

The Trinity Liepod

NEVER ESTABLISHED

Now then-Wesleyan!

Tuesday, April 4, 2023

Volume MDCCCXXIII
Number XLIV

New Dress Code

AVENATTY LITE '25
FAST FASHIONISTA

2 page Learn about Trinity's new dress code to combat the Lululemon, bantam-clad attire plaguing campus.

Lil Pump's Brilliance

HEEB '25
MUSIC PRODUCTION MAJOR

11 page Hear the breakdown of Lil Pump's genius lyrical work and his iconic status in music and fashion.

TNDR 101 Breakdown

MAGALY MEDINA '25
TINDER CONNOISSEUR

12 page Hear about the new course in the Tinder department, teaching Trinity-bros how to perfect their profiles.

Fox News Alumni Return

CHATGPT '25
ESTEEMED WRITER

12 page Watters and Carlson return to teach a course in the writing, rhetoric, and media studies department.

Also in this Issue:

Just open it and find out

How to Get Away With Embezzlement: The Essential Guide for Trinity College Students

BERNIE MADOFF '23
SUCCESSFUL FINANCIER

It is no surprise that Trinity College is known for its masses of wealth. Every day, hordes of Jeep Wranglers fly down Crescent Street, launching themselves into the air on speed humps, seemingly forgetting that they were ever there. What is surprising, though, is how students get so wealthy here. There is a common lie that the culprit is something called "generational wealth." Not only is "generational wealth" a lie, it is a coverup for something much more fun and amusing.

The only real way students can swipe their American Express Platinum cards with no apparent reservations is through something so obvious it hurts: embezzlement. How you may ask? The crazy amount of funding Trinity gathers for student associations.

You see student activity funding goes through multiple organizations before it reaches the club. Starting in the pockets of parents, falling to SGA budget, and then partitioned off to SAIL to manage for irresponsible college student leaders, there are many places a couple thousand can just, you know, "slip" through the cracks. This is where you can take advantage! Just slowly funnel out some funds that are in limbo between SGA budget and student clubs, leaving them none the wiser! You can pocket upwards of $70,000.

Now it is critical that you stop at around this dollar amount. Think of it from administration's perspective, making national news for embezzlement doesn't bode well for the upcoming admissions cycle; therefore, if you stop before the amount taken surpasses the amount a typical student pays in tuition, you will not face any repercussions. Oh the power of PR.

So aspiring financiers who want to get a head start before Wall Street, remember to keep your embezzlements slightly less than the cost of attendance and you should be in the clear. Personally, I will continue to embezzle from the Tripod's publishing budget to cover my tab at The Russian Lady. Happy embezzling and happy Liepod!

Canada Goose Now Available in the Bookstore: Never Worry About Looking Poor Ever Again!

GREENWICH RESIDENT '95
MEMBER OF TRIN PR TEAM

Approximately seven-hundred gorgeous cerulean blue Canada Goose Frackets have arrived at the Trinity College Bookstore this past Monday. Priced modestly at $5,350.00, this fracket is lined with diamond buttons and embroidered with alabaster white flowers. Incorporating Canada Goose into the Trinity College Bookstore merchandise has been a long time coming! This idea came about in the Trinity College Parent Facebook group when Karen (Trinity alumnus '94) and Brad Banty (Trinity alumnus and AD president '93) received a phone call from their freshman daughter, Medusa Society 4:12 a.m. on Sunday morning.

"Despite the song 'I'm Losing It' blaring in the background and our daughter's slurred words, it seemed our innocent daughter, Medusa, had misplaced her Canada Goose Fracket. She told me she could not bare looking like a 'poor' for one second longer," said Brad, holding back tears at the mere thought of poverty.

"She begged us to overnight ship a new Canada Goose Fracket to her dorm; however, the issue is that it arrived at the mailbox on Monday morning rather than by the time she awoke in the morning!" said Karen with dismay.

Thus, a revolution was sparked at Trinity. Brad and Karen took to the Trinity Parent Facebook page to recount the tragedy. As expected, hundreds of parents liked the post and commented identical experiences with their own daughters. Naturally, hundreds upon hundreds of Trinity parents decided to pull money out of renovating the Trinity Chapel until this dire issue was resolved.

Within less than thirty seconds, President Berger-Sweeney issued an announcement via email that the Trinity College Bookstore has successfully partnered with Canada Goose, and that hundreds of frackets would be arriving on campus within the next thirty minutes.

