Student election results

by Susan Herrel
Editor-in-Chief

Four students were elected to fill the Senator positions during the recent college-wide elections on Sept. 22 and 23. They are:

Jewel Kelly Jr-124 votes

James Harden III-112 votes

Yolanda Torres-88 votes

Lovanese Malone-115 votes

A total of 178 votes were tallied during the two day elections.

"Fall elections are typically a smaller election process compared to the spring," said Shelly Stoltenberg, activities program manager.

Several other students received votes. Anyone wishing to contest the results must do so in person or writing to Student Government by 2:00 p.m., Sept. 24.

Macintosh discounts available

by Tina Henderson
Assistant Editor

Parkland students and faculty will be able to purchase computers at a discount as a result of a Collegiate Partnership program the College has set up with Apply Computers.

According to Larry Gilbert, instructor and monitor of the Computer Lab, students and faculty can save up to approximately 40 percent on different items.

Purchasing requirements are that students be enrolled in courses leading to a degree or certificate from Parkland. Entering first-year students are eligible.

To place an order, students need to contact Gilbert or Mike Ruckman, Parkland instructor and monitor of the Music Computer Lab.

Payment may be made by Mastercard, Visa, or cashier's check. Delivery takes takes four to six weeks. Students will need a current I.D. and must sign an affidavit which also is signed by Gilbert or Ruckman.

Currently at discount is the Mac Color Classic 4/80, Mac LC II 4/80, Mac LCIII 4/160, Mac Centris 610 4/80, Mac Centris 650 8/230, Apple Power Book 145B 4/80, and Apple Power Book 230 4/120.

The offer is good through Oct. 15 when another discount will be offered.

Additional tuition charges

by Tony Neagus
Prospectus Staff Writer

Approximately 600 non-district students have been notified that they will be responsible for additional tuition charges.

Non-resident tuition is determined by an annual audit of the College. The amount represents the difference between the regular tuition and state support and what it actually costs the College to provide instruction.

The audit covers the period from July 1 through June 30 of each year and usually is completed by the following September.

Non-resident students who are residents of Illinois received bills in July of $100.93 per credit hour; this amount has been increased to $111.72 per credit hour.

Non-residents of Illinois but U.S. residents paid $152.81 per credit hour but owe $166.19, and non-resident alien students paid $157.81 but owe $166.19 per credit hour.

Students with chargebacks will not be affected by the change because the amount of the increase will be billed to their own community college districts.

Jon Surma executive director/Business Services, said due dates for payment may be extended to the end of the semester if students request this additional time for payment.

Board ok's $39.9 mil. budget

by Susan Herrel
Editor-in-Chief

Parkland's final budget of $39.9 million changed very little from the tentative budget presented to the Board of Trustees in July, Kevin Northrup, vice president for Fiscal Services, told Board members Sept. 22.

Dr. Zelema Harris, president of the College, introduced Brad Hastings, director of Counseling, who is the new president of the Parkland College Association.

John Albin, chairman of the Board, introduced Wayne Busboom and Roland Smith, who are running for seats on the Board.

Members authorized funding a five-year capital improvement plan for an estimated cost of $2,796,300. It will include interior lighting renovations in the library and X wings, college-wide condenser-compressor replacement, accessibility improvements, building of the state-funded permanent Child Development Center, and projects yet to be determined.

The Board approved a Ford Motor Company-Parkland College Automotive Student Service Educational Training AAS degree program. The curriculum will include periods of classroom work alternating with periods of full-time work experience at a Ford or Lincoln-Mercury dealership.

The Board awarded a bid for printing the Prospectus for '94, '95 to East Central Communications, Inc., Rantoul, for an estimated $15,000 annually.

Coming at' cha...

Andy Hutson, 10, of Champaign, a fifth grader at St. Matthew's, waits with Halloween Queen to enter competition at the Champaign Equine Event on Sept. 26 at Parkland. The event sponsored by Parkland and the Champaign Park District drew about 150 riders and more than 2,000 spectators. Donations were accepted for construction of an equine facility on the Parkland campus that will include indoor and outdoor arenas, a classroom, laboratory, and 12 box stalls. The handicapped-accessible facility is designed for use by students and community members.

U. of I. Homecoming tickets available

Student Government and the Parkland Alumni Association have reserved a block of 50 tickets for resale to Parkland students, alumni, and staff for the U of I Homecoming game Oct. 30.

The seats are on the 30-yard line in the west upper deck.

The game ticket includes a ticket to the Parkland tailgate tent. Separate tailgate tickets may be purchased.

For tickets: Cathy Knight, secretary, Student Support Services, X 153.

Pres. Phil Carter says:

'Allow student trustee to vote'

by Susan Herrel
Editor-in-Chief

"I want to keep the student's position strong," said Phil Carter, Student Government president. He was speaking in reference to his suggestion at the Board of Trustees meeting last Wednesday to allow the student trustee advisory voting privileges.

John Albin, president of the Parkland Board requested that the issue be put on the October agenda.

