Northrop: more demands

Gloomy economic forecasts, rising health and welfare costs, and new demands on community colleges for additional services are creating a bleak financial outlook, Kevin Northrop, vice-president, Fiscal Administration, said recently.

In 1993, state funding of community colleges will be down again by $867,400 (.4 percent) although they educate two thirds of the college students in the state, Northrop said.

In addition, the state owes suppliers $1 billion for goods and services it has ordered but not paid for. And the lapse in state late payments to suppliers and community colleges is getting longer, which means that both lose money on lost interest and investments, Northrop said.

While state funding decreases, expensive new demands are being directed to community colleges to prepare a more highly skilled and motivated work force, increase their productivity and accountability, and create local centers of excellence. Demands to the colleges also are to serve educationally underprivileged groups and provide skilled workers in expensive fields such as telecommunications.

"If we're not over there (in Springfield) pushing for our projects, others are going to get the money," Northrop said. "It's that simple because that's how it works." Parkland assigned him to work with the Illinois Community College Trustees Association during the 1992 legislative season as part of the ICCTA action team.

The Education Constitution Amendment would require the state to fund more than 50 percent of K-12 education. No mention is made of higher education support. Cost is expected to be $1.8 billion.

"What scares me," Northrop said, "is if we don't raise taxes, where is the $1.8 billion going to come from?" He predicted if voters do not approve the Educational Amendment in November, "it will come back."

Parkland's faculty and staff are growing older, Northrop pointed out, and the SURS (State University Retirement System) early retirement plans are getting a lot of attention.

Three SURS plans are currently being considered: a "5 + 5" six-month window plan, a "2.2" table adjustment plan with a five-year window, and a "2.2" permanent table adjustment.

The "5 + 5" plan would allow a retiree to purchase up to 5 years of age and 5 years of experience for the SURS table placement. The "2.2" plans would alter the basic table, allowing a 2.2 percent benefit for each year of service.

In response to a question from the audience about probable passage of a SURS early retirement plan, Northrop said, "My crystal ball is cloudy and cracked, but as I look in it, I see passage of some plan is probably not coming this fall, but it has a better than average chance in spring."

Another issue is the lack of SURS retiree medical insurance coverage to community college retirees, a benefit enjoyed by University employees.

Community college retirees do not have a lobby in Springfield, "and they need one," Northrop said. "You have to have people working for your side."

Northrop presented a list of more than 30 probable 1993 legislative issues. Topics included the Adult Education governance transfer to the ICCB, restriction of the use of part-time faculty, state funding, SURS Retirement proposal, and unfunded mandates.

Northrop spoke at a workshop on Oct. 22. He said he will offer another session on financing during the semester break.

Development Center; doubts remain

By John Hoffmeister
Editor in Chief

Plans to redraw the Child Development Center are on schedule after bids had failed to meet the proposed allocation of $405,000, according to Martin Koch, architect, Henneman, Raufesen and Associates, Inc.

But John Albin, chairman, Parkland Board of Trustees, feels further progress on the Development Center will be delayed.

"It's unreal" that contract renegotiations and architectural redesign will be completed within a month, he said.

The low bid came in $132,000 over Board recommendations.

Lauri Frichtl, director, Child Development Center, said she is disappointed that the bids came in so high.

And although the Center may not be completed until early summer, Frichtl does not foresee any delay in her organizational plans, she said.

Hiring staff "will depend on how many classrooms we have available," Frichtl said.

Original plans called for the Center to accommodate 56 children.

Koch said the redesign will not affect the location of the proposed Development Center.

He said bids were presented by several different agencies as required by federal law.

"There were 30 or 40 bids for general contractor, electrical work, plumbing, heating and air conditioning, and fire protection," he said.

Center planners had hoped construction costs would come in at $65 per sq. ft.; the lowest bid submitted was $84.50 per sq. ft.

The plan, presented to the Board Oct. 14 called for a 5,960 sq. ft. Center to be built.

Koch said the involvement of the Child Development Center Committee, the Board of Trustees and the Parkland Foundation influenced the outcome of the final bids. He said the plans were drawn to satisfy all those involved in the Center planning.

Albin said a special session of the Parkland Board may be called if progress is made before the next Board meeting, Nov. 18.

