Manteno warehouse closing

121 to be laid off

BY DIMITRIOS KALANTZIS

Kenco Logistic Services, a national distribution company, plans to lay off 121 workers when it closes its warehouse in Manteno, state records show. According to the January state report of mass layoffs, Kenco is shutting down its Manteno facility because of a lost contract.

The warehouse, located at 1125 Sycamore St., will close permanently by March 29.

Kenco has 62 warehouse and distribution sites across the country. The site in Manteno is dedicated to contracted clients but the company does not have to disclose details on the contract in its state filings.

Workers received notice of the layoffs on Jan. 30.

It's a tradition that dribbles on at the YMCA

BY DENNIS YOHNKA

The little basketball players come from Kankakee, Bradley and Bourbonnais, as well as Limestone, Chebanse, Manteno and other nearby villages.

And, through the years, a few have gone on to play for their local high school teams, even the Kankakee Community College Cavaliers. But during the winter on Monday and Friday nights, as well as morning and afternoons on Saturdays, thousands have made their first shots at the Kankakee Area YMCA youth basketball league.

The program has been a staple on the Y's activities schedule for decades, and while health and wellness director Kait Bonavita only has been in charge for the past three years, she's witnessed its traditional, devoted following.

"We start with the 3- and 4-year-old 'Mighty-Mites,' and go up to 14-year-olds, and we always have around 220 kids, boys and girls, involved," Bonavita said.

Maybe more amazingly, the Y program always can find 20 to 25 good-hearted coaches, willing to take on the challenge of teaching the game to young people, dealing with a few overeager parents, and coping with the extra duties that come with inexperienced players.

A referee might stop the action to help a future Michael Jordan tie his shoe laces. A coach might have to help a budding LeBron James get some used chewing gum — that he discovered under the bench — off of his fingers.

And rather than focusing on the basics, players such as the point guard for one of the teams told his parents his first goal was to dribble between his legs as he brought the ball up. "And next," he said, "I'd like to shoot a buzzer-beater."

Father seeks 'missing' son through court order

Boy and his mother located in Calif., but haven't returned

BY ROBERT THEMER

On July 22, 2014, The Daily Journal published a Page 1 article that Francine Cooks-Mason and her 12-year-old son, Gregory Alan Mason Jr., had been missing since July 9.

Gregory Alan Mason Sr., 64, of Kankakee, who shared joint custody of his son with his ex-wife, said it was the fourth time Cooks-Mason has disappeared with their son since they divorced in 2007.

Two private investigators, four months and 12 days later, a Kern County, Calif., sheriff's officer served Cooks-Mason with a court summons to return to Kankakee County for a Dec. 4 hearing on Mason Sr.'s petition to modify the terms of the custody agreement.

The summons was served on Dec. 1 in Trona, Calif., where Cooks-Mason had been found, living with one of her sisters. The deputy wrote that Cooks-Mason's identity was confirmed by a photograph that had been provided.

Cooks-Mason hadn't complied by Jan. 22, when Associate Circuit Judge Michael Kramer granted Mason Sr. temporary custody of their son.

Problem still is, he doesn't know where his son is, though he had a computer communication that led him to believe he was in Kansas this week. He said he believes she's on the run again with Gregory Jr. whose birthday is Sunday.

Gregory Sr., who is disabled and retired from the Illinois Veterans Center at Manteno, hasn't seen his son since July 5, when he returned the boy to Momence after a July 4th visit.

"If you add it all up, he was gone about three or four years out of my life," he said.

"The last time and this time, I had a private investigator working on the case," he said. "The last time she was in Milwaukee. She was gone close to a year."

This time, she and Gregory Jr. were reported missing, when her sister, Mary Anne Cooks, of Bourbonnais, reported to the Kankakee County Sheriff's Department that she hadn't been able to reach them by phone for a week and that they were missing from their Momence home.

Gregory Sr. had heard nothing as of Friday. "Detectives are still working," he said.

How the 2015 Grammys went down

BY DAVID BAUDER
Associated Press

Somewhere in England sits a man who was the unwitting inspiration for the biggest winner at the Grammy Awards.

He's the man who loved, and dumped, 22-year-old British soul singer Sam Smith. Smith's yearning hit, "Stay With Me," won Grammys for song and record of the year and he was named best new artist — three of the four biggest awards the Grammys present each year. His album, "In the Lonely Hour," won best pop vocal album but lost to Beck for album of the year.

Still, not a bad haul. While accepting his record of the year award, Smith said he wanted to thank the man he's been in love with for the past year "for breaking my heart, 'cause you got me four Grammys."

Backstage later, Smith said "I'll be seeing him soon, so I can let him touch the Grammys — once."

Asked what could top his night, Smith said, "A boyfriend would be nice."

Other memorable moments at Sunday's 57th annual Grammy Awards:

Kanye time

He didn't win any Grammys, but Kanye West predictably made his presence felt — and not just for bringing wife Kim Kardashian along to entertain the red carpet crew.

West performed a new song about his late mother, "Only One," on a nearly dark stage, illuminated by a light glowing from under his feet. He joined collaborators Rihanna and, yes, Paul McCartney for a performance of their new song, "FourFiveSeconds." And he made a joking reference to one of his most infamous moments, at an MTV Video Music Awards when he hijacked the stage from Taylor Swift to protest a prize he thought should have gone to Beyonce.

When Beck won album of the year, beating out Beyonce among others, Kanye climbed the stairs to the stage and stopped just short of the microphone, smiling and wagging his finger before swiftly exiting. Knowing music insiders roared with laughter.

"Come back. I need some help," Beck said with a smile.

Beck's biggie

Beck's award for album of the year was Sunday's biggest surprise. His date mouthed, "Oh, my god," in hugging him after his name was announced and he looked a little shell-shocked walking up to the stage.

Beck's "Morning Phase" was a critical favorite, and it won best rock album. But it sold modestly and, at a time rock has receded in pop music's firmament, he had been overshadowed by fellow nominees Sam Smith, Pharrell and Beyonce. But Beck won the influential Grammy, and later was joined by Chris Martin for a performance.

Happy time

Pharrell went home happy again.

The producer-performer won three Grammys, including best pop solo performance for a live version of his omnipresent hit, "Happy." He won best music video and best urban contemporary album.

"This is super awkward and I'm going to moonwalk my way off this stage right now," he said after picking up one trophy.

Known for his headgear,

Pharrell donned a bellboys' cap to play "Happy" in a collaboration with Lang Lang and Hans Zimmer.

Country time

She wasn't offered a spotlight on the prime-time broadcast, but veteran singer Rosanne Cash went home with three Grammy Awards for American roots performance, American roots song and Americana album.

"Reagan was president last time I won a Grammy," said Cash, a country star in the 1980s who now lives in New York and keeps away from boisterous mainstream country. "I just showed up for work for 35 years and this is what happened."

KANKAKEE

Ziya Convington, 1, waits for storytime to begin Thursday at Lasting Impressions Day Care in Kankakee with employee Lakisha Taylor. According to the Illinois Department of Human Services, the state is roughly $300 million short on funding for subsidized day care programs through June 30, a resource roughly 100,000 low-income families rely on. Taylor said almost all the children in their care at the West Station Street provider are from low-income families that rely on subsidized day care.

The question of how the statues made it to their eventual resting sites mystified experts for centuries. Scientists now speculate that the statues were moved from the quarry where they were carved using ropes and a rocking motion.

Making the most of marriage

Olivet to host
Date Night
next weekBY PHIL ANGELO
philangelo@comcast.net

Marriage is alive and well in the United States.

That may not be your first impression. The commonly quoted statistic is that one out of every two marriages ends in divorce. That's misleading.

The New York Times, using Census data, says the real divorce rate is probably closer to 40 percent. Moreover, things are getting better. The divorce rate has been dropping since 1980. Among college graduates who got married from 1990 to 1994, 84 percent were still married 10 years later.

Beth Olney is the co-director of Marriage Inc., along with her husband, Kent. Marriage Inc., located on the campus of Olivet Nazarene University, provides free counseling to both couples planning to get married and to couples whose marriages are in trouble. Marriage Inc.'s largest event of the year, its seventh annual Date Night, is set for 7 p.m. Friday, Feb. 20.

Among first-time marriages, about two-thirds will stay married, Beth said.

Date Night, which will be held at Centennial Chapel at Olivet, is designed to give couples marriage-building tips in a light-hearted atmosphere. Tickets are $20 at the door, but $15 in advance at celebrationofmarriage.org. The first 1,000 couples to buy online will receive a free copy of "The Surprising Secrets of Highly Happy Marriages" by Shaunti Feldhahn, a 244-page hardcover book that ordinarily retails for $17.99.

This year's headliners for Date Night are comedian Michael Jr., and couple Jay and Laura Laffoon. Michael Jr. has appeared on Oprah, The Tonight Show, and Jimmy Kimmel. His website notes that his material has to be lively enough to work in a club even if he's performing in a church and has to be clean enough to be used in a church even if he's performing in a club.

The Laffoons, who bill themselves as edu-tainers, have a 30-year marriage themselves, and have interviewed thousands of successful couples. They have a weekly video blog at JayandLaura.com.

Beth Olney said Date Night is not designed as a fundraiser. It is an awareness-raiser. Marriage Inc. keeps the price as low as it can, while meeting the expense of the speakers.

This is a busy time of the year for Marriage Inc. One of the New Year's resolutions some people have is to work on their marriage. The number of couples requesting counseling goes up when a new year arrives. Marriage Inc. offers mentoring, pairing a couple in trouble with a couple that has often overcome the same problem. The only cost to the couple is a $35 test to inventory the couple's strengths and weaknesses.

Marriage Inc. also provides materials and training to local churches that want to set up healthy marriage ministries and has an upcoming Black Marriage Weekend April 25 and 26.

Beth Olney points out that the modern trend of delaying marriage may not always be the

Date Night

What: Annual signature event for Marriage Inc. Open to anyone, even singles, who wants to work on improving their relationships.

When: 7 p.m., Friday, Feb. 20. Doors open at 6:15 p.m.

Where: Centennial Chapel, Olivet Nazarene University. Seating is open.

Tickets: $20 at the door, $15 in advance at celebrationofmarriage.org.

best strategy. The Olneys, who have been married for 38 years, helped each other through graduate school. Today, the trend for young people is to get everything else taken care of — school and job, and then get married. Beth said she knows of one couple that plan on buying a house, then having a child and then finally getting married. That strategy can present some real legal problems.

"There's something to be said for weathering tough times together," she said.

Some surprising marriage tips

Here's some tips on how to succeed at marriage. The come from the book "The Surprising Secrets of Highly Happy Marriages" by Shaunti Feldhahn.

- Brutal honesty in outlining someone else's faults does not work. Most people are aware of their shortcomings. Reminding them of those problems will not endear them to you.

- Going to bed mad beats saying something that you will regret later on. Some people need time to cool off.

- Say that divorce is not an option. Don't threaten the significant other with a breakup.

- The fantastic five for men to be better husbands: hold her hand; leave messages telling her you love her; put your arm around her; tell her she's good looking; and don't be a grump. Pull yourself out of any morose funk. No silent treatment.

- The fantastic five for women to be better wives: thank him for helping; tell him he did a great job; praise him in public; desire your husband sexually; and make it clear that you're happy with him.

Both fantastic fives are based on a survey of 652 married couples. The men and the women took the surveys separately and did not see each other's answers.

Basketball: Patience is key for coaching kids

The Daily Journal/Tiffany Blanchette

Members of a 5- to 6-year-old teams, coached by Chris Knobloch, center, gather in a huddle Friday during a youth basketball league game held at the Kankakee Area YMCA.

"Just getting them to get the concept of defense is like earth-shattering," said Scott Bright, a volunteer coach at the Y, as well as the coach for the Bradley Central Grade School team. "Their attention span is a little short, and you have to teach some important lessons, like how to dribble. It's hard to get through sometimes, but you have to stay patient."

And Bright did stay calm, like he did on a recent night, when one of his players abandoned dribbling and just ran with the ball. He had to coach another teammate to not play defense while his team was on offense. Little mistakes like those don't really even register as out-of-the-ordinary experiences anymore for Bright. In fact, his basic tales could be retold by the 16-year-old high school coach who's earning community service hours, the active military duty woman-coach who shares the reins of another team, or any of the other mentors at work here.

"It's just seven weeks of games, eight weeks if you count that first practice," Bonvita said. "But it's a pretty big deal, for the kids and us. We have to rent the gym over at Bradley West Grade School to have enough space."

Bright coaches his sons Cameron, 4, and Dylan, 6, and many other coaches take on the duties because the sons and daughters are playing. The turnover in coaches is expected, but it also keeps the league fresh.

It's been a memorable life for ex-Illini hoops star

BY JULIE WURTH
The Associated Press

Here's a telling story about Dave Downey:

When the Illini basketball legend married his high school sweetheart in Canton, he asked a good friend and teammate, Bill Burwell, to be a groomsman.

Burwell, who is from Brooklyn, N.Y., is black. And it was the early 1960s. Downey didn't think much about it, but the folks in Canton apparently did.

The father of one of the bridesmaids refused to let his daughter walk down the aisle with Burwell. When Downey's fiancée came to tell him the news, he told her to find another bridesmaid.

As it happened, Downey's future sister-in-law stepped in and said, "I'd be proud to walk down the aisle with Bill."

Basketball opened doors for Downey, the son of a coal-miner from Alabama, who went on to law school and a successful business career. It also helped him build bridges across cultures and led, indirectly, to his role in the desegregation of Champaign schools in the late 1960s.

Downey — honored at the Jan. 18 game against Indiana for his $2 million contribution to the State Farm Center renovation — played basketball at Illinois during a period of great racial change.

Manny Jackson and Governor Vaughn, the UI's first two African-American players, were seniors when he joined the UI team in fall 1959. Though freshmen couldn't play at the time, he practiced every day against Vaughn, who "taught me a lot," Downey said.

Jackson and Vaughn showed "great tolerance and dignity" in the face of intolerance, he said. The team itself had no racial issues but ran into problems off the court, he said.