Additionally, Carter is lobbying at the state level, with State Representative Tim Johnson to mandate legal votes for student trustees on all Illinois community college boards.

According to the Illinois Community College Handbook, a student trustee has "all of the privileges of membership, (to the Board) including the right to make and second motions and to attend executive sessions, other than the right to vote."

Carter initially wants the Board to allow student trustees an advisory vote. His goal is to make that vote a legal one.

"This is the trend of the future," said Carter. "I don't want Parkland to be behind the times."

In March, 1993, Rep. Laurel Prussing introduced legislation to the General Assembly amending the Higher Education Act giving the student member of the Board full voting privileges.

"I am feeling encouraged," said Carter. "I have been talking to Board members for a long time about this issue. Several have been very supportive in private conversations."

In the next few weeks,

Carter will be meeting with Norm Lambert, assistant director, Student Support Services, and Carol Steinman, dean of students, to change Parkland's requirements for the student trustee

Carter's term will expire in July, 1994, but he said he is committed to seeing this issue through.

"I would like to see the future student trustee in a voting situation. I'm going to see this bill through to the end."

Who, in your opinion, is winning the 'war of the late night talk show hosts'?

Jaymes Hardin III

"Arseniooooooooooooo Hall because his show is not targeted at one group of people. His guests are appealing to all audiences."

Charlotte Brown

"Chevy Chase. He's funny and crazy. Arsenio makes me sick! All the others aren't funny except David Letterman."

Teresia Mawhood

"I think David Letterman is winning the late night talk show war. He just have me crackin' up!"

Farhad Kazemi

"Dave Letterman -- He's rude!"

Teresa Howey

"I think Jay Leno is winning. His shows are original and very entertaining. Since he took over Johnny Carson (which was successful) it was easy for him to be successful."

Maurice Akins

"I think that Letterman is winning because Leno just does political jokes, Chevy Chase is just weird, Shandling is stupid, Arsenio does too many impressions, and Letterman is to the point. It's crazy and different."

Tim Tholen

"Arsenio. He has the best show and best people on the show. He deals with up-to-date problems with the kids."

Lisa Fontana

"I think David Letterman is winning the war because he's on earlier plus everyone likes him and thinks he's a great guy."

A voting voice for student trustee?

by Susan Herrel
Editor-in-Chief

Student Government Pres. Phil Carter wants to have a voice with the Board of Trustees. Make that a voting voice. He wants this voice not so much for himself because he only has eight more months to serve out his term. He wants this voting voice for future Parkland students.

This is a big responsibility for the Board and the student trustee. As it stands now, the student trustee is mainly a participating presence at the Board of Trustees meetings. That representative of the student body can make requests, motions, sit in on executive meetings, and express his opinion. Whether or not the Board listens to him or acts on his recommendations depends on his credibility, maturity, insightfulness, and responsiveness to the wants and needs of the majority of Parkland students.

In the past year and a half that he has been with Student Government, Phil Carter has shown himself to be a capable and responsible student trustee. The question is whether this quality can and will be maintained in the future. Are there more Phil Carters waiting in the wings to perpetuate a responsible seat on the Board of Trustees?

Whether Parkland can continue to attract quality students who are willing to put a great deal of their time, energy, effort and be legally responsible for decisions made by the board is a question for the current Board members to answer before the October meeting.

Transfer Day Oct. 6

28 schools to be here

Twenty-eight four-year colleges and universities will be represented here on Transfer Day from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Oct. 6.

The Illinois Army National Guard and U. of I. Army, Navy, and Air Force ROTC also will be represented at the event in the Student Center.

The schools are:

- Anderson University
- Bradley University
- Columbia College
- Concordia College
- Eureka College
- Illinois College
- Illinois State University
- Illinois Wesleyan U.
- Iowa State University
- Lincoln University
- Loyola University
- MacMurray College
- Mt. St. Clare College
- North Central College
- Northwestern Illinois U.
- Northern Illinois U.
- Quincy University
- Rockford College
- Sangamon State U.
- St. Louis College of Pharmacy
- Southern Illinois U.
- University of Illinois
- Western Illinois U.

The first factor students should consider when selecting a college is cost, Brad Hastings, director of the Counseling Center, said recently.

"The second major factor is size," Hastings said. "A large university has many opportunities, but a student must decide if he or she can cope with the impersonal atmosphere that often goes along with size."

Hastings said many students feel that a large university is more impressive than a small school simply because of its size.

Another consideration is area of specialization, Hastings said. By the time a student transfers, she/he should know his/her area of interest is, he said, and "make sure the major is offered. For example, if a student wants to major in criminal justice, the U. of I. does not offer it. In this case, a student would be better off going to Illinois State or Western Illinois University."

Distance is another critical factor to be taken into consideration, he said. If a student feels more comfortable closer to home, that factor should be considered. College can be difficult for students coping with homesickness, he said.

"I recommend a Thursday-through-Saturday visit," Hastings said. "The student can experience a week night and then attend some classes on Friday. Talking with students who are already attending classes is important."

