A STUDENT PRODUCED PUBLICATION SINCE 1969

THE WEEK OF SEPTEMBER 5, 2001

Has Parkland met your expectations so far?

Kendall Anders

Yes. Because of the small class settings and the teachers are very friendly. Also because of the nice "fellas"!

Felicia Thomas

Yes. I feel that Parkland cares about their students and there's a lot of accommodations for you.

Carl Chu

Yes. Parkland has made me feel like a part of the school, and the teachers are focused on helping students succeed.

Dyneah Augsburger

Yes. The teachers are nice and are always willing to help students out.

Procopio Alfano

Yeah. They're great dude! I love the teachers. Everybody is friendly and my classes are very integrated.

by Rebekah Beachey
Staff Writer

At the beginning of the spring semester I wrote an article about transferring to Parkland the day after taking your high school finals. Now, with all that behind me I would like to look back and wonder how it was all done... I remember losing my car day after day... after day, until finally I found a solution, I would park in the same lot everyday. That was a simple solution to an annoying problem, and as the semester progressed I found many more simple solutions.

First, you must have a student I.D. This little card is an absolute must to survive the partially finished hallways of Parkland. This piece of plastic will allow you to check your records quickly, but much more importantly, it will allow you use the most sought after precious resource in the building, the Library. Here is where your studying will be done and it may be the only escape from the loud hammering of construction.

There are many resources for students. The Learning Lab and Writing Center are two of them. The Writing Center is there to help with all the little problems you may come across while writing one of those millions of papers. The Learning Lab is a great resource for help if you are struggling through a class.

The things that got me through my first semester were activities. I would encourage you to go to the Student Life area in the X-wing and check with the clubs and find out what activities are going on. Browse through the Prospectus and poke your head into the Student Government Office. Look at the postings on the bulletin board to see who is selling used books, or what club is hosting an activity. Check out what is going on at the Theatre, Planetarium, or Galleries. Get involved. College is only what you make it.

So whether you choose to become a senator of Student Government, an actor on our stage, or a journalist for the Prospectus, get involved. Get your student I.D., study hard and make use of those resources. But the only thing that will really get you through is a smile. Keep a smile on your face, a sense of humor and then you will do absolutely fine. By the way, girls, a great way to meet a guy is falling into his arms as you trip up the stairs...

Welcome Back In Style

by Danish Nagda

August 29, 2001, a day that will live in infamy. Oops, wrong article. As students begin to settle into their classes Student Life provides a nice setting for them to really sense a true welcome from the college. Get a free portrait made of you, munch into some hot popcorn, win a prize and get to know people at one fell swoop. Student Life brought you the

"Welcome Back" event of the year.

It was certainly a well-attended event, or was it just the endless line for the cartoon artist. With hot popcorn being made in front of your very eyes, the event not only was a nice experience for the returning sophomores, but also provided a homey feeling for the incoming freshman. For those of you who missed this explosive event, learn from your mistakes. Be sure not to miss other upcoming events from Student Life.

Enrollment Update

For those of you who think that it is crowded in the halls, well you are right. Parkland enrollment is up from 8027 in the Fall of 2000 to 8482 this fall. A population difference of 5.7 percent.

Don't let that get you down, encourage each other so we can all reach our personal goals.

Make A Difference with Style

The Community Volunteer Center in conjunction with the clothing stores, Circles and Dandelion, and other downtown businesses, will host the fashion show benefit, "Make A Difference with Style."

The show will be held at the Great Impasta on October 14 from 12:30 - 4:00 p.m. Tickets are $20 and will be available at both stores and by calling Terri McCarthy at the United Way at 352-5151.

Proceeds from the show and a silent auction will benefit the Community Volunteer Center.

You Are What You Eat:
+ 15 pounds

by Rebecca Painter
Prospectus Writer

Do you really think, "you are what you eat?" Has the phrase, "please pull to the next window," become a line served with all your meals? Are your fists black and blue from beating machines that never give you the right candy bar? If this description fits you, welcome to the freshman 15 club.

