PC part-timers earn 40% less than full-time

by Tiffany Grunert
News Editor

Parkland's part-time faculty, although the second highest paid part-time faculty in Illinois, earn 40 percent less per credit hour than full-time faculty and have few benefits.

According to Kevin Northrup, Vice President/Fiscal Services, it is impossible to compare full-time faculty salaries fairly to those of part-time employees.

"Part-time employees make less than full-time employees in all walks of life—education, industry and even agriculture," said Northrup.

Part-time faculty argue that they teach the same courses, have the same amount of work, and, in most cases, have the same qualifications as their full-time counterparts.

"When you compare what we're doing for our part-timers against what everybody else in the state is doing for their part-timers, I think nobody does it better than Parkland," Northrup said.

"We have the second highest paid part-timers in the state, and our full-time employees are the thirteenth highest out of 39. I don't understand how Parkland is at fault when we are one of the best things going," said Northrup.

The problem for part-timers does not end at salary discrepancies, however. According to Jane Thompson, Part-time Faculty Organization presi-

Women, be on your guard!

"Nothing can happen to me. I'll be O.K."

Women between the ages of 15 and 24 usually have a feeling of invulnerability, says Parkland Director of Public Safety Paul Sarantakos.

"Women at this age usually are not on their guard." April is Sexual Assault Awareness Month.

Because crime and violence are rampant in today's society, knowing and being able to use self-defense is "necessary," says Sarantakos.

Sarantakos teaches a women's self-defense class,

Tina Henderson

To the Parkland student body: I am running for the position of Student Trustee of the Parkland Board of Trustees and would appreciate your vote on April 4, 5, or 6. I am currently serving as a senator on the Student Government and editor of the college newspaper, Prospectus. I believe that I am well-informed of the issues and concerns of the college.

I believe it is very important for Parkland student to have a voice in important college issues. With the elimination of the Student Advocate position, it is imperative that stu-

When you cast your vote for Student Trustee on April 4, 5 or 6, be sure to evaluate the candidates based on what they have done. I, Davina Lynn Swink, have been an active member of Student Government since Spring 1994. My service began as a Senator, then in the Fall of 1994, I became Senior Senator. As a devoted student representative, I have sought out the opinions of students on a variety of issues. My first concern has always been to make Parkland College a better place for students.

My name is Blessing O. Omoniye. I studied Electricals at the Government Technical College in Nigeria. I currently enrolled for Electronics/Computer System Technology. I believe that whatever we do today was a great impact on our future and the future of our children and the generation to come. In any situation or condition or position that I find myself, I believe in making contributions that can change bad to good and also can make better influence on people's lives.

This made me have interest in serving on student government as a senator. I will like to focus on three main issues: student development/welfare, academics, social and cultural awareness. To achieve this, I will like to take the following steps: see that students behave more maturely in dealing with the college authority and keeping the rule. I will offer seminars on behavioral science. Encourage cordial and respective relation-run for Student Government.

If elected, my main objective will be to make more students aware that Parkland even has a Student Government, while explaining the basic functions of the organization. Once more students are aware of the organization and of its functions, I believe this will promote more student input which is vital for Student Government to serve its primary purpose.

Another goal high on my list is to investigate the possibility of transforming the former Child Development Center into a recreational center for students of Parkland College. Providing a conveniently located Student Center would help to encourage student interaction. It would be a place to enjoy yourselves before, between and after classes.

I am the appropriate candidate for this position. I have great leadership characteristics and bring with me great enthusiasm. I would appreciate your vote for the position of Student Government president. I look forward to seeing you at the polling place. dents be represented and student rights be protected.

Some of the issues I would like to address this year are:

Financial Aid—With the changing of laws this year concerning financial aid, new avenues need to be found to guarantee students the opportunity of education.

Crime on Campus—Students must feel protected in order to get the most from their education. We need to look at ways to accomplish this. One issue that needs to be addressed is how to eliminate those people on campus that are not students and come onto the campus for negative purposes.

Retention—We need to look at how we can best keep students in school to help them with their career goals.