Experiencing a weekend on a campus also is important, Hastings said. "College sports and the party atmosphere should be considered because they can have either a positive or negative effect on the student's education."

The Career and Placement Office can help student sort through materials and computer files to find the answer to their questions, Hastings said.

"We will have a Transfer Center office operational before January, 1994. This will be a centrally located place where students will find brochures, catalogues, and people available to answer questions about schools," Hastings said.

Dale Ewen serving on math committee

Dale Ewen, vice president for Academic and Student Services, is one of three persons heading a national program to develop national standards for curriculum and instruction for two-year college and lower division mathematics courses.

The American Mathematical Association for Two-Year Colleges was awarded $80,500 by the National Science Foundation and $50,000 from Exxon to develop national standards for curriculum and instruction for two-year college and lower division mathematics courses.

The project is being headed by Marilyn Mays, of North Lake College, Irving, Texas, president-elect of the Association; Karen Sharp, Mott Community College, Flint, Mich., Association president, and Ewen, of Mahomet, who is past present of the Association.

The 18-month program, which also involves representatives from several national mathematics organizations, is designed to revitalize the content of the collegiate mathematics curriculum from technical and developmental courses through pre-calculus.

The final standards document is expected to be completed by late Fall, 1994.

Student Government hears Rev. Cox

by Carol C. Lombardi
Prospectus Staff Writer

Racism is the number one problem in America, and the answer to it is to promote brotherhood and sisterhood, the Rev. Benjamin Cox, a job developer for the Office of Cooperative Education, told Student Government members at their September 9 meeting.

Reverend Cox stated that "Ethics and multi-culturalism don't mean anything" but are ways around the fundamental concepts of brotherhood and sisterhood.

He described the number two problem in America as the breakdown of the family, and the third the issue of illegal drugs. Reverend Cox feels that love and respect for others would solve many of today's social problems.

He concluded by suggesting issues on which Student Government might focus such as encouraging school spirit among students.

Pres. Phil Carter followed up on the previous meeting's discussion of encouraging student feedback by confirming that the Student Government office will adhere to an "open-door" policy whenever a senator or officer is in the office. At the Sept. 16 meeting, Carter further encouraged senators by discussing how to handle student concerns and complaints.

During both the Sept. 9 and 16 meetings, several of the issues discussed concerned encouraging school spirit and community support.

Sen. Katherine Candler encouraged support for sports events and suggested tours of the new Child Development Center.

Sen. Doc Manning is looking into the possibility of Student Government's buying a marquis-type sign to be displayed at the Bradley and Mattis entrance.

Sen. Tony Tangora suggested a Parkland version of the popular University of Illinois "I-Book," a printed calendar for sale in bookstores, and is looking into what such a project would involve.

Student Government officers also discussed decisions to support the upcoming Multi-cultural conference at Parkland, and the October Alcohol Awareness Week.

Student Government meetings are at 1:30 p.m. on Thursdays in X150. All students are welcome to attend.

'Shop til you drop' on Oct. 16

Students, faculty, and staff are being invited to "Shop 'Til you Drop" at the Kenosha Outlet Malls near Kenoska, Wis., on Oct. 16.

The trip for 24 shoppers is being sponsored by the Parkland College Alumni Association.

The bus will leave the Circle Drive at 6:30 a.m. for the mall which has more than 200 stores selling nationally known brands at discount prices. The bus will return to Parkland at 10:30 p.m.

There is a charge for tickets. For reservations see Cathy Knight, room X 153.

Speaking at an Office of Women's Programs and Services reception on Sept. 16, Cynthia Biggers, HUM 121 professor, said this example is one of the reasons why the OWPS is an integral part of Parkland College.

Sandy Boileau, dean of Continuing Education, pointed out that women haven't had the same opportunities that men have had, their needs are different, and their experience is different. Boileau sees OWPS as "part of the solution" to address the inequalities and differences.

Judy Campbell, Psychology of Women professor, said that U.S. culture is "andro-centric" and studying psychology from a women's studies perspective helps students to understand how women make sense of the male-dominated world around them.

MaryLee Sargent, History professor, has been teaching Women in History for 20 years and says she strives to find new ways for it to be inclusive of the experiences of all women. She said this class has enabled many women to relate to and enjoy history for the first time.

Women's studies courses are transferable humanities and social science electives.

Mwansa Mandela discussed the woman-centered counseling which is available at Parkland's Counseling Center. Mandela described the need for such counseling which deals with issues such as assertiveness, victimization, eating disorders and sabotaging success. Three Parkland counselors provide women-centered counseling: Mandela, Kathy Frizzell, and Norma Fosler.

OWPS also has a video library and a resource center with information on a variety of women's issues. The material is used by students seeking personal information as well as those researching topics for classes. OWPS sponsors the Friday Salon, a discussion group, the Brown Bag series of presentations, and a book discussion group. OWPS schedules are available in X212 and in the Prospectus.

