Parkland summer enrollment dips by 179

BY JACOB LIVENGOOD
PROSPECTUS NEWS EDITOR

After two summers of growth in enrollment, Parkland's has dipped slightly this year, according to Mike Henry, Director of Admissions and Records.

Over 3,964 are enrolled in classes at Parkland, 1,240 are full-time students (those with at least 12 credit hours), according to the Summer '97 tenth day figures.

In the summer of '96, 4,143 students enrolled in classes — a 4.3% difference.

Although the overall numbers are low, Henry says the number of degree seeking students taking classes has increased.

"It seems that more Parkland students are taking advantage of the summer as a way to complete or speed up their programs," said Henry.

Losses in enrollment are reflected in the number of non-degree seeking students, said Henry.

So why has the number of non-degree seeking students dropped?

Henry says it may be linked to the availability of summer employment and the decision of students who are attending other institutions to work, rather than attend summer school.

- 17-20 age group showed an increase of 6.1%
- Midterm FTE was up 1.8% over Spring 1996.
- Male enrollment showed a slight increase of 0.7%
- Full-time enrollment was up 5.6%
- FTE at the end of the semester was up 1.5%
- Non-credit registrants increased by 43.8% over Spring 1996.
- Increases were made in several ethnic categories to further diversify the student body.
- Grand Total enrollment is up 3.6%.

But campus crime isn't up

Public Safety calls increase

BY JACOB LIVENGOOD
PROSPECTUS NEWS EDITOR

Total calls to Parkland Security increased 12 percent in the past six months — but crime isn't up on campus.

The increase (9,594 calls this year, 8,566 last year) was caused by an increase in requests for information and vehicle help.

"We've taken students to the gas station to fill up, and we also help with jump starts," Paul Sarantakos, director of Public Safety, said.

He said his department has "a unique situation as compared to the municipal setting because we have more staff on foot as opposed to sitting in cars."

Parkland has two classifications of Public Safety personnel: officers and security patrol officers.

Sarantakos says many students are not aware of the extensive training undertaken by public safety officers.

"They are sworn police officers and undergo each of the tests to achieve that," he said. "Public safety officers must also be licensed EMT's."

Security Patrol officers, Sarantakos says, are the eyes and ears of the department. They respond to the service calls.

Most of the calls received by the department are vehicle assists, medical calls, theft, or traffic accidents.

"I'm glad we are in more of a public relations role," said Sarantakos, "but we do have those occasions that require us to use our police skills."

One of the services that Sarantakos wishes students and staff would use more is the escort service. Officers provide this service to the person's vehicle 24 hours a day from any campus location.

Summer safety

BY JACOB LIVENGOOD

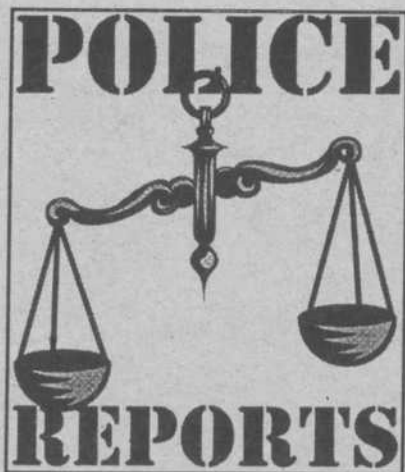

Summer school brings about changes to students as well as the department of public safety.

Sarantakos says there are no changes in the type of crimes or calls during the summer, although the number of calls is certainly down.

As for the public safety staff, Sarantakos says the base number stays the same. Two officers are on a nine month contract with all of the summer session off.

"We try to schedule vacations for the officers during the summer," says Sarantakos, "but the number of officers is basically the same."

Camerata members, guests tour Italy, Austria

BY JACOB LIVENGOOD
PROSPECTUS NEWS EDITOR

In the midst of summer, many college students take a break from the daily grind—a summer getaway.

Taking a trip, however, isn't always fun and games. Just ask Parkland's Camerata.

The choir's excursion to Florence, Venice, Salzburg, and Vienna from May 29 - June 10 was what director Sandra Chabot called "a hectic pace."

"There was no relaxing time. It was very strenuous," said Chabot.

That's a sign of dedication and hard work, and Chabot, 27 Camerata members and 24 guests can certainly attest to that.

The choir performed 11 concerts: five full concerts, two masses, and four impromptu.

Some may recognize impromptu meaning on the spur-of-the-moment (like that final term paper) but Chabot said even the impromptu performances were scheduled. "In those places you just can't stop and sing with your group," said Chabot.

"Those places" are the ones where the greatest conductors have led soloists and musical groups to express their works. Beethoven, Bach, and Handel to name a few.

Chabot said the realization that she was conducting there was awe-inspiring.

"There was one performance where I was totally overcome," said Chabot.

Parkland Camerata

Sandy Chabot, (l) director, with members of the Parkland Camerata performed 11 concerts this summer in Florence, Venice, Salzburg and Vienna.

"I was so overcome that I stopped conducting after a phrase. I lifted my arms and stopped. What's amazing is that the Camerata followed me. Their mouths were wide open."

Another highlight, according to Chabot, was representing Parkland College overseas.

"There were signs advertising our performances all over the cities," said Chabot with a smile. "We were fascinated to see Parkland College on the walls overseas."

It's a small world after all

Parkland choral group experiences European culture

By Jacob Livengood
Prospectus News Editor

One their trip to Europe, the Parkland Camerata and Sandy Chabot, their leader, agreed: as the Disney song says, "It's a small world after all."

After taking a 13-day trip to Florence, Venice, Salzburg, and Vienna, the 27 choral member, 24 guest group saw many similarities to East Central Illinois overseas.

