Student Government Announcements

As Spring Break approaches, these are some of the things that we are working on for you: We are hoping to establish a regular session, during which the students may express their concerns/interests about campus life. Once or twice a week, we will set up a table in one of the central lounges, and place an officer there to field your comments. Because we will be providing donuts, this session will probably be called "Donuts and Dialogue."

Planning for the Spring Fling is progressing nicely, and we hope to hear any suggestions that you might have about this event.

On Wednesday, March 24, we will be traveling to Springfield for Student Lobby Day. This event is an opportunity for students from across Illinois to meet their legislators and express their legal interests to them. If you are interested in coming along with your group, come to our office (X-159) and speak with one of our officers. We hope that you have a fun and safe Spring Break!

U. of ol. students have approved a $5 increase (from $25 to $30) per semester increase for more bus service in and around campus. Students OK'd the increase with 2,637 voting for the proposal and 1,421 against, according to the Student Election Commission. Fees are expected to be collected in fall when expanded bus service also is to begin.

Parkland's professors portray women's history in costume

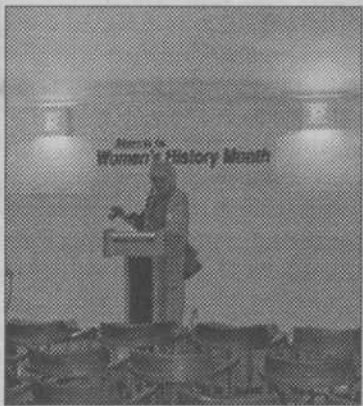

By: J. David Osinga
Prospectus News Editor

Women's History Month kicked off last week with a reception in Parkland's Gallery Lounge on March 3.

Involved in the festivities were many Parkland professors dressed up as different women in history that had an impact on society.

Free food and drinks were provided, with individual "performances" by each character, including Babe Didrickson Zaharias, Janis Joplin, and Dorothy Parker.

Babe Didrickson Zaharias, played by Mary Lee Sargent, was the first to speak, citing how difficult it was to be a professional golfer and how her struggle was, "... (having) to work at promoting yourself, not like Michael Jordan."

Janis Joplin, played by Pauline Kayes (Director of Center for Multicultural Education), spoke next about how poorly she was treated, being kicked out of a Beaumont College, but found a love in singing blues with black women.

Dorothy Parker, played by Sally Wallace, with her "tongue like a scalpel," pierced through difficulty and became a renown writer for The New Yorker as well as a leader of a group of highly-regarded writers.

Amidst the laughter and festivities, Parkland President Zelema Harris came and gave an inspirational speech on how her desire is to see

Parkland be, "...a workplace that will allow us to bring all the issues to the table."

Dr. Harris spoke on how there is and will continue to be a great need to develop compassionate leadership as women, but in doing so she challenged listeners to realize that not every woman can make a good leader. "The kind of leadership we're going to need is going to have to be developed by people like us," said Harris.

As an example, Dr. Harris spoke of her mother, being the, "...woman who taught me self-love, self-reliance, and independence."

Through her hard work and determination, Dr. Harris explained how she, in her position at Parkland, "...can see some of the real issues that people deal with on a daily basis."

After Dr. Harris' speech, many other women came up and spoke over what their life was like and how they had an impact on society.

Speaking with the Queen of Hearts over how she affected to women's history, she talked about how her place in the event was to give a commentary on fairy tales, explaining how the stereotype of the female characters in stories was to, "...wait for the prince, demeaning the potential of younger girls. Alice challenges that stereotype."

All in all, the reception to commemorate the beginning of women's history month was a great success, and gave many people something to take home - both women and men alike.

Eastern Illini Electric gives geothermal furnace to PC

Eastern Illin Electric has donated a geothermal heating/cooling system to Parkland College's Department of Engineering Science and Technologies for use in heating, ventilation, and air conditioning courses.

The "Water Furnace" unit, from Hovel Heating and Cooling, uses water pipes buried in the ground to both cool and heat residences. Geothermal power is considered a more efficient use of energy, and has been known to cut utility bills by about 60 percent.

The donated "Water Furnace" will allow Parkland students to learn first-hand about alternative heating and cooling sources.

Parkland faculty earn awards

Michael Postula, a professor of biology at Parkland College, and Peter Tomaras, associate professor of hospitality management, have been honored as Parkland's 1999 recipients of the NISOD (National Institute for Staff and Organizational Development) Award for excellence in teaching.

