Y-Unit 4 plan announced PC-YMCA architect selection starts

BY GENE WALAG PROSPECTUS STAFF WRITER

McKliney YMCA and Parkland officials today are starting the process of selecting the architect for the proposed $4 million YMCA building to be constructed on the Parkland campus.

Doug Linder, Y executive director, told Newswriting II students last week that his organization is discussing with the Unit 4 School Board a lease-and-buy agreement for the present Y properin Champaign.

The plan would give Central High School a sixlane swimming pool and extra gym space. Central swimmers now must use the Centennial pool. The Y would continue to operate some of its programs in the present building.

In January, the Parkland and YMCA boards reached an agreement in concept to build a 42,000 sq. ft. facility on 10 acres of College grounds. The agreement calls for ground breaking by September, 1998.

Linder told the atric programs."

Poet Allison Joseph at Parkland

Award-winning Illinois poet reads her work and answers questions

BY ALEXANDER LOBEL FEATURES EDITOR

Writing poetry in traditional forms helped her to better understand how to teach an appreciation of traditional poetry, Allison Joseph, award-winning Illinois poet, said here last week.

Parkland celebrated National Poetry Month with a reading by Joseph, who also answered questions.

Born in London of Caribbean ancestry, Joseph grew up in Toronto and in the Bronx, New York. Currently, she teaches English Illinois University at Carbondale. Her first book, What Keeps Us Here, won the 1992 Women Poets Series Prize and the John C. Zacharis

First Book Prize from Plowshares and Emerson College.

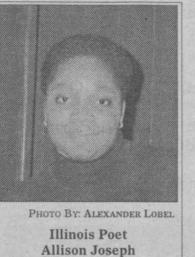

Joseph also received several other awards and fellowships, but her success is best doc-

> How does poetry transform the poet? Joseph writes in an introduction to her poems in Tamaqua: "As a poet, I am able to speak in a way I would never speak in 'ordinary' life. When I write poetry, I write with more courage, more wisdom, and more chutzpah than I actually have. Poetry is a medium that has allowed me to become a better human being."

> In celebration of National Poetry Month, the Champaign Public Library has put together a series of readings and workshops, some of which are still upcoming:

> The Poetry Coffeehouse invites beatniks, bards, and scribblers of all ages to share their work in an informal setting (refreshments served) on April 24, at 7 p.m.

On April 25, at 7 p.m., Kevin Stein will give a poetry reading together with John Knoepfle.

Richard Jones will read his poetry on April 29, at 7 p.m.

More special events and "We are also very proud to children's programs about poetry are scheduled for

Of course, to the poet and poetry lover, every month is poetry month. Morgan plans to have an interview with, and more poetry by Joseph in the next issue of Tamaqua. For more information on Allison Joseph or Tamaqua ask Bruce Morgan at C225, or call 351-2380.

How bleak they all are: our cities full of dealers haunting streetcorners, children their easy prey when families don't speak, except in anger. Every teen drinks, then drives, inhales, the shoots, dropping out, turning off. Every mother struggles with too many kids, child support late or not coming at all, checks too meager to ensure nutrition, vaccinations. Every daughter hides condoms in her room, every son thinks of how not to wear them, endangering lives for seconds of pleasure, momentary bliss. How little faith we have in each other, how few possibilities in these thirty second bits of life where someone is always about to give birth out of wedlock, where babies are stolen, neglected, where mothers smoke all nine months before delivery. But the faces we watch merely mimic our distress, actors trained to be like us, mime our problems. When we turn the tv off, all we have left is a toll-free number and a brief bit of hope that someone will answer on the other end, that someone will honor our crisis calls, hear our shaky voices.

After taking three of four during the week versus Springfield (won both) and Lakeland (1of 2) the Lady Cobras began play Saturday morning with 19-10.

In the opener versus Lincoln Trail, Jennifer Schiminski hurled a sparkling no hit game, the first for Parkland's ace this season, and the club cruised to a 12-0 laugher ending at five innings on the 10-run rule. The Cobras scored in every frame except the fourth including a big five-run third inning.

In game 2, the women pounded seven hits and Schiminski allowed only two as they breezed by the lady loggers 5-0.

day matched Wabash against Parkland. This proved to be the most difficult contest of the day. Schiminski on the mound again gave up one run tigued after pitching all three games, but hung in there scattering six Wabash hits. The Cobras bats erupted in the sixth stanza to break open a 1-1 tie with consistent hitter Erin Malloy coming through again with a game winning double. The Co- a bang in the bottom of the bras padded their lead in the frame with two more tallies and held on for a 4-1 win.

With great hitting support from Jill Duzan and Alicia Suits (2 hits apiece in game 2) and Lindy Corrigan (2 dbls vs.Wabash) and quality fielding throughout ,Parkland improved to 22-10 and Schiminski, including her no-hitter, a very respectable 21-6.

Parkland now had only The final game of the to win two on Saturday to claim their own invite championship. Again Schiminski took the mound versus Lincoln Trail after no hitting them less than 24 hours before. The game early on and looked fa- was scoreless through three before Parkland got on the board with 1 in the fourth and 3 each in the fifth and sixth. The game ended with a 7-0 Lady Cobra victory and a meeting with tough Wabash for the title.

> This game started with first when Niki Cutchin sent a rocket into left for a run scoring triple. Amanda Hardcastle stroked a double in the second that wound up being the game winning hit as it scored Schiminski and the squad chalked up one more in the inning to push the score to 3-0.

> Wabash tried to make the game interesting in their final three at bats scoring 1 in the fifth and 1 in the seventh and final inning. Again the defense held, and the tired but happy Schiminski completed a 5 game weekend sweep allowing only 17 hits and 3 runs in 32 and 2/3 innings.

Parkland slides past Cowder!!!

By Steven West SPORTS WRITER

The mens baseball team (31-15) went into action against Cowder on the 20th. Parkland wa victorious in the first game, (12-4) while the second game was cancelled due to weather. Ryan Tabling of Parkland pitched a great game in which coach Rod Lovett described as lousy conditions. Tabling only allowed four runs against Cowder, which is ranked fifth in the nation for hitting. Moller and Cameron, also really came through for the Cobras at the plate. Both players had two hits in the 6th and 7th inning, which pushed the cobras over Cowder. Coach Lovett is also very pleased with the way his team has stepped up, and taken charge at the plate. The Cobras have won eleven of their last twelve, and only two of those games the cobras have not scored at least four runs. Lovett said "The good offense is taking a lot of pressure off my pitchers."