"We realized how much we were like Austria, and Germany," said Camerata Director Sandra Chabot, who is know retired after

When the group entered Italy, however, differences were evident.

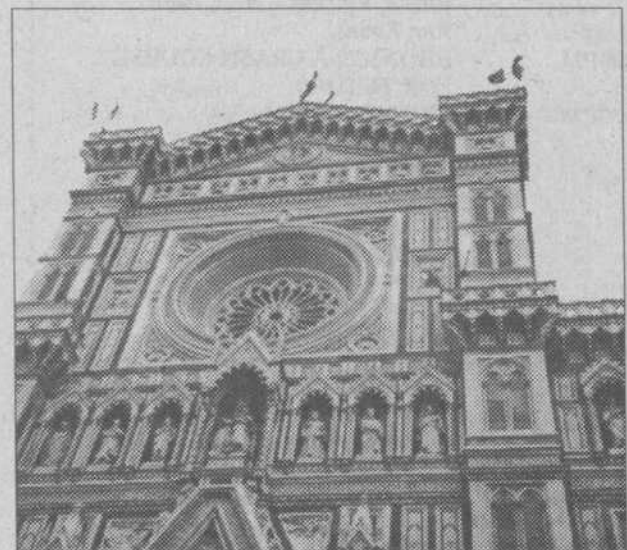

"Italy was much more foreign," said Chabot.

Camerata member and full-time student Brad Jenks said in Italy there was a greater fear of "getting ripped off."

"You felt a lot safer with your money in the other countries," said Jenks. "But the people over there seemed to have a greater appreciation for the arts." Jennifer Berry, another full-time Parkland student agrees. "Italy was a little dirtier, but the people over there seemed to respect each other a little more."

One other difference was noticed—the food.

"They have pasta that puts ours to shame," said Chabot.

The cultural diversity was also evident in the cathedrals, according to Chabot. The Camerata performed in many different cathegoing, warm-hearted and active. It was like the present was happening in an old building. It was a cultural "whammo."

Chabot said the trip surprisingly didn't have many drawbacks. "We were extremely blessed."

"The people were extremely blessed.

"There were two very special experiences," said Chabot. "Mass at St. Marks Venice was set in an older style. An Italian priest was formal, almost mystical.

"The people were extremely gracious," said Chabot. "There was no Anti-Americanism."

One instance reminded Chabot how it truly is a small world. "One of our members ran into her optometrist. He and his wife were touring overseas. What are the chances of that happening?"

Parkland decorated by local Girl Scout troops

BY JACOB LIVENGOOD
PROSPECTUS EDITOR

Girl Scout troops from the area earned various badges on our campus by planting a variety of flowers.

Parkland's grounds crew lent a helping hand with the landscaping this summer.

"Groundskeeper Rick Cushman helped out tremendously," said Anita Broeren, director, college development.

Participating troops were Troop 404 of Urbana, Troop 456 of Gifford, and Troop 358 of St. Joseph.

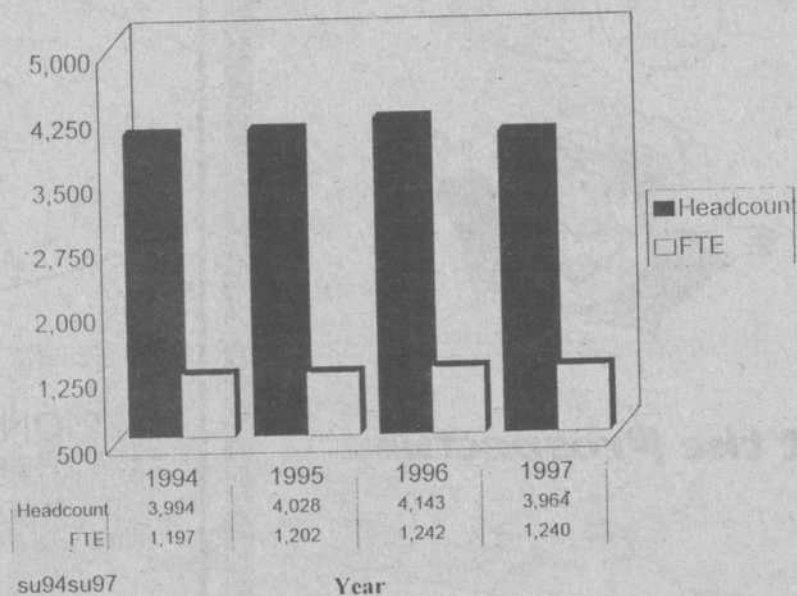

Students can enjoy the flowers, now in full bloom, in the "B" building area.

New math chair looks to future

By JACOB LIVENGOOD
PROSPECTUS NEWS EDITOR

When Jim Hall, Parkland's new mathematics and computer sciences department chair, came to Parkland in 1975, a course in sliderules was offered.

Now, Hall says, the demand for computer science courses is hard to keep up with.

"We have people on waiting lists for many of our computer classes," said Hall, "especially those involving the internet."

Presently, Hall says

Parkland is at the cutting edge of technology. "We just purchased 32 more computers. Eleven are installed already."

After taking the department chair position on July 1, Hall says the job is hectic.

"Every 10 minutes there is a change," said Hall. "Being department chair carries a variety of duties. It's fun."

Hall's road to the department chair has taken many turns. His prior experience includes instruction at Clayton State College in Atlanta, three years as a teaching assistant at Oklahoma State University, and one year at Northern Arizona University.

Hall replaced Laverne McFadden, who will be returning as an instructor.

"The transition was smooth," said Hall. "I shadowed Laverne for about a month. We went to meetings together and went through the department files."

Hall said secretary Linda Crowley was also a tremendous help in the transition.