Racism and Discrimination—This is a subject no one likes to admit or discuss, but unfortunately, even in the Nineties, we are still being faced with unfair practices. Racism and discrimination has no place in a college that prides itself on multiculturalism.

Diversity—Each student needs to be represented and offered the same opportunities as their fellow students. We need to make sure the interests of all students are being represented, not just a small few.

Quality Teaching—It is important for students to receive a quality education. We need to make sure the recent trend of hiring more part-time faculty, instead of full-time, does not diminish the quality of education in the classroom.

Book Cost—When book costs become as large of a burden to the student as tuition, we need to explore ways to keep the costs low and affordable.

Day Care—As long as Parkland continues to be in the day-care business, we need to make sure that the purpose of it is to benefit the students and faculty on campus.

I would like the opportunity to address these issues in the upcoming year and would appreciate your vote on election day. Thank you.

Chief Carter: 'People want officers they know'

by Tammy Ford
Prospectus Staff Writer

Champaign Police Chief Don Carter says there are three things people want from the police: "officers they know, officers who know them, and officers who are going to address problems."

Carter told News Reporting students the CPD has attempted to do those three things by "focusing on a closer partnership between police and the community."

This partnership includes the development of a Neighborhood Action Team, which was founded last June.

Carter said the team, which includes a foot patrol pilot program, has been focusing on the neighborhood of Maple and Vine Streets in Champaign. He said this part of the city was selected because it "was the highest-fear neighborhood."

However, Carter says, since the "community policing" has been intact, fear of that neighborhood has gone down four percent.

Carter credits the drop to the streetlight illumination, which was installed on those streets, as well as the 61 prostitution arrests that have been made.

He said there are other troublesome parts of Champaign, such as the Douglass Park area and the eastern-most strip of University Avenue to the north. These areas are patrolled eight hours a day, five days a week, Carter said.

"Probably all the areas need to be patrolled 16-hours-a-day, but we're not yet equipped to do so," Carter added.

Besides the neighborhood problems, Carter said the CPD has also seen an overall rise in gang activity and gun use—primarily the 9-millimeter and semi-automatic varieties—throughout the city.

"About 800 gang members are released from prison a month," Carter said. "We're getting kids at a younger and younger age involved, and they are the ones who are becoming the most violent."

Carter believes children are getting involved in crime at such early ages—usually their early teens—because of the "dissolution of American families."

He believes there needs to be more control over gun use, such as outlawing military-style assault weapons and providing "some level of training to people before they can buy firearms."

However, he added, "The idea of the basic right to bear arms is still very powerful in our society."

Addressing other issues, Carter said he thinks the recent increase in robberies in Champaign County is partially the "result of drug addicts" who have turned away from residential burglary in hopes of attaining some "quick cash."

Although robbery is up, sexual assault is down 43 percent, and Carter attributes the decrease to "the elimination of the huge keg parties at fraternities."

He also said young women are more aware and cautious than they used to be.

The most common drug Carter sees is cocaine, and he said he suspects much of it is coming here from around the Chicago area.

Overall, Carter said, things can improve in society, but people need to attain a "spiritual basis" if violence is expected to decrease.

dent, another big concern is the lack of benefits for part-time employees.

By law, Parkland is required to have SURS benefits and some Medicare. "There are no health, dental or disability benefits offered," said Thompson.

"Benefits are a much greater concern today than they were five or 10 years ago. Most people take benefits into consideration when they are considering employment," she said.

According to Bruce Walker, a part-time instructor at Parkland could "lose more than they gain," if they were to push administration for larger salaries, and more benefits.

"We are getting paid the best of downstate Illinois per-credit-hour. We are also allowed to teach 12 credit hours which is also one of the highest in the state," Walker said.

Like many other part-timers, Walker works a second job (selling pacemakers) to supplement his income.

Thompson sees working at more than one place as another obstacle that part-time teachers must overcome.

"Part-time instructors do not have as many opportunities as full-time to meet with students outside of class time," Thompson said.

"We couldn't afford to give you the education you have if we paid part-time faculty at the same rate we do full-time," Northrup said.

34 states.