Belafonte electrifies Assembly Hall crowd

by Ira Liebowitz
Prospectus Staff Writer

Day-O! The familiar sound electrified the Assembly Hall audience as Harry Belafonte began his recent concert.

On a cool, otherwise normal night, he supercharged the air with a magnetism rarely evoked as some 3,500 disciples of Caribbean music took part in an old-fashioned sing-along.

Belafonte and about a dozen musicians from lands as diverse as Brazil, Puerto Rico, South Africa, Turkey, and ...uh, Brooklyn, performed songs old and new, many invoking tropical vistas of sand and sea. The stage, bathed in varying hues as well as sounds of congo drums, marimbas, and some instruments too exotic for the novice to name, brought on a far-away flavor.

In a relaxed way, as if he'd invited the audience to a luau of family and friends, Harry — it seems proper to address this genteel and amiable personage by his first name — imparted feelings of warmth, jubilation, more rarely, reservations, and always spellbinding.

Said Lynn Beard, of Urbana, "He seems like someone you can trust like a good neighbor. His international music has a connectedness beyond the facade of race."

Her husband, Ken, who recalled listening to his car radio during the mid 1950's and immediately purchasing Harry's album, Calypso, added, "This has been a once in a lifetime experience. It's rare you see something this good."

Ever cognizant of his university audience and adept at kidding them, Harry used psychology to cajole them to sing. "The campus is a place of higher learning, and obviously, some of you may have had difficulty singing the song I asked you to sing because of the grammatical errors."

About his popular Matilda, he said, "I know it's not correct to say, 'she take me money and run Venezuela.' By the time I discovered the error (pausing with a Sidney Greenstreet chuckle), I'd made millions."

Marsh: media finally caught on*Country-western craze sweeping the nation

by Jennifer Polson
Prospectus Staff Writer

The mass media finally have caught on to country music, creating a wave of popularity that is flooding the music and clothing industry, C.P. Marsh, program director and D.J. of the More Music Show at WIXY, says.

"I think what is happening is the popularity is increasing in the larger markets where in the past it was contained in some of the smaller cities."

Marsh doesn't think that country itself has gained that much popularity. "The media just happen to notice it because we have many more high profile artists like Garth Brooks, Vince Gill, and Billy Ray Cyrus selling more records than artists years ago.

"As far as the actual resurgence, I credit Randy Travis and Dwight Yoakam," Marsh said.

"Before the times of Garth and Billy Ray, Randy Travis had a huge, huge album, Storms of Life. It was the first debut album to sell a million copies in less than a year. He was one of the first young artists to have a traditional country sound in the day of Kenny Rogers, Crystal Gayle, and Anne Murray.

Marsh says a lot of younger people who grew up on country music are more into it now and buying records.

The country phenomenon is not only increasing record sales, it's increasing clothing sales.

"We've experienced a tremendous increase in sales with no signs of decline," said Howard Morrill, manager of Pard's Western Shop in Urbana.

Morrill says there is a wide variety of western wear at the shop.

"Boots, men's western shirts, and women's blouses are the biggest sellers," said Morrill.

Country music is just as diverse as country western clothes.

"If you ask 10 different people why they listen to country music, you'll get six different answers" Marsh said.

Two major factors are that people say they can understand and relate to the words, Marsh said.

"Like Aaron Tippin's Working Man's Ph. D., country music tells stories about real people and real-life situations. It's from the heart, from the heartland type of records," Marsh said.

"It makes you think. It analyzes life," Connie Adams, a Business Administration major from Pesotum, said last week at Bradley's.

"It's down to earth," Gretchen Hermes, an Accounting major from Champaign, said.

"One good thing is that country music has gotten away from the cheatin' and crying songs and moved to a more positive level that celebrates love, marriage, and relationships," Marsh said.

Ninety percent of the time, people that aren't fans of country music, Marsh said, are ignorant or close-minded to today's country music.

Marsh says when he asks people who do not listen to country music when was the last time they listened to country music, they respond, "Oh well, I heard that old hill-billy, twangy stuff all the time when my dad played it when I was a kid."

"Well, country music's a heck of a lot different since I got into country radio 10 years ago, let alone 15, 25, 30 years ago," Marsh said.

"Rap is the same way. There's a lot of people out there that would probably like rap music a lot better if they just listened to it," he said.

Marsh says today's country music sounds similar to rock n roll in the fifties, sixties, and early seventies.

"A lot of people grew up on the Eagles, the Doobie Brothers, and Lynyrd Skynyrd. I don't find anything on today's pop or rock radio that relates to that kind of music," Marsh said.

"I used to listen to rock music. Then I started listening to country; it grew on me," said Jeff Swartz, an Agricultural Mechanization major from Deland.

Boot scootin' at Bradley's

Line dancers and two-steppers move to the music provided by WIXY at Bradley's, Champaign, on Wednesday night. The country radio station is at the club Wednesday through Saturday nights. Lessons are taught from 8 to 9 p.m.

Adds Swartz, "It has a beat not as harsh as rock."