Breaking the barriers through knowledge

By John Hoffmeister
Editor in Chief

"People are people so why should it be, you and I should get along so awfully." Depech Mode

Minority students at colleges and universities are helping to shape and mold attitudes and opinions throughout the country by providing a valuable resource for diversity.

Editorial

At Parkland, and hundreds of other institutions of higher learning, cultural diversity has been an integral part of the learning experience. For here in the learning environment, minds young and old clash in an atmosphere ripe for attitude adjustment.

Bonds that have tied cultures for generations, no matter how seemingly frail or insignificant, can be strengthened through learning. But learning, on the other hand, is not inherited. The potential is there in every one of us, but it takes something else: the aptitude for open-mindedness.

Being open minded is not a brain twisting puzzle, incapable of being solved. It means accepting diversity and gaining valuable insight and knowledge from the experience.

Not all experiences are going to be positive, every one has an opinion, but, on the other hand, what is gained from shunning the opinions of others? Accepting ones views and learning from them, whether you agree or not, will help all in the long run.

At the Prospectus minority opinion is given the same respect as anyone else's.

And this is why the staff is considering running a regular news and opinion section written by students, minority or otherwise, concerning minority issues.

It is the opinion of this publication that the means of a voice be given to those who otherwise are not outspoken in the community.

Although only an idea, the possibility exists, but not without your input. So drop by and let us know how you feel.

Rally for Make a Difference Day Nov. 14

By Sue Petty
Feature Editor

Parkland College will hold a rally to collect donations for Make a Difference Day on Nov. 14 from 10 a.m. to noon.

Chris Hawk, Health, Safety, and Security, said students, faculty and staff may bring items to the gym on that day.

"However, if people would like to donate items before that time, they can bring them to Room X202," Hawk said.

Hawk said that the college would like to concentrate on collecting disposable razors and saving cream. However, other items such as toothpaste, shampoo, diapers, deodorant, underwear, towels, and blankets are needed.

The donated items will go to eight different shelters in the area: Men's Emergency Shelter, Women's Emergency Shelter, Salvation Army's overnight and drop-in daytime shelter, St. Jude's Catholic Worker House, A Woman's Place, Roundhouse, Crisis Nursery, and Rantoul Community Services Center.

Brrr... Time to winterize your car

Ronald Pew
Prospectus Staff Writer

That chill down your spine is sending you two signals: it's getting colder, and it's time to winterize your car.

Mike Donovan, Automotive Technology instructor, says, "Typically, motorists should follow the manufacturer's recommendations."

The main things to check are cooling system, belts, tires, all fluids, and spark plugs, he said.

The cooling system is a very important part of the car and must be in good condition before winter sets in. Donovan said, "Check for leaks and worn or damaged hoses. Antifreeze should be checked, noticing the freezing point." New antifreeze should be mixed 50-50 with water, "which will give you a freezing point of -34 degrees," Donovan said. Again, he recommended reading the instructions.

Belts should be checked, not only for worn or broken spots, but to be sure the tension is correct. Donovan said if there is more than one-quarter inch play or movement, the belt should be tightened carefully.

"Changing the oil, checking all fluid levels and spark plugs, is a good idea," Donovan said. Checking the tires, including the spare, is essential.

"The annual tune up is a thing of the past," Donovan said, "because of how cars are made today." These checks are done by professionals, (lube services, garages.)

Variety show Nov. 18 at PC theatre

The Parkland Theatre will be the setting for the All School Variety Show on Nov. 18, starting at 7 p.m.

According to Sandy Chabot, headliners for the show include: The Other Guys from U. of I., Parkland Madrigals, and the newly formed Gospel Ensemble, which is under the direction of David Taylor.

Chabot added that other featured acts will include; Monica Ludwig, soprano; Kim Underwood, country singer; Cliff Senn "with a dramatic surprise;" Brock Thornsborough, baritone; and another country singer, Dan Grady.

Jed Gerdes, Wally Tatar, Mars Bigby, Vanya Carey, Ira Liebowitz, and Tasha Turner will also entertain the audience.

"Give yourself a study break and come on out for the show. It is guaranteed to set your hands a clappin'," Chabot said.

Burns, 96, called "sexy"

By Ira Liebowitz
Prospectus Staff Writer

Vaudevillian, dancer, author, legend, theatrical icon.

Such terms describe a recent headliner at the Assembly Hall who, like the prophets of old, passes along a historical torch to those yearning for a taste of nostalgia.