During one trip to Lexington, Ky., in the early '60s, Downey and others noticed that the African-American players on the team weren't being served in the restaurant of their hotel. He asked why and was told, "They'll have to eat in the kitchen."

"We got up and walked out," he said. "If you can't serve them, you can't serve us."

Downey grew up in a rented home in Canton with no indoor plumbing. His mom, Beulah, had a seventh-grade education, and his dad couldn't read or write. John Downey had been to school one day in his life: He showed up, stammered, was laughed at and said "he'd never go back," Downey said.

After leaving the UI, Downey went on to law school — talking the dean into letting him in before taking the LSAT — and played on some local amateur basketball teams. One was organized by Wardell Jackson, owner of the Monarch Tavern, who had sponsored athletic teams for black children before they were allowed in Little League, he said.

"I was the only white guy on his team," Downey said.

It was the mid-'60s, when

AP Photo/The News-Gazette, John Dixon

Former Illinois basketball star Dave Downey poses for a photo in Champaign, looking through a rusty homemade hoop his father made for him in the 1950s to practice with. Basketball opened doors for Downey, the son of a coal-miner from Alabama, who went on to law school and a successful business career. Downey, who said it would be fair to say he grew up in poverty, was honored recently for his $2 million contribution to the State Farm Center renovation.

racial tensions were high across the country. Downey was recruited to serve on a Model Community Coordinating Council organized by former News-Gazette owner Michael Chinigo.

"I was a 20-something, fledgling business guy," he said, but he also was an athlete known well in the black community. William Smith, manager for Downey's amateur team (and later a lawyer and administrator at Ohio University), once described him this way: "Dave was black before Bill Clinton was."

Downey's business associates warned him that getting involved could hurt his insurance business.

Downey dismissed their concerns. They told him the same thing, he said, when he grew a beard in 1975 on a cross-country trip in a motor home with his kids.

The coalition — which included the Urban League, NAACP and local activists — worked to integrate the city fire department and the Ironworkers' Union, among others.

In 1968, Downey was asked to serve on a committee formed to desegregate Champaign schools.

"There was a lot of tension," Downey said, from both white and black parents who didn't want change or busing. But evidence at the time showed that African-American children did better in integrated schools, and white children "did no worse," he said.

After months of meetings and testimony from experts, the panel recommended creating a magnet school for the arts at Booker T. Washington Elementary School, which was then all-black. The idea was to entice white families to send their children to school in north Champaign. Black students were bused to schools across the district.

Not everyone on the committee agreed on the solution, but they "all wanted what was best for kids," he said. "We were all able to reach a consensus and convince the community that it was worth a try."

The school board agreed, though not unanimously.

It was harder on black families, Downey said, as busing made after-school activities difficult for them.

"These are good arguments for neighborhood schools, but you needed to integrate the classroom if you were going to integrate the community," he said. "It would be better if you had naturally integrated neighborhoods, but there still aren't many of those."

Downey, who lived on Armory Street at the time, sent his own children to Washington; it seemed "hypocritical" to do otherwise, he said.

Was the plan a success? No, Downey said, calling it "a work in progress." He didn't think the community still would be debating racial issues 50 years later.

"Progress hasn't been as fast or as deep as I'd hoped," he said.

While he doesn't begrudge the educational choices individual parents make for their children, he believes that "being socialized and living in an integrated society is more healthy than not."

"Free public education is what makes a difference in this community," he said.

COMMENTARY

These gifts will thrill your favorite coffee snob

Even if you aren't one, chances are pretty good you know someone who is a bona fide coffee snob. That's because unmitigated devotion to coffee has reached epic proportions in the past few years. And for these folks, nothing says "I care" more than a gift that affirms said snobbery and that person's love for truly great coffee. I can pretty much guarantee any one of these coffee-related gifts will rack up some major love and respect in return.

By way of full disclosure, I will admit to being a home roaster, which does earn me a certain level of coffee snobbery. I purchase green coffee beans directly from the La Minita Plantation in Costa Rica. My original intention was to cut the high cost of good coffee by roasting it myself. In the process, I discovered the joys of properly roasted high-quality coffee. And getting the price down below $4 per pound appealed to my cheapskate self and turned me into a semi bona fide snob.

• Beans. Coffee snobs grind their beans on demand, which means you should never offer them ground coffee in bag or can. While roasted coffee beans might not be the most flashy gift out there, your favorite snob will perk up at the sight of beans from a high-quality roaster such as Ritual, Toby's Estate, Gimme Coffee or Kicking Horse. About $15-$20.

• Travel mug. Allowing a batch of perfectly brewed, fresh, hot coffee to go cold is simply heartbreaking. This Zojirushi stainless-steel travel mug likely will bring a tear to a true coffee snob's eye. It's gorgeous but also keeps coffee really hot for a long time. Seriously long. It comes in several colors and both 12- and 16-oz. size. Go for the 16-oz. option if you're at all hesitating. About $30.

• Carafe. This Zojirushi Premium Thermal 1-Liter Carafe is equally awesome, holding one full liter of brew. Lovely. About $30.

• Kalita Wave. The snobbiest among us is likely a devoted "pour over" fan, a method of manually brewing coffee. If that defines your snob, this is the gift of choice without doubt. The Kalita Wave now is considered to be the best pour-over method available. The gizmo just sits on top of the brewing vessel (works well with Chemex) and holds the coffee filter. About $30.

• Burr grinder. We snobs insist on crushing our coffee beans, not cutting them with a steel blade. A burr grinder is a must because it gives consistent particle size for even extraction. Just accept it that a grinder with a blade should be saved for grinding spices. The Baratza Encore coffee grinder is a great piece of machinery. Not only does it look spectacular, it works really well and is rated highly by coffee lovers of all levels of snobbery. About $130.

• Automatic coffee machine. Not all coffee lovers hold to the manual method of brewing. But those who use a machine are really particular. The Bonavita Coffee Maker is about as good as it can possibly get because of the way it is designed. First it heats the water to the ideal and precise temperature. It uses a tiny shower head to create complete and even saturation for optimal extraction. Really, all of these things are of supreme importance! This particular Bonavita model comes with a glass carafe; however, there is an option with a stainless thermal pot instead. About $150.

As for me and my green coffee shipments, to get that price, I have to make a minimum purchase of 150 lbs. It arrives as one huge burlap bag filled to the top and sewn shut. As for my personal level of snobbery, I'm pretty much at the bottom of the scale. I still use cream in my coffee.

Finance tips every college student should know

GateHouse News Service

When the acceptance letter arrives from a college or university, it's cause for celebration. But it's also time to do some serious number crunching and take steps to mitigate potential education-related debt.

The Institute for College Access and Success estimates that the average student leaves higher education with a debt load of more than $26,000.

Even families who have saved for postsecondary education for years find themselves looking at ways to manage expenses as the cost of tuition, books and room and board add up. Exploring both traditional and nontraditional sources of financial aid can help make those mounting expenses more manageable.

• Schedule a meeting with financial aid. As soon as you have settled on which school you'll attend, contact the financial aid office and request an appointment with an advisor. If you're within a drivable distance, it's a good idea to meet in person and develop a relationship with someone who can help you identify potential aid sources you might not have considered otherwise. Closer to home, do the same with your high school counselor, who can keep an eye open for scholarships that match your credentials.

• Explore association scholarships. Many professional associations and member-based organizations offer competitive scholarship programs. Check with the major employers in your area, particularly any in your chosen field, to find out if they offer any scholarship or grants. You can also check with family members to determine what organizations they belong to and whether you are eligible for any funds.

• File for federal aid. Complete the Free Application for Federal Student Aid, even if you don't think your financial circumstances make you eligible for a grant. You may be surprised by what is available. In addition, research national grants such as Pell Grants that can help defray your expenses.

• Secure a career-relevant job or internship. While classes, studying and enjoying a healthy social life are all important aspects of the college experience, gaining experience in your future career field is valuable, too. Consult with your school's career center or an advisor in your area of study to uncover paid internship opportunities that will help you develop your resume and bolster your bank account.

Making the most of potential resources to pay for your degree lets you keep your focus squarely on your studies so your next big cause for celebration can be your college diploma.

Deaf therapy dog aids patients, recognizes sign language

BY ANDREA CASTILLO
Daily Press (TNS)

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. — As Lothair, a white Sheltie therapy dog, makes his way into United States Air Force Hospital Langley in Hampton, Va., for his weekly visit to meet with patients, he walks tall and proud into the building and is immediately greeted with a hug from a receptionist at the front desk.

Lothair continues walking down the hall, carrying himself like royalty, appropriate for a dog named after a French monarch. From the time the dog was a puppy, he had a proud, dignified air about him, his owner, Hampton resident Melanie Paul said.

"He was beautiful," she said. "He was like a king."

Watching the way Lothair moves and interacts with patients at the hospital, it is not obvious that Lothair has been deaf since birth.

"Deafness is an invisible disability," Paul said via email.

Lothair began serving as a therapy dog — providing emotional support to patients in hospitals, nursing homes and other settings — several years ago.

He is registered with New Jersey-based Therapy Dogs International, which has dogs registered in all 50 states and Canada. Along with tests required by the organization to become a certified therapy dog, deaf dogs also must undergo a startle test. During the test, someone will come up behind the dog and pet and touch its rear quarters, and the dog must not be startled or react negatively, TDI's website states.

Paul has had therapy dogs for more than 15 years. She started a pet therapy program at Sentara CarePlex Hospital in Hampton more than a decade ago, and started the same program at Langley Air Force Base about five years ago.

She usually brings Lothair and another therapy dog to Langley once or twice a week and also makes regular visits to local hospitals and nursing homes.

Paul decided to acquire a deaf dog as she prepared to retire from Virginia

Judith Lowery/Daily Press/TNS

Lothair, a deaf therapy dog that owner Melanie Paul takes to Langley Air Force Base weekly, waits to be petted by patient Rebecca Bennett-Jordan as Steven Jordan watches in Hampton, Va. Paul says this is the first deaf therapy dog that understands/uses American Sign Language.

School for the Deaf and Blind in 2009 after a 30-year career in education, intending to use the dog to help deaf children improve their literacy skills, she said.

She ended up taking in Lothair as a 3-month-old puppy. Both of his parents are Blue Merle Sheltie champion show dogs, and breeding them together increases the likelihood at least one of their puppies will be deaf or deaf and blind, she said.

Paul, who became deaf at 12 after incorrectly being diagnosed with an illness and being prescribed the antibiotic streptomycin, said there tends to be some hesitation among some deaf people to have a deaf dog, as they end up relying on the dogs to hear for them. However, because her husband, as well as her other dogs, can hear, that wasn't an issue for her.

"In fact, maybe because of the affinity that the puppy would also be deaf, 'just like me,' I enthusiastically looked forward to the experience of adopting and raising a deaf dog," Paul wrote in a 2011 article about Lothair published in Sheltie Pacesetter magazine.

When she didn't see results from traditional obedience school, Paul taught Lothair American Sign Language, and also created her own signs, applying techniques used to teach deaf children, Paul explained in the article.

In the course of training Lothair, her other dogs learned the signs, too.

During a trip to Langley on a recent Wednesday, Lothair paid a visit to Rebecca Bennett-Jordan, who underwent a hysterectomy that morning and was waiting to see when she'd be able to go home.

Bennett-Jordan, who has three cats, said Lothair's visit was unexpected but welcome.

"I love it," she said as she petted Lothair in her bed. "I'm an animal person."

Next, Lothair spent time with Abygale Morris, who was in the hospital for asthma treatment on the eve of her 10th birthday.

"Hope you'll be feeling better," Paul told Abygale.

"We're trying," responded Abygale's mother, Rebecca, as she knitted a sock.

Lothair's visit led Abygale to reminisce about pet dogs the family used to have.

"It's nice they bring the dogs in," she said. "It sucks to be in the hospital all day."

Staffers at the hospital enjoy Lothair's visits as much as the patients do.

"The therapy is not just for the patients; it's for us, too," said Monique Rolle, a civilian registered nurse. "I wish they came more often."

Knowing that those at the hospital look forward to seeing the dogs motivates Paul week after week.

"It warms my heart when I see patients, staff and visitors smile. Their faces light up and are so happy to see my dogs when we do visits," Paul said via email.

"The individual happiness of patients stays with me long after I have completed the visit."

Iirena Bottoms feeds her baby breast milk as mothers and supportive family members attend a monthly gathering that promotes breast-feeding at a YMCA in Milwaukee.

Black breast-feeding gatherings battle troubling health gaps

BY LINDSEY TANNER
The Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Once each month, baby-toting young women gather in a YMCA conference room to share tips, talk about and demonstrate breast-feeding — an age-old yet sometimes shunned practice in their community.

It's part of a grassroots movement that breast-feeding advocates think just might yield profound benefits — potentially helping diminish health gaps facing black Americans, from higher rates of infant mortality and childhood obesity, to more breast cancer deaths and heart disease in adults.

Breast-feeding is thought to help protect against these ills — and it's much less common among U.S. black women than in whites and others. Rates have improved in recent years but the disparity remains.

"In the African-American community, we don't see breast-feeding publicly — our sisters and aunts aren't breast-feeding in the living room, they're not talking about it in the kitchen. It's different in the Caucasian community," said Dalvery Blackwell, a lactation consultant-educator and co-founder of the Milwaukee-based African American Breastfeeding Network.

The networks' gatherings aim to change that. Similar groups meet in Detroit, Atlanta and other cities, organized by black women for black women. While promoting breast-feeding, they acknowledge obstacles that are more prevalent in black communities — absent partners, employers who discourage workplace nursing and flex time for new moms, hospitals that feed newborns formula.

The gatherings encourage new mothers to breast-feed for as long as possible; the American Academy of Pediatrics recommends doing it for at least a year.

Just more than 60 percent of U.S. black mothers have tried breast-feeding, but only 16 percent continue for a full year, federal data show. By comparison, more than 80 percent of Hispanics and whites have tried it, and at least 25 percent do it for a year.

