Parkland students pleased with Job Fair '99

By: SHANAH LIA RICHARDSON
PROSPECTUS STAFF WRITER

There was no score flashing on the scoreboard in the Parkland Gym Thursday evening but the atmosphere was still competitive as students tried to outdo each other in interviews with companies at the annual Parkland job fair.

Job-seekers included Parkland and University of Illinois students, as well as high students and other members of the community.

"I think we here interviewed mostly Parkland students, but I would be hard-pressed to give a percentage," said RN Dawn Kingston from Carle.

Some employers were hiring for upper-level positions, but most were looking for people to fill entry-level slots.

"We like to hire applicants for entry positions and train them to do things our way," said News-Gazette Human Resources Director Krista Webber.

Many positions companies at the job fair were looking to fill did not require a long list of credentials, just a lot of enthusiasm.

"We look for people with job skills and the will to work," said Express Personnel's Cheri Angelo, Personnel Supervisor.

Although some students were looking for a career, many were in search of a less permanent position.

"I'm just looking for a part-time job for the summer," said Judah Christian high school student Jared Young.

Many employers at the job fair understood that a number of applicants were no seeking a long-term career.

"We are always happy if they decide to stay with the company, but we understand many applicants are students looking to get through school," said Senior Merchandising Assistant Linda Ghrist of JCPenney.

Some students searching for careers in their field or major, however, considered their options limited.

"They don't have a lot in my field, so it limits me, said Parkland Student Batina Louie. "A lot of positions require a degree from a four-year college. Next year I hope they have more companies looking for applicants with two-year degrees, since this is a community college."

Parkland does, however, give regard to students' needs when choosing which companies to invite to the job fair.

"We try to invite companies that provide opportunities in career fields that are focused on at Parkland," said Gerry

11 telecourses to be offered this summer

Parkland will offer 11 telecourses this summer.

A telecourse includes weekly two-hour video lessons, required readings, and optional meetings with faculty as well as call-in hours and scheduled on-campus exams.

The summer telecourses are: Accounting Principles I (ACC 101-08); Introduction to Cultural Anthropology (ANT 103-081); Introduction to Business (BUS 101-08); Principles of business Law (BUS 205-081); Principles of Economics II (ECO 102-081); History of the U.S. 1865 to Present (HIS 105-081) Principles of Management (MGT 101-081) American National Government (POS 1220081) Introduction to Psychology (PSY 101-08); Introduction to Child Psychology (PSY 207-081) Introduction to Sociology (SOC 101-081).

Telecourses may be viewed on Parkland College Educational Television (PCETV) on Time Warner Cable Channel 9, Heartland Wireless Cable Channel 50, and Triax Cable channel 13 (in Gifford, Ludlow, Thomasboro, and Rantoul only).

As a public service, several area video rental stores and libraries check out videotape lessons free to registered telecourse students.

They are: Parkland College

Library, Forrest Library, Moyer Library, J.T. and E.J. Crumbauth Memorial Library, Monticello Video, Paxton Carnegie Library, St. Joseph Library, and Take one Video and Tuscola Library.

A set of VHS tapes for most telecourses also can be rented for a semester from RMI, an independent firm.

Wisconsin law students work to save man on death row

MADISON, Wisc. (CPX) - Four law students at the University of Wisconsin at Madison are working long hours these days to save a man's life.

Hundreds of miles away from their cluttered offices filled with court records sits convicted murderer Jeffery Day Reiber, one of the 160 inmates sitting on death row in Alabama.

Reiber was convicted in 1992 of killing a convenience store clerk during a robbery. He often thinks of the students scrambling to help him because he knows his life depends in part on their work.

The students can't seem to ditch thoughts of Reiber either. They've shunned the fun of the college scene - the bars, parties, and late-night conversations with friends - to help a man they barely know. They are the first Wisconsin law students to visit a prisoner on death row while working on a capital case.

"It's strange at first to meet your client on death row," said Elliot Milhollin, one of the students working on the Reiber case. "It puts an interesting take on things. I'm doing all of this research on constitutional standards, which is very abstract until you meet Jeff."

Tina Galbraith, who accompanied Milhollin to meet Reiber, agreed.