Take a good look around. Do you notice anything? Are the people around you gaining weight? The theory around here, which seems to be proving itself, is that when freshmen move out on their own and start school for the first time, they gain 15 lbs. Students start living off fast food and vending machines. They no longer have that meal cooked or prepared for them everyday. We all know it's hard to try and prepare something when you're pulling out your hair studying for a chemistry quiz.

We also know that school doesn't come cheap. Who is to say that it wouldn't be cheaper to feed on a bag of chips here and there, instead of the total amount you would spend at the grocery store? It's different when you are on your own with no one telling you to eat your vegetables. There are probably a lot of students who live off pizza and beer. Isn't that what your supposed to do in college?

Meet The Parkland President

Here's Your Chance

by Prospectus Staff

How often would you get to meet the president of a large university? That's right—once in a blue moon. Well, here's your chance to "Meet the President." On September 13 in the Flag Lounge, Zelema Harris, President of Parkland College will be available to answer your questions from 10 - 11 a.m.

So if you can't think of something should you stay away? No. President Harris is always happy to talk to students and especially when they have a concern. You might also want to consider that when a person who is as busy as a college president takes the time to talk to students, it's an educational opportunity you can't afford to miss

Independent Media Center Provides Public Forum

The Urbana Based Independent Media Center Opens at 218 West Main Street

by Elizabeth Simmons
Guest Writer

The independent media movement is here! The newest addition to the community opened its doors recently on west Main street in downtown Urbana. Known as the IMC, or Independent Media Center, the not for profit organization exists to promote 'an independent, collectively run, community based (forum) for topics underreported and voices underrepresented in the dominant media. All contributors (to the IMC) are volunteers. Everyone is welcome and encouraged to (participate) by submitting articles, volunteer hours, ideas, donations, and enthusiasm to the Collective. The local IMC is part of a national and international movement which seeks to give individuals and private groups within local communities an avenue to express themselves in a variety of ways. There are opportunities for volunteers to work in all forms of media from the Public i, a monthly newspaper, to the worldwide web, to planning and organizing and participation in special events held regularly at the Independent Media Center.

On several recent visits to the Independent Media Center, a number of activities were on going. There were people discussing world events, local happenings; some were perusing the large number of magazines available free of charge, while others were lounging, enjoying a variety of beverages and snacks sold at the Center. One evening a poetry reading and discussion was held; a group of people were involved in planning for the Center through the established forums: arts, community, environment, government/politics, human rights, labor/economics and media.

Larry Keller, an IMC volunteer remarked, "Our local Center is a focal point for those who want to provide alternative news." While many IMC are only Web based, Champaign -Urbana is fortunate to have a location where people can meet. Within the IMC movement, the traditional gatekeepers are replaced with editorial boards, small groups of individuals volunteering from the community. This is critical to the movement because, "the IMC gives each person the ability to decide what is news," said Brian Hagy.

Korinna Lapeley, an IMC visitor came to use the computers available to the general public. While there, she noted that the West Main street location is sustained through grants, charitable donations, community involvement and its volunteers. She encouraged all interested to contact the IMC by email at: atlarge@publici.ucimc.org, visit the center, open daily or phone 217-344-8820.

Hitting the Books

by Mike Bush
Editor

Ever notice how hard it is to get back into the swing of a new semester? Having the summer off is nice, but I tend to get lazy. I heard the phrase, "I'm bored" coming from my daughter a few too many times this summer and found myself heading down that road also.

Ok, so we all know better and we do it anyway, we turn into the proverbial summer couch potato. We sit around trying to get out of anything and everything we know we have to do at home. Yelling at us does not work, bribing is useful part of time and threats get a grudging OK. Most of all, summer for a student is vacation.

Hitting the books does not have to be traumatic if it is done right. That is, if it is done in moderation but on a regular basis. I once had someone tell me that he made it through college because he reviewed his notes at the end of each week. Also at the end of each day he took the time to make sense of the notes from that day.