A government report last year cited the breast-feeding network among efforts to improve rates. Dr. Myrtis Sullivan, a black pediatrician and former maternal and child health director for Illinois, said this type of community gathering can be particularly effective.

"The synergy that goes on when women interact with other women that are similar to them both culturally and socioeconomically ... seems to be very supportive for breast-feeding," Sullivan said.

Sticking with it

At a recent Milwaukee gathering, mothers nursed and shared a meal provided by a University of Wisconsin public health partnership program. Blackwell offered tips about the best breast-feeding diet, how to hold a nursing baby and signs that a baby is hungry.

Retail worker Leslie Curtis, 22, has breast-fed her 6-month-old son, Jace, since his birth.

She said the meetings have helped her stick with it.

"I learn so much," she said. "I learn how to properly latch, properly pump, all the nutrition he's getting, I learn a lot and I love it."

Most of her friends think breast-feeding is too time-consuming, or too painful, and Curtis said her baby's father "doesn't understand the whole breast-feeding thing so I don't even try to explain it." But Curtis is determined to keep it up for their son's sake.

"Just coming to this group tells me why it's important," she said. "It's really healthy; I know what he's drinking and he's eating, compared to formula."

In Detroit, educator Kid-dada Green runs the Black Mothers Breastfeeding Club as a modern-day old front porch, a place to encourage breast-feeding while building sisterhood. The club meets in women's homes, drawing a mix of working women and stay-at-home moms.

"We work with many women who have never seen a woman breast-feed," Green said. "We're making it visible."

"Although you're getting medical benefits, you're also getting connections and relationships and bonds that are also healthy for women," she said.

Bounty of benefits

Breast-feeding's benefits include fewer infant infections and reduced risks for infant mortality, asthma, type 2 diabetes and obesity — which all disproportionately affect black children.

Effects on moms' long-term health are less studied but breast-feeding has been linked with lower breast and ovarian cancer rates, while emerging research suggests women who breast-feed may have less heart disease later in life.

Reasons why some blacks shun breast-feeding vary, but slavery's legacy is often cited among them. Breast-feeding was common in Africa but became a stigma when women were separated from their own children and forced to breast-feed slave-owners' babies, Blackwell said.

Kimarie Bugg, a nurse and founder of the Atlanta-based Reaching Our Sisters Everywhere, said many doctors never discuss breast-feeding with black patients "because they just assume they're not going to do it — they don't even mention it."

No one thinks that breast-feeding is a magic panacea and scientific evidence is mixed on some of its purported advantages. But few experts dispute that breast milk is the best nourishment for infants, with potential lifelong benefits.

"We know there are significant underlying conditions that lead to poor health outcomes — socioeconomic disparities, racism — all play a part," said Laurence Grummer-Strawn, a longtime breast-feeding advocate and former chief of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's nutrition branch.

Lack of breast-feeding contributors and improving rates could help reduce disparities, although by how much is uncertain, he said.

COMMENTARY

Breakup still hurts 9 years later

DEAR ABBY: I recently found out my ex-boyfriend married the girl he cheated on me with, and they have had a baby. I didn't think it would affect me because it has been nine years since our breakup, but I feel devastated and sad all over again. I constantly wonder why he was blessed with the happy ending I was wishing for. I ask myself why I haven't met anyone worthwhile.

DEAR ABBY

I am scared to go through the hurt and pain again, so I put on a smiling face for everyone. I want to forget this miserable relationship and be happy. What can I do to move on with my life? — LOST IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR LOST: That's a good question, and I'm glad you asked because it means you finally might be ready to do it.

One way to move forward would be to keep busy so you won't brood. Make an effort to meet new people because the saying "no risk, no reward" is true. If you have saved any mementos of your relationship with your ex-boyfriend, box them up and put them away — or get rid of them entirely because this chapter of your life is finished.

I can't guarantee this will bring you another romance, but it will be a step in the right direction.

DEAR ABBY: My mother is a certified nursing assistant for hospice and loves her work. She has been assisting the terminally ill for 16 years. I'm writing because lately she has become insistent that my brother and I complete our wills, medical directives, powers of attorney, etc.

My brother and I are in our late 20s and in excellent health. While I do agree Mom's advice is prudent, I have the impression she views this issue — and our family — through the lens of her work experiences. Is there an appropriate time and place to discuss this? — LOOKING WAY AHEAD IN CHICAGO

DEAR LOOKING: Absolutely. How about tonight at the dinner table? The time to have these discussions — and put your thoughts in writing — is while you are healthy and thinking clearly. While I agree what might be driving your mother are things she sees at work every day, the reality is illness and tragedy can strike people of all ages at any time.

It's important family members hear what a person wants — or doesn't want — should a situation arise in which that person is unable to speak for him- or herself. And it's equally important for you and your brother to hear what your mother's wishes are if you don't already know.

DEAR ABBY: I have a family friend whose son has been engaged twice to two different women. The first engagement was broken off by him, and the second by his fiancée.

Each time, his family threw him an engagement party (which he wanted) — and I was invited to both. Each time, as is customary, I bought a gift for the happy couple. Neither one was returned after the engagement was broken.

The first party was a pleasure to attend. The second one I found slightly awkward, but I wanted to be supportive of my friend. I brought a gift the second time because I didn't want to be impolite.

If my friend's son becomes engaged a third time and has an engagement party to which I am invited, am I obligated to bring a gift? — POLITE PARTY GUEST
DEAR POLITE: No. I think by now you have given enough. And considering how your friend's son's luck has been after these engagement parties, I can't imagine his family inviting the same people a third time and expecting them to give him anything more than their good wishes.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 70-year-old senior who is sexually dysfunctional. I am so lonely. I have outlived two of my brides. Do you think I could find someone who would just appreciate holding hands and whispering sweet words without the physical contact? — YOUNG AT HEART IN TEXAS

DEAR YOUNG: Not only do I think you can, I suspect you might need police protection to control the crowd of applicants. Years ago, my aunt, the late Ann Landers, polled her female readers asking if they would prefer "holding and cuddling" to actually doing "the deed." The majority of them answered in the affirmative.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

TUNE IN TONIGHT

AMC's 'Saul' continues 2-night premiere

AMC continues its two-night premiere of "Better Call Saul" (9 p.m., TV-14). For the uninitiated, the series follows a key character and source of comic relief on AMC's iconic drama "Breaking Bad," beginning six years before Saul (Bob Odenkirk) met the chemistry teacher-turned-meth mastermind Walter White (Bryan Cranston). In fact, it's even before Saul became Saul, or before Odenkirk's character Jimmy McGill took on the identity of Saul Goodman. Part one aired last night and can be seen again tonight at 8 p.m.

KEVIN MCDONOUGH

Many words have been spilled trying to explain the success of "Bad" and the cultlike appeal of "Saul." Both series take a darkly comic look at male characters of a certain age who persevere in the face of less-than-stellar circumstances. They are always down, but never out.

In a television environment where so many characters are young, beautiful and incredibly gifted — superheroes, even — everyday losers such as Saul tend to stand out. Joining Odenkirk is the always welcome Michael McKean ("Spinal Tap," "Best in Show") as Saul's brother Chuck, a brilliant and successful lawyer in the throes of an unexplained breakdown that has something to do with isolating himself from electrical waves and any outside influences. Chuck offers a glimpse into Saul's background and a hint that he wasn't always on the lowest rung of the legal ladder.

"Bad" character Mike Ehrmantraut (Jonathan Banks) also returns and we learn what brought these two men together as Saul migrated from criminal defense to just plain criminal activity.

Steven Weber guest-stars as Thomas Jefferson on "Sleepy Hollow" (8 p.m., Fox, TV-14). Between this and History's recent miniseries "Sons of Liberty," the Founding Fathers really have been reduced to cartoon characters.

Tonight's other highlights

- "Antiques Roadshow" (7 p.m., PBS, TV-G, check local listings) scours Austin, Texas, for treasures.

"Why Riverside? They're part of our family's legacy."

"It's no accident I chose Riverside Senior Life at Bourbonnais. My wife, Linda, was diagnosed with early onset Alzheimer's.

Linda worked at Riverside for years, (including 12 years as surgical center manager) and her parents, Clyde and Lee Call, lived on the Riverside Senior Life campus in Kankakee.

Anticipation runs high for Harper Lee's return

'To Kill a Mockingbird' sequel forthcoming

The term "one-hit wonder" is most often applied to the music world, but the most shining example instead can be found in the literary world.

The novel "To Kill a Mockingbird" was written by Harper Lee in 1960, and it continues to stand as one of the greatest American literary works of all-time. Set in the Depression-era South and focused on the trial of a black man wrongly accused of raping a white woman, it has provoked countless discussions about racial and social injustice.

It also has stood the test of time. It was adapted into a 1962 Academy Award winning film starring Gregory Peck. The book has sold more than 40 million copies globally since it was published and continues to sell more than a million copies per year. It has been translated into more than 40 languages.

"Mockingbird" achieved rare success to be sure, and there is another unique aspect to it — Lee has never published another book, until now.

Last week, it was announced that Lee, now 88, soon will publish "Go Set a Watchman," a sequel of sorts to "Mockingbird," even though she wrote it before writing "Mockingbird" in the 1950s. Lee thought the draft of "Watchman" had been lost or destroyed, but then her friend and lawyer discovered the manuscript in a secure place and the project was revived.

Both novels are set in the same fictional town of Maycomb, Ala., and in "Watchman," Jean Louise Finch, or Scout, the feisty child heroine of "Mockingbird," returns to visit her father, Atticus Finch, a character portrayed by Peck in the film version.

Talk about anticipation. While it will be difficult if not impossible to match the acclaim of "Mockingbird," the new novel is sure to capture the fancy of millions once more. If you can't wait to get your hands on it you are far from alone.

Tally

For the week ending Feb. 6

By Thomas Voting Reports, Inc.

N	N	Y	Y	Repeal of Health Law: The House voted, 239-186, to repeal the Affordable Care Act. Since 2011, House Republicans have passed four bills to abolish the law while voting 50-plus times to weaken it. They have not brought a replacement to the floor. A yes vote was to pass HR 596.
Y	Y	N	N	Drug Costs, Gender Bias: The House defeated, 179-241, a Democratic bid to shelve HR 596 (above) if it would raise Medicare Part D drug costs, allow gender bias by insurers or permit insurers to deny coverage on the basis of pre-existing conditions. A yes vote backed the motion.
N	N	Y	Y	Federal Agency Rules The House expanded, 250-173, a law that dissuades the government from putting "unfunded mandates" on companies or state and local governments. A yes vote was to pass HR 50, which enables the law to block rules issued by independent federal agencies.
Y	Y	N	O	Rape, Domestic Violence: The House defeated, 184-239, a Democratic motion to prevent HR 50 (above) from interfering with federal regulations designed to prevent crimes such as rape, domestic violence and sex offenses against minors. A yes vote was to adopt the motion.
		N	Y	Homeland Security, Immigration: Senators failed, 53-47, to reach 60 votes for ending Democratic blockage of a bill that would appropriate $39.7 billion for homeland security in fiscal 2015 while negating two of President Obama's immigration orders. A yes vote was to advance HR 240.

KEY VOTES AHEAD

In the week of Feb. 9, the House will vote on final congressional approval of the Keystone XL Pipeline and take up bills on charitable contributions and business tax breaks. The Senate will consider the nomination of Michael Botticelli as director of National Drug Control Policy.

Does the barbarism have logic?

WASHINGTON — Why did they do it? What did the Islamic State think it possibly could gain by burning alive a captured Jordanian pilot?

COLUMNIST

I wouldn't underestimate the absence of logic, the sheer depraved thrill of a triumphant cult reveling in its barbarism. But I wouldn't overestimate it either. You don't overrun much of Syria and Iraq without having deployed keen tactical and strategic reasoning.

So what's the objective? To destabilize Jordan by drawing it deeply into the conflict.

At first glance, this seems to make no sense. The savage execution has mobilized Jordan against the Islamic State and given it solidarity and unity of purpose.

Yes, for now. But what about six months hence? Solidarity and purpose fade quickly. Think about how post-9/11 American fervor dissipated over the years of inconclusive conflict, yielding the war fatigue of today. Or how the beheading of U.S. journalists galvanized the country against the Islamic State, yet less than five months later, the frustrating nature of that fight is creating divisions at home.

Jordan is a more vulnerable target because, unlike the U.S., it can be destabilized. For about a century Jordan has been a miracle of stability — an artificial geographic creation led by a British-imposed monarchy, it has enjoyed relative domestic peace and successful political transitions with just four rulers over four generations.

Compared to Lebanon, Syria and Iraq, similarly created, Jordan is a wonder. But a fragile one. Its front-line troops and special forces are largely Bedouin. The Bedouin are the backbone of the Hashemite monarchy but they are a minority. Most of the population is nonindigenous Palestinians, to which have now been added 1.3 million Syrian refugees.

Most consequential, however, is the Muslim Brotherhood with its strong Jordanian contingent — as well as more radical jihadist elements, some sympathetic to the Islamic State. An estimated 1,500 Jordanians already have joined the Islamic State in Iraq and Syria. Others remain home, ready to rise when the time is right.

The time is not right today. Jordanian anger is white hot. But the danger is that as the Jordanians attack — today by air, tomorrow perhaps on the ground — they risk a drawn-out engagement that could drain and debilitate the regime, one of the major bulwarks against radicalism in the entire region.

We should be careful what we wish for. Americans worship at the shrine of multilateralism. President Obama's Islamic State strategy is to create a vast coalition with an Arab/Kurdish vanguard and America leading from behind with air power.

The coalition is allegedly 60 strong. (And doing what?) Despite administration boasts, the involvement of the Arab front line — Jordan, Saudi Arabia, Bahrain and the United Arab Emirates — has been minimal and symbolic. In fact, we've just now learned that the UAE stopped flying late last year.

The Obama policy has not fared terribly well. Since the policy was launched, the Islamic State has doubled its Syrian domain. It's hard to see a Jordanian-Saudi force succeeding where Iraq's Shi'ite militias, the Iraqi military, the Kurds and U.S. airpower have thus far failed.