"Our lives have completely changed since this announcement was made. Since this announcement yesterday, our daughter, Medusa, has been able to buy sixteen new Canada Goose frackets," said Brad, happily.

"We are just grateful that she can buy them as soon as she loses her others," said Karen with a smile.

The Trinity Liepod

Established in Who Knows
"Now then-Wesleyan!"

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF
J. JONAH JAMESON '23

MANAGING EDITORS
CHATGPT '23
JASPER.AI '25
YOUCHAT '25

PR MANAGER
SARAHANNE CONABEE '24

NEWS EDITORS
DADDY DON '26
STORMI DANIELS '24
AVENATTY LITE '25
"FIXER" COHEN '26

OPINION EDITORS
MATTIE GAETZ '25
MAJOR TAYLOR-GREENE '23
WRONG DESATANIS '24

FEATURES EDITORS
CUCKER TARLSON '24
ST. WATTERS WORLD '25

SPORTS EDITORS
ROBERT KARDASHIAN '23
OJ '24

A&E EDITORS
GALILEO GALILEI '23
JVLIVS CAESAR '25

STAFF WRITERS
THE TWELVE DISCIPLES OF
ALEX JONES

The Trinity Liepod has been published by the sleep-deprived students of Trinity College since...I still don't know—if it matters that much to you, Google it. Its staff members are committed to filling up 12 pages with decent shit. The Liepod is the best student newspaper—suck it Harvard. Bet you want to subscribe. It'll cost you $100 for one-semester, $200 for two; we promise you will get the same amount of enjoyment out of this as a similarly priced fake. Send us some PR:

123 Street St. Box 42069
Toad Suck, AR ZIPCODE
Phone: (888) 867-5309

Opinions expressed in Liepod editorials represent the views of the entire Trinity community. Those opinions are meant to offend all readers of the paper. Additionally, writing expressed in the Opinion section belongs to the entire Liepod staff and must be taken personally. We are never wrong.

The Trinity Liepod is never looking for student contributions in photography, writing, and graphic design. Please don't contact us or show up to our office behind a freshman laundry room.

All businesses requesting advertisement placement in the Liepod should be aware that advertisements in the paper are never successful. Advertising in the Liepod is not a logical method for your business to succeed financially. Please use your brain.

Trinity College
HARTFORD CONNECTICUT

Super unoriginal, don't follow us.

CORRECTIONS

You really think we would make mistakes? Well, we don't. Respect the rep.

WANT TO JOIN?

Initiation begins with a blood oath, ends with champagne shackles. After that, articles due midnight on Fridays or you suffer the consequences.

Letter to the Editor

Why Are You Always Picking on Rich Kids? They Allow You to Go Here

Dear Liepod Editors: (Liepod Editors (LE) here: thanks for reaching out to us, please take my comments as the formal response.)

Why are you always picking on rich kids? They are the one's paying tuition so you can join them at this "little ivy."

(LE: Rich parents love to use this term to persuade people that their child is actually smart enough to go to any ivy; well, Mrs. Nantucket, your son is not. He failed QLit.)

You parade in here with your scholarship. We know what that means: financial aid shivers with disgust.

(LE: Love that you don't know the difference between financial aid and scholarship. Guess that's because junior financier here didn't get an offer letter.)

And don't even start with that "your child didn't get an offer letter," (LE: dammit, they're onto us) my son went to Juniors for years and didn't receive an offer letter; it's because we aren't poor enough.

(LE: Phew. Listen here 'cause I am only saying this once. If your child goes to Juniors to then enter college at 21 and play at a D3 school, they suck at hockey.)

I'm tired of being labeled as privileged for having money. My daddy helped build this country, and my son should not be chastised for that.

(LE: Yep, I'm sure he built it.) My son calls me every night upset about the food on campus. He has to adjust to whatever that monstrosity you call food is. He is sick every night.

(LE: Yep, I'm sure he's sick because of food and definitely not the copious amounts of inhaled alcohol.)

Adjusting to college life is hard for my son, he's not used to this life. I mean laundry?? I haven't touched that stuff in years. Good thing his private driver is available to take it to a nice cleaning place.

(LE: I've seen too many of those private drivers in Mather circle. If you are that rich, just buy new clothes, stop taking up space in the semi-circle!)