Who? George Burns. Burns, now 96 and touted as "America's oldest active entertainer," treated the audience to some wit and wisdom culled from a career which flourished during a now almost extinct golden age of entertainment. Walking gingerly on stage before an orchestra, the dapperly dressed patriarch paused to savor a standing ovation.

"As a rule, an entertainer gets a standing ovation at the end of a show. You were afraid I wouldn't be around that long. But, I will...I have on a new toupee," said the cigar-wielding performer, early on establishing a comfortable rapport with fans of all ages who filled about a third of the seats.

Burns, kibitzing that his vocal prowess rivaled that of Frank Sinatra, sang several vintage songs with such obscure titles as Helen Brown, and Old Bone. He once elicited a few sighs of amazement after noting that one song he'd first sung back in 1916, vowing to keep on until "I get it right."

Burns' repertoire also included newer numbers as his sentimental ballad, Wish I Was Eighteen Again and the Sinatra classic, Young at Heart. Advised the father of two and grandfather, "You can't help getting older, but you don't have to get old," he said.

Some of Burns' lines have become well worn, if not down-

George Burns

Burns has specialized in jokes on his being a senior citizen, such as, "The first time I sang that song was at Caesar's Palace. It was Julius's favorite." Or, "Why shouldn't I be a country singer? I'm older than most countries."

Asked about rumors of his dating young women, Burns remarked, "I take them to a nice restaurant. I always manage to get a nice table in a quiet corner...so they can do their homework. If they get all As, I take them out again; if they flunk, I take out their mothers."

Fritzi Frary, from Prophetsville, who also attended the performance, said, "I think he's fantastic—and he's sexy."

About his finesse Burns said, "Believe me, there isn't a thing I can't do now that I didn't do when I was 18—which gives you an idea how pathetic I was. I was never a great lover when I was young. The only thing I wanted to get into was show business."

Certainly Burns' entire life, and particularly his last 20 years, encompass the American dream, inspiring both the young and the young at heart.

Don't believe the hyperbole Burns shells out. "I remember when I was born, the doctor kept slapping me, but I kept right on singing. Finally, he put me in an incubator and turned off the heat," Burns says flippantly.

"It's a good thing I was smoking a cigar, or I would have froze to death."

Burns, who claims to smoke 15 to 20 stogies a day, added, "Me without a cigar is like Elizabeth Taylor blushing on one of her wedding nights."

Early in his career, the versatile performer claims to have changed his name and stage partner almost weekly. For the act of José and Delores (Burns being José) he donned spats and a sash. "I bought the whole outfit for $17.50. It would have cost $22.50, but the bolero jacket had a bullet hole in the back."

Burns joked that his partner was so bowlegged that, "Every time she sat down it looked like someone stole a cello."

In 1923, a stabilizing phenomenon happened: he met Gracie Allen. Three years later, they wed, and until her retirement in 1958, they collaborated on radio and TV shows, Burns playing "straight man" to the Zany Allen. Of the duo, George acknowledged Gracie to have been more popular. "By the time I found out I had no talent, I was too big a star to do anything else."

Burns again shows devotion to his eternal love in a new recording, Gracie, the Love of My Life on an album collaboration with singer Bobby Vinton.

After mourning Gracie's death, Burns' penchant to appear before the spotlights beckoned his return to perform in night clubs and theaters, this time with celebrities including Dorothy Provine, Jane Russell and Carol Channing. Channing, it seemed, echoed Burns' bent to live show business. He once commented that before Channing would leave a powder room, she needed applause.

In 1975, Burns' career took a dramatic turn. Then at age 79, just months after undergoing open heart surgery, he accepted a main part along with Walter Mathau in the movie version of the Neil Simon play, The Sunshine Boys. Initially, Burns hesitated about taking the part of a feisty retired vaudevillian Al Lewis, which had been reserved for friend Jack Benny, who died suddenly.

Burns claims that the script of The Sunshine Boys "fit me like a glove." The Motion Picture Academy agreed and awarded him Best Supporting Actor.

After The Sunshine Boys, Burns landed roles in the films Oh, God! Oh, God, -- Book II; You Devil; and 18 Again.

"I found out the most important thing about acting is honesty," Burns said. "And if you can fake that, you've got it made," he added.