"The neat part of the program is that after you participate in one class, you can go any other place in the country for free. It's a lifetime membership," says Sarantakos.

He adds that the RAD program teaches protection ideas and philosophies as well as simple self-defense techniques; then, puts the student in a real-life situation:

"You have to fight the instructor out of the classroom."

He says he thinks it's "interesting" to see someone stretch at 100 percent and see how much power they can generate.

These self-defense programs are not like martial arts, he says. "They are simpler and do not require a lot of steps."

In panic situations, he says, people don't have a lot of time to react. A person must rely on their gross muscle movement.

The program "lays out a table of options and lets people choose what's right for them," Sarantakos said.

With self-defense, "Anything you choose is the right choice because every situation is different. No one else was there."

The classes are not taught to men; rather, they are designed specifically for women

The instructors are concerned and dedicated individuals to make sure the system is effective, he says.

Sarantakos is a certified instructor for basic self-defense, advanced self-defense, and chemical defense options.

Sarantakos was taught by the people who designed the system: "They teach from the heart, not the wallet," he says. "We're a supportive program."

April 19, a 12-hour self-defense program will be offered at Parkland on Wednesday nights.

A one-hour class on chemical weapons will also be offered.

'Dancing' captures sisters' lives

by Christine Wing
Prospectus Staff Writer

The excellent cast of Parkland Theatre's production takes the audience through the often difficult and lonely, yet sometimes comic experience of Dancing at Lughnasa.

Set in Ireland in the summer of 1936, five sisters laugh, cry, clash — and yet protect each other while their radio broadcasts romantic music.

The family was reared Catholic, and Kate, the eldest, still clings closely to her beliefs and feels it's her responsibility to keep her sisters on the straight and narrow. She rules that they do not go to the harvest festival dance.

Her sisters sometimes view her as over-protective and unnecessarily stern. However, the audience sees how deeply Kate, played with emotion by Barbara Evans, cares for her sisters when she tearfully confides to Maggie her fears for their futures.

Maggie, in contrast to Kate, takes a light-hearted approach to life. Anne Shapland, who has also directed shows for Parkland, portrays Maggie as a very likeable character who infuses comedy and zest into a sometimes mundane existence. Even as one of the older sisters, she projects a youthful quality.

Christina has a seven-year-old son, whom she rears with the help of her sisters. Gerry (played by J.R. Lawson, Jr.), the father of her child, darts in and out of their lives, never staying long enough to watch his son grow up, let alone notice how much Christina has changed and he has not.

April Hall does an excellent job of portraying the young mother who has accepted her responsibility without a trace of bitterness. The audience also sees how Christina comes to regard Gerry during his visits to her that summer.

Agnes, played by Jaqueline Farber, succeeds as a loving protector of her sister, Rose. Even as she gladly accepts responsibility for Rose, who is mildly retarded, she longs for her younger, more care-free days.

who looks after Rose when the two leave home.

Rose depends most heavily on her sisters and, more than all the rest, remembers vividly what it was like to be young. She is naturally childlike and, like all her sisters, loves to dance. Stephanie Miller brings Rose to life and conveys her uncomplicated nature and simple joy.

The cast is rounded out by Gary Ambler, who narrates as Michael, Christina's now grown son. He lends perspective to the events of that summer by giving the audience insights into the sisters' futures. Ambler also directed the production.

Will Ridenour humorously portrays Father Jack, who has returned to his Irish homeland from a missionary trip to Africa. His attempts to readjust to life in Ireland provide comic relief as, instead of agreeing to say mass, he describes Swahili re-

When discussing the harvest dance, it is Rose who most adamantly protests when Kate forbids their going to the dance. Farber convincingly portrays both sides of Agnes's character, and we understand why later, it is Agnes religious traditions and suggests that the sisters share one husband among the five of them.

Sometimes funny, a little sad, and often moving, Dancing at Lughnasa sure, it's a lovely production.

Condom use—just for the health of it

by Tammy K. Mahaffey
Prospectus Staff Writer

One of every 250 people in the United States is infected with the AIDS virus, and many may not know it, according to a 1994 study conducted by the American Red Cross.