What's missing, of course, are serious boots on the ground, such as Syria's once-ascendant non-jihadist rebels, which Obama contemptuously dismissed and allowed to wither. And the Kurds, who are willing and able to fight, yet remain scandalously undersupplied by this administration.

Missing most of all is Turkey. It alone has the size and power to take on the Islamic State. But doing so would strengthen, indeed rescue, Turkey's primary nemesis, the Iranian-backed Bashar al-Assad regime in Damascus.

Turkey's price for entry was an American commitment to help bring down Assad. Obama refused. So Turkey sits it out.

Why doesn't Obama agree? Didn't he say that Assad must go? The reason is that Obama dares not upset Assad's patrons, the Iranian mullahs, with whom Obama dreams of concluding a grand rapprochement.

For Obama, this is his ticket to Mt. Rushmore. So in pursuit of his Nixon-to-China Iran fantasy, Obama eschews Turkey, our most formidable potential ally against both the Islamic State and Assad.

But even they are mortified by Obama's blind pursuit of detente with Tehran, which would make the mullahs hegemonic over the Arab Middle East. Hence the Arabs, the Saudis especially, hold back from any major military commitment to us. Jordan, its hand now forced by its pilot's murder, may now bravely sally forth on its own. But at great risk and with little chance of ultimate success.

GUEST VIEWPOINT

Shift in priorities affects economic spending

BY JOAN FITCH
Manteno

According to our daily news reports, the U.S. economy still is struggling. We hear there aren't enough jobs, wages are too low and people are saving rather than spending.

I don't know where politicians and economists "hang out" on a regular basis, but take a look at any airport on any given day. Thousands of people are arriving and departing and not just for business. Granted, many people have acquired fly miles and can travel for free, but millions of people go on vacation all year long. Take for instance, Disney World — everyone wants to go there, and they do. People with average incomes, and people with lower incomes will find a way to get there, to make their children happy. Do you know how expensive those park tickets are?

Consider what many younger Americans like to buy with their money. It's pretty simple — median range housing, nice SUVs and trucks, flat screen TVs, phones and other electronic equipment/gadgets, fast food/restaurants, tattoos, jeans, trendy footwear and athletic items (which include a myriad of sporting events and clothing items). Don't forget that Americans spend billions of dollars on alcohol to go along with the excitement of sports and other entertainment.

Most recently, it has been reported that department stores, such as Macy's and J.C. Penney will be closing some of their locations. And why? Well, Generation X really is not interested in buying a conglomeration of kitchen items, home decor, dress clothes or expensive jewelry at department stores. All of these items can be purchased exclusively at other stores.

I travel in many circles, and I pay attention to people's spending habits. There's always a lot of traffic in most shopping areas. (In our area, it's more like the Wal-Mart shopping lot). Restaurants always are crowded, and electronics stores will have people sleeping outside just waiting to buy the latest iPhone or game. How about spending on Black Friday? It's ridiculous. Or, how about a sale on women's boots? Seriously? You'll wait for 20 minutes to have someone get the style and size you want — usually in a price range of $100.

Speaking of traffic — the expressways are jammed with trucks, day in and day out. They must be transporting a lot goods that people are buying. I've been through a couple of recessions and have traveled I-294 most of my working life. When the economy is down, there are hardly any trucks and traffic is slight, but it seems to me that there are more trucks than ever on the roads in the last year or so.

Granted, January and February are the slowest months for retailers, and they have been conditioned for this, but that doesn't stop people from spending. Personally, I like to see and feel the products I'm buying, but the majority of my friends shop online all year long because it's convenient and saves a lot of time. Obviously, online shopping has taken away many retail customers but that doesn't mean that spending has been reduced.

I just don't see how this economy is doing so badly. We'll always have people struggling in the lower income bracket who can't get a decent paying job to afford many luxuries. (I have been there myself in the past.) There are plenty of job openings out there, but there are also too many unskilled applicants who don't want to improve their knowledge of technology or other facets of the working world to acquire a good job.

The fact is, Americans have changed their spending priorities. They've simplified their wants for high ticket items — just keep it simple and do it fast. They want a nice car, a big TV, some food (that they don't have to cook), lots of beer and wine, some fancy footwear — and of course, an iPhone (which controls their whole life). I really think the economy is doing OK. It's just that some retailers and small businesses don't understand the wants and needs of today's population.

● HIGH SCHOOL WRESTLING: CLASS 1A ST. THOMAS MORE REGIONAL

Three-Rink circus for Herscher at regionals

Rinks, along with 2 other regional champs, lead Tigers to crown

BY ALLAN SCARABELLO
ascarabello@daily-journal.com
815-937-3397

CHAMPAIGN — Herscher's Noah Rink was faced with a decision in the last five seconds of the 220-pound championship match at the Class 1A St. Thomas More Regional on Saturday

Be safe and go to overtime or go for a buzzer-beating win.

"You have to risk it, to get the biscuit," Rink said after taking down Bismarck-Henning's Cody Miller as the horn sounded for a 7-5 win.

The 'biscuit' Rink earned with his victory metaphorically represents the school's first regional championship as the Tigers blew out the field scoring 201.5 points, 25 better than second-place St. Joseph-Ogden. Central finished third with 148.5 points. Rink had a little extra motivation heading into the tournament.

"I knew I was a little bit under-ranked, but I went in and took it to them." Rink said. "I wrestled a full six minutes and wrestled smart."

Noah Rink

The win clinches the Tigers a berth in the Class 1A Prairie Central Dual Team Sectional. That state tournament will be held after the IHSA Individual State Tournament at the State Farm Center in Champaign on Feb. 21.

Herscher coach David Murphy was ecstatic about the day and its result.

"It's our writing history," Murphy said. "We've talked about that all year with our guys. They had a very special opportunity to do something, and they really stepped up and proved they're the No. 1 in the regional. I'm very happy and proud of all of them."

Herscher had five regional champions, four second-place finishes and a third-place finish. All of those wrestlers will advance to the Clinton Individual Sectional next Saturday.

Noah Rink, Austin Renshaw (182), Drew Mook (132), Vincent Rink (106) and Anthony Rink (113) all picked up individual titles.

Anthony Rink

Grant Miller (285), Mitch Geister (195), Coty Castongia (126) and Luke Morales (138) were Herscher's second-place finishers.

The Tigers' result was fantastic, but it didn't start off well for Herscher, which was in third place after the first round.

"Semifinal round, our guys came through big. They got pins and won really close matches," Murphy said. "They really took care of business and catapulted us into the lead. They started wrestling for each other and getting the bonus points where they could."

It would be easy for Herscher to take its foot off the gas after accomplishing such a rare feat at its school, but don't look for Murphy's bunch to let up.

"We can't be satisfied," Murphy said. "Yes, we did win regionals, but there's more to the season. We're not going to be satisfied with just being regional champs. We want to win sectionals and go down to state."

Other area champions include Central's Jacob Smith (160) and Trevor Raines (126).

The Comets had five total placers. Will Kleinert (145) fell by major decision in the title match, and Jacob Kaericher (132), Justin Coggins (182) and Zack Birge (170) each finished third.

Dwight's Jansen Tyner qualified with a win in the 195-pound third-place match, and Kenny Demarah (120) finished third for Herscher.

With 10 total qualifiers, it is evident the Tigers have great focus and are looking forward to forthcoming challenges.

"It's huge for us. It's a great group of kids. They're like a family to me," Vincent Rink said after his title at 106 pounds. "Hopefully, we'll continue our mission and make it down to state as a team."

● HIGH SCHOOL WRESTLING

Coal City wrestles nearly perfect regional

Coalers send 13 to sectional; will wrestle in team dual sectional

BY KYLE GARMES
Special to The Daily Journal

CHICAGO — Coal City put it all together at the perfect time.

Looking for their first team regional title since 1999, the Coalers dominated on Saturday at the Class 1A Chicago High School for Agricultural Sciences, racking up 280.5 points, led by seven champions, to pull away from Wilmington's 221 points.

"It's huge," said junior Joey Rivera, who won the title at 106 pounds. "Considering the fact that at [Interstate Eight] conference tournament, we end up coming short against Wilmington. It's just huge to be able to make it here."

In all, Coal City qualified 13 wrestlers for this weekend's Wilmington Sectional. The Coalers' lightweights have dominated in recent years, and that continued Saturday, as Cody Minnick (120) and Corey Jurzak (132) also won titles. Max Rowell (145) Jonah Englert (152), Riley Kauzlaric (182) and Jake Frost (220) also took their brackets as Coal City won a few weight slots it wasn't expected to.

"I was proud of everyone here," Rivera said. "Everyone stepped it up, brought their 'A' game, and we just did what we had to do to win."

Jake Hiles (113) and T.J. Jezik finished second for the Coalers, and Nate Buck (138), Bryan Stopka (160), Brock Crawford (170) and Parker Czaja (195) finished third to grab the final qualifying spots in their brackets.

'We're going to have a nice hard week of practice and just do what we do best — wrestle.'

— JOEY RIVERA, COAL CITY JUNIOR

Wilmington, meanwhile, still qualified 10 wrestlers for the sectional meet, though it was the third year in a row the Wildcats didn't win a team title after dominating for about a decade.

"Well, you got to give Coal City credit. They wrestled almost a perfect tournament today," veteran Wildcats coach Rob Murphy said. "They wrestled very, very well. We had one like that two weeks ago when we won the conference tournament. And that's what wrestling's about — is who's the best team that day. And by far, Coal City was better than anyone in this gym right now."

Austin Headrick (138), Nick Hawkins (160) and Joe Mann (170) won titles for Wilmington, and Brandon Nieves (120), Colin Weis (132), Nick Pretto (152), James Cox (182), Ryan Berman (195), Kyal Davis (220) and Kyle Hull (285) took second.

"Austin Headrick, he had a great tournament, did everything he's supposed to do," Murphy said. "Nick Hawkins, he went out there and he won it. He was very impressive out there."

Murphy wasn't about to apologize for his team's effort, saying finishing second with 10 qualifiers still is impressive, even if some say Wilmington's having a "down season."

"If your down year's like this, I'll take another 20 of them," Murphy said. "It's very humbling spot that you can be on top of the world one day and the next day you learn to deal with a loss."

Reed-Custer, which finished fourth with 135 points, qualified three for sectionals, with Jonathan Costain (170) losing his title match by default to Wilmington's Mann. Robert Miller (113) and Jaxon Hendershot (126) took third to get through.

Coal City will compete in the team sectional at Plano in a few weeks, but the immediate concern for qualifying wrestlers will be getting to the individual state finals in Champaign at the individual sectional tournament this weekend.

"You just got to stay focused," Rivera said. "We're going to have a nice hard week of practice and just do what we do best — wrestle."

● NHL: BLACKHAWKS 4, ST. LOUIS 2

Hossa gets go-ahead goal as Blackhawks edge Blues

Hawks close trip at 4-3; home now for 8 straight games

BY R.B. FALLSTROM
The Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — A little more than a minute into the critical power play, the Chicago Blackhawks dispensed with setting up shop on offense and went for the quick hit.

Marian Hossa made it count on a one-timer from the slot midway through the third period for the go-ahead goal in a 4-2 victory over the St. Louis Blues on Sunday.

"I just tried to finish it," Hossa said. "That was a set play and I'm glad it worked."

Hossa clinched it with an empty-netter for the Blackhawks, who regained their footing at the end of a 4-3 trip with victories over St. Louis and Winnipeg the last three days. Now, they'll be settling in for eight in a row at home that begins against the Coyotes tonight.

"I don't think I've ever been on any team that had eight straight home games," coach Joel Quenneville said. "It should be fun."

Bryan Bickell had a goal and assisted on the go-ahead score for Chicago, which also got a goal from Marcus Kruger.

"I thought it was a pretty good effort all the way around," defenseman Duncan Keith said. "Obviously, they've got a lot of hard-working players, and it's a tough game every time we play these guys."

Vladimir Tarasenko and David Backes had a goal each for St. Louis, which never led and has lost two straight since a franchise-record 13-game point streak. The Blues are 20-5-2 at home.

"I thought in the third period we looked tired," coach Ken Hitchcock said. "I think a lot of it was us having to come back. The whole game we had to mount a comeback."

But the showing was a big improvement from the last game, a 7-1 loss at Columbus on Friday.

"We looked like our old selves again," Elliott said. "I thought we stuck to our guns and really wanted to do the little things right for each other."

Standing room attendance of 19,657 was the Blues' 11th sell-out and included thousands of red-clad Blackhawks fans.

"When you come to this building, it always feels like playoffs," Hossa said. "We have lots of fans so they make it a great atmosphere for us.

"It's a big rivalry and a huge two points."

Hossa's 11th and 12th goals were his first points in six games. Jay Bouwmeester was off for hooking, preventing a breakaway by Brad Richards, when Hossa whistled a shot past Elliott at 11:19 for a 3-2 lead.

There only were five penalties overall, with the Blackhawks getting two power plays and the Blues one.

Tarasenko tied it at 2 on a breakaway early in the second, getting Corey Crawford to commit with a couple of forehand fakes and then slipping the puck into the net for his team-leading 28th goal and fourth in five games.

The Blackhawks briefly led

2-1 after Bickell pounced on a rebound in the slot and beat Elliott at 11:25 of the second. The Blues answered 1:28 later when Backes scored his 18th goal on a rebound, and Crawford was occupied by a fallen T.J. Oshie in the crease.

Kruger's fifth goal on a 2-on-1 break opened the scoring at 4:38 of the first. It was his first point in 20 games and first goal in 28 games since Dec. 3 against the Blues at home.

Notes

Daniel Carcillo earned his 100th career assist on Kruger's goal. ... Tarasenko has four goals in five games. ... Blues coach Ken Hitchcock has 691 career wins and needs one to tie Dick Irwin for fourth on the career list. ... The Blackhawks lead the season series 2-1.

