Building an 'Empire': All-star cast brings Fox hip-hop drama to limelight

By Meagan Sylvester
TV Media

Following two Academy Award nominations and a number of box office hits, Hollywood film director Lee Daniels ("Lee Daniels' The Butler," 2013) has assembled an all-star cast for what's been dubbed a "sexy and powerful new drama," based on the king of a booming hip-hop empire and the battle for his once coveted throne.

Terrence Howard ("Sparks") and Taraji P. Henson ("The Curious Case of Benjamin Button," 2008) will again step into the limelight together as a hip-hop power duo following Craig Brewer's 2005 film "Hustle & Flow," but it's clear "Empire" — airing Wednesday, Jan. 7, on Fox — is neither an extension of the "It's Hard Out Here for a Pimp" storyline, nor an expansion of those roles, Howard said during an interview with AndWePresent.com.

"Djay [Howard's "Hustle & Flow" character] is a completely different animal; as far as I know, he doesn't exist anymore," said Howard, who would be nominated for an Academy Award for the role. "This guy [in 'Empire'] is someone who finds himself at a strange road in life... where you have to make a decision about who are you and what will you become."

Critics have recently compared "Empire" to the likes of "Entourage" and "Dallas," only this program is set to an original urban soundtrack produced by Timbaland, an industry giant who has worked with the likes of Nelly Furtado, Justin Timberlake and Missy Elliot since his music debut more than 20 years ago.

Television programs tuned to catchy soundtracks have been major crowd-pleasers as of late, with show's such as "Glee" and "Nashville" gaining widespread popularity among viewers from all demographics. But according to Malik Yoba ("New York Undercover"), "Empire" will strive to widen its audience with a predominantly black cast, breaking barriers and creating space for blacks in mainstream television.

"A show like this with a cast of people of color, the perception could be this is a show for people of color," Yoba said during a backstage interview with AndWePresent.com. "But music has proven that 75 per cent of consumers are [non-blacks]."

Daniels and the cast are also using the show to stray away from generic stereotypes, leaning towards healthy images of blacks in the media. "We're more than just the hired help, the best friend of or the cute girlfriend of," said Academy Award nominee Henson in a similar interview with AndWePresent.com. "We have lives and stories, and I feel like it's my obligation to portray and bring those stories to life."

As for the storyline, Yoba says in the interview that Lee Daniels' work never lies on the surface, and viewers will have to look deeper to see how challenging social topics are first exposed and then discussed as a result. From dealing with fatal illnesses to homophobia to sibling rivalries to nepotism, Henson says these are things most other big-name directors tend to avoid all together. "[Lee Daniels] pushes envelopes where a lot of directors in Hollywood are scared," Henson said. "I don't like to do projects unless they scare me, and [my character] scares the hell out of me."

Remaining faithful to his long-time colleague and the show's executive producer, Howard steps in to star as Lucious Lyon, a former street thug whose raw talent and thirst for innovation built Empire Entertainment from the ground up. The record label — working within the ethos of the American dream — could be compared to real-life Roc-A-Fella Records, founded in part by hip-hop icon Shawn "Jay-Z" Carter.

Lucious' hard-earned success, however, comes crashing down when he is diagnosed with ALS, or Lou Gehrig's disease, rendering the music giant unfit for business in a matter of just three years. Forced to preserve his hard-earned legacy, Lucious begins grooming a successor and looks no further than his three loyal sons. What better way to ignite 99 problems between three ambitious siblings?

As Lucious breaks the fateful news to family and friends, including longtime business partner Vernon Turner (Yoba), his children want nothing more than to take the helm, but each will have to prove himself fit for CEO.

According to an early preview released by Fox, Lucious' favorite son is Hakeem (Bryshere Gray, a.k.a. rapper Yazz The Greatest), who also happens to be the youngest of the sibling pack. Hakeem is a gifted but spoiled lyrical genius who appears to value fame over the kind of hard work his father deems necessary.

The middle son, Jamal (Jussie Smollett "The Mighty Ducks, 1992), is a different kind of music prodigy, but unlike his baby brother, he shies away from the spotlight in favor of a simpler life and is further pitted against his eldest brother, Andre (Trai Byers, "90210"), who acts as the company's chief financial officer.

Henson's fiery character, Cookie, is Lucious' hardened ex-wife who is released from prison seven years early, claiming it was her money — to the tune of $400,000 — and sacrifice that made Empire Entertainment possible.

With a star-studded cast and an Oscar-nominated director, producer and writer at the helm, "Empire" is shaping up to be a huge hit for Fox. Catch the series premiere of the hip-hop drama when it airs Wednesday, Jan. 7, on Fox.

Q&A hollywood

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: I would like to know if NBC's "The Voice" is ever going to put out its seasons on DVD.

A: What you're running into with "The Voice" is what classic-sitcom fans have been running into for years, such as with "WKRP in Cincinnati" and "The Wonder Years": music rights.

Those sitcoms all made heavy use of pop music, and while the network lawyers did secure the rights to include that music in the episodes that aired on TV, they didn't get them for future video releases. It proved to be an enormous headache for those shows, which just used the music for background and mood, so imagine how much trouble it is for shows that are just about the music.

"The Voice" is, of course, based on musical performances, and so it has even more songs to clear than the most music-heavy sitcom. NBC hasn't released any DVDs from the show yet, but there is some hope.

Fox's "American Idol," "The Voice's" predecessor in the singing-competition genre, got around this by releasing best-of DVD packages. Fox could then pick and choose which songs to get the rights to, and often only parts of the song were included, which would make that even easier.