According to an Infectious Disease Control study, about one-third of U.S. residents will contact a sexually transmitted disease other than HIV during their lifetimes.

The World Health Organization says that more than 70 percent of such diseases are contacted through heterosexual intercourse with an infected partner.

"The only 100 percent-effective way of avoiding a sexually transmitted disease or becoming pregnant is to abstain from sexual contact with others," says Sue Bull, Health Educator for Planned Parenthood of East Central Illinois' Champaign office. "However, if you are going to participate in sexual activity, a barrier method of contraception, such as condoms, will offer you some protection."

The most commonly-used condoms are designed for use by the male and are made from either latex, polyurethane, or lamb intestines, said Bull, and are designed to be slipped over the head of the penis and unrolled the full length of the shaft prior to any sexual contact — especially any involving penetration.

(The history of condoms is sketchy, since in many countries it was illegal to sell any method of birth control.)

The latex condom has existed since the mid 1800's and was originally designed to fit only over the glans (tip) of the penis.

In 1869, the full-length condom was developed. This was made of a flat sheet of latex with a rubber ring at the top and a seam that ran its length.

Around 1889, a seamless variety (similar to ones sold today) was developed. Advances in technology have led to a thinner, stronger and more reliable condom being produced.

With the introduction of the female contraceptive pill, condom use had declined nationwide during the 1960's and 70's; however, with the spread of AIDS since the 1980's, the condom is again gaining in popularity.

Until very recently, most condom companies only produced two sizes of condoms. Most of the condoms sold in this country were 7.09 inches long with a flat width of 2.05 inches, while a smaller variety approximately 6.33 inches long and 1.93 inches wide were sold in Asian countries.

Many companies have recently introduced an extra-large size for customers who found the other sizes too small.

With the advent of polyurethane condoms, many of the problems with the latex variety have been corrected. Polyurethane conducts body heat, which some say leads to a more natural feeling.

Polyurethane is also much thinner. Latex condoms average between .5mm and .8mm thick, while polyurethane condoms are about .2mm to .3 mm.

One complaint against the latex variety was the frequency of breakage or tears. Polyurethane is a much stronger material and tears much less often.

Condoms range in price from around $0.50 to $0.85 for the latex or polyurethane condoms, while those made from lamb intestines range from $2.50-$3 apiece.

Condoms made from lamb intestines offer protection against unwanted pregnancy but offer no protection against sexually transmitted diseases, according to the Naturalamb Condom Co.

The viruses that cause AIDS and Hepatitis B, the company says, can pass through the porous lamb intestines.

Varieties are also ever-increasing among latex and polyurethane models.

One can purchase smooth, clear, non-lubricated condoms, condoms with reservoir ends, standard lubricated condoms and condoms lubricated with a spermicide such as Non-oxynol 9.

For the more adventurous, there are flavored condoms (designed for oral intercourse), colored condoms, glow-in-the-dark condoms and even textured condoms.

Planned Parenthood warns that some novelty condoms may offer little or no contraception or prophylactic action (protection from disease).

Condoms should be stored in a cool dry place.

Bull says a dresser or nightstand drawer is just fine, as opposed to refrigerated condoms.

"You should never carry condoms in your pocket or wallet or leave them in your car, since heat can cause them to break down," she warns.

She also advises caution when opening the package, as fingernails can tear a condom.

Also, Bull says, if the condom material is sticky, feels gummy or shows any signs of damage, do not use the condom.

Spermicide-lubricated condoms have expiration dates on them, she said, and should not be used if they have expired.

In addition, condoms should be put on after the male achieves erection, removed prior to loss of the erection and never reused

Health advocates and condom companies are now instructing users to insert a small amount of lubricant inside the condom to decrease the frequency of breakage and enhance sensitivity for the male.

Bull says it is important to know which type of condom one will use and recommends only water-based lubricants with latex condoms. Vaseline and other fat- or oil-based lubricants, she says, can weaken them and cause them to break or tear; however, the user can use any type of lubrication with polyurethane condoms.

