The first raid of Paris: What to expect in season 3 of the hit drama 'Vikings'

By Meagan Sylvester
TV Media

The historically accurate world in "Vikings" is a pop-culture thirst for the Dark Ages in all its primitive guts and glory. With a touch of romance and familial rift to strengthen the humility of these ancient nomadic characters, "Vikings" sets itself apart from the rest.

As the critically acclaimed series prepares to set sail on its third season, it's clear the Canadian-Irish production has developed a style of its own by scrapping the "adult only" content that appears popular on some of its rival dramas. With 10 Norseman ships and roughly 6,000 extras now on set, season 3 of the hit historical drama "Vikings" premieres Thursday, Feb. 19, on History.

For many fans, season 2 marked the end of a bloody era as Ragnar (Travis Fimmel, "The Baytown Outlaws," 2012, "The Beast") rose above his humble rankings by defeating King Horik (Donal Logue, "Gotham") in a final showdown, thus becoming king of his people (despite a few problems on the home front). But with great power comes great responsibility, and the new king is tasked with leading his people to the shores of Wessex, where the English have promised fertile agricultural land, but it's too soon to tell whether the proposed treaty will be honored.

This season, however, Ragnar's imperial ambition leads the Vikings beyond the isle of modern-day England and into the heart of western Europe. In what will be "the first raid of Paris," Ragnar and his band of Norseman will work together to infiltrate the mythical city of Paris, an urban center unlike any the Vikings have seen before.

"When we get to France, people are not going to expect what [the Vikings] find because the Franks — or the people who lived there at the time — were very Eastern," said show creator Michael Hirst of what's to come in season 3, at Comic-Con in July last year. "The Roman Empire had spread its influence down to France, so there's African influence and Egyptian influence. The court in Paris will be unlike anything you've ever seen."

And while Hirst said he initially anticipated captivating viewers who crave those testosterone-induced battle scenes every week, he is surprised by the number of people who are drawn to the cultural and spiritual aspects of the show. In fact, Hirst says there has been a shift in historical interest among viewers, making the show both possible and popular in today's vast vault of television.

"When the fans start talking about [the show], they talk more about the gods and the spiritual side than the battles and the violence," Hirst said of the show's rising popularity among both men and women. "I thought when I wrote it we might get a History channel male-skewed audience, and I've wondered whether they would go for this other intellectual side. But you know, they love it."

Hirst credits the recent interest in paganism and other forms of spirituality to major Viking exhibitions in London, England, and the writer — who works closely with historians and other consultants for accuracy — said this kind of fan-based excitement has reinforced his desire to portray the Vikings as they truly were: a democratic and advanced civilization.

"I want the show to challenge a lot of the stereotypes and social clichés about the Vikings. Their attitudes towards women, for example, were much more enlightened than the Saxons and the Franks, and they were more democratic," Hirst said of this continued theme in the upcoming season. "I wanted to show that they were interesting, subtle and, in many ways, profound people."

The show will also introduce a contrast of new characters, including Harbard, played by Canadian actor Kevin Durand ("Real Steel," 2011, "X-Men Origins: Wolverine," 2009). While Harbard is described as a lowly wanderer who turns up unexpectedly when Ragnar and the others are away, this new character has a profound effect on Queen Aslaug (Alyssa Sutherland, "Law and Order: Special Victims Unit," "The Devil Wears Prada," 2006), as well as Siggy (Jessalyn Gilsig, "Glee") and Helga (Maude Hirst, "The Tudors"), all of whom share the same dream.

Viewers will also be introduced to Emperor Charles of France, played by fellow Canadian actor Lothaire Bluteau ("24," "The Tudors"). According to a recent statement released by History, Charles is a powerful but troubled man who views battling the Vikings (no spoilers) as part of his spiritual destiny.