"It's a combination of newer artists becoming popular with a wider mix and how they promote the song," said Randy Kirby, a part-time dance instructor with the Champaign Park District and at Bradley's.

Kirby, who says he is a "country boy at heart," says a lot of people line dance because it is easy to do and requires no partners.

Kirby said there are different types of country dancing. "There's the two-step, flow dancing, and line dancing."

"When I dance for four hours straight, it's the same as one hour of aerobic activity if not more," Kirby said.

PC students interning at WIXY include: Robb Walters, Champaign; Kevin

Powell, Tolono; Eric Meece, Gibson City; Gregg Lukoske, Bloomington, and Melissa Edwards, Arcola.

Robb Walters, who started last December at WIXY, said he went on the air for the first time at WIXY a little unexpectedly.

"It was snowing that day, and C.P. Marsh and I were the only ones at the station. He threw the local school closings at me, and I read them.

"I experienced behind-the-scenes work, dealing with clients, and live remotes," Walters said.

Vince Gill serenades the Hall

by Jennifer Polson
Prospectus Staff Writer

Riding bareback on a blind horse and crashing into a barn is not what Vince Gill had in mind for the rest of his life.

"I thought one rule of being an Okie was that you had to ride a horse. So when I was about eight or nine, I jumped on a horse. That horse started running fast straight for the barn. But there weren't any doors on the barn. It was the side of the barn," the Country Music Association nominee said last Friday at the Assembly Hall.

"After that," he said, "I thought I'd better stick to the guitar," Gill said before singing "The Oklahoma Swing." And thousands at the Assembly Hall were glad that he did.

Gill, who turned to music after considering a professional golf career, was nominated for entertainer of the year, top male vocalist, best single and music video for "Don't Let Our Love Start Slippin' Away." He was also nominated for No. 1 album for I Still Believe In You and song of the year, "I Still Believe In You."

Gill was also nominated twice for vocal event of the year, his collaboration with Reba McEntire in "The Heart Won't Lie" and with George Jones and an ensemble of country greats in "I Don't Need Your Rockin' Chair."

Gill sang two of his memorable songs, "Pocket Full of Gold," and "Take My Memory With You," off his Pocket Full of Gold album before he chatted with the audience for a while.

"It's kind of ironic other fellows like Clint Black and Alan Jackson get piles of women's lingerie during their concerts. So far, I've got cookies and golf balls," Gill said.

"I don't get a lot of women's underwear because I don't wear a lot of women's underwear," he joked.

Gill, whose music is thought to be a diverse sound in country by many people, said one of the first places he performed was when he played in a bluegrass band in Champaign.

When Gill was ready to perform "Nothing Like A Woman," a woman in the audience pleaded with him to take his shirt off, a request often made by female fans of Billy Ray Cyrus.

"I will not take off my shirt! Where I come from, that's sexual harassment!" Gill said, laughing.

With the voice that is unlike any other country music star today, he sang the ballads, "Look At Us," "Never Knew Lonely," and "No Future In the Past."

Gill performed a song that he recently finished writing, "Go Rest High On That Mountain," which he wrote in honor of the late Keith Whitley and his brother who died this March.

Gill also rewarded the audience with some faster-paced songs such as "Liza Jane," and "Don't Let Our Love Start Slippin' Away," which seemed to excite the audience.

Gill vanished quickly but appeared for an encore performance to sing "I Still Believe In You," which was the crowd pleaser.

Pam Tillis, who opened with "Put Yourself In My Place," excited the audience and drew them into her performance.

The fresh country star then sang "Don't Tell Me What To Do," but first summoned "Chuck," a man from the audience, to sing that line solo.

Other songs Tillis performed were "Cleopatra, Queen of Denial," "Shake The Sugar Tree," "Maybe It Was Memphis," and "Let That Pony Ride."

Former PC prof. to show art

by Jason R. Brown
Prospects Staff Writer

Judith Baker, a former Parkland professor, is returning to Parkland for a solo exhibit at the Art Gallery. An opening reception for Baker will be held on October 2 from 12-2 pm in the gallery lounge. Baker's exhibit will run from September 29 through October 22.

Born in St. Louis, Missouri, Judith Baker has earned a BFA in Art History and Drawing and Painting, and an MFA in Painting from Indiana University. She taught Art and Art History at Parkland College and now is an Assistant Professor of Painting and Art History at the University of Wisconsin.

Judith states, "My belief that all human action is motivated by love or its absence has guided my images to more directly address this troublesome, undefinable, and ultimately greatest issue. The difficult and nearly impossible demands required for love of any nature are replete with dualities: pleasure and pain, destruction and renewal, yearning and redemption."

Judith goes on to say that it is her hope that her work will formally and conceptually allude to ideas that the public finds appealing. Her choice of light source is like impulse, because it is usually not the keen and direct light of the sun that she seeks, but instead oblique and indistinct. In the project "Enclosures", drawing is better defined as a verb rather than a noun. The pictures show that some of the rarer methods and materials do not fit traditional forms that people would probably expect in a drawing exhibition. Judith was struck by each of the artist's inventiveness of composition and image, as well as a genuine "drawing forth" of rich and provocative ideas.