In May, 1993, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration approved for sale a new condom for females, which consists of two rubber rings. One is at the top, and a free-floating one lies at the bottom of a polyurethane sheath.

The directions say to put a small amount of lubricant inside the pouch.

While inserting, the user is directed to bend the bottom ring (as one would a tampon or diaphragm), then release it, then reach inside the pouch and slide it up until it is positioned over the cervix.

The outer ring remains outside the body to allow for easy removal, and it also offers a higher degree of protection from sexually transmitted diseases, since it covers the clitoris and labia and prevents skin-to-skin contact.

Currently, Reality, the only condom manufactured for female use, costs $2.83 each. The package also contains a small bottle of lubricant.

USE CONDOMS PROPERLY

If you decide to have oral, anal or vaginal intercourse, use a latex condom from start to finish.

1 OPEN THE PACKAGE CAREFULLY
— don't use your teeth.

2 PUT A DROP OF SPERMICIDE
(birth control foam, jelly or cream) inside the condom tip. Make sure the spermicide contains nonoxynol-9.

3 PINCH THE CONDOM TIP to squeeze out all the air. Leave a 1/2-inch space to collect semen.

STORE CONDOMS AWAY FROM HEAT AND SUNLIGHT
(Don't keep them in your wallet.) Check the expiration date before using them.

4 PUT THE CONDOM ON as soon as the penis is hard. Unroll the condom to the base of the penis. Smooth out any air bubbles.

5 SPREAD SPERMICIDE ON THE OUTSIDE of the condom.*

6 CHECK THE CONDOM DURING SEX
to make sure it hasn't broken or slipped off.

USING CONDOMS CAN BE SEXY!
Ask your partner for help putting them on.

7 HOLD THE RIM OF THE CONDOM
and pull out slowly while the penis is still hard. It's safer to pull out before "coming" (ejaculation).

8 ROLL THE CONDOM OFF, and throw it away. Never use a condom twice.

NEVER USE "OIL-BASED" PRODUCTS WITH CONDOMS
Don't use petroleum jelly or any product with oil or grease as a lubricant. (These products can weaken latex condoms, causing them to break.) Always use a water-based lubricant, if you use one.

REMEMBER:
Latex condoms are your best protection when you have intercourse. But condoms are not foolproof.

How long do you think Mike Tyson should have served for his rape conviction?

Cameron Saber

"I understand the fact that he served only 3 years of a 6-year sentence because of 'good behavior!' Though I believe prisoners should somehow be rewarded for good behavior, I do not believe a 6-year sentence (let alone serving only 3) is sufficient. Because of the severity and intrusiveness of rape crimes, particularly longer sentences must be given to deter potential violators."

Regina Willis

"He should not have served any time. He didn't rape that B----."

Aaron Gordon

"I think he should have served at least 7 to 8 years. Rape is a serious crime and he should have been used as an example to the rest of America's rapists."

Michele Peterson

"I think if the judge decides to put him in for 3 years, that's what he deserved."

Jim Fullenkamp

"I believe the sentence he received was adequate."

Kelley Simmons

"Nothing, no time at all."

Cheryl Prescott

"I believe anyone who rapes another person should serve longer than 3 years in prison. They should serve somewhere around 10 years."

Mercy Alu

"I don't know whether he did it or not. I should say about 2 years."

PC sluggers on 8-game win streak

by Brandon Lewis
Sports Editor

While the weather is getting warmer, so is the Cobra baseball team.

Coming off a solid Spring Break performance in Florida, the Cobras returned to Illinois to begin what has become an eight-game winning streak.

After dropping their first game of the week to Kaskaskia, the Cobras went on to win their next eight straight, including a 4-3 triumph over Triton College, which is ranked third in the nation and has finished second on each of the last two NJCAA World Series'.

Shane Heams has been far and away the offensive leader for the Cobras this year, hitting .516 with 4 home runs and 18 RBI's.

Last week, he was on a tare, going 25 for 37 at the plate.

Roger Bedeker has been the wins leader (4) in the pitching department to go along with a 1.75 ERA.

The Cobras will have four more away games before their Apr. 5 home-opener against Lake Land.