"When I started working on the case, I wondered if you can separate yourself as an attorney from your clients, and in some sense you can," she said. "But with this case, I think it's a lot different. When it's 10 p.m., I can close my books on homework, but I stay up and work on this project. The stakes are different."

It seems silly to fret over grades in this class - titled Law and Contemporary Problems: The Death Penalty - led by law professor Frank Tuerkheimer. The former federal prosecutor has been working on Reiber's appeal since 1996, shortly after former student at the Equal Justice Initiative, an Alabama organization that works with death-row inmates, asked him to take the case.

Tuerkheimer sensed the case's importance and recruited two attorneys from his law firm and students, Milhollin, Galbraith, Fred Burnside, and Mary Sowinski to help him.

"It's an experience that most law students don't get," Tuerkheimer said.

The group is seeking to overturn Reiber's death sentence on an appeal that focuses on whether he received proper representation from his court-appointed attorney. Tuerkheimer says he believes Reiber, who, like many death-row inmates, has little money, was not given an adequate defense.

A jury recommended that Reiber receive life in prison without parole, but a judge overruled that recommendation and sentenced him to death. Under Alabama law, judges are not required to follow juries' sentencing recommendations in capital murder cases, but must give them a great deal of weight. Alabama is just one of only four states where a judge isn't bound by a jury's decision.

The judge deciding Reiber's fate imposed the death penalty because he said the murder was premeditated and that Reiber shot the store clerk twice - the second time while she was helpless, Tuerkheimer said.

The appeal could take several more years to complete, he added.

"I was opposed to the death penalty before this case," Milhollin told the Badger Herald. "But now I'm opposed to it for so many other reasons."

Student files lawsuit after getting misspelled tattoo

ROSEVILLE, Mich. (CPX) - A Wayne State University student wishes he'd used a dictionary before he let an artist tattoo the word "villian" on his arm.

Lee Williams, 23, didn't notice the misspelling until a friend made fun of him, according to court records filed Feb. 24. Williams is seeking $25,000 damages against a parlor named Eternal Tattoos.

To cover up the mistake, he had plastic surgery, which cost him $1,900 and left him with a "scar as long as his forearm," William's attorney, Paul Clark, said.

Williams got the tattoo - which should have read "villain" - in 1996. Before the procedure, workers at the parlor argued over how to spell the word, Clark said.

Williams wasn't sure either. The artist had a 50-50 shot, and chose the misspelling.

Terry Welker, the parlor's owner, said the parlor has a policy of asking all customers how they want words spelled. He said that if a customer agrees to a misspelling, "that falls back on them, not the artist."

What evolution truly is about

As a teacher of Bio 107-Introduction to Evolution-here at Parkland, articles about evolutionary theory always catch my attention. J. David Osinga's "Inherent Inequalities in Evolutionary Thinking" was no exception. Unfortunately, it was more for its misunderstandings about evolution than for its enlightenment.

Many of the author's statements demonstrate a fundamental lack of understanding about the basic concepts of evolution as well as what evolution teaches us about human society. The most prominent of these is the suggestion that evolution somehow produces "superior" organisms, with life moving from "lower" stages to "higher" forms ultimately culminating in the most superior of all life, human beings. As he states "In the end, ideally, we are supposed to have this great and powerful organism (right now classified as 'human') that overcame billions of years of obstacles in evolution.

This powerful organism is therefore superior to all other organisms below it....."

Osinga's statement represents a commonly held belief about evolution that is just plain wrong. There is no inherent progress, no ultimate goal for evolution other than survival and reproduction. Humans are no more highly evolved than any number of other organisms who have managed to successfully adapt to whatever environment they find themselves. The simplest bacteria, the mightiest oak, the fleetest cheetah, the most repulsive worm are all equally "evolved," with each possessing a unique set of characteristics. The guiding principle of evolution, it seems, is not the concept of progress or superiority but themore mundane (and much less glamorous) idea of "whatever works."

Stephen Jay Gould has often defined evolution as simply the adaptation of organisms to local environments. No superior organisms in that definition. Just a bunch of living things struggling to survive and pass their genes on to the next generation and finding a myriad of ways to do so.