Portraying God sounds demanding. "It wasn't easy to play God. I had to get written permission from Frank Sinatra. The first time they asked me to play God I was a nervous wreck. We were both about the same age, but we grew up in different neighborhoods."

As with other actors, sometimes a character for Burns carries over into real life. "In a store some woman said, 'What a beautiful day.' I said, 'Thank you.'"

Incredibly, Burns notes that movie-maker Jack Warner is contemplating adding another sequel to the Oh, God series. "Why shouldn't I play God? Anything I do at my age is a miracle," Burns said.

Most people know that Burns has an engagement to perform in London for his hundredth birthday. Will he ever retire? "I'm gonna stay in show business until I'm the only one left," Burns said.

"It's a very exciting life. I expect the second half to be just as exciting," Burns said.

Opening the show for George Burns, Medicare 7, 8, or 9 Dixieland Jazz Band performed such songs from entertainments golden age as You're Nobody Till Somebody Loves You and Ira Gershwin's I've Got a Crush On You.

The ensemble, currently chosen from 35 persons associated with the U of I, has enjoyed recognition by the governor and state legislature. It won an Illinois Arts Council Award for its contribution to the arts in Illinois. The band, established in 1969, is comprised of artists whose average age is 72.

Parkland's baseball team doing aerobic work-outs during off season.

Harriers end season with Danville meet

By ROBB MATHIAS
Prospectus Sports Writer

The Parkland harriers' season will be complete on Halloween when the Cobras go to Danville to compete in the Region 24 cross-country meet.

The meet begins at 10:30 a.m. at the DAAC course. Where the team finishes and how the individuals run as far as time is concerned will determine whom the Cobras will send to represent them at the National Junior College Athletic Association's cross country meet on Nov. 21 in Tempe, Ariz.

To prepare for the Region meet, the Cobras took two weeks off between their last meet and the Region meet. The Cobras also prepared for the Region meet by competing in the University of Wisconsin Parkside Invitational in Kenosha, Wis. There the Cobras finished 23rd of 32 teams. Most of those teams were four-year colleges or universities.

Top individual finishers for the Cobras were Iren White, Pat Stines, and Todd Moore. Coach Ron Buss, Cobra head coach, was very pleased with White's time of 28:34. White had been injured, and the UW Parkside was the first meet for White in nearly a month.

Other top finishers were Stines, who finished in a time of 29:20, and Moore, who finished in a time of 30:02.

PC 9 ends season : 14-6

By Robb Mathias
Prospectus Staff writer

The fall baseball season was a success, according to Rod Lovett, head coach for the Cobras. The Cobras' record was 14-6 for the fall season.

The number of victories alone was not the reason Lovett called the season a success. He was very pleased with the improved control of sophomore pitcher Eric Anderson.

Anderson's performance earned him the number one pitcher's spot for the spring season. The fall season also helped establish a pitching rotation for the spring season. Lovett believes his top three pitchers are Anderson, Willy Hilton, and Steve Ekhooff.

Another aspect of the fall season Lovett considers positive included the offense of Kerry Cheely, a sophomore from Villa Grove. Not only did Cheely swing a big stick at the plate, but he looked more comfortable in the field as well after making a position switch. Lovett believes he is a natural second basemen and not a shortstop where he played last spring.

Another offensive contributor includes Phil Terry.

Two freshman, Kevin Harbour and Matt Broom, were virtually unheralded at the beginning of the season. Now, according to Lovett, the two have put themselves in a position to get some playing time in the spring.

Because most of these players have been playing baseball since last January, at the end of the fall season Lovett gave the team a week off before starting conditioning.

After the rest, the players meet four times a week to do aerobics to keep in condition and keep them together as a team. Also, as part of their conditioning, the players lift weights. The team also attends study halls and are monitored on class attendance.

Men's spikers hold tryouts

Parkland men's volleyball will hold tryouts Nov. 7, 1 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Under first year head coach John Gerdts, the men's spikers will begin their third season with an informational meeting Nov. 5 at noon, P104.

The current coach of Cerro Gordo girls volleyball, Gerdts will lead the Cobras into the 92-93 season with a wealth of coaching experience.

Under former Cobra men's spiker coach Tom Barnard, Gerdts, 23, assisted a volleyball squad during the Prairie State games, and played under Barnard the past two seasons.

Although no schedule has been posted, most of the teams competition will come from four year universities and colleges in the northern counties, Gerdts said.