Pair that with the torrents of hate this publication puts on his weak—but so broad sweetie!!—shoulders, and his 1.5

gpa last semester is explained.

(LE: Jeez, maybe he should switch to Business Administration.)

I mean he does have a pretty hard major considering he wants to take over his granddaddy's firm. Once I heard about the Business Admin decision, I was ecstatic.

(LE: No amount of tutoring can save him. Wait, how much did you spend on his private high school education?)

My son went to one of the best boarding schools in the country. Where did you go, like a public school?

(LE: I will never forget the shock on a fellow Trinity student's face when I said I went to a public school for high school, but it doesn't match the shock of when I heard how much private boarding school costs.)

My son is impressive and you should be happy that families like ours allow you to go to school here. Stop pestering the rich. We are the marginalized group of higher education!

—Concerned Parent and Generous Donator to the College

New Trinity Dress Code Issued

AVENATTY LITE '25
EAST FASHIONISTA

During a community-wide assembly on April 3, 2023, President Berger-Sweeney announced that all Trinity students will be required to follow a dress code starting at the beginning of the fall 2023 semester. The new dress code will significantly restrict the current fashion trends on Trinity's campus. However, the decision was made with widespread support from the Student Government Association, the Board of Trustees, and Greek Life. The tally was eighteen votes against the new code with two-hundred and thirty in favor. Administrators brought forward this new part of the Trinity Student Code of Conduct because they feel that the Trinity student body has fallen into a dull fashion culture. Professors are bored of seeing the same bantam-stamped sports gear and overpriced matching athleisure sets in their classrooms everyday. As President Berger-Sweeney announced in her address to the student body on Monday, "This is the administration's way of spicing things up here at Trinity."

Chad Clark '24, President of the Greek Life committee, expressed his excitement at the announcement, "I'm looking forward to having this new rule as a way to bring the campus together." However, Chad's excitement lessened when the Tripod reporter conducting the interview informed him that the new dress code ruled that students could no longer wear the same Trinity Athletics t-shirt and sweatpants to class every day. The new rule additionally bans Canada Goose jackets and Lululemon apparel, which comes at the disappointment of students from Greenwich, Westchester, and "just outside of Boston." Olivia Williams '25, an Ivy sister who summers at her family's Cape Cod home each year, responded to the news with a fearful glint in her eyes, "How do they expect to institute this? I don't have anything else to wear. JBS will be hearing from my father's firm."

An additional clause was included to prevent students from wearing open-toed shoes, such as flip-flops and sandals, from the month of October through April. The rule was added specially by Dean Trevor, who delivered a passionate address during the hearing for this new dress code, "I am sick and tired of seeing these kids walking around with flip-flops on this campus when it's thirty degrees outside. I shouldn't be seeing anyone's feet when it's raining outside. Put some socks on." His statement was met with thundering applause from both faculty and students.

While the new standards were met with widespread support from the majority of the Trinity community, those who are particularly fond of these banned fashion trends have come together against these changes. A new group called the Trinity Students for Mediocre Clothing is holding a march across campus on Thursday afternoon to protest the administration's censorship of their fashion choices. However, if past student movements and protests are much to go by, the only response Trinity Students for Mediocre Clothing will receive from administration is a campus-wide email saying, "Aw, sorry you feel that way, but there's nothing we can really do to change it!" At this point, the best thing these students can do is ask their parents to prepare for a back-to-school shopping spree on Fifth Avenue this August.

FAKE NEWS

Lil Pump's Genius Lyricism and Its Impact on Music

HEEB '25
MUSIC PRODUCTION MAJOR

In 2016, Gazzy Garcia, professionally known as Lil Pump, is one of the most prominent prevailing American artists from the SoundCloud Rap scene. Growing up in Miami, Florida, Pump's interest in music began with writing and producing all of his music, all starting at the baffling young age of 13 years old. Over the years Pump has become a prominent figure in both rap and social media communities. Youtube and SoundCloud became his preferred platforms to post on and began gaining popularity on.