Fimmel will continue to lead the cast, along with Katheryn Winnick ("Love and Other Drugs," 2010) as Lagertha, an Earl and fierce shield maiden, and Clive Standen ("Atlantis," "Camelot") as Rollo, Ragnar's impulsive brother. But the personal and sometimes brotherly dynamics in the next season are expected to undergo some major changes, Winnick said at the same Comic-Con convention last year.

"You will see every character have their own arcs all within 10 episodes," Winnick said beside fellow castmate Alexander Ludwig ("The Hunger Games," 2012), who plays her son Bjorn. "It's really hard for a past lover or husband to see his ex-wife come into power in her own right. ... But do they still have that love for each other? Do they still have that chemistry? Maybe."

These are just some of the questions posed at the beginning of season 3, but viewers will have to tune in to find out what happens next in this Iron Age series of ocean navigators and explorers. Be sure to catch the season 3 premiere of "Vikings" when it airs Thursday, Feb. 19, on History.

Q&A hollywood

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: In "The Affair," did Noah kill Scott?

A: Well that's the big question, isn't it?

I must point out here that there are major, season-ruining spoilers ahead. If you've decided to watch this show late, having heard about its big Golden Globe wins in January, you'll probably want to stop reading now.

The end of the first-season finale sees Noah arrested for Scotty's murder. Scotty, for those who don't know but are willing to read it in a column instead of seeing it on TV, is the father of Noah's grandchild.

The arrest is a turning point for the show that opens up a number of new plot options for season 2, right when people were starting to fear that it would get repetitive (after all, a single extramarital affair is a side plot at best in most TV shows).

It opens things up because it is not at all clear that Noah killed Scott. The show is set up in a dual-perspective format, so that we see the same events from two different viewpoints — Noah's and Alison's (the two people having the "affair" that is the central premise of the show).

The events surrounding Scotty's death look very different from their two perspectives, and we don't actually see him getting killed. Series creator Sarah Treem admits that the facts will still be up in the air next season.

"If you think about the evidence the detective is arresting Noah on, he doesn't actually have that much to go on. So he needs more," she told E!

However, she says that she will suspend the "he said/she said" structure of the series at one point and actually lay out what happened to Scotty.

"That's the moment I'm pretty sure we will see objectively, but I think the way that we get there is going to be a bit of a puzzle, so when the audience arrives at it, they will discover it for themselves."

— do they hold any world records?

A: Amazingly, they do not, depending who you ask. And people only ever ask Guinness.

Jamie Hyneman and Adam Savage, also known as The MythBusters thanks to their long-running Discovery Channel show of the same name, do all sorts of strange things that most people would never attempt, doing them at a scale that most people could never attempt (it helps to have TV-production money bankrolling your giant-whatever project).

However, their names don't appear anywhere in the "Guinness World Records" book, the authority on world records since 1955.

Savage claims they set the record for the largest paintball gun in the world in 2008, and that they were going to be in the 2010 edition of the Guinness book for it, but they never were. As of now, there is no record in the book for the largest paintball gun.

It likely isn't breaking their hearts too badly, though, since setting the record would just have been a side benefit to their main task, which was to recreate the Mona Lisa in milliseconds using said gun (that's the sort of thing they do).

They were doing it to prove the power of a multi-core computer processor at a technology trade show. The 1,100-barrel gun was operated by such a computer, making it able to fire all of its barrels at once.

To advance to the Super Bowl, the Seattle Seahawks scored two touchdowns in the final two minutes and then won in overtime. I told my wife: "See, two minutes can be very exciting."

New England and Seattle will meet in the Super Bowl, and get this: I'm from New England and my wife is from Seattle. Which means no matter who wins the Super Bowl, I lose.

People are already talking about the new presidential race. According to a new poll that just came out, nearly six out of 10 Republicans want Mitt Romney to run for president. And so do 10 out of 10 Democrats.

For the first time ever, "The View" was beaten in the ratings by another daytime show called "The Talk." However, both shows are losing viewers to something called "The Off Button."