Parkland students are working everywhere

by Julie McDuffee
Prospectus Staff Writer

Approximately 250 students hold jobs at Parkland that range from food service workers to receptionists.

Students may be employed as note takers in their classes to help disabled students and only work a few hours a week, or they may work as many as 20 hours a week in the library.

Gerry Hough, director of the Career Planning and Placement Center, says to qualify for becoming a student worker, "A student must be enrolled for a minimum of 6 credit hours and have a grade point of 2.0 or higher."

Hough says, "What we attempt to do is to match the employment with their (student) career goals. We talk to the students to find out their majors and find what their particular interests are, and we try to direct them to the supervisors on campus that could provide them with employment experiences that are related."

Students are able to work around their class schedules, or in the case of note takers, during classes.

Many students stay in the same jobs for a year or more. Hough says, "You are developing relationships on campus in terms of positive work experience; someone who could be a reference on a resume. The more connections the student makes on campus, the more positive effect it has on the student's performance." He said, "We view this actually as a very important part of students' education because. Hopefully, it will reinforce good work habits, and there are just a lot of positives other than just getting a job."

Amy Ewald, a senior Nursing student, has worked at the Library as an hourly paid worker for three years and says, "I like the variety of people, and I get to do different kinds of jobs here." She says the people are friendly and the jobs are fun.

Cooperative education students work for pay, on or off campus, in jobs that range from accounting to equine management. Hough said there are approximately 125 students in the cooperative work program.

Some degrees at Parkland require work experience courses, or internships, and students are not paid for their work, but they do get college credit. Darrell Barad, a sophomore in Radiologic Technology, is doing his internship at Carle Hospital. He says, "We do actual X-rays under supervision." He also works in the Computer Lab as monitor for an hourly wage. He says he chose the Lab because his employers are friendly, he gets to work with people, and he has computer experience. He added that another nice feature of the job at Parkland is if there is slow time in the Lab, he can use it to do his studying.

Scholarship students may work at any number of places on campus or off and earn money or credit for their tuition. These students are required to work a certain number of hours at their jobs in relation to how many hours of college credit they receive. Some scholarships allow students to be paid for certain jobs; others do not.

Teresa Webb, a second year Nursing student, has a scholarship that pays her tuition, but she works for an hourly wage at the Financial Aid office. She says, "I like working here because they work around my class schedule, and everything is right here, nearby." She says she has learned to work with all types of people in her job and has become a better organized person.

A list of scholarships available and the requirements are given in the Parkland handbook.

Some campus jobs are still available for this semester. The Career Planning and Placement Center is in A184.

B-ball practices set to open

by Alden Loury
Prospectus Staff Writer

Parkland's basketball teams officially begin preparation for the upcoming season with practices starting, Oct. 1.

Tryouts for the men's team were on Sept. 17, and head Coach Mark Bial, who took over the position this summer, said the group included returnees from the 1992-93 team, recruited high school talent, and a few walk-on athletes.

Tommie Beals probably will lead the team as he tries to improve upon his averages (12.9 ppg and 7.9 rpg) of a year ago.

Joining Beals from last year's squad will be fellow sophomores Thomas "Red" Newton and Kirk Glintborg, along with redshirt freshman Karl Schippert.

Newcomers attempting to make the team include area high school stars Mike Smith (Rantoul), Chad Taylor (Argenta-Oreana), Chateau Taylor (Champaign Central), Kevin Walsh (Bement), and Jason Harden (Farmer City Blue Ridge).

The Chicago area has also contributed to the crop of potential Cobras. Will Bailey and Tony Batchelor are former teammates of Beals' at Chicago Dunbar. Wayman Upshaw and Jason Jackson hail from East Chicago Central High School. Emory Robinson and Antoine Carroll played with Chicago high schools Simeon and Leo respectively.

The cast, however, is not limited to the state of Illinois. Rodney Lemmons, from Beechwood, Ohio; Leon Weaver, of Saginaw, Mich., and Randy Collins, from Sykestown, Mo. all have hopes of playing with the Cobras this fall.

Coach Bial said this group has plenty of speed and quickness to play the up-tempo game he prefers. The team, he says, will stretch the entire floor by pushing the ball upcourt on offense and pressing the ball in the backcourt on defense.

There's plenty of raw talent here, Bial said, "but still we need some work."

Final cuts will be made shortly before the Cobra season opens at the Lake County Tournament in Grayslake on Nov. 12.

Women's Coach Argie Johnson will try to rebuild a team that finished 23-9 and ranked sixth in the nation a year ago.

Johnson's 1993-94 squad will be headed by his only returning starter from last year and team captain, Kris Roberts.

"Kris is one of our top defensive people," Coach Johnson said. "We'll be looking for her to do a lot of things for us."