BOYS HIGH SCHOOL BASKETBALL: SVC TOURNAMENT CHAMPIONSHIP

Dwight grinds out SVC tourney title win

Defense slows Central in championship game

BY STEVE SOUCIE

WATSEKA — The last month of the basketball season has been a bit of a grind for Dwight.

After rattling through the first 15 games of its season with very little opposition, the Trojans have hit a bit of a rough patch. And while that rough patch didn't deter Dwight from capturing the Sangamon Valley Conference Tournament title in a 50-42 win over Central, it still had signs of being a grind-it-out win.

And that's exactly how Dwight coach Eric Long wants it to be.

"It's been a weird month. We've been making some adjustments, going through some injuries and just dealing with some things that come up over the course of a year," Long said. "But these are the games that we want to be in. It shows us what we are made of and what we need to focus on working on."

Dwight (20-4) entered the SVC Tournament having won just one of its last three games, but after emerging from the tourney unscathed, Long said he feels as if his team has picked up some valuable lessons in its recent stretch.

"We want to play games like this," Long said. "This is exactly what we want to be doing. Testing ourselves and seeing what we have to get better at."

One area of emphasis for Long's troops has been defensive effort. And it certainly was present for the Trojans on Saturday. After allowing Central to claim a 11-6 lead after one quarter, Dwight put the clamps down and limited Central to just eight second-quarter points and took control of the game heading into halftime with a 29-19 lead.

"We're really trying to emphasize the defensive end," Long said. "Earlier in the year, we're scoring gobs of points but when it comes to championship game time, we're going to have to be able to play defense. If we can continue to hold teams in the 40s, I'm pretty sure we're going to get close to 50 most nights."

The lead grew to 14 points midway through the third quarter before Central (12-10) finally started to knock down a few shots. The Comets got the lead all the way down to five on a Justin Lemenager 3-pointer with less than a minute to play, but that was as close as the Comets would get in a game where they never seemed to find an offensive rhythm.

"That was the difference; we just couldn't make a shot," Central coach Josh Sertich said. "Against a good team like them, you just have to. And they do such a nice job with Justin and their zone defense. It all came down to making shots and we were unable to do that."

Lemenager led all scorers with 16 for Central, and Caleb Boma paced Dwight with 12 points.

Fighting Illini hold off Michigan State

Hill leads way again as Illinois wins 3rd straight

BY JACK EBLING
The Associated Press

EAST LANSING, Mich. — John Groce was as proud of Illinois' resolve as Tom Izzo was angry at Michigan State's recurring problems.

The Fighting Illini overcame adversity throughout a 59-54 win over the Spartans on Saturday afternoon, particularly when a rare dead-ball technical at the foul line offered Michigan State a win that wasn't accepted.

"It was one of those grinders with both teams really going at it, throwing haymakers," Groce said after the third consecutive win for Illinois (16-8, 6-5 Big Ten). "I was most proud of the way we responded and were able to make plays on the next possession."

Malcolm Hill was 8 of 9 at the line and scored 19 points for Illinois. Kendrick Nunn added 14 points and Nnanna Egwu had 12 points and nine rebounds for the Illini.

Denzel Valentine had 16 points and seven rebounds for the Spartans (15-8, 6-4), but fouled out after missing a 6-foot shot that would have given his team a 56-55 lead. And Travis Trice was held to six points on 2-for-10 shooting from the field, 1 of 5 from distance and 1 of 3 on free throws.

"Free throws and stops, that's what killed us," Trice said. "It's lack of focus and missed free throws at the end. It's simple. We didn't execute."

After the Fighting Illini were called for a technical, Michigan State got just two points from four free throws, and Valentine missed his shot on the same possession. The Spartans were 7 of 18 at the line, showing why they entered the game 14th in the conference in free throws and 321st in the nation.

"To me it's utterly unacceptable," Izzo said of his team's inability to convert. "I'll take full and complete responsibility for it. Probably not the most disappointed I've been but the maddest I've been. I can't stomach it."

Illinois was 12 of 16 at the line and shot 41 percent from the field to the Spartans' 38.5 percent. Michigan State didn't reach 40 percent in any category.

The score was tied at 39 when two free throws from Nunn, a putback by Egwu and a 3-pointer by Ahmad Starks gave the Illini a seven-point lead.

But after a Starks steal, Trice came from behind to block a layup, setting up Branden Dawson's basket at the other end. That switched the momentum, and two 3-pointers from Valentine helped cut the deficit to 49-47.

Butler scores 27 to pace Bulls' attack

BY KYLE HIGHTOWER

ORLANDO, Fla. — Pau Gasol dunked in the rebound of Derrick Rose's missed layup with 9.4 seconds left, and the Chicago Bulls rallied for a 98-97 victory over the Orlando Magic on Sunday night.

Jimmy Butler led the Bulls with 27 points, and Gasol finished with 25 points and 15 rebounds. Joakim Noah added 18 points and nine rebounds.

Chicago led by as many as 16 points, before finding itself in a six-point hole with more than 2 minutes to play.

The Magic had two opportunities to win the game in the closing seconds. But Nik Vucevic's hook rolled off the rim, and Tobias Harris overshot a potential game-winning tip-in as time expired.

Victor Oladipo led six Orlando players in double figures with 18 points. Harris added 15, and Vucevic 14.

After playing catch-up for most of the second half, Orlando benefited from a frenetically played fourth quarter.

Elfrid Payton scored his sixth consecutive point on a driving layup to put the Magic in front 92-91 with 3:43 remaining.

That was followed by a steal and 3-pointer from Channing Frye, and layup by Oladipo that extended that lead to 97-91.

The Bulls came up empty on their next offensive trip, but Butler stepped in front of Oladipo's pass as Orlando came down the floor, forcing Harris to grab him and commit a clear-path foul.

Butler hit both free throws, then on the ensuing possession found Rose free for a 3-pointer at the top of the key to pull Chicago within 97-96.

Orlando's Evan Fournier then got caught in a trap at halfcourt and was called for a backcourt violation with 15.5 seconds left.

Coming out of a timeout, Rose drove around Kyle O'Quinn in the corner, and nearly rolled in a floater. But Gasol was there for what turned out to be the game-winner.

The Bulls shot 51 percent (20 for 39) in the first half.

Orlando missed eight of its first nine shots, but was down just five at the half after getting 18 points from its bench and 12 second-chance points.

Tip-ins

The Bulls had 27 assists on 37 made field goals. ... Mike Dunleavy (right ankle) missed his 19th straight game. Kirk Hinrich sat out with a left turf toe injury he sustained against New Orleans on Saturday.

● MEN'S COLLEGE BASKETBALL: NORTH CAROLINA

North Carolina coaching great Smith dies at 83

More than 50 of his players played pro basketball

BY AARON BEARD
The Associated Press

Dean Smith was more than simply a basketball coach.

Yes, the retired Hall of Famer left North Carolina as the winningest coach in men's history after capturing two national titles along with the 1976 Olympic gold medal and coaching some of the sport's biggest names, Michael Jordan among them.

But he also was an innovator who left a lasting influence on the sport, as well as someone known for his stand on civil rights driven by the belief it was the right thing to do.

Smith died "peacefully" Saturday at age 83 at his Chapel Hill home, his family said in a statement released by the school on Sunday. He was with his wife and five children.

Roy Williams, the current Tar Heels coach and Smith's assistant for 10 years, said his mentor was the "greatest there ever was on the court but far, far better off the court with people."

"I'd like to say on behalf of all our players and coaches, past and present, that Dean Smith was the perfect picture of what a college basketball coach should have been," Williams said in a statement. "We love him, and we will miss him."

Smith kept a lower profile amid health issues in recent years, with his family saying in 2010 he had a condition that was causing him to lose memory. He was unable to travel in November 2013 to receive the Presidential Medal of Freedom, the nation's highest civilian honor presented to Smith as much for his work off the court as on it.

At the urging of his pastor, he recruited black athletes, and in 1967, made Charlie Scott the school's first black scholarship athlete and one of the first in the segregated South.

In a statement Sunday, President Barack Obama said Smith "pushed forward" the civil rights movement with Scott's recruitment as well as helping integrate a restaurant and a neighborhood in Chapel Hill.

Smith "showed us something that I've seen again and again on the court — that basketball can tell us a lot more about who you are than a jumpshot alone ever could," Obama said.

On the court, his "Four Corners" time-melting offense led to the adoption of the shot clock to counter it. The now-common "point to the passer," in which a scorer acknowledges a teammate's assist, became a hallmark of Smith's always humble "Carolina Way."

He was a direct coaching descendent of basketball's father, James Naismith, playing and later coaching at Kansas for the inventor of the game's most famous student, Jayhawks coach Phog Allen.

At UNC, he tutored perhaps the game's greatest player in Jordan — who burst onto the national stage as a freshman by hitting the winning shot in the 1982 NCAA final — and two of basketball's most successful coaches, fellow Hall of Famers Larry Brown and Williams.

When UNC held a reunion for its 1957 and 1982 championship teams in 2007, Smith drew the largest applause from the crowd in the arena bearing his name, even as he stood alongside Jordan and fellow Tar Heel great James Worthy. During the ceremony, Jordan put his arm around Smith and kissed him on the head.

In a statement Sunday, Jordan said Smith was "more than a coach — he was a mentor, my teacher, my second father. Coach was always there for me whenever I needed him and I loved him for it."

Smith's only losing season was his first, and he left the game in October 1997 having surpassed Kentucky's Adolph Rupp as the winningest coach in Division I men's history with 879 wins in 36 seasons — a record now held by Duke Hall of Fame coach Mike Krzyzewski.

"We have lost a man who cannot be replaced," Krzyzewski said in a statement. "He was one of a kind and the sport of basketball lost one of its true pillars."

Smith led the Tar Heels to 13 Atlantic Coast Conference tournament championships and 11 Final Fours, winning NCAA titles in 1982 and 1993. Along the way, more than 95 percent of Smith's lettermen graduated while more than 50 of his players went on to play in the NBA or ABA — including Phil Ford, Brad Daugherty, Jerry Stackhouse, Rasheed Wallace, Vince Carter and Antawn Jamison.

Good day for Day at Torrey Pines

Kim wins first LPGA title

The Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Two feet away from chipping into the water, Jason Day turned a good break into a big win on Sunday in the Farmers Insurance Open when he won a four-man playoff with a par on the second extra hole at tough Torrey Pines.

Day's gamble in regulation looked as if it might backfire when he went long of the green on the par-5 18th, and his chip out of deep rough raced down the hill, over the front of the green and was headed for the water when it stopped at the hazard line. He got up-and-down for par and a 2-under 70.

Day and J.B. Holmes each birdied the 18th in the playoff, and Scott Stallings and Harris English were eliminated with pars. On the second extra hole at the par-3 16th, Holmes went over the green, chipped to 15 feet and missed the par putt. Day hit 5-iron to 15 feet and made par for his third PGA Tour victory.

Day moved to No. 4 in the world, just ahead of Adam Scott, and became the highest-ranked Australian for the first time.

Jason Day pitches to the 18th green of the south course at Torrey Pines during a four-man playoff, which he won at the Farmers Insurance Open on Sunday in San Diego. The pitch stopped inches from the hole for a birdie, which extended the playoff another hole.

in regulation wasn't the only choice that was second-guessed. Holmes, needing a birdie to win, laid up from 235 yards in the fairway and narrowly missed a 20-foot birdie attempt. He closed with a 72.

Stallings missed an 18-foot birdie putt on the 18th and closed with a 69. English got up-and-down from a bunker for birdie and a 72 to get into the playoff.

LPGA

PARADISE ISLAND, Bahamas — South Korean rookie Sei Young Kim won the Pure Silk-Bahamas LPGA Classic for her first LPGA Tour title, holing

an 8-foot birdie putt on the first hole of a playoff with countrywoman Sun Young Yoo and Thailand's Ariya Jutanugarn.

The 22-year-old Kim shot a 1-under 72 in the completion of the delayed third round and closed with a 68 to match Yoo and Jutanugarn at 14-under 278 on Atlantis Resort's Ocean Club course.

Kim birdied the par-5 18th in regulation and won the playoff with her birdie on the hole.

Yoo finished with rounds of 69 and 70, and Jutanugarn shot 70-69.

Brittany Lincicome was third at 13 under after rounds of 68 and 70. Lydia Ko tied for seventh at 11 under in her first event as the No. 1 player in the world. She shot 70-68.

Champions Tour

BOCA RATON, Fla. — Paul Goydos closed with a birdie for a 3-under 69 and a one-stroke victory over Gene Sauers in the Champions Tour's Allianz Championship.

Goydos chipped to a foot from behind the par-5 18th green and tapped in for his second victory in 12 career starts of the 50-and-over tour. He won twice in 507 starts on the PGA Tour.

On a wild day at Broken Sound where nine players had a share of the lead at some point, Goydos finished at 12-under 204 to claim the $255,000 first prize.

Web.com Tour

BOGOTA, Colombia — Former Stanford star Patrick Rodgers won the Web.com Tour's Colombia Championship for his first professional title, beating Steve Marino with an 8-foot birdie putt on the second hole of a playoff.

The 22-year-old Rodgers birdied the final hole of regulation after hitting into a hazard on the par 5. He chipped out sideways and hit a wedge to 3 feet.

Rodgers finished with a 6-under 65 and 17-under 267 total at Bogota Country Club. Marino also closed with a birdie for a 69.

Jordan's air force chief said Sunday the military has launched 56 airstrikes since Thursday in retaliation for al-Kaseasbeh's slaying by the Islamic State group.

Jordan says it launched 56 airstrikes against Islamic State

AMMAN, Jordan — Jordan has launched 56 airstrikes against Islamic State group weapons depots, training centers and military barracks since militants released a video of them burning a Jordanian pilot to death, Jordan's air force chief said Sunday.

Jordanian officials said they would retaliate harshly for the slaying of the pilot, Lt. Muath al-Kaseasbeh, who was set ablaze while trapped in a cage.

Since Thursday, the Jordanian air force has attacked and destroyed 56 Islamic State targets, the air force chief, Maj. Gen. Mansour al-Jabour, told reporters. This includes training centers, military barracks, warehouses and weapons depots, he said.