A Delaware police officer was caught on his dash camera dancing and lip-syncing to Taylor Swift's "Shake It Off." He is suspended without pay pay pay pay.

A new study says that children are suffering bad health effects from eating too much pizza. The study was explained in a pie chart which children immediately tried to eat.

I want to wish everyone a happy Martin Luther King Day! Most people celebrated by taking the day off of work. Except for the Indianapolis Colts, who did that yesterday.

The RNC released its first presidential debate schedule, which includes at least nine debates in different states across the country. As opposed to the Democratic debates, which will just be Hillary staring at her opponents until they burst into flames.

The Obamas invited 22 guests to the speech, including a former Cuban prisoner, an astronaut and a doctor. Either that or he was setting up the weirdest bar joke of all time.

The president also took a moment to wish astronaut Scott Kelly luck on his upcoming yearlong mission in space, and even said "make sure to Instagram it!" Yeah, if you thought your friends were annoying about posting sunrises, wait until you see the guy orbiting the Earth every two hours.

Yeah, Obama loves Instagram, 'cause after six years with Biden, it's the one thing he can still put a filter on.

Bite-sized bakers: Food Network whips up new episode of 'Kids Baking Championship'

Duff Goldman and Valerie Bertinelli as seen in "Kids Baking Championship"

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

It's been pointed out before, but it bears repeating: kids are "in."

Nowhere is this more obvious, interestingly, than in food-oriented TV. Seriously, a glance around the culinary television landscape shows kids popping up everywhere. The Food Network has "Rachael vs. Guy: Kids Cook-Off." Fox's "MasterChef Junior" has been a phenomenal success and was renewed for a fourth season just last month.

For the past two weeks, the Food Network has been airing "Kids Baking Championship" on Monday evenings, and, with only two episodes left to go, it's been a sweet little bite-sized treat. The competition started out with eight junior bakers. Now, with only five still remaining, things are only going to get even more heated in the kitchen.

Luckily, the kids have some great expertise on hand to critique their work. The "Ace of Cakes" himself, Duff Goldman, hosts alongside actress Valerie Bertinelli ("Hot in Cleveland"), and as one of the most recognizable and acclaimed pastry chefs in the country, Goldman is certainly the guy to have giving guidance in a baking competition.

In this week's episode, airing Monday, Feb. 16, the pint-sized competitors are tasked with baking two dozen puff pastry desserts. It's a simple challenge with a myriad of ways to go wrong — especially once the hosts announce a diabolical twist! They'll reveal a secret, savory ingredient that must be incorporated into the treats, and, with one kid going home, the stakes couldn't be higher.

And speaking of high stakes, the promised prize for the winner is as tempting as a slice of cherry pie. The winner of "Kids Baking Championship" will take home a whopping $10,000 and a complete set of Food Network bakeware products, but that's really just the beginning. The winner also lands a profile in "Food Network Magazine" and even the opportunity to create their own cake to be featured at Goldman's Baltimore cake shop, Charm City Cakes.

That's a prize package that any adult would be overjoyed to win. But, hands off: this one's for the kids. "Kids Baking Championship" airs Monday nights on the Food Network.

The best medicine

'Saturday Night Live' is lookin' good for 40 years young

By Lydia Peever
TV Media

Everyone needs a good laugh. We all have our favorite stops to get a giggle, and for some people, it is a weekly tradition as important as a grocery run or paying bills. Staying up late or scurrying home to catch that always-exciting announcement that once again Saturday night will be "Live! From New York!" is, at this point, a late-night institution.

As it has for 40 incredible years, one of the longest-running variety shows on American television aims to tickle us with the "Saturday Night Live 40th Anniversary Special." Catch this special three-hour live event when it airs Sunday, Feb. 15, on NBC, following the "40th Anniversary Red Carpet Special."