Along with Roberts, sophomores KaTia Taylor and Roletta Washington will be the only Lady Cobras coming back from the 92-93 team.

Incoming freshman will have a chance to earn starting spots because Johnson says no one is guaranteed a position. His freshman class this year includes: Jami Lavicka and Anita Reifel, of Milford-Watseka; Jennifer Hortenstine, Mattoon, and Nicole Buck, Armstrong.

Three others, Amy Ross (Paxton-Buckley-Loda), Camisha Nathan (Peoria Manual) and Curtrina Walker (E. Chicago Central) were impressive additions as walk-ons.

Sophomore Kendra Blaudow, a current member of Parkland's volleyball team, plans to join the Lady Cobras once her first season ends.

Blaudow played with last year's eventual NJCAA champions at Illinois Central College before an injury sidelined her prior to the national tournament.

Blaudow was heavily recruited by Parkland during her senior year at Tuscola High School, but she opted to attend ICC.

Johnson says her experience can help the team's maturity level. "I'm glad we've got her. This is where she should have been," he added.

The women's basketball season opens Nov. 17 against Lincoln Land in Springfield.

Lohr assumes role as leader

by Alden Loury
Prospectus Staff Writer

Whoever said leaders are born and not made has not seen the Parkland College Volleyball team this season. Sophomore Angela Lohr has become the Cobras' leader, not by choice, but necessity.

"If you had looked at me last year and said Angela would be my leader, I would have said no way," volleyball Coach Brenda Winkeler said. However, since Lohr, the only returning player from a year ago, was joined by nine freshman and two other newcomers this season, she had to assume the role of team leader.

Lohr, 19, contributes most by being a floor leader. On the court, she acts as a liaison between the coach and the team. "I have experience with Coach (Winkeler), and I know what we need to do to make her pleased."

The Cobras' 5'11" outside hitter often barks out commands to her teammates during games, making sure they know what they need to do and where they need to be. She feels her teammates can be motivated by her vocal presence. "When my attitude is on and I can get everybody else on, we can win," Lohr said. Speaking of a recent loss to DuPage, she said, "My attitude was down, and I wasn't helping anybody else." After that game, she knew that she did have an effect as the team's leader.

In her opinion, she doesn't lead by example, but the statistics may show otherwise. Lohr leads the team in kills per game, is tied for top honors in service aces, and is second in both digs and blocks per game.

One of her duties also is to help the younger players mature. Lohr says the freshman have to learn that at this level they need to work hard. "College is a lot different than high school. Practices are more intense, and games are more intense," she added.

Her new role, however, has had its drawbacks. The team took a personality test earlier this season and discovered they were mostly type "D" or dominant persons.

Lohr, who directs much of the action on the floor, says her teammates see her as "bossy" sometimes. Coach Winkeler, however, has reassured her that the team needs that from her.

Lohr says the team talks often and they have developed a good working relationship.

Lohr, who was recruited by Winkeler out of Wenona High School, has played volleyball since the fifth grade.

She has talked about possibly going to Florida State University after graduating from Parkland.

The 1993 Cobra volleyball team has a good chance to make it to the national tournament, according to Lohr. "We have a lot of physical players," she said. The team has powerful hitters, great leapers, and a bench with as much talent as the starters, Lohr added.

If the Cobras do play for the national title, there will be no question as to who led them there.

Cobra golfers look for consistency

by Alden Loury
Prospectus Staff Writer

Golf is considered by many to be an "individual" sport. However, for Parkland College Golf, the "team" is everything.

"Our downfall is that we can't get everybody playing well at the same time," says Coach Greg Thom.

In the Danville Invitational (September 17-18), Parkland finished fourth overall, 12 strokes behind winner, Lincoln Trail.

Justin Kirby played well on the first day shooting a 75 to lead all Parkland golfers and place him among the tournament's top four. Kirby, however, started slowly in the second round but was able to finish strong at 152.

Jeff Morgan (155) and Kyle Bauer (153) were also victimized by hot-and-cold spells. Morgan's fast start, 2-under par on Friday's front nine, was negated by a poor back nine and a slow start on Saturday. Bauer, on the other hand, started poorly

Friday but rallied with good play in the later holes and all day Saturday.

According to Thom, Mark Burlington, the Cobras' overall leader at 151, and Jeremy Morton (161) delivered consistent play throughout the two-day event.

Bauer and Burlington, sixth and ninth respectively, played well after a round of play in the Lincoln Trail Invitational at Robinson on September 24.

The second round of play was cancelled due to rain. Thom says the players were looking forward to the second round on what he called "a very hard course."

Parkland finished fourth among a field of seven.

The team's up and down play hasn't discouraged Thom. It lends confidence that we can be competitive with other teams, he says.

"Our players need to play within themselves", added Thom. "We just need to be patient after bad holes and not try to make them up all at once."

INTRAMURAL NEWS

INTRAMURAL VOLLEYBALL AND BASKETBALL LEAGUES

Sign-up now for indoor volleyball and basketball leagues.