As Parkland's recipients of the award, Mr. Postula and Mr. Tomaras will each receive $1,000 from the college and will travel to Austin, Texas, for the 1999 NISOD International Conference on Teaching Excellence in May. Mr. Postula and Mr. Tomaras, along with faculty chosen from other community college will receive a commemorative medallion at a special ceremony during the conference.

To qualify for the award, a faculty member is required to have five years or more teaching experience at Parkland, consistently high student evaluations, a nomination by a colleague or department chair, and must submit letters of recommendation and a portfolio supporting teaching excellence.

Mr. Postula has taught at Parkland since 1971. He received his Associate in Arts degree from Illinois Valley Community College and his B.S. and M.S. from the University of Illinois. Mr. Tomaras, who who has taught at Parkland since 1982, has a B.A. from the University of Illinois and an M.B.A. from Illinois State University.

The non-traditional student CORNER

By: Sharon D. Wenger
Prospectus Staff Writer

Author's Note: Most of the Personal Profile responses I have received are for people in computer-related programs. This may actually reflect the majority of non-traditional students' programs, but I encourage nominations from other departments as well.

Meet: Harold J. (Jim) McDonald

Jim is a 50-year-old non-traditional student from Rantoul. He is in his first year at Parkland and is enrolled in Micro Computer Specialist program. His wife, Vick, is also a student here.

Currently, Jim is employed by Rantoul Products and works full-time on the night shift. When he gets off work, he comes to Parkland to pursue his studies which makes for very long days.

According to Jim, he has done hard manual labor all of his life and now wants a job with computers. His goal is to become a microcomputer specialist.

Jim's hobbies and interests center around tinkering with old cars.

Jim has three grown children. His daughter, Kristie Allen, is the Assistant Manager at the Danville Mobil Super Pantry. His son, Vincent Falvey, works at Caradco and will be starting at Parkland in the fall. His other daughter, April Falvey, is with the Florida Department of Transportation.

Reminder: Submit topics you would like to see covered, questions ideas, comments, constructive criticisms, or nominations for a Personal Profile column to Sharon via e-mail at: ensharon@advancenet.net or written on a sheet of paper and dropped off at the Prospectus office, Room X155.

If submitting a nomination, please include the person's name along with a brief description and an e-mail address or phone number for me to make contact.

Parkland Honor Society to celebrate academic honors week

The Parkland College Alpha Psi Eta chapter of the Phi Theta Kappa international honorary society has designated January 25 through 29 "Academic Honors Week" and is planning three special activities to mark the occasion.

On Monday, January 25 the week will be kicked off with a debate on this year's PTK honors topic: "Pursuit of Happiness: Conflicting Visions and Values." The debate will take place from noon to 1 p.m. in the Flag Lounge. President Zelema Harris will give welcoming remarks.

On Wednesday, January 27, from 5 to 6 p.m. and Thursday, January 28, from noon to 1 p.m., prospective Phi Theta Kappa students are invited to an orientation in X150.

The orientation will give students an opportunity to learn more about PTK, an organization that recognizes academic excellence, provides scholarships to four-year colleges, and provides opportunities for leadership development.

On Friday, January 29, Phi

Theta Kappa and other Parkland organizations will host a fund-raising dance to the blues and jazz of the band Candy Foster and Shades of Blue from 6 to 8 p.m. in Parkland's Flag Lounge.

Proceeds from the $4 cover charge will go toward children's literacy efforts. The dance is open to the public, and refreshments will be served.

For more information on Academic Honors Week events, call 217/359-5608.

◆ Letter to Editor

Opinion on the Clinton/Monica situation

Dear Sirs:
Doesn't anyone else out there agree with the fact that when you step into ANY leadership position, we should be raising the bar and expectations of those people who are leaders over us? I don't know about anyone else, but when someone is placed over me as a leader, they have to earn my respect. Being a leader is not easy. Being a leader requires sacrifice. I know this does not make Clinton perfect, God knows we could be in his shoes without the grace of

God. I'm not expecting anyone to be perfect here, but if you are going to step into a position of leadership, you know that people will be watching you and some people might even want to pattern their lives after you if you are a good leader. Shouldn't that make a person realize what they are doing, be more conscious of their actions, knowing that many people count on them and depend on them? This is not even about Clinton or Monica anymore, it's about the expectations of a leader, and do we really care if they are different? I believe that even though Clinton has done some good things for our country, how good of a leader caves in at the simple temptation of a young intern? It doesn't take much to be a leader, but it takes everything to be an effective one. And in my opinion, this applies to every aspect of a leadership position, whether professional or personal.