However, even a full-season release of "The Voice" is possible, if the network wants it bad enough.

A DVD release of the aforementioned "WKRP," for example, was once considered impossible because of the rights barrier. However, after years of negotiations, and almost $1 million in licensing fees, home video company Shout! Factory was finally able to release the full series on DVD earlier this year. They decided it would be worthwhile. However, the home video market is shrinking.

"Fortunately, we're still doing well selling DVDs, but there's no doubt it's a decreasing market," Shout!'s Garson Foos said in an interview with Vox.com.

Q: I recently discovered that TNT canceled "Dallas." Why? As a fan of the original series, I truly enjoyed the re-make.

A: You're not the only one wondering why TNT canceled "Dallas."

"Variety" magazine pointed out that the show's ratings had dwindled, from seven million for its series premiere in 2012 to just 1.7 million for the season 3 finale, which has proven to be the series finale as well.

Of course, such a drop is to be expected of any show that launched with as much buzz as "Dallas" did — few shows can have the kind of name recognition and built-in audience as one that's based on one of the best-known TV dramas of all time.

Once that initial buzz wore off and the show developed its own fan base, its audience numbers remained relatively stable.

That left Deadline.com's TV writer Nellie Andreeva (among others) concluding that it's a question of who that audience was. "Given its pedigree, it's no surprise that 'Dallas' is older-skewing than some of TNT's other series such as 'Falling Skies' and 'The Last Ship.'"

She went on to say that this cancellation, as well as that of A&E's "Longmire," are "a hit to more mature viewers who feel betrayed by the networks whose focus is on the ad revenue-generating younger demographics."

It was reported that a research lab at the University of Texas just found out it is missing 100 human brains. Texas police don't know who has the brains, but they've already ruled out Gov. Rick Perry.

Scientists say they've found the oldest known engraving in human history from half a million years ago. It was a tic-tac-toe game, and Larry King won.

Climbing the ladder

You're fired up for season 7 of 'The Celebrity Apprentice'

By Lydia Peever
TV Media

Donald Trump stars in "The Celebrity Apprentice"

If you want to beat everyone else to the brass ring, you might have to step on a few heads to get there. So slick back your hair and polish up those boots because season 7 of "The Celebrity Apprentice" — the 14th installment in "The Apprentice" franchise — premieres with new episodes on back-to-back nights Sunday, Jan. 4, and Monday, Jan. 5, on NBC. The series then settles into its Monday night time slot starting next week.

Fans will be treated to a slew of new recruits once the whistle blows and competition becomes fierce — fiercely funny at least — as most of this season's cast is made up of comedians or entertainment personalities in one form or another. Be it athletes with colorful antics on and off the field or television personalities known for their over-the-top shenanigans, the household banter is what keeps fans tuning in to programs with group dynamics at play, and this season features a host of big-name stars with different backgrounds.

Vivica A. Fox ("Independence Day," 1996, "Kill Bill: Vol. 1," 2003), Lorenzo Lamas ("The Bold and the Beautiful," "Falcon Crest") and Keshia Knight Pulliam ("Tyler Perry's House of Payne") take a break from Hollywood for the show; baseball all-star Johnny Damon, football wide receiver Terrell Owens ("The T.O. Show") and Olympic gold medalist Shawn Johnson step off the diamond, off the field and out of the gym to put on business suits; and reality star Kate Gosselin ("Jon & Kate Plus 8") and singer Kevin Jonas of the Jonas Brothers also join the competition.

Another one of the stars competing in what's referred to as "The Ultimate Job Interview" is Gilbert Gottfried. A resident of "Hollywood Squares" and "Saturday Night Live," he voiced the parrot Iago in the Disney favorite "Aladdin" (1992), as well as other comedic roles, and his antics will most certainly be worth tuning in for. Those who got a rise out of his picking apart "The Donald" on "The Comedy Central Roast: Donald Trump" in 2011 will get an earful this time around as well.

Each celebrity battling it out in this business clash is playing for a charity of their choosing, and Gottfried is no different. His charity, Autism Speaks, is a leading global autism research and advocacy organization, dedicated to prevention, treatment and advocacy for the needs of individuals with autism and their families.

The story of how he chose Autism Speaks is quite touching. Speaking to "Teen Kids News," Gottfried said: "There was a news story in the New York Times of a man who had an autistic son. He couldn't speak to his son, but his son loved the movie 'Aladdin.' So one day he put on a parrot puppet and spoke in my voice to his son, and his son answered him. And they actually had a conversation."

Viewers will also see a special face in the first two episodes. "The Celebrity Apprentice 2" winner Joan Rivers ("Fashion Police," "Hollywood Squares"), who sadly and suddenly passed away at the age of 81 in September, serves as an adviser in the first two episodes this season. The episodes had been filmed before the late fashion icon passed away, and "The Apprentice" host and business mogul Donald Trump spoke to NBC's "Today" about Rivers and keeping her scenes in the show.

"She was fantastic [in the show]! ... We decided, in memoriam, we're going to do something and honor her during those two shows," Trump told "Today's" Matt Lauer. "She was so good, and I think she would have liked it that way."

It's tough to make it big in business, and sometimes you have to step on a few toes to make it to the top. Slick back your hair, polish up your boots and step into the boardroom as the seventh installment of "The Celebrity Apprentice" premieres with new episodes on back-to-back nights Sunday, Jan. 4, and Monday, Jan. 5, on NBC. The series then settles into its Monday night time slot starting next week.
