking about life after graduation makes us see the youth with their enthusiasm. Some of them find the opportunity quickly and set off, and some of them find a lot of obstacles, and some of them lose hope and are shattered. Therefore, every person who went through this stage must give his experience to the generations that come after him, and people must also be kinder with these youth, they are in a phase of disorientation. And speaking of businessmen, they can also make it easier for these young people by giving them greater opportunities and benefiting from their energy and minds.

But finally even if no one helped you it is still your way, your life and your choice, so be sure that you do all your best so you don't regret one day.