David, I don't have the space and this probably isn't the best forum to address some of the other misunderstandings you have, but you are welcome to stop by my office (L-117) any time to continue the discussion. Better yet, you and any others who would like to know more about evolution and what it really is all about are welcome to join me next fall by taking Bio 107. Not only will you have the opportunity to learn about one of the most fascinating, powerful scientific ideas of the century but also get credit for a general education requirement to boot. What a deal!

History doesn't support the president's words

The president of the United States stated concerning the three American troops taken by the Serbs: "We take care of our own." I support our troops, but I lack the resolve to believe the words of our current or former commander's in chiefs. "We take care of our own." If we take care of our own, then why have we left military retirees without the medical care they were promised? In countless cases we were told that if we spent 20 or more years in the service of our country we and our families would have free medical care for life. Retired Military do not get the free health care promised.

And for other Veterans, besides the retirees, the Veteran's administration is poorly funded, resulting in downsizing at VA Hospitals, poor quality of care, and long delays in processing disability claims.

Now to the world he says, "We take care of our own." Where, might I ask, is he, the Congress, or our government taking care of the hundreds of thousands of retirees who were promised medical care? He speaks as if he means we will take care of our service personnel, but in reality it is only words, because it sounds like the right thing to say in this situation.

Hogwash. We were promised lifetime medical care and now we are forgotten, or we are required to pay, pay and pay some more - that is, if we can afford to pay. Even though we paid with our life's work, dedicated to the work of keeping this country free.

Dan Cedusky

Cease Fire

I would like to start by saying that NATO's bombing of the Serbs is barbaric. It is no more or less barbaric than ethnic cleansing; it is just barbaric. Let me tell about myself. My name is Rod, and I am a warrior. I have served on active duty in the United States Army and was assigned as an infantryman to the 82nd Airborne Division when the Gulf War kicked off. I was President Bush's line in the sand. Later, as a reservist, I was deployed to Bosnia as a member of NATO's SFOR (Stabilization FORce). It was while I was stationed in Bosnia that I learned of this volatile region's history. I love my country and consider myself a patriot. I have spent my adult life serving my country. I love the institution of the military but am deeply embarrassed by the way it has been ordered to act in regards to Yugoslavia. NATO has set a precedent that will be costly to continue throughout Europe; a precedent of involving itself in civil wars. This precedent of being the world's police agency is one that is costly to all and one which we cannot afford; we cannot afford its cost in dollars or lives of patriotic young Americans. In Bosnia, NATO became involved because of other nations acting within the borders of a sovereign nation. Kosovo is a providence of Serbia, which is a republic of Yugoslavia; it is not a sovereign nation. Comparing the current situation to the one in Bosnia is insane. Military actions is useful for only one thing, and that is imposing one country's political will upon another. Is it right what the Serbs are doing to the Kosovars? No it is not, nor is it right to bomb the Serbs into submission. How many civilians is Serbia or Kosovo must die in order to appease the leaders of NATO's powerhouses? How many more innocent children must die at the hand of errant bombs? NATO has admitted that they cannot see the damage the bombs have done because of weather. It is not realistic to believe that every bomb dropped in a populated area will fall on its intended military target. NATO commanders talk of collateral damage, but that is just a politically correct term for civilians dead. How many more must die? Let us not take this sitting down. Stand up with me. Stand up for piece. Stand up for the sons and daughters of this great country. Let our voices unite and ring in Washington, London, and Brussels when we say loud and proud, "CEASE FIRE."

TRUE TV PRESENTS

EDtv has audiences tuning in

BY: RYAN FITZGERALD
PROSPECTUS MOVIE COLUMNIST

From Ron Howard, director of Apollo 13 and Backdraft, EDtv is another movie to add to the must-see list of movies of 1999. This star-studded cast gives a great performance in what is Ron Howard's best comedy/drama since Cocoon.

Matthew McConaughey and Jenna Elfman head a cast that includes Academy Award winner Martin Landau, Ellen Degeneres, Dennis Hopper, Elizabeth Hurley, Woody Harrelson, Rob Riner, and many others. Howard even brought back "what's his name," a.k.a. Ralph Mouth from Happy Days - I bet that guy needed a break.

