Learning from the justice system

by Ann Ward
Prospectus Staff Writer

"I got interested in reading, and my light came on." — Robert Gayton.

"I have my cap on right. I know where I'm going." — Alfonso The.

"The work release program allowed me to try to put my best foot forward." — Jeff Jackson.

The three men quoted above told Parkland students Monday about their experiences in the criminal justice system and its effect on their families. It was part of the discussion, the impact of the criminal justice system on the black family, held in the X200 lounge as part of Parkland's celebration of Black History Month.

Gayton said he was in an out of trouble, doing three and four-month sentences while trying to get rich quick. Then he was sentenced to 10 years.

The hardest thing for his family to deal with, he said, was not knowing if he was safe. "After I established to them that I was safe, that brought a little security to their minds."

"Children are our most precious resource."

Gayton said his time in the Illinois Department of Corrections has changed him because there he has been turned on to education.

The story of Malcom X, Gayton said, has given him hope and inspired him to learn all he can. He plans to come to Parkland after he has completed his sentence and earned his G.E.D.

The, who will finish his sentence in eight months, said his jail time has been hard on his three children, especially on his son.

He said it hurts to talk with his children because "they want to be with me, and I want to be with them."

Jackson said that his jail sentence was hard on his family and that his brother seemed to grow up overnight.

"The work release program allowed me to try to put my best foot forward," he said. He has a better support system now with his new wife and stepdaughter, he said, and that helps to keep him from going back to jail.

Boneyard Creek fate soon to be decided

by Michael Sherwood
Prospectus Staff Writer

Champaign City Council members will make a decision concerning the Boneyard Creek detention facility within two months, according to the city's top official.

"It's time to fish or cut bait," Champaign Mayor Dan McCollum told Parkland's Community Newswriting class last week.

McCollum said the city established the Boneyard Improvement Fund in 1988 and has been setting aside funds ever since.

In addition, the city's contract with an engineering firm developing the Boneyard plan has reached its second year and is too expensive to warrant further delay, said McCollum.

Scott Park is still the most likely site for the deep detention facility.

McCollum said the facility must accommodate 100 acre-feet of water (four acres in size and 25 feet deep), which would provide 25-year protection for campustown.

Scott Park encompasses approximately four acres.

If there were a facility developed in the Scott Park area, McCollum said, it would involve the intersection of Third and Healey as well.

"The whole area would be close to eight acres," McCollum said. The consensus, he added, is that it not be deeper than 30 feet.

The detention facility would possess a grass bottom similar to the city's other detention area on Eureka St.

Costs will range from $10 million to $12 million during the first five years to up to $36 million for a "very extended period."

The University of Illinois will rework the channel from Wright St. to Lincoln Ave. with funds acquired from the state. Costs of their project are estimated at $6.7 million.

McCollum said the University has "built themselves into the problem" because of their encroachments on the creek over the years.

However, he labeled the Boneyard situation as basically Champaign's problem.

McCollum

"It's water generated in the city of Champaign and we're responsible for it," he said.

Champaign will be responsible for a portion of Amtrak if Governor Jim Edgar has his way.

McCollum indicated that Edgar expects $400,000 in station support from the cities Amtrak serves.

He said Edgar recently invited mayors from the cities involved to Springfield to describe options available. However, Edgar had already devised a plan.

McCollum likened the trip to the capitol as "bringing the sheep in to tell them what the shearing schedule would be."

He added that he's "very disturbed at the whole direction the state is taking. I don't think it has a surface transportation plan."

Ag-ers win honors at state conference

Three Parkland students received first-place rankings during a competition at the Illinois Post-Secondary Agriculture Student Organization (PAS) state conference in Peoria Feb. 9-10.

Tim Baker, Clinton, won first place in Ag Equipment, Noah Freeman, Lincoln, won first place in Plant Technology, and Staci Spencer, DeWitt, won first place in Animal Health during the Career Progress and Career Planning programs competition.

The three will go on to compete against contestants from 12 other states at the national PAS conference at Sioux Falls, S.D., in March.

Baker, Freeman and Spencer were three of 16 Parkland agriculture students who attended the conference, which also included a College Bowl competition, Agriculture Discussion Meet, prepared and impromptu speaking contests, and an ag computer contest.