In 2016 one of the most prominent prevailing American artists from the SoundCloud Rap scene, Lil Pump, made his debut. Releasing his single "Lil Pump," this viral sensation paved the way for his future success. His early lyrical brilliance and foreshadowing of future success can even be viewed in his lyrics. "Lil Pump, ooh, Lil Pump, yah, Lil Pump, ooh. Damn, Lil Pump, yeah, you be flexin'. God told me Lil Pump a blessin' (You a blessin')." Pump always believed in himself and faithfully listened to what God has told him, "Pastor told me, 'Boy, you off the purp' (God damn)." Pump references his drug use with "purple drank" or "lean," which is a combination of codeine, promethazine, and soda. Pump mentions a pastor advising him to cease using the substance, indicating that he is aware of the detrimental effects it may have on his health and well-being. Listeners can view how Pump has turned to the Catholic church in efforts to decrease and hopefully stop his drug usage. Pump lyrics speak to the importance of abstinence and sobriety. The Pope has even told Lil Pump that Jesus came to him in prayer and was getting biblical listening to "ESSKEETIT." Not only has Pump referenced his come-up, but he even subtly alludes to his extensive knowledge of automobiles, "Pull up to the scene, skrrt off in a Lambo (Skrrt, skrrt, skrrt)."

His hits didn't stop there. Later in 2016, "Feel Like Ouu" was released. In "Feel Like Ouu," "Left four bands in the trap (Four)." (Slang for $1,000 is a "band.") Pump may have meant to leave $4000 in the trap for his friends to use, spend $4000 on drugs or other items purchased in the trap, or he may have simply forgotten his $4000 in the trap and not cared. After all, $4000 is nothing in comparison to what Pump makes on average, "Made a couple bands in the kitchen (Kitchen)." Pump asserts that he can cook up narcotics like crack cocaine, which he then sells to make considerable amounts of money. This has earned him the honorable occupation of a street pharmacist. "Walk in the club and I flex like ouu" is repeated six times and "Pull up swerving in a coupe" is repeated 8 times in a 1:49-second song. Pump places an emphasis on his own success and shows the importance of self-respect and individuality, "Diamond on my wrist and it looks like glue," and "Maison Margiela all over my shoe." Advancing the notion that success can be attained through perseverance and dedication, Pump exemplifies how these efforts can attain respective financial security, but come at the cost of always being the center of attention because of his good looks and stylishness, "All they do is stare, ouu. Lil Pump really don't care, no."

THE GENIUS LIL PUMP (VULTURE)

This all led to his future signing with Warner Bros. Records in 2017. This signing launched him into the mainstream, establishing him as a major force in the music industry. "Gucci Gang" was released on August 31, 2017, and became a sensation. With over 1.9 billion streams, "Gucci Gang" peaked at number three on the US Billboard Hot 100 chart and earned multiple platinum certifications from the RIAA. "Gucci gang, Gucci gang, Gucci gang," being repeated skillfully 139 times, Pump's pioneering lyricism trumped him as one of the most revered and recognized artists. "Bxxch, your breath smell like some cigarettes (Cigarettes)": One of the most prevalent causes of bad breath and mouth cancer comes from smoking. This girl's breath is so bad that it would mimic that of a (heavy) smoker. Pump takes a stand verbally denouncing cigarettes and supports anti-smoking advocacy. "Bought some Red Bottoms, cost hella G's (Huh?)": Pump yet again exhibits his niche knowledge of fashion and economics. Pump pays homage to the fashion designer Christian Louboutin in "Gucci Gang" by specifying his ability to spend "hella G's," commonly known as thousands of dollars, on "Red bottoms" or luxury shoes with red-lacquered soles.

Despite much of the criticism which Pump receives, his fans see him as a symbol of self-expressionism, creativity, and lyricism, and as a fashion icon. Pump's masterful usage of social media in the music industry has allowed for his claim to fame and overwhelming success. Lil Pump often raps about his own success and ambition, promoting the idea that hard work, dedication, and self-respect can in turn change your life for the better. Like Pump anyone could achieve their goals, no matter what they are.