"We achieved what we were looking for: revenge for Muath," the general said. "And this is not the end. This is the beginning." — Associated Press

Teen arrested in mall shooting; only 1 of 3 victims targeted

MONROEVILLE, Pa. — A teenager who police said opened fire at a Pittsburgh-area mall, shooting his intended target as well as a couple, was arrested early Sunday after police used surveillance footage and an Instagram photo to link the suspect to the shooting.

Gunfire erupted inside the men's department on the lower level of Macy's department store at the Monroeville Mall about 7:30 p.m. Saturday, sending panicked shoppers running. The gunman fled but police said they were able to identify him by matching surveillance video with an image of the suspect on Instagram, according to the criminal complaint.

Tarod Thornhill, 17, was arrested at a home in Brackenridge about 3:15 a.m. Sunday. He was being held at the Allegheny County Jail pending arraignment on charges as an adult of aggravated assault, attempted homicide and recklessly endangering other people. — Associated Press

Flowers and teddy bears lay on the street outside the home of a shooting where authorities said five people are dead, including the gunman, in Douglasville, Ga., on Saturday.

Police ID man they say killed 2 adults, 2 children, himself

DOUGLASVILLE, Ga. — Police said they identified the gunman who took his own life after killing four people and injuring two in a quiet neighborhood near Atlanta.

Cedric G. Prather, 33, died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound after shooting his ex-wife, another adult and two children on Saturday in Douglasville, about 20 miles west of Atlanta, the Douglas County Sheriff's Office said Sunday.

The sheriff's office also identified the adults killed as Latoya A. Andrews, Prather's ex-wife; and Joseph Terry Brown. Both were 33 years old. A 7-year-old child died at the scene, and a 9-year-old was taken to a hospital but also died, the sheriff's office said in a statement.

Two other children, an 8-year-old and a 15-year-old, were in critical but stable condition at a hospital, the statement said.

A news conference is planned for today in Douglasville, where authorities plan to share more details of how the shooting transpired. — Associated Press

Mexican border now a major entry point for Cuban migrants

Although a homemade raft overloaded with desperate people is the most enduring image of the decades-long migration to the U.S. from Cuba, that is not the way most Cubans without visas now arrive. Most walk across the Mexican border.

"It is surprising. And it is surprising that we are now seeing those numbers officially reported," said Jorge Duany, a Florida International University professor who studies migration patterns.

During the last three months of 2014, about 6,500 Cubans arrived at the U.S.-Mexico border, according to U.S. Customs and Border Protection. That figure is up from 4,328 from the fourth quarter the previous year.

The number of Cubans without visas processed through the agency's Miami field office more than doubled during that time, from 893 to 2,135. Many flew directly to Miami aboard flights from Spain, South America, the Bahamas or the Cayman Islands, using passports from Spain and other countries.

The 1,900-mile long Southwest border, for many years the main entry point for undocumented migrants from Mexico and Central America, also is the way into the U.S. for a large number of Cuban migrants recently. — Sun Sentinel (TNS)

Will we feel threatened?

US security won't be shattered if Homeland Security budget shut off

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spending for the Department of Homeland Security hangs in the balance as Congress fights over immigration matters in the agency's annual funding bill. Without action by Feb. 27, the department's budget will shut off.

To hear Democrats and many Republicans tell it, the result would be unacceptable risks to U.S. security at a time of grave threats worldwide. In reality, though, most people will see little change if the department's money flow is halted, and some of the warnings of doom are as exaggerated as they are striking.

"There are ghoulish, grim predators out there who would love to kill us or do us harm," said Sen. Barbara Mikulski, of Maryland, top Democrat on the Senate Appropriations Committee. "We should not be dillydallying and playing parliamentary pingpong with national security."

In the view of some House conservatives, though, shutting off the agency's $40 billion budget for a time "is obviously not the end of the world," as Rep. Matt Salmon, R-Ariz., put it, because many agency employees would stay at work through a shutdown.

Who's right, and what would the impact be if Congress were to let money for the department lapse?

Salmon and a few other conservatives are the only ones saying it publicly so far, but the reality is a department shutdown would have a very limited impact on national security.

That's because most department employees fall into exempted categories of workers who stay on the job in a shutdown because they perform work considered necessary to protect human life and property. Even in a shutdown, most workers across agencies, including the Secret Service, Transportation Security Administration, Federal Emergency Management Agency and Customs and Border Protection, would continue to report to work. #### After a decade of twists, vanishing Marine goes to trial

A U.S. Marine who vanished from a base in Iraq and later wound up in Lebanon is set to face trial more than a decade after the puzzling case began.

Wassef Hassoun

Cpl. Wassef Hassoun's court martial on desertion and other charges starts today at Camp Lejeune. Defense attorneys maintain he was kidnapped in 2004 by insurgents and that later, after briefly returning to the U.S., he became tangled up in Lebanese courts for years.

Prosecutors say Hassoun fled his post in Iraq because he was unhappy with his deployment and didn't like how U.S. troops treated Iraqis.

The case began when Hassoun went missing from a base in Fallujah in June 2004. Days later, he appeared blindfolded and with a sword poised above his head in a photo purportedly taken by insurgents. An extremist group claimed to be holding him captive.

Not long after that, Hassoun turned up unharmed at the U.S. Embassy in Beirut, Lebanon, saying he'd been kidnapped. But officials were suspicious, and he was brought back to Camp Lejeune while the military considered charging him with desertion and counts related to a pistol and Humvee he's accused of taking.

Winter-weary New England braced Sunday for another round of snow threatening to bear down on the region into the workweek and pile up to 2 feet in some areas.

As snow fell by the afternoon, drivers were warned to stay off the roads and cancellations were posted for schools and court dockets today.

The National Weather Service issued winter storm warnings for central New York, the western Catskills and much of New England through early Tuesday.

Peace in Ukraine is goal of four-nation talks in Minsk

As Russian-backed separatists gain ground in eastern Ukraine, efforts to broker peace appeared to gain momentum on Sunday, with leaders of Germany, France, Russia and Ukraine announcing plans for four-way talks this week.

The proposed meeting Wednesday in the Belarusian capital of Minsk emerged from a phone call between German Chancellor Angela Merkel, French President Francois Hollande, Russian President Vladimir Putin and Ukrainian President Petro Poroshenko.

The aim is to revive the much-violated peace plan both sides agreed to in Minsk last September, and end a war that now has killed more than 5,300 people according to United Nations estimates.

UN envoy says Yemen national talks will resume amid crisis

Yemen will resume national talks about its future, the U.N. envoy to the country said Sunday, days after Shiite rebels dissolved parliament and formally took power.

Those talks today will include Abdel-Malek al-Houthi, whose Houthi rebels stormed into the capital, Sanaa, and elsewhere in September before besieging the president and seizing total control of the Arab world's poorest country on Friday, envoy Jamal Benomar said.

"I am happy to announce to you that all political parties have agreed to return to the table of the dialogue," Benomar told journalists at a Sanaa hotel. "The Journalists is committed to take Yemen out of this crisis."

One letter stands for another. In this sample, A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

BY JACQUELINE BIGAR

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have:
5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

TUESDAY, FEB. 10, 2015

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ Confusion seems to surround a partnership.
You will have a better sense of what is going on than the other party. Your sixth sense could kick in and point you to the best way to resolve the situation. Convincing others will take talent. Tonight: Let go and relax.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ You'll move through a problem quickly, especially if you decide to let someone else take the lead.
This person seems to have a firm grasp of the issue.
Confusion might be difficult to eliminate, as you could be wearing rose-colored glasses.
Tonight: Go along with a suggestion.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ You have a lot of ground to cover, and you might feel as if you are running around in circles. Stop and take a deep breath. Your intuition will let you know what is happening. Listen to news carefully, but know that some facts could be missing. Tonight: Change gears.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ Allow your creativity to flourish. Others are likely to ask questions and make suggestions. News comes forward that will allow you to see a different path.
The question boils down to whether you are ready to take a risk. Tonight: Act as if there were no tomorrow.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ You could be withdrawn and somewhat quiet, which is unlike you. You might not want to share what is going on. Be prepared for a barrage of questions from those who care about you. Realize that a financial matter needs to be dealt with carefully. Tonight:
With a favorite person.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ You might be slightly disoriented in the morning, but by the afternoon, you will have a clear view of what is going on. A loved one will respond well to a one-one-one conversation. You both will enjoy being on the same page.
Tonight: Visit over dinner.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ Be aware of your finances. Double-check your budget, and understand what is required in various situations. The pressure you feel could be eliminated more quickly than you might have expected. You'll be able to manifest a long-term goal soon. Tonight: Get into a favorite pastime.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ An opportunity is likely to present itself in the midst of a confusing situation. You'll want to sort out what is happening and understand the facts before saying "yes." You might not have a clue about what this will involve. Tonight: Allow your imagination to speak.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov.
22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Do you know what needs to happen in order for you to move past an obstacle? You must figure this out before more complications arise. A friend will encourage you, but he or she might not have the solution. A family member also adds an element of chaos. Tonight:
Do your thing.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan.
19)
★★★★ You'll be more upbeat than those around you. Your positive energy might be needed in various situations.
Your plans could become quite erratic as you absorb a lot of others' confusion.
Confirm meetings and verify any news you hear. Tonight:
Read between the lines.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb.
18)
★★★ Someone you respect demands your attention and time. You naturally will do what is asked, but it could add some tension to your day. Use caution with funds, as you easily could make an error. Follow through on priorities, but don't give in to an impulse. Tonight: Your treat.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Work on detachment, and you'll get a better perspective of what is happening in your immediate environment. Observe what might not be obvious. Seek out an answer as to why others seem to be acting in a confusing manner. Tonight:
Be entertained!

They're paid off and debt-free!

Dear Readers: Every day, as you probably can imagine, I get a ton of mail. These days, most arrives via email, which is convenient and inexpensive. But I still get plenty of cards and letters in envelopes with postmarks and stamps. Your messages are so encouraging; I wish I could personally respond to each and every one. Imagine my excitement to get the following report from this couple in New Jersey:

Dear Mary: We just want to say thank you. Your columns, advice, thoughts and ideas helped our family out of debt. On Nov. 1, we became debt-free and paid off $232,793.59. Your newsletters were encouraging and helpful, and we are grateful for your gift. Continue your work, and, again, thank you. — Judy and Dwayne.

Dear Judy and Dwayne: I get some fabulous mail, but I have to admit after reading your note (handwritten on a beautiful greeting card, I might add), I had to pick myself up off the floor. Wow. About a quarter of a million dollars in repaid debt. That is remarkable. I am so proud of you. I'd love to know more. In fact, I would love to write your story one day. That would be so encouraging to others on their journeys to getting debt-free and would affirm and validate this amazing thing you've done in your own lives.

Dear Mary: We have your

e-booklet, "Cheapskate Solutions," with many recipes for window cleaner. Do you have a recipe or source for a cleaner that is also a defogger? We'd like this for bathroom mirrors and car windows. — William

Dear William: There is a product, Rain-X Glass Cleaner with Anti-Fog, available online and in the auto supply stores. However, before you run out and spend any money, give this a try: shaving cream. It does work really well to defog windshields, windows and mirrors. Even your eyeglasses. Just clean the item with shaving cream (if it's really dirty, clean it first then re-clean with the shaving cream). Shaving cream really does work well, and it's cheaper than Rain-X.

Dear Mary: Is Tuft &

Needle too good to be true? We are needing a good-quality, queen-size mattress. I've already built us a nice, sturdy platform, so now, we need a good mattress. I have back problems, and from what I'm seeing, the Tuft & Needle would be the perfect answer both for my back and for my cheapskate pocketbook! The price is right. And it comes with a 30-day full-refund policy. How can we lose? Everywhere I look online all I can find are positive reviews! Am I missing something here? — Scott and Pam

Dear Scott and Pam: Have you been inside my head or something? I have been looking at this very same company myself, in anticipation of purchasing a new mattress for our guest room. You are right about those reviews, too. I'm this close to pulling the trigger on a Tuft & Needle mattress, provided I can get over my old-school way of thinking that to be any good a mattress needs to weigh about a thousand pounds and be nearly impossible to maneuver up stairs and around corners.

Because I won't be buying for a few months, how about we do this: You go first. Then send me your own review. I'll be sure to follow up here so everyone can get in on it. Great deal, don't you think? I'm kinda smiling here. I am as confident as possible in a Tuft & Needle mattress, in that I have not yet slept on one. I would not hesitate one more day if I were you.

What happened to self-reliance and discipline?

Dear Mr. Berko: I am 26 and make $39,000 per year, and my wife makes $26,000. We owe $29,000 on credit cards, $47,000 on student loans (we quit school to get married) and $27,000 on two cars and a motorcycle, and we have no savings. Our credit is so bad

we can't get a mortgage, and we pay $1,650 in rent. Both of our families live paycheck to paycheck, and so do our friends and the people we know and work with. We all feel as if we're in a rut, and the government does nothing to help. Good jobs, money and favors go to the rich with connections and friends in government. Most of us believe the government has rigged the system to favor wealthy families. The government must help the poor and middle class.

I've heard you give many people good advice. Please, is there any advice you can give to us? I'm scared to retire like our parents. — WN, Lowell, Mass.

Dear WN: Why do you want the government, which can't do diddly squat, to be your sugar daddy? Where are your initiative, self-reliance, self-sufficiency, determination and discipline? Those few nouns are all that separate you from success.

For many Americans, one of the most distasteful consequences of capitalism is the unequal sharing of its blessings. But the most distasteful consequence of socialism is the equal sharing of its miseries. We dream about "having plenty" of money for retirement, but we don't dream about how to make that "having plenty" a reality. Success must be planned and trained for. It won't fall in your lap like a napkin. Disparities among the wealthy, the middle class and the poor have existed for thousands of years. Little has changed except names, faces and places. What have you done to train yourself and prepare for success? If you must assign blame, look in the mirror.