Hear no evil, speak no evil?

By: Zach Stanberry
Prospectus Staff Writer

I know I know...I hear it every day, "we don't want to hear about it any more." The simple truth is that Mr. Clinton's actions will be a stain on our society, just like the stain on Monica's dress.

This president will not be remembered for what he did in the United Nations, N.A.T.O., or anything else he did outside of the White House; he will be remembered for what he did IN the White House.

But it's not about sex though.

If it were about sex, the President would be gone by now. Remember Clarence Thomas? The only accusation against him was that he did a little dirty talking to Anita Hill. And what about that Air Force general that Mr. Clinton would not nominate to be on the Joint Chiefs of Staff because of his admission of an affair nearly 15 years previous while he and his wife were separated? If it were about sex, the president would have been forced to resign.

It is about character. I don't know about you, but if I had kids, I certainly would not enjoy explaining to them that the highest official in America had been a bad person. At what point will Americans drop their apathy and show a little disgust at the things Mr. Clinton has done?

It is about lying. How many people smoke, but don't inhale? How many of us drink, but don't swallow? If it were about sex, Mr. Clinton's admission of guilt on television might have been heeded. It is hard to believe someone when their pleas for forgiveness change as soon as those around him know more about his acts. I don't know about you, but that confession we saw on television did not seem as much asking for forgiveness as much as it did just that he was sorry that that he got caught.

It is time that Americans stand up and be heard. How can we turn away anymore from something so wrong?

Now that cupid's gone, college couples need to evaluate relationships

CHICAGO - There's no time like right now to evaluate your current relationship, but before you do, two Ohio psychologists who have written a new book identifying problem male behavior insist first things first.

"A lot of people think they're building something when they really aren't," said Anjali Williams, a graduate student and teaching assistant at the University of California at Davis.

"This goes for men and women," said Joseph Rock, a clinical psychologist for more than 18 years and co-author of 'Let's Face It, Men Are @$$#%&^c$ What Women Can Do About It,' sold for $12.95 by Health Communications Inc. "Pluck out the stars he or she planted in your eyes on Valentine's Day because that's the only way you're going to judge your arrangement objectively."

With graduation rolling around in just a few months, many young couples are desperately trying to determine their next steps. Chances are increasingly slim they'll end up married right out of school. In 1980, the median age for men and women tying the knot for the first time was 23.6 and 21.8 respectively. In 1994, those ages jumped to 26.7 for men and 24.5 for women.

Those statistics suggest what many soon-to-be-graduates have lamented for years: painful break-ups on campuses everywhere.

"It's coming," said Mark, a senior at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington who spoke under the condition of anonymity. "I love my girlfriend, but I'm not ready to marry her. I think we're going to have to go our separate ways, and that really sucks."

Though breaking up is hard to do, parents, friends, and healthcare professionals alike recommend that students focus more on leaving school to learn about themselves and the world and less on settling down.

"For most people just coming out of college, marriage is an unrealistic expectation," Rock said. "People are trying to get their careers started, and they're being exposed to a lot of new and exciting things."

So, where does all that leave someone who thinks they're in a committed relationship right now?

Possible nowhere, students and counselors say.

"A lot of people think they're building something when they really aren't," said Anjali Williams, a graduate student and teaching assistant at the University of California at Davis. "They might think they're close just because they're sleeping together. And I don't want to knock the Greek scene, but if going to parties and hanging out in bars is all two people are doing together, that's not really much of a relationship. They're just having fun."

Evaluating relationships is tricky business, particularly for young women, who often dismiss men's callous and crude behavior too easily, Rock said.

"The hard truth for many women in college is that they don't want to admit that they are trading sex to get acceptance and a relationship," he said. "I'm not saying 'Don't have sex until you get married,' but I am saying that it changes a relationship dramatically. By nature, sex is a finished product for guys - and an indication that they need to be moving on. For women, it's the start of something new."

Rock and his writing partner, another clinical psychologist named Barry Duncan, say they aren't about to label all guys jerks. They simply want to expose the truth about "a hell of a lot of them," Rock said.

Wondering who these men are?

"Oh, you know the ones," Rock said. "They go out with their friends, stay out late and then call at 2 am because they want to have sex. A lot of women believe they're stopping by because they actually want to see them - and that couldn't be further from the truth.

Or they're the guys who put up emotional walls and never allow anyone to get close, or they're the ones who play cat-and-mouse games, or..."