Starting Monday, October 4 there will be league volleyball in the gym on Mondays from 8-10 pm. Registration for league play closes on October 4. To register, fill out your team members' names, your captain's name, phone number, and address on a registration card or a piece of paper and place it in one of the Intramural sign-up boxes near X153 or P110. Be sure to indicate Indoor Volleyball on the form. A Parkland player may only play on one Parkland Monday night team.

Parkland's Intramural 5 on 5 basketball league play starts October 20. League play will be from 7-10 pm every Wednesday night from October 20 to December 8. To register, for basketball come to open gym. Dates and times for open gym are on the back of the Fall IM Schedule which can be found in the downstairs hallway of building P (gym building). There will be registration forms available at those times. You can also register by following the same procedures as for the indoor volleyball. And as with the volleyball, please be sure to indicate it is for indoor 5 on 5 basketball league on the registration form. Registration closes on Friday, October 15. A player can only play on one Parkland 5 on 5 basketball team.

The 3 on 3 basketball tournament is October 26 and October 28 from 12-1 pm. Register in the same manner as the 5 on 5 league. A different registration form should be filled out for 3 on 3 basketball.

If your roster is not complete, we will place members on your team. Sign up individually to be put on a team.

Look at the Prospectus, Cobra Vision t.v. monitors, or come to open gym to find out when the 3-Point Contest, Slam-Dunk Contest, and Free Throw Contest will take place.

Road trip success for Cobras

by Alden Loury
Prospectus Staff Writer

Parkland's baseball team returned home this week after opening its fall season on a long, but successful, 13-day road trip.

"This team has exceeded our expectations," says Coach Rod Lovett. The team enjoyed a successful run including the sweep of a six-game tournament in Omaha, Neb.

The fall season has given some of last year's stars a chance to shine and opened the door to a few newcomers to the Cobra team this season.

Veteran Parkland pitchers Matt McDonald, no earned runs in 19 innings this fall, and Dan Tintera, 0.42 ERA in 21 innings, will help bolster a staff that features five returning Cobras from a year ago, including Mark Spears, Brad Turner, and Greg Harrier.

Freshman Brian Passini, who, Lovett says, "has thrown very well," along with fellow rookies Tim Gowen and Brad Wagers have shown promise in giving Parkland a strong and deep staff.

Offensively, second-year players John Riva, hitting .458; Chris Cuchra, .409 with 3 HR and 16 RBI, and Angel Santiago, .388 with 11 RBI, can provide punch in the line-up to make up for the loss of last year's co-MVPs Ed Eggebrecht (University of New Orleans) and Kerry Cheely (Bradley).

Freshman Shane Smith is impressive by batting .440 and showing a fine glove at shortstop where Lovett says he will probably start next spring.

Concerning his spring line-up Lovett says his outfield is set with Riva, freshman Jason Scott, and Matt Broom, last year's starting third baseman. The left side of the infield probably will have first-year player Brian Rothert at third with Smith at short.

The right side is not as easy where Lovett may juggle three players between first base and the designated hitter (Santiago, Troy Pruitt and rookie Rich Brennan).

"Second base is by far the most wide open position," says Lovett. The players that have hit well have not fielded well and vice-versa, says Lovett of those competing at the number 4 spot.

Chris Cuchra will return as the starting catcher.

"We need some of our back-ups to step up their games in case of injuries," Lovett said.

The spring season opens March 4 at Panama City, Fla.

Michael Vitoux nominated for Meardy Award

Michael Vitoux, Sociology professor, has been nominated for the William H. Meardy Faculty Member Award.

The national award, presented by the Association of Community College Trustees, is given for excellence in teaching. Nominees are considered on the basis of their involvement in innovative programming, technical or special committee work, leadership activities, and development, organization, and support of state and national associations.

Vitoux, past president of the Parkland College Association, the College's faculty and staff Senate, is a charter member of Parkland's Committee on Access, Equity, and Cultural Diversity and of the advisory board of the College's Center for Excellence in Teaching and Learning.

Intermural volleyball Mondays

by G. Scott Sledgister
Prospectus Staff Writer

Intermural volleyball games are played every Monday from 8 to 10 p.m. in the gym.

Student Intermural Director Lisa Buck says approximately 50 students came to play on Sept. 13. Although some came as team members, others came as individuals.

Students were matched up in teams of six to play a game then rotated to give others a chance to play. With two courts and the number of teams, everyone played a new game about every 25 minutes, she said.

Tournament play will begin in October. Anyone wishing to participate in volleyball, tennis, or any of the other sports can sign up at the Intermural boxes on campus.

Campus Notes:

Phi Theta Kappa Membership Drive:

Parkland chapter of Phi Theta Kappa will be holding its semester membership drive. Membership is by invitation based on the following criteria: enrolled in an AAS, AS or AA degree program, 12 hours of college level courses toward that degree earned at Parkland and 3.50 cumulative GPA. Application and membership fee is $40.00. Applications can be obtained from the Dean of Students Office A-178 through Oct. 6.