BREAKING NEWS: Wadiya Adopts True Democracy Amid Dictator's Search of Prominent Democracies

PROUD AMERICAN '25
WADIYA CORRESPONDENT

The Republic of Wadiya, a North African country, decides to truly and genuinely adopt a democratic system. Admiral General Aladeen, their dictator, decided to go back to the first known democracy and see how they did it. He learns that the word democracy was invented in Greece and that it comes from the two words (demos) which means people and (kratos) meaning rule. So democracy is the rule of the people. The General then questions whether ancient Greece considered all of its inhabitants people. To the general's surprise, ancient Greek men, like what their successors did with slavery, found a loophole to exclude the women, children and slaves. This pushes the General to look for a true manifestation of democracy elsewhere, as the ancient Greek version did not differ much from Wadiya's. He thought that there is no better place to look for a true democracy than the land of the free. A dear friend of his reminds him of a speech he had written for him in which the General points out that democracy in the US is very similar to the governance in Wadiya where "1% of the people have all the nation's wealth." A democracy in which the media appears free but "is secretly controlled by one person and his family." The list goes on and includes how the US lied to invade Iraq, steal its oil and destroy any potential PanArab initiatives; how the US prisons are filled with "one particular group"; and how it uses "the media to scare people into supporting policies that are against their interest."

Sad and frustrated, Aladeen decides to look somewhere near: the only democracy in the Middle East. Aladeen is soon to be disappointed again. He finds it unfortunate how the state of Israel (i.e., The Jewish State) cannot be a democracy if it commits crimes of apartheid and persecution as "The Human Rights Report: A Threshold Crossed" has shown. This was particularly disappointing to Aladeen as he quite liked the idea of having the fairer citizens maintain domination over the rest of the racial groups. Aladeen then decides to look for answers in The Great Britain of the United Kingdom. Aladeen is most fond of this democracy as he learns that the royal family is not required to pay inheritance tax and King Charles "will pay nothing on properties, jewels and investments that probably are worth hundreds of millions of dollars." Aladeen is once again disappointed to know that, although Norway, Sweden, Denmark and the Netherlands alongside the UK still live under a monarchy, they are one of the top ten democracies around the world. He wonders if he could maintain a monarchy and still be called a great democracy in North Africa. Aladeen puts in all of what is left from his hope in the peaceful part of North America. To his surprise, Canada is not an exception to Bahamas or Australia in sharing sovereignty with the UK. Aladeen, despite—or maybe because of—his uncivilization and simple-mindedness, realizes the impossibility of complete decolonization, including that of indigenous people, as long as Canada remains ruled by the same royal family that massacred indigenous people in the first place.

Aladeen's journey in looking for full democracy leaves him completely puzzled. He simply does not understand how Wadiya is not ranked a top democracy, nor does he know where or whom to seek help from. He realizes he is a stereotypical creation of western powers which will later invade Wadiya in a mission to end his terrorism. He shaves his beard and dies alone.

TNDR 101: Mastering the Trinity-Bro Tinder Profile

MAGALY MEDINA '25
TINDER CONNOISSEUR

Course Description:

Swipe right on the chance to elevate your game and delve deep into the cultural and sociological phenomenon that is the most prominent Tinder presence on campus, also known as the Trinity-Bro. Join this exclusive group of students and seize the chance not only to investigate the emergence of this sub-genre of male personage, but learn how to become one yourself. The class includes interactive lectures, seminars, panels, visits from outside speakers, and several field trips to help you build your own Trinity-Bro Tinder Profile and kickstart your dating app experience.

Title: Mastering the Trinity-Bro Tinder Profile

Department: Tinder (TNDR)

Career: Undergraduate

Instructor's Permission Required: Yes

Grading Basis: Regular

Units: -1.00

Enrollment limited to: Cisgender white men

Start date: Wednesday, January 25, 2023

End date: Friday, May 12, 2023 (or whenever your profile gets reported/deleted)

Mode of Instruction: In Person

Schedule: WRF: 6:30PM-8:00PM, S: 9:00PM-00:00AM, Koepfel Community Sports Center

Prerequisite(s): Average ability in a sport of choice, unsupported self-confidence, light-hearted misogyny. A grade of C- or better in 2014 Vine Culture

Distribution Requirement: Meets no one's standards

NOTE: Having a successful academic performance in the course does not necessarily guarantee social and/or romantic success via the Tinder App™

Breakdown of Final Grades

- Participation: 15%
- Photography: 25%
- Meme Culture Oral Examination: 20%
- Hook-Up Culture Multiple Choice Exam: 20%
- Pick-Up Lines Presentation: 15%
- Final Paper on Feminism: 5%

Course Schedule

This schedule is tentative and will depend on the performance and consequent success or failure of the course participants on the Tinder App™.