EDtv is a story about a video store clerk named Ed who is discovered by a struggling cable company who wants to put his life on television for twenty-four hours a day, all part of a new concept brought on by a television executive, played by Degeneres. Within three days of telecasting his life, EDtv suddenly becomes a hit when Ed falls in love with his brothers girlfriend, played by Elfman. After that, Ed's life rollercoasters as his popularity booms, turning an ordinary man into an icon of American television.

EDtv is a funny and heartfelt story. You will laugh and you will cry - all in the same minute. It reveals so much about who we are and how we let television and the media be a reflection of our society.

In a way, this film makes a mockery of an industry that has been the centerfuse of the American culture for many years but still allows us to laugh at ourselves in the process. McConaughey gives his best performance yet as Ed.

This is the feel-good movie of the year that everyone will enjoy. Rated PG-13 for strong language and sexual content.

On a 1-5 scale I give it a 4.

Radical feminist professor ordered to teach men

BOSTON (CPX) - Boston College Professor Mary Daly, who for 25 years has been teaching women-only classes, has been ordered to open up her courses to men, too.

Faced with the threat of lawsuit, college officials told Daly in December that she needed to allow men into her courses on advanced feminist theory. They've had similar talks with the self-described "positively revolting hag" in the past. The college reprimanded her in 1974 and 1989 for her women-only stance, but the issue died down each time, school officials said.

However, the latest round of complaints appeared headed to court, prompting school officials to insist that Daly change her ways because they don't give the school a "legal leg to stand on," a school spokesman said.

Daly, who has taken a leave of absence, has refused and gone public with her protest. She defends her single-sex classroom, insisting that it allows women to feel freer to "really talk and explore ideas." Daly is quick to add that she's willing to work with men on an individual basis and offer them the same curriculum that she gives her female students. She simply asks that men stay out of her classrooms.

Daly's reasoning and her policy upset senior Duane Naquin and junior Matthew Glazier. Both students complained. Naquin, backed by the Center for Individual Rights, a public-interest law firm, threatened to sue the college if he wasn't admitted.

The college has offered Daly, who is 70 and the author of seven books, including The Church and the Second Sex and Gyn/Ecology: the Metaethics of Radical Feminism, early retirement. She has refused the initial proposal, saying that she will retire when she can do so at her own discretion.

Study finds similarity in ethics of MBA students, prison inmates

CHICAGO (CPX) - Companies looking for a few good hires may want to recruit from local business schools, a new study suggests.

It's not that MBA students are sleazeballs, it's just that convicted felons enrolled in college courses are more honorable and ethical than you might expect, the study author's said.

Marketing professors James Stearns of Miami University and Shaheen Borna of Ball State University interviewed 300 inmates attending higher education programs at three minimum-security prisons in the Midwest. They compared the responses with those given by MBA students at 11 business schools.

Stearns and Borna found that when faced with tough business decisions the prisoners showed just as much integrity as the MBA students - and in some cases even more.

Among other specific findings:

- Inmates were more likely to follow orders in ethically difficult situations, regardless of whether the outcome would be positive or negative.

- Inmates were less likely than business school students to "pirate" workers with specific, valuable skills from competing companies.
- Inmates were more interested in customer service than MBA students, who tended to focus more on pleasing stockholders.

The professors said they hope their findings will encourage more business owners to give former prisoners a chance in the workplace.

"The perception is that convicted felons are unemployable because they adhere to a different set of values," Stearns told the Chronicle of Higher Education.

"Yet, they must have employment to remain viable in society. This research shows their values are not that much different. And, in some situations, their values are more laudable."

Job Fair '99

Hough, the director of Career Planning and Employment Services at Parkland.

Companies at the job fair reported strong results in hiring at this and similar events.

"They are one of the best places to go," said Webber. "We can meet all types here instead of just those with skills concentrated only in one area."

"We love the job fairs because the applicants we find here have good job skills," said Angelo.

Parkland is not able to keep statistics on exactly how many applicants at the job fair are actually hired by the companies represented.

"We do a survey of the companies to find out how many applications and resumes they took, but it is too early to know how many result in the applicant actually being hired," said Hough.

Job-seekers had even more potential employers to talk to this year than at previous job fairs.