During the Ag Discussion Meet, contestants displayed their abilities in an open forum discussion on the topic, "Handling Livestock Waste and Odor."

Freeman received the third highest individual score, and Aaron Nettleton, Foosland, placed fifth.

In team competitions, Parkland's agriculture computer team places second, with Jason Little, Rantoul, having the fourth highest individual score and Baker placing fifth.

Parkland's College Bowl team came in third.

Mike Kidd, Mansfield, and Matt McGrew, Fisher, acted as Parkland's official voting delegates during the Illinois PAS business activities.

Staci Spencer, a freshman agriculture student, was elected as Illinois PAS State Reporter.

Women from history come to PC Mar. 6

Parkland College continues a tradition by asking students, faculty, staff and the public to dress up as their favorite woman from history and come in character to a Woman's History Month reception Wed., Mar. 6, from 2-4 p.m. in the X220 Lounge.

Last year, Indira Ghamndi, Eleanor Roosevelt, Georgia O'Keefe, Margaret Mead, and Susan B. Anthony were among those who joined in the celebration and helped educate others about their lives and work.

This year, the Peggy Harris Memorial Recognition Award, honoring one or more career women from the community, will be presented for the first time.

Refreshments will be served.

Thein receives Ryoti memorial scholarship

Minn Thein has been awarded the Jayne Ryoti Memorial Scholarship.

The scholarship is offered in memory of Jayne Ryoti, a former Parkland mathematics instructor.

To be eligible for the award, a student must have a GPA of 3.5 or above and be enrolled in a mathematics-related transfer program.

Thein, of Champaign, is currently studying engineering science at Parkland.

He plans to transfer to the University of Illinois and is considering attending medical school.

tor of the Urbana Community Correctional Center, told the group that incarceration of the primary caregiver in a family can have a devastating effect on a child.

She also told the group that the number of women in jail has increased 53 percent in the past few years.

"Red, black, green, white, and brown children are our most precious resource," Randall said.

Care of the child of the incarcerated person often falls on the grandparents or other relatives, causing the child to feel lost or abandoned, she said.

It is harder for grandparents to take a child in, according to Randall, because many older people are on fixed incomes.

Many families, Randall said, must resort to selling family heirlooms, taking out loans, and mortgaging their homes to keep their troubled children out of jail. And all this is sometimes not enough, she said.

Cups focus of Art Gallery show at Parkland

by Jessica Marksteiner
Prospectus Staff Writer

Cups are a part of everyday life, but a showing of cups in the Parkland Art Gallery is a long way from everyday.

Hands, leaves and twigs furnish the motifs for a variety of cups.

One that seemed to attract the most attention was Ready-Made.

Created by Illinois artist Ron Maazanowski, Ready-Made is a sculpture of two hands that form a cup. The piece seems so real, it's as if the hands are reaching out to the viewer.

Another interesting piece is Flora Cup, by Katherine L. Ross, which looks as if it is comprised of sticks and leaves.

Point of View, by Bill Boyesen, garners quite a few looks — and second looks — because it shows two cups, both half-filled with what appears to be coffee but in reality is simply dried honey.

The show will continue through Mar. 29.

McCullum said inter-city transportation has always been the responsibility of the state and federal governments. He said it is "not what cities do."

Instead of the state building new roads, McCollum would like to see state revenue directed towards maintaining the existing transportation infrastructure such as Amtrak.

So at the Springfield meeting, McCollum proposed apportioning some of the revenue from the state fuel tax for support of public transportation. Kirk Brown, the Secretary of Transportation, dismissed it out-of-hand.

Champaign will delay
construction of the proposed MTD bus terminal
near the Amtrak tracks
until it becomes clear exactly what burden Edgar's Amtrak plan will put on the city.

"I think the scale of the terminal will need to be re-examined," McCollum said.

While speaking of revenue, McCollum said he does not believe the new development on North Prospect Ave. is making the city any richer. The city's property tax base has gone up, he said, but sales tax
"pays the freight."

He said the sales tax might take a jump but that the jump wouldn't be commensurate with the amount of development that has occurred.

McCullum believes Champaign approached its market share saturation point

after the development Market Place. If there were any room for growth aft-wards, Walmart and San achieved it.