Week 1. Introduction to the Course

- "Pick ya' chicks"
- Hying yourself up: Be your biggest fan

Week 2. Why you shouldn't be ashamed of your toxic masculinity

- What even IS self-examination?: An honest discussion

Week 3. Introduction to Meme Culture

- The rebirth of 2010s dank
- Appreciating doomer

Week 4. Meme Culture (continued)

- The role of memes in Tinder texting
- Meme Culture Oral Examination

Week 5. Creating your Tinder Profile

- Writing a good bio for beginners
- Field Trip 1: Getting our heights measured

Week 6. Creating your Tinder Profile (continued)

- Emoji dos and don'ts
- Mandatory Lecture: "The Eggplant Emoji: A Psychosexual Nightmare"

Week 7. Creating your Tinder Profile: Photography

- Understanding the Trinity-Bro aesthetic
- Field Trip 2: Emblematic blank-stare-convenience-store-Snapchat-selfie

Week 8. Photography (continued)

- Field Trip 3: Sportsman-in-his-element photoshoot
- Extra Credit for Hockey players and Trinity College registered athletes
- Field Trip 4: Fraternity house party bro-embrace portrait photoshoot

Spring Break

Week 9. Swiping week (no classes)

Week 10. On Women

- In-class Socratic dialogue: What do women want?
- Mandatory Panel: "Ask a Taken Man → What do women look for in a relationship?"

Week 11. Exams

- Hook-Up Culture Multiple Choice Exam

Week 12. Swiping week (no classes)

Week 13. Presentations

- Pick-Up Lines Presentations

Week 14. Results week (one-on-one meetings)

- Finals Week
- Final Papers on Feminism due at 5:00pm on Thursday, May 11

Fox News Trinity Alumni Return to Teach Media Course

CHATGPT '25
ESTEEMED WRITER

Esteemed Trinity alumni Jesse Watters '01 and Tucker Carlson '91 are set to return to campus for the Fall 2023 semester. The two alumni, who both studied history at the College, will be co-teaching a course in the writing, rhetoric, and media studies department. Hoping to ensure the legacy of Trinity churning out prestigious journalists, such as Watters and Carlson, a collaborative effort between President Berger-Sweeney and the Board of Trustees brought the course, titled Introduction to Fake News, to fruition.

"Trinity is proud of its alumni, especially these nice two young boys and how they represent our College's true core values: lying, cheating, and stealing," said President Berger-Sweeney. The President also shared that in her conversations with the two "journalists," they spoke fondly of their time at Trinity and always felt like they fit in with the community.

"Tucker speaks so highly of his time here and his studies. One thing he loved about his history courses was how everyone he learned about was just like him: a white, wealthy man born into the right family," she continued.

The course, which is open to all students but with a preference for those with an economics major and formal organizations minor, will teach students "the basics of good journalism." Such skills include: fact-checking nothing, tweeting everything that comes to mind, blindly following the pack, and appearing as if you are not allowed to be alone with women and children.

Besides the hopes of continuing Trinity's legacy, motivated of course by the upcoming Bicentennial, a recent interaction between Watters and two Trinity students tugged at the heart strings.

"There was no politics when I went to Trinity," Watters explains. His fear is that students are becoming too smart, reading and engaging with a variety of sources, and developing critical thinking skills.

"If this keeps up, who is going to vote Republican?" Watters questions, fear in his eyes. When asked what helped him become the conservative gentleman he is today, Watters said that binge drinking, skipping class, and wearing "salmon" colored shorts were all essential parts of his journey.

The Tripod reporter also asked Watters how having a public affair fit into his superior conservative morals and family values, to which he responded with silence and bulging eyes.

Carlson, feeling he was not getting enough attention from the Tripod reporter, shared that the class would have several special credit assignments "outside the traditional curriculum." Such opportunities include a special point system, honoring students for being "politely asked to leave their boarding school," being asked where their father works, and for using "summer" as a verb.

The course will be held in the Life Sciences Center, which the two anchors agreed is the building that best embodies masculinity on campus.

"There's no rainbow flags on that one," Carlson said of the selection. The building also resembles a prison, with very little natural light, which is what the two believe the education system should be like.

Required texts for the course include Andrew Jackson's inauguration speech, the Ronald Reagan autobiography, all of Trump's Twitter, and Mein Kampf.

(LEFT) TUCKER CARLSON (RIGHT) JESSE WATTERS (NEWSWEEK)