I interviewed a tattooed college student for a part-time job two summers ago but didn't hire the kid after he explained that "1/4 is more than 1/2 because 4 is larger than 2." This dumbing down of America is among our biggest problems. Few Americans understand compounded interest, and fewer can explain the rule of 72 or compute a dividend yield. To be financially comfortable, you must speak the language and understand the process. Only then will you be equipped to plan your future rather than let your future plan you. Most Americans lack the determination, the discipline and the initiative to succeed. So they remain financially ignorant and can't tell the difference between financial fact and financial fiction.

Blaming the government for our wealth and income disparity is like blaming a mirror for its reflection. I remember some Mother Goose wisdom from years ago: "Before you pay the butcher, the baker and the candlestick-maker, pay yourself." And I recall my father telling me 55 years ago, "Be disciplined in your finances, religious in your saving, sparing in your spending, patient in your waiting and wise in your investing."

WN, don't mistake the edge of a rut for the horizon, because at age 26, you can still break the generational mold to enjoy a comfortable retirement. And I'm willing to help you prove that it can be done. Go to the library and check out a book titled "The Richest Man in Babylon." It was written in the 1920s, and there are no big words or fancy ideas. It is a delightful 144-page read, chock-full of easy-to-follow common-sense advice. The book was written by George Clason, who was born in Louisiana, Mo., and died a man of means in 1957 at his home in Napa, Calif. Both you and your wife must read it. After you complete "The Richest Man in Babylon," you will understand my dad's advice and might have a bucket of questions. I'll be pleased to answer every one to help you on your way, and you should discuss this book with friends and family.

Please address your financial questions to Malcolm Berko, P.O. Box 8303, Largo, FL 33775, or email him at mjberko@yahoo.com.

Here's the path to retirement happiness

Research paints positive picture

GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

Retirees have a message for people still working but wondering what life might be like once they retire: "Come on in, the water's warm." But they also say that it pays to plan, the earlier the better, because retirement might come sooner than you expect.

A recent study, sponsored by Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company (MassMutual), found that approximately eight in 10 retirees are enjoying themselves in retirement, seven in 10 can afford a comfortable lifestyle, and two-thirds feel financially secure. The survey also indicated that few retirees characterize themselves as being bored, lonely or anxious, and nearly half (45 percent) retired sooner than they expected.

The study, Hopes, Fears and Reality — What Workers Expect in Retirement and What Steps Help Them Achieve the Retirement They Want, polled more than 900 retirees one to 15 years into retirement and another 900 plus pre-retirees one to 15 years before retirement, all of whom had at least $50,000 in savings and investments.

The research paints a positive picture of retiree lifestyles and adaptability. More importantly, it provides insights into the most important steps to take in preparing for a happy retirement.

"The study provides Americans with a roadmap for enjoying a happy, secure and fulfilling retirement," says

Elaine Sarsynski, executive vice president of MassMutual Retirement Services. "There was a clear distinction between what steps the happiest retirees took compared to those who were less fulfilled."

Among the steps taken by the happiest retirees were the following:

- Calculated the best time to begin collecting Social Security benefits. The qualifying age for receiving full benefits is gradually moving to age 67, depending on your birthdate. The benefit is reduced for those who take it sooner. For those who wait, the benefit increases each year until age 70.
- Targeted how much money they would need to retire comfortably and estimated their medical and dental expenses in retirement. It was a prudent step as many people said their medical and dental expenses were higher in retirement than anticipated.

- Created a budget for their retirement income and expenses and made an effort to increase their savings at least five years before stopping work. The 2015 contribution limit for 401(k) plans and other employer-sponsored retirement plans is $18,000 plus an additional $6,000 for employees age 50 and older.
- Worked with a financial adviser. The overwhelming majority found their adviser to be helpful in preparing for retirement.

Be wary of online reviews

When you're shopping online, do you read product reviews before you buy? A 2013 study conducted by Dimensional Research notes 90 percent of shoppers surveyed felt reading positive product reviews influenced their purchasing decisions. Eighty-six percent of the same shoppers reported reading negative product reviews also influenced whether or not they bought a product online.

JILL CATALDO

I'll readily admit I'm a review reader. I like to read what other people think of a product, destination or restaurant I'm interested in, and I appreciate hearing both the good and bad aspects of what's being said. Reading a variety of reviews can help you get a sense of whether or not something's worth opening your wallet.

Recently, a new Italian restaurant opened up near where I live. The talk around town was the prices were high, though none of us actually had tried the restaurant yet. Then, someone told me to go online and read the reviews of the restaurant. Certainly, they were eye opening!

- "Portion sizes were good, just utterly lacking of flavor."
- "Extremely average."
- "Perfect restaurant for people who don't know what good food is."
- "Sauce was literally tasteless."

With entrees priced at about $19 each, we decided this restaurant is one we can skip — at least until the reviews improve.

How does one deem an online review trustworthy? It's important to understand companies also know there is big business in positive reviews. Some agencies involved in social media promotion offer "work-at-home" schemes that pay people to write reviews of products they've never purchased, simply to increase the positive number of reviews online. I'd like to share a portion of a sales pitch one of my friends recently received from one of these agencies:

"I noticed you're a frequent reviewer on Amazon. We're interested in purchasing reviews on products, even though you might not have tried it before — we'll pay from $3 to $6 per review on the product links we give you. Choose any product and leave a 5-star review on it. Please do not choose a product you have tried before. Make sure the review is positive and believable. To be clear, you will be reviewing products you have never received or tried. That is why it is important your review is written well."

The pitch goes on to say if the first "fake" review passes muster, they'll begin paying for more fabricated reviews. If you weren't aware this practice goes on, it does — and it's something to consider when you're reading online reviews.

So, how does one discern true reviews from imposters? I look for an assortment of reviews that are, on the whole, generally positive.

Unless what's being reviewed is truly stellar for every single person who comes in contact with it, you should see a range of reviews that leans toward being generally good or generally bad. I also look for specific details that could only be written by someone who has physical experience with what's being reviewed. A restaurant review that mentions a funny statue of a fish in the lobby might indicate the reviewer actually has been there. A review of a jacket that mentions, because of the design, the jacket's fabric occasionally gets stuck in the zipper? Again, it's likely the person writing the review owns this item.

Lastly, I like to contribute reviews for products I'm especially happy with, too. After searching for flannel-lined carpenter jeans for my son this winter, I bought a pair online and was delighted with the quality once the jeans arrived. I returned to the retailer's website and wrote the kind of review I'd value myself if I were interested in the jeans, noting the thickness of the flannel lining and the quality of the heavyweight denim.

What happens to investments if company goes bankrupt?

The Motley Fool:

To educate, amuse & enrich

ASK THE FOOL

A Bankrupt investment

Q: Do I lose my whole investment if a company I own stock in goes bankrupt? — C.S., Fulton, Mo.

A: You'll likely lose a lot, but perhaps not everything. Some companies file for bankruptcy protection and then turn themselves around, as General Motors and Delta Air Lines did. (Others, such as Enron, don't.) Even a business that fails still can be worth something. Its assets might be sold off, or another company might just buy it entirely.

When these sales occur, as a common-stock shareholder, you are in line to receive some of the proceeds. Unfortunately, though, you're last in line. Creditors (banks, bondholders, suppliers, etc.) are paid first, followed by preferred-stock holders, and, finally, if anything is left, holders of common stock. (They often receive nothing.)

It's best to keep up with your holdings and their progress so you're not surprised when there's trouble. At a minimum, read quarterly or annual reports.

Q: Where can I look up home values in my neighborhood to get an idea of my home's worth? — L.M., Waldo, Fla.

A: For an informed opinion, ask a good real estate agent. You also can find information online, at sites such as Zillow.com, where you'll be able to look up estimated values of homes in various neighborhoods, prices of recently sold homes and much more.

Be careful, though, if you need a home value estimate in order to price your home or bid on a house. Online data providers can be helpful, but their data isn't always accurate. If you're buying or selling a home, it's often smart to use an experienced agent who might help you land a better price. Learn more at USA.gov and realtor.com.

FOOL'S SCHOOL

Orders galore

Here are the main orders you can place with your brokerage to buy or sell stocks. Some can be combined.

- Market order: This is for immediate execution at the best price available when the order reaches the marketplace. It's the most common type of order and is nearly always filled because no price is specified. It can be risky if the stock unexpectedly moves sharply — which isn't common.

- Limit order: This is an order to buy or sell only at a specified price (the "limit") or better. It's used by investors with a maximum or minimum price at which they're willing to trade. It can be handy if you like a company but think its stock is a little too rich, as you can place a limit order to buy it if it falls to a lower price.

- Fill-or-Kill: If this order cannot be filled immediately, it's automatically canceled.

- Day Order: If this order hasn't been filled by the end of the trading day, it terminates automatically.

- GTC (Good Till Canceled): This order remains in effect until executed by the broker or canceled by you. Many brokerages cancel GTC orders after a month or two, though.

- Stop Order: This becomes a market order when a specified price is reached or passed. Buy stops are entered above the current market price; sell stops are entered below it. For example, you might place a stop order to have your shares of a stock automatically sold if it falls below $25 per share. A stop order guarantees execution but not price.

- Stop Limit Order: This becomes a limit order when a specified price is reached or passed. If you place a "sell 100 XYZ $55 stop limit" order, if XYZ drops to $55 per share or below, the order becomes a limit order to sell 100 shares at no less than $55. This order doesn't guarantee execution.

MY DUMBEST INVESTMENT

Excellent condition, as is

I learned a lesson in pride long ago. Trailers do fall in value! I took out a loan to purchase a trailer. The seller stated that it was for sale as is, and was in excellent condition. After signing a purchase contract, the trailer was rendered not livable after a pipe burst, filling the home with wastewater. I lost well above $13,000, in part because of the park operator not getting a plumber in on time.

Don't be fooled by the promise of a quick sale. Always get your own inspector. "As is" and "excellent condition" mean very different things. I learned my lessons the hard way. — A reader in Milwaukee

The Fool responds: This is a great lesson for anyone buying anything of value, whether it's a trailer home, a house, a car or a stock. (Remember that some cold-calling brokers will try to talk you into rushing into dumb stock investments.) Do your due diligence, or have an inspector or other professional do it for you. Money spent on an inspection can be well worth it, saving you from pain and losses.

FOOLISH TRIVIA

Name that company

I was founded by my namesake in Germany in 1886 as a "workshop for precision mechanics and electrical engineering." By 1902, I offered a high-voltage magneto ignition system with innovative spark plugs. Today, I employ about 281,000 people (as of 2013) with about 360 subsidiaries and regional companies in 50-plus countries. My "Invented for Life" offerings range from power tools to kitchen appliances to gardening products, and my brands include Rexroth, Buderus, Dakon, Dremel, Diablo, Electro-Voice, FHP, Gilmore, HC-Cargo, Nelson, OTC, RTS, Robinair, Rolatape, RotoZip, Skil, Telex and Unipoint. I apply for thousands of patents each year. Who am I?

Last Week's Trivia Answer
I was founded in 1833 to sell drugs and chemicals wholesale. I stocked many trade ships' medicine chests and distributed wares by covered wagon. Today, based in San Francisco, I'm America's oldest and largest health care services company, serving more than 50 percent of American hospitals, 20 percent of physicians and 100 percent of health plans. I'm also the largest pharmaceutical distributor in North America, delivering a third of all medications used there every day. I employ more than 37,000 people and rake in more than $160 billion annually. My specialties include hospital automation and medical-management software. Who am I? (Answer: McKesson)

THE MOTLEY FOOL TAKE

AbbVie for your health

Among well-managed and profitable large-cap biotech companies, AbbVie (NYSE: ABBV) is growing faster than many, posting a strong 7.8 percent increase in revenue year over year in its third quarter. Most important, this growth story is only now starting to kick into high gear.

With the recent approval of its hepatitis C therapy, Viekira Pak for genotype 1 patients, and a multiyear agreement with Express Scripts granting the drug a favorable reimbursement status on its formulary, AbbVie is set to add billions in revenue to its top line next year.

This deal also shows management's prowess at capturing market share for new drugs, a feat it perfected with its flagship anti-inflammatory drug Humira. It has delivered several consecutive quarters of double-digit sales growth, making it the world's best-selling drug in 2013.

AbbVie has three other products generating double-digit sales growth in the third quarter, namely Creon (for pancreatic enzyme therapy), Duodopa (for advanced Parkinson's disease) and Synagis (a seasonal respiratory vaccine).

AbbVie has a robust clinical pipeline, featuring 12 late-stage clinical candidates, with a handful now under regulatory approval. With a dividend recently yielding 3.1 percent, AbbVie is worth a look. (The Motley Fool owns and recommends shares of Express Scripts.)

What it takes to be an ethical leader

It's more than a set of rules, procedures

What do ethical leaders have in common? They have the uncanny ability to follow the advice of Arnold Glasow who stated, "The respect of those you respect is worth more than the applause of the multitude." In concert, ethical leaders are driven by the philosophy of keeping true to their convictions; never being ashamed of doing what is right; deciding on what they think is right and sticking to it; and finally, treating others as they wished to be treated.

Ethical leadership and the implementation of your personal ethics should center on decisions and making correct choices. It is not contingent upon the circumstances; rather it is concentrated and doing the right things for the right reasons. As James Ruskin affirmed, "pride is at the bottom of all mistakes."

From this perspective, an interesting read by Dwight Johnson in his book titled, "The transparent leader: Spiritual secrets of nineteen successful men," brings forth some illuminating prospects of being an ethical leader. I would like to highlight some of these significant components.

Building upon Dick Capen's theory of implementing an "ethical will" as one of the 19 spiritual leaders in Johnson's book, he enumerates several key ideologies to implement in our daily ethical decision making. Below are listed his selections on becoming an ethical leader and in the parentheses are my comments.

Take chances without making mistakes: (It is by making mistakes that we learn. Use these mistakes as learning experiences not only for you, but for those with whom you serve and lead.)

Make choices and take charge of what you choose: (Making correct choices is essential for the ethical leader. Make choices based in information coupled with your moral compass. Stand by your choice, and lead others to achieve the desired result.)