Broadcast live from Studio 8H in New York City's Rockefeller Center, "Saturday Night Live" premiered Oct. 11, 1975, and has hardly skipped a beat for generations since. We rolled our eyes or laughed out loud while watching the careers of so many actors and actresses in the making flourish into the icons they are today. Seeing musicians and actors out of their element for a bit is always worth the visit, and then we stay for side-splitting impersonations of the most (or least) cultured pop icon or president of the moment. Even the fake commercials have become part of the comedy zeitgeist.

But it all had to start somewhere, and it comes down to the longest-lasting "character" in the show: Canadian-born executive producer Lorne Michaels. As a quiet king of comedy television, his credits include "The Tonight Show

The cast of "Saturday Night Live"

Starring Jimmy Fallon, "Late Night With Seth Meyers," "Mulaney" and "Portlandia" and, of course, the crown jewel: "Saturday Night Live."

"The only show I ever really wanted to do was 'SNL,'" Michaels said in an interview with "New York Magazine" last year. "It was some sort of merging of my talent and my metabolism. It suited who I am and what I do really well, though whatever I was thinking it was, it kept mutating and growing. At first I didn't even know that the cast would be the thing everybody talked about. We thought it would be the hosts."

And, boy, grow and mutate "SNL" did. Sketch comedy and late-night shows changed substantially in the 40 years since the show's inception, as it revolutionized television and cemented itself in the annals of comedy greatness.

"There were no live shows when we started," said Michaels. "The last of them were in the early or mid-'60s. ... [NBC] wanted this new show to be live. No one had done a live show in forever. Now it's just part of the culture."

Of course, while it may now be part of the culture, things do change — and not just the cast or the Weekend Update anchors.

How people ingest the news (from which "SNL" takes a lot of its content) changes, what people are into changes and how people approach comedy changes.

"The things people are interested in have changed," Michaels said in the interview. "[SNL] was the baby boomers' coming of age. Now, nothing we do in politics tends to be shocking anymore. There's not the gasp of seeing the president made fun of, because the president is on TV all the time — he does daytime, he does late night. Some of the majesty is gone."

"It was much easier to do when everyone knew the references," he continued. "At that point, you had a complete unity generationally — in music, movies, politics and sports. It's much more fragmented now ... even news is fragmented now. There used to be much more cohesion. I don't know whether people know what's going on right now. ... So it's just harder to do comedy about that."

Warm up those funny bones on Sunday, Feb. 15, when the live, three-hour "Saturday Night Live 40th Anniversary Special" airs on NBC, following the "40th Anniversary Red Carpet Special."

Birdman

Decades after playing the superhero "Birdman" in a series of blockbuster movies, Riggan Thompson (Keaton) is a washed-up shadow of his former self and is even hearing voices of the Birdman. Desperate to revive and reinvent his stagnant career, he concocts a plan to write, direct and star in a Broadway adaptation of a Raymond Carver short story. However, his own insecurities, personal issues and mental instability soon become an issue on stage, and even lead to murder. Director: Alejandro G. Iñárritu. Stars: Michael Keaton, Emma Stone, Zach Galifianakis, Naomi Watts, Edward Norton. 2014. 119 min. Comedy.

The Theory of Everything

Perhaps the most famous and acclaimed physicist in the world, this is the story of how Stephen Hawking came by that distinction — and of the woman who fell in love with him and stood by his side during some of the most difficult moments of their young lives. When Hawking (Redmayne), a promising young astrophysics student, meets Jane (Jones), a beautiful literature student, at a party, sparks fly between them and the two are soon madly in love. However, even as his love life and career as a scientist begin to take off, a nightmarish medical diagnosis threatens to bring a premature end to everything he's ever wanted in life.

Director: James Marsh. Stars: Eddie Redmayne, Felicity Jones, Tom Prior, Sophie Perry, David Thewlis. 2014. 123 min. Drama.

Beltone

Helping the World Hear Better - Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow

I knew I had some hearing problems. But I didn't realize how much I was missing until I put my Beltone Hearing Aids in for the first time. WOW! What a blessing to hear again. Thanks Beltone.