The bottom line, Rock said, is that these men are just not marriage material - at least not yet.

"Then again," he quickly added, "You may not be either, and it's important to be honest about that."

Rather than painting pictures of perfect men, Rock and Duncan pinpoint guys to avoid and put them under five main categories: "Controlling holes," "Lying, Cheating holes," "Immature holes," "Emotionally Retarded holes," and "Mixed Breeds and Other Special Cases" - which include heavy drinkers and physical abusers. The duo also gives hints on how to recognize problem behavior quickly and how to know when it's time to call it quits.

While Duncan and Rock's suggestions for breaking off a relationship are targeted at helping women, men may find some of them just as useful"

- Pick the way that's easiest for you. A face-to-face meeting isn't mandatory. Make a phone call. Leave a message. Write a letter. It doesn't matter how you do it. What matters is that you pick a way that you can realistically follow through with.

- After you break it off, have absolutely no contact. Don't have lunch. Don't make or take phone calls. Any contact puts you in risk of getting pulled back into the relationship.

- Don't try to stay friends. Even if you were slightly romantically involved, it's hard to take a step backward to friendship and make it stick.

- Breaking up is better when done sooner than later. Don't leave a relationship if you're not ready, but if you are, do it right away. The longer you date someone who obviously isn't mate-material, the more of your life you've unnecessarily exposed to him or her, including personal secrets. And the longer you stick around, the more you'll have connecting yourself to the wrong person - such as friends and shared activities.

EXPULSION.
REVOLUTION.

By: Ryan Fitzgerald
Prospectus Movie Columnist

One of the best comedies of this year is "Rushmore," a comedy/drama starring Bill Murray, Olivia Williams, and newcomer to the big screen, Jason Schwartzman.

This off-beat and dry comedy is a delicious look at friendship and the trials in which we must go through to obtain it. Truth, betrayal, and trust are tested to the outer limits to show us that the real cornerstone of friendship is love.

Rushmore reaches inside and fills you with strong feelings of happiness while at the same time its deeper meaning teaches something that you end up taking home.

Schwartzman plays Max, a complex fifteen-year-old boy who attends Rushmore Academy.

Max falls in love with Ms. Cross, one of the third grade teachers at the school, played by Olivia Williams, and finds that his life and his priorities are turned upside down. The significant age difference doesn't stop Max from attempting to make Williams' character fall in love with him.

Max's countless attempts to win her love is faded by

"Rushmore reaches inside and fills you with strong feelings of happiness while at the same time its deeper meaning teaches something that you end up taking home."

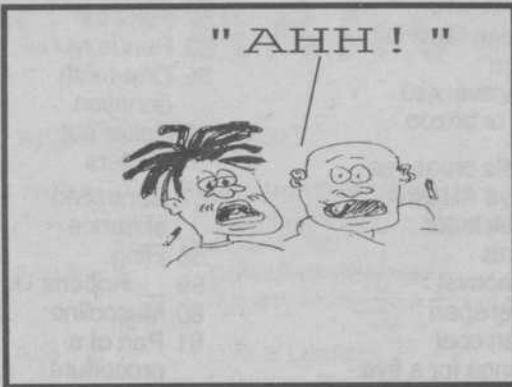

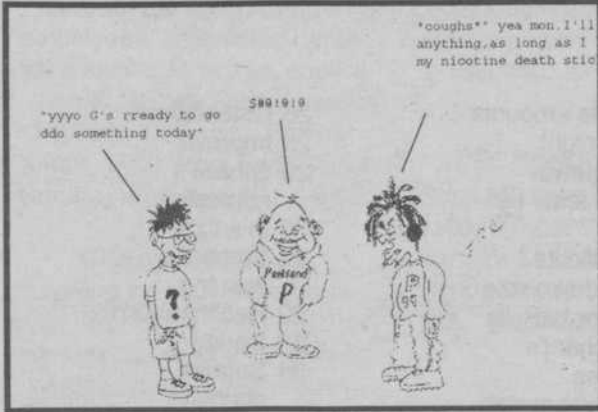

Murray's character, Herman, a Rushmore alum. Herman is a wealthy businessman who befriends Max, but Herman meets Ms. Cross and falls desperately in love with her. His feelings lead to a cat-and-mouse-like game of harmful pranks and mental anguish between Max and Herman - each trying to prove the others inadequacy.

The on screen chemistry between Schwartzman and Murray is amazing. Murray's usual Saturday Night Live type of humor is evident, but extremely tuned down to build his character.