Be willing to change: (All great ethical leaders have the innate capacity and wherewithal to make changes for the better. Without change, we become stagnant and cease to grow.)

Don't torture yourself over things you might have done. Chalk up your losses and move on: (We all wish we could have a "do over." Learn from these mistakes and make them crucible moments that we can teach others our mistakes and then move on ...)

When you embark on a new adventure, don't leave any of

BY EDWARD PIATT
epiatt@olivet.edu

yourself on the shore: (This is akin to putting your toe in the cold water of the pool — it is better just to jump in than taking the cold water incrementally. Likewise, it is better to jump into your decision wholeheartedly, rather than making it a part at a time. Put your energy, focus and drive into accomplishing the task at hand. Winners put everything all in when making choices and decisions to accomplish the task or goal.)

Earn the trust of other people: (Trust is earned and never given. People need to trust your intentions and ability to do the right things for the right reasons. It is in serving others that others begin to trust your intentions and then reciprocate their trust back to you.)

Do your best, no matter how modest the task is: (Olympians never quit or make excuses; they just go out and do their best. The same with ethical leaders — do your best and make no excuses!)

Serve other people: (Key to servant leadership is serving others at the expense of your own desires and ambitions. It is in serving others where we can align our ethics with the goals and purpose of leadership. There is no higher calling than serving others.)

Be consistent in your beliefs: (If character can be defined as "doing what you do when no one else is looking" then integrity is consistent character. Align your character with serving others; be consistent; and doing the right things for the right reasons, and you will never waiver in your ethical leadership.)

Embrace diversity: (Embrace diversity of ideas, people and cultures. It is essential for the ethical leaders to achieve a multiplicity of diversity to move to higher levels of excellence in the global economy of commerce, ideas, culture and knowledge.)

Be an optimist: (Often easier said than done; but in reality, being an optimist brings forth new ideas, energy and resonant thinking for ethical leadership.)

Set a moral compass in everything that you do: (Essential for the ethical leader is never wavering from your internal spiritual compass. All corruption and lapses of ethical behavior revolve around not staying true to your moral compass.)

Finish strong: (Olympians always finish strong as well as ethical leaders. Both bring focus to finishing the task before moving on to the next. Give it your all so that you have no regrets.)

Consequently, the ideas represented above bring into focus the central dimensions for the ethical leader. Ethics is much more than a set of rules or procedures; rather it is the application of the elements of a spiritual dimension; service to others; and the golden rule — treating others like you would like to be treated. In the end, we all can be ethical leaders by implementing these dimensions into our thinking, behavior and leadership activities.

Let's start the new year of 2015 by implementing the attributes of being an ethical leader and watch our organizations prosper, our direct reports thrive and our society becomes better one person at a time.

Dr. Edward Piatt, Ed.D., is a manager with the State of Illinois with 30 years of frontline leadership experience. Also he is an adjunct professor of business in the MBA and MOL programs at Olivet Nazarene University. He frequently writes and lectures on Emotional Intelligence (EI), organizational culture, and leadership. You can contact him at epiatt@olivet.edu.

So you want to buy a franchise

The McDonald's case and the future of franchising

Buying a franchise is halfway between owning your own business and working for someone else. When you buy a franchise, you are responsible for profits and losses at your franchise outlet, you hire and fire employees, and you do all the stuff that goes with running your own business.

But in a franchise you are executing the franchise company's business plan, not your own. The franchisor company, or franchisor, tells you what to do and how to do it. When the franchisor changes the business model, you as a franchisee have to change your business accordingly, no questions asked.

Most franchises (especially in the fast-food industry) have operating manuals with hundreds or even thousands of rules telling you exactly what to do and how to do it.

That's very comforting to a lot of franchisees who fear failure and trust that the franchisor knows a lot more about the business than they do. But a recent case out of Virginia will be calling the entire franchise model into question, and it's something you want to keep an eye on if you own a franchise or are thinking about buying one.

In this case, a Virginia franchisee of McDonalds fired a bunch of African-American employees, who promptly sued the franchisee for racial discrimination based on certain remarks the franchisee had made before firing them. But they didn't stop there. They also sued parent corporation McDonalds Corp. — even though it didn't know about the alleged discrimination and certainly wouldn't have condoned it if they did — on the theory that the local franchisee was acting as the agent of the parent corporation such that the latter was responsible for the franchisee's alleged discrimination.

Generally, a principal is legally responsible for the acts and omissions of its agents. That's why in virtually every franchise agreement I have ever reviewed there is a detailed provision saying that the franchisee is not an agent or employee of the franchisor but rather an independent contractor acting independently and in its own best interests.

But how, you may ask, can you reconcile independent contractor status with the amount of direction and control that a franchisor normally exercises over its franchisees' operations? As Shakespeare would have said, "ay, there's the rub."

The ex-employees in this case cited an opinion issued last year by the general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board saying that under certain circumstances a franchisor could be held accountable for the acts of its franchisees. The opinion of an in-house lawyer (even one for a government agency) does not have the force of law unless a court agrees with it, and in the McDonald's case it seems that we are about to find out exactly what those "certain circumstances" are.

Given that the case involves racial discrimination — and a pretty blatant instance at that (this franchisee is alleged to have said some really, really dumb things in the presence of witnesses) — we may be seeing some rewriting of the rules that govern the franchisor-franchisee relationship. Stay tuned.

It, therefore, came as no surprise when I read an article in The Wall Street Journal this past week about how some franchises are restructuring their operations to give franchisees more direct control over their businesses. In this new model, the franchisor trains the franchisee and helps it put together the back office systems that run the business, but gives the franchisee more freedom to determine the mix of products and services it will provide its customers at the front end.

So, for example, a Louisiana franchisee of a hamburger chain who wants to offer "Cajun Chicken" on his menu in response to local market conditions could do so without the franchisor's permission, even though no other franchisee was doing the same, as long as he continues to use the franchisor's back office system and pays royalties to the franchisor for doing so.

Historically, franchises have always been concerned first and foremost about consistency and uniformity in their operations. If you visit a Burger King franchise in Bangor, Maine, you get exactly the same customer experience as you would get in a Burger King franchise in San Diego and all points in between. When changes happen, all the franchisees move in military lockstep so that nobody stands out or looks different.

If the plaintiffs in the McDonalds discrimination case are successful, some franchisors will need to reconsider that top-down model. Many franchisees I speak to feel they know their local markets much better than corporate does, and are willing to trade off a strong national brand identity for the opportunity to generate more revenue and serve their customers better.

Many franchisees want their franchisors to be more of a consultant that will help them run their businesses, rather than a boss telling them what they can and cannot do. Holding franchisors liable for their franchisees' activities may well push more of them in that direction.

MORTGAGES

Many Americans are clueless on their mortgage rate — and how much they could save by refinancing.

Do you know your rate?

CTW Features

“Age ain’t nothing but a number,” as the saying goes, but do mortgage rates deserve the same devil-may-care attitude?

They might not deserve it, but they’re getting it.

More than one-third of borrowers — 35 percent — say they are not very confident they know what their current mortgage rate is, according to a Bankrate.com’s February Money Pulse survey.

“Your mortgage rate is one of the most important numbers in your financial life, and there’s a good chance that one of your neighbors has no idea regarding how much he or she is paying.” Holden Lewis, a senior mortgage analyst at Bankrate.com, said in a statement accompanying the report. “Given how far mortgage rates have fallen, these people could be missing substantial opportunities to save money by refinancing.”

Current mortgage rates are less than 4 percent — Bankrate’s average mortgage rate in 2014 was 4.24 percent — and many housing analysts anticipate them rising to 5 percent during 2015.

Refinancing at today’s lower rates could produce huge savings for current homeowners.

For instance, refinancing a $200,000 loan from 6 percent interest to 3.80 percent (the average fixed rate for a 30-year loan) would save $267 per month.

All signs may point to right now as the time to buy (or refinance), but if rates tick to 5 percent, a fifth of Americans (21 percent) say renting would be a better investment than buying. More than a quarter (26 percent) say rates would have to hit double-digits before renting became a better option than buying.

Should you keep flood insurance?

Dear Dave, I’m debt-free except for my home, and I’ll have that paid off in about 12 months. I make $60,000 per year and live in an area of Florida that is designated a flood plain because a river that empties into Tampa Bay runs behind my home. I’m paying $1,070 per month for flood insurance. My house is worth $325,000, and water has come up into the yard twice in more than 20 years. Because I’m doing pretty well financially, do you think I need to keep my flood insurance policy?

— Trudy

Dear Trudy, From what you’ve told me about the history of your property, it sounds like your biggest concern might be if a hurricane caused a backwash in your area. Insurance is already pretty tough in Florida when it comes to those kinds of things, but you don’t want to run the risk of your house getting mowed down and losing everything.

If I were in your shoes, I think I’d like the protection of flood insurance. What you’re paying for the policy is such a small percentage of your world, compared to the value of your home and your income. Keep the coverage, Trudy! — Dave

Do the right thing, but don’t let them bully you

Dear Dave, I have a student loan in default that now is being handled by a collections agency. They want me to pay the entire $20,000 now, or consolidate it with $16,000 in collection fees added. Are these my only options? — Rebecca

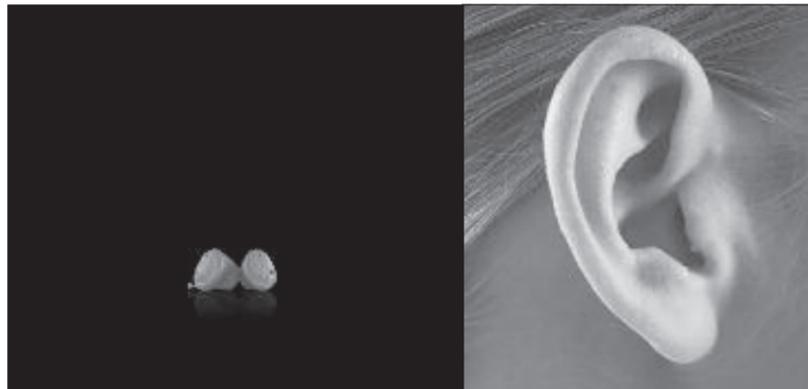

Dear Rebecca, There’s no way I’d consolidate and pay $16,000 in collection fees. Right now, they’re trying to bully you. They eventually might garnish your paychecks, but I think you still can work out something with these guys.

You’ll have to repay the loan, and probably the interest and some of the late charges, but $16,000 is a bunch of crap. Don’t run out and get another loan to pay it, but don’t let yourself be blackmailed, either. You’ve made a mess by ignoring this for so long, so now you’ll have to save every penny you can and start sending them substantial amounts of money each month.

Trust me, they’ll take your payments and cash the checks. Hopefully, you can settle on a reasonable repayment structure and have this thing kicked off in a couple of years. — Dave

The Brittany is a midsize home with the possibility of up to five bedrooms. But the two rooms to the right of the entry might just as easily be put to other uses: hobby room, home entertainment center, work-out space, etc. The simple addition of a direct entry door from the porch could transform the den/guest room into a home office.

Light streams into the entry through a side-light and transom. This naturally bright space is a junction for a multiplicity of rooms and hallways.

To the left is the dining room (or parlor). Through an arched opening, you can take the hallway to secondary bedrooms, or go straight ahead to the kitchen and nook. On the right, your choices include a central bathroom, vaulted den/guest suite/home office, or hallway to the owners’ suite and a study (or bedroom).

Windows fill most of two walls in the vaulted family room, and more light washes in through sliding glass doors in the nook. A fireplace tucked in the rear corner serves as a warm focal point when darkness falls or skies turn gray.

Working in the kitchen, you can keep tabs on goings-on throughout the family room, nook and patio. Cupboard and counter space are amply supplied, and the long eating bar keeps family members and guests out of the way while allowing them to chat with kitchen workers. Laundry appliances are nearby, in a pass-through utility room that connects to the three-car garage.

Amenities in the Brittany’s owners’ suite include a large walk-in closet, dual vanity, private toilet, and an oversize walk-in shower. The owners’ suite also offers direct access to the patio.

A PUBLIC NOTICE TO PET OWNERS

If circumstances require you to give up your pet, please consider:

- * An animal's life has value, lack of price may suggest there is something wrong with the animal.
- * Some unscrupulous animal dealers who care more about profit than proper care of an animal look for free animals.
- * Some people involved in the illegal practice of dog fighting look for animals on which to train their fighting dogs.
- * A potential pet owner is less impulsive when he/she must pay a fee. A pet owner should realize the responsibility for caring for a pet during its entire life time.

SEND US YOUR PICTURES!

Just make sure to follow these simple rules.

FOR ALL PHOTOS:

1. Photos must have the first and last names of all people whose faces are visible. THERE ARE NO EXCEPTIONS.
2. Please state which towns people are from. (For example, Joe Jones, of Ashkum.)
3. For groups of 12 or fewer, identify people from left to right, and top row to bottom row. For larger groups, we will list people by hometowns rather than position in the photo.
4. If people in the photo are related (sisters, uncles, cousins, etc.), please state that and be exact.
5. Clear focus and good lighting are important. If a picture is too blurry or too dark, it will not run.
6. Pictures in bad taste (such as drinking, smoking or showing gang signs) will not run.
7. We will gladly credit the photographer if you include his or her name.

TO SUBMIT BY MAIL:

1. Please type or print clearly.
2. We will gladly return prints after they run, if a stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed.
3. Use commercial printing labs (like a drugstore) or high-quality photo paper. Photos on ink jet paper cannot be printed.
4. Send prints to:
The Daily Journal,
Local Faces in Different Places,
8 Dearborn Square,
Kankakee, IL 60901

TO SUBMIT DIGITAL PHOTOS:

1. Submit only one picture per e-mail.
2. Send the photo as an attachment.
3. Send full-size images. Photos taken with a cell phone, or pulled from a website, will not run. (Thumbnail images are much too small.)
4. Send captions in black text.
5. Give your photos simple, descriptive names.
6. E-mail to: localfaces@daily-journal.com