McCullum said it cost the city $6 million to build roads to service North Prospect, and now it needs to build a fire station to provide protection, at a cost approaching $2 million in the first year.

"You have to take in a lot of property tax to pay for all of that," McCollum said.

McCollum planned to avoid yet another depletion of resources when he asks Urbana mayor Tod Satter-white to join him in asking the library boards of both cities to consider alternatives to the proposed construction of new libraries.

"Two new libraries in a metropolitan area does not make sense to me," McCollum said.

He declined to say he was in favor of merging the libraries but would say that now is the time to consider it.

McCollum said he always has been a proponent of inter-governmental cooperation, up to and including merger of the two cities.

There are numerous inter-governmental agreements that try to make a two-city system work, he said. He gave as examples:
METCAD, which divides patches for both cities from one central location and the soon-to-be-completed satellite jail, which will handle all booking operations for the twin cities and county.

Cobras reaching end to poor season

by Brandon Lewis
Sports Editor

The Cobra women continue their downward spiral losing two of their last three 71-43 to Kankakee Feb. 13, and 79-65 to Lakeland Feb. 15 before finally winning one 77-31 in a blow out over Lincoln Land Feb. 17.

In action against the 23-2 Kankakee Cavaliers, the Cobras couldn't get anything to go their way. The team made only 14 of 48 from the field while getting killed on the glass 37-22.

Only two players scored more than three points in the whole game, Ruth Hawthorne with 14 and Stacy Terneus with 12.

The team overall was almost completely shut down in the second half scoring only 18 points.

Against Lakeland, the Cobras played a much better game leading at the half 35-31. But the Cobras failed to put together a solid second half, getting outscored by Lakeland 48-30 and ending up with their 18th loss of the season 79-65.

The Cobras once again were killed on the glass pulling down only 40 boards to Lakeland's 57.

This time Stephanie Poshard led the team's scoring attack with 22 points while Stephanie Huelsing chipped in with 12.

The Cobras finally got a chance to stop their losing streak with a trip to Springfield to face the rather young Lincoln Land squad which boasts only two sophomores, and they took full advantage of the opportunity.

The Cobras routed the Lady Loggers 77-31. Parkland's defense allowed Lincoln Land to make only nine shots from the field the entire game and only ten points in the first half.

The Cobras also cleaned up on the glass holding a 56-24 rebounding advantage

Cobras conquer Kankakee Cavs

by Brandon Lewis
Sports Editor

With only eight games left on the schedule for Parkland's 11-11 men's basketball team, it was sink or swim when they hosted the 17-9 Kankakee Cavaliers.

The Cobras elected to swim, upsetting Kankakee 92-83.

The greatly-outsized Cobras had to count on their outside game on both ends of the court, hitting 11 of 28 from three-point land and allowing zero three point shots from their opponents.

Jeremy Pettit led the long-range attack for the Cobras sinking five of his twelve three point attempts.

Sophomore Demetrious Liberty also played well on the offensive end, leading his team in scoring with 20 points as well as in assists with six.

Despite the great size disadvantage, the Cobras still managed to hold a 39-

28 rebounding advantage by out hustling the Cavaliers.

The Cobras did a solid job of shutting down the Cavaliers on offense by keeping them off balance. The one player that gave Parkland problems was freshmen forward Elmer Harrison who led all scorers with 22 points and was unconscious from the field hitting 11 of 15.

The win should help vault the Cobras in the right direction for the stretch run coming up to end the regular season. It lifted the Cobras record back over the .500 mark to 12-11 on the season.

over the Lady Loggers.

Stacy Terneus once again played well for the Cobras scoring 18 while making 4 of 7 from the three point arc.

Rantoul High product Tashia Smith also had a big game recording a double-double scoring 16 while grabbing 13 rebounds.

The blowout win raised the Cobras record to 9-18 on the season.

With only two games left this season before the Region 24 tournament, Feb. 23 at Vincennes College and at home Feb. 24 against Rend Lake, the Cobras will need some solid play from their bench as well as a balanced scoring attack if they want to end the season on a high note.

Oops...

Last week we mistakenly printed the Region 24 pre-season baseball poll before all votes had been cast by the coaches. We regret the error.

Due to mistaken information, Parkland was listed as fifth in the poll when in fact, they ranked third.