"This year we had 101 companies, which is more than usual," said Hough. "We had 92 companies show up last year."

Most students were pleased with the options available.

"It's wonderful how they bring in all these jobs to help us decide where to work," said Parkland student Keith Kilgore. "There are a lot of things to choose from."

The employers present also expressed satisfaction with the applicants they found at the job fair.

"I've been impressed by all the people who have come by," said Webber. "They really seem to know what they are looking for."

UIUC student sentenced for fines

URBANA (CPX) - A former student at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign has been sentenced to two years of court supervision for failing to return about 180 overdue library books.

Deputy university librarian Frances O'Brien and Sean Harte ignored repeated letters and phone calls requesting the books' returns for more than a year.

Police finally seized the books from Harte's home last year, and Harte pleaded guilty to misdemeanor theft.

Harte, 32, was a political science graduate student when he racked up $13,600 in fines and replacement costs during the 1996-97 school year.

Stop by your transfer or counseling center, or call UIC at (312) 996-4350, for an application.

Your distinctive education for real-world success

You can be a chiropractic physician in five years.

Why settle for anything less?

The time is right to learn more about a rewarding and fulfilling career as a doctor of chiropractic. Greater emphasis is being placed on preventive care and non-invasive health methods in today's modern health-care system. In five academic years, you can graduate with a doctorate and be licensed to practice anywhere in the U.S. and Canada.

Known for academic excellence, Logan College is on the cutting edge of curriculum innovations. In addition to offering a quality clinical program, Logan provides value-added business management training. This gives graduating practitioners a winning edge with better leadership and practice enhancement skills.

Logan College of Chiropractic is now accepting applications. Write, call or check our Internet Website for a free descriptive brochure and admission kit.

UNIVERSITY of ILLINOIS at SPRINGFIELD

"UIS Provides Individual Attention with a 14:1 Student/Teacher Ratio."

Because of small class sizes, UIS faculty are able to work closely with students, providing a "hands-on" educational experience, essential to the development of working skills. The College of Health and Human Services prepares students to be social workers, teachers, counselors, school administrators, gerontologists, nurses, researchers, and public health specialists. Learn from faculty who have national and/or international reputations - and graduate with a highly respected University of Illinois degree.

The University of Illinois at Springfield offers:

- An Affordable, High Quality Education
- 22 Bachelor's and 21 Master's Degree Programs
- Financial Aid Opportunities
- On-Campus Housing (Apartment Style)

To find out more about admissions requirements call the UIS Office of Enrollment Services today at 1-800-252-8533, ext. 20.

Set your goals high.
We'll help get you there.

Sometimes reaching your goals seems like an impossible task. In the Air Force you'll get the tools you need to reach any goal you set. We'll help get you there by:

- providing education opportunities with tuition assistance
- establishing leadership skills for a promising future
- preparing you for a career in life

You can earn up to $9,000 enlistment bonus, if you qualify. So, if you're between the ages of 17-27 - call 1-800-423-USAF for an information packet, or visit the Air Base at www.airforce.com

THE K CHRONICLES

THIS IS LENNY, MY NEW ROOMMATE'S CAT...

A LOT OF FOLKS ARE SURPRISED THAT I LET A CAT MOVE INTO THE FLAT BECAUSE OF MY PET RAT, ANA CHAVEZ.

I'M KINDA SURPRISED MYSELF... BUT IT'S AMAZING HOW WELL BEHAVED THIS FELINE IS...

I MEAN... IMAGINE HAVING TO GO AGAINST EVERY INSTINCT YOU WERE EVER BORN WITH.

IT'S REMARKABLE... THIS CAT HAS THE PATIENCE OF JOB...

HE IS THE EPIHOME OF PASSIVENESS...

A TESTAMENT TO THE OLD ADAGE: CAN'T WE ALL JUST GET ALONG?

CLUNK!!

IT KINDA HELPS THAT WE GOT HIM STUFFED THOUGH.

Adam by Adam Green

"...THAT'S THE BEAUTY OF AN ART SCHOOL: AS LONG AS YOU CAN PAY THE TUITION, THEY WILL NEVER, EVEN IN THE GENTLEST WAY, SUGGEST THAT YOU HAVE NO TALENT."