#14 Carrie Yerkey goes up for a shot on Saturday, March 6, at the Women's Region 24, Division II semi-finals in Danville.

Women's Semi-Finals

The Lady Cobras went out fighting at the Region 24, Division II Women's Basketball Tournament on Saturday, March 6, 1999 at Danville Area Community College. They fought hard against the number one ranked Illinois Central Lady Cougars, who won by a score of 90 to 60.

Coach Green commented on the significance of the game: "It's the first time in four years that the Lady Cobras have won a playoff game. It's great to be here and be playing Illinois Central, the number one team in the country."

Kristine Walters and Carrie Yerkey led the Lady Cobras in scoring with 15 points apiece. A good number of Cobra fans showed their support, adding lots of energy and enthusiasm in the stands. Look out for the Lady Cobras next year!

It's back to weights for the boys' basketball team after their season ended this weekend. They lost to Spoon River, 91-70 at the Regionals tournament.

"They (Spoon River) really hurt us with their zone defense," said head coach Alan Nudo. "We just couldn't keep up."

Nudo says that the boys we're upset with the loss. They had played Spoon River before in the season and won. Nudo said, "They took it to heart. They played well against them."

Now with the season over, the guys are starting to lift weights for the beginning pre-season for next year.

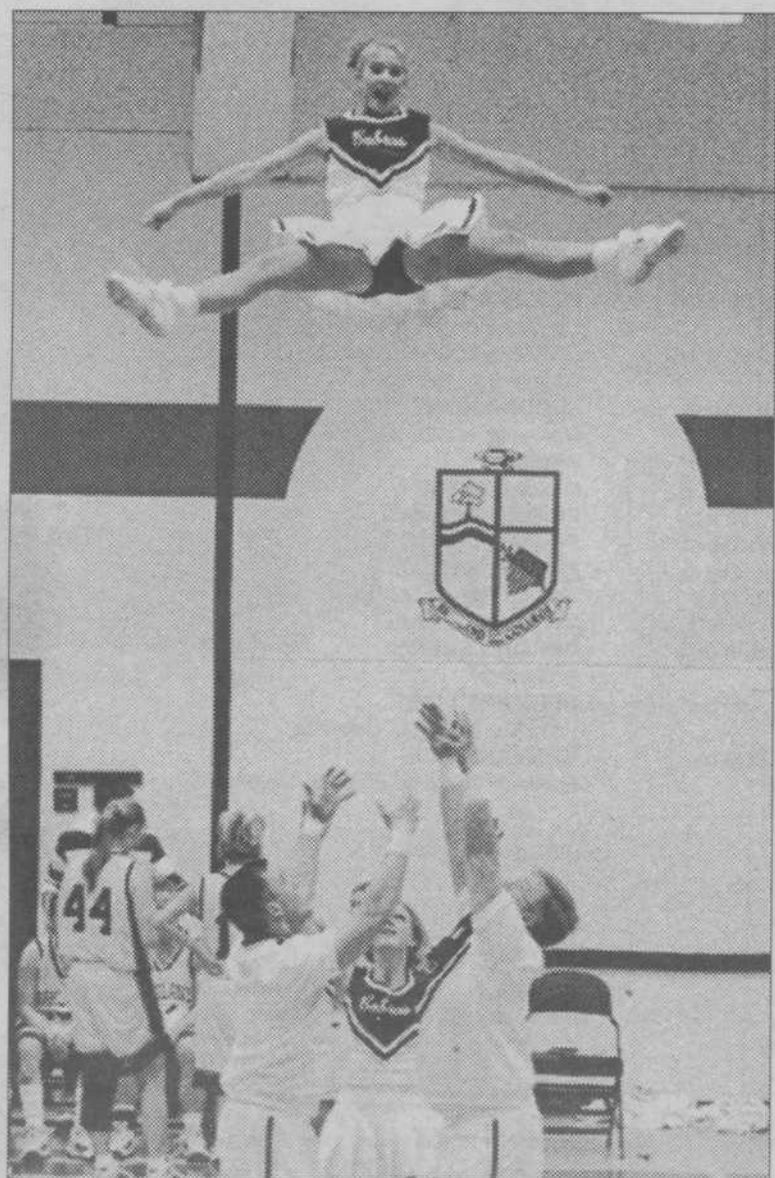

Parkland will be finding new recruits for next year's team. The team is losing their sophomore players to four-year universities.

Nudo says he's sad to see this season over. "They were just a great group of kids-very team oriented," he said. "They're a great group of guys to be around."