I know that taking the time to do these things will help get all of us through the semester. Hopefully with those good grades and retaining so much of the material we would like to forget but need to have for later, we continue on.

Observations from the First Week of Classes

by Blane McClellan
Staff Writer

Parking:

Unless you show up very early, it will be hard for you to find a decent parking space at Parkland. There is a five to ten minute grace period when the previous hour's classes are emptying and people are leaving the premises, so if you want to follow someone to their car, you may be fortunate. With my luck, however, a person for whom I wait to pull out will be the one person who was not leaving, only retrieving something from their car. Other rules apply to the parking situation: pick-up trucks require not one, but 1.0998 parking spaces. This may not seem like a lot, but it's actually very difficult to squeeze into that .9002 percent of a space, provided there isn't a truck on both sides, in which case you can move along.

Small, compact cars will always be as close to front line of the space as possible. These cars will be surrounded on either side by very large cars, which will invariably be far from the front boundary, and will hang out into the lot. This is a cruel trick, and I don't need to explain why. Do NOT get your hopes up in the parking lot. The "Park" in Parkland refers to the green stuff. Hah! Moving on.

Classes:

Classes? You mean you can hang out in a classroom instead of the flag lounge? Lecturing? What? Oh. Classes are great. I have few problems with and little cynicism about the state of actual education at Parkland. It is inevitable, however, that role will be called and names will be mispronounced. This is a fact of life, and should be taken lightly. What I don't understand is that when names are being spoken, re-spoken, clarified, etc., all volume and enunciation is thrown out the window by both teacher and student. It's an interesting game; I think the point is to pronounce your name as quickly and as garbled as you can in an effort to see how far from the actual pronunciation you can lead your professor. This would be amusing if it weren't so very painful. The urge to yell out what you believe to be the definitive pronunciation is at times overwhelming. Stifle this urge.

To succeed in your classes, it may be best to keep your mouth shut for the first week or two. Gauge your instructor's likes and dislikes, try to figure out what kind of person he/she is. Does your instructor frown on questions asked whilst he or she is lecturing? Will an intelligent and timely question stretch a small topic into an hour consuming conversation, during which all important subject matter is forgotten? Know these things, and when the time comes for you to speak, you'll be less likely to make your instructor hate you, and more likely to butter them up.

Cost:

Books are expensive! I rarely read assigned chapters in textbooks, but don't follow me just because I'm incredibly brilliant. Buy your bottled soft-drinks in the bookstore; they cost the same as the ones from the machine (perhaps a bit cheaper sometimes), but The Bookstore cashiers are quite friendly, the vending machines are not. Do not worry about where your parking space is in relation to your last class. It's nice to just walk around, and a long walk to the car is almost never a bad thing, unless it's hot and you have no shoes. Wear shoes.

Commentary

by Prospectus Staff

Ok, how desperate do you have to be to go after the mail? Like, there isn't enough junk mail delivered to my home already. Doesn't this person know that messing with mailboxes is a Federal offense and that the penalties are severe. Maybe when they catch this person we should all send our junk mail to him/her. It might be that this person is homeless and is saving paper for winter to provide some heat. Give me a break. What a dork.

Student Government Elections Are Coming

Hello Fellow Peers!

My name is Lisa Barnes and I am running for the Senator position in the Student Government. You should vote for me because I am a very hardworking, understanding, open-minded, patient and easy to approach individual with an intimate knowledge of Parkland. This is evident from my previous work experience at the Parkland's Admissions and Records, as well as my current work at Parkland's Staerke Planetarium as a student worker. In addition, I am the meeting coordinator for the Student Ambassadors, which is an organization that serves Parkland and the students. Also, I am involved in Parkland's Honor Society, Phi Theta Kappa as the Public Relations-Publicity Secretary.

As you can see Parkland is my home away from home and I want every student to feel as comfortable at Parkland as I do. Parkland has a very unique student population with diverse needs. One of the many factors of Parkland's uniqueness is that we have students from every age group from programs such as College for Kids, dual credit for high school students, and the Associates/Certificate programs for traditional and non-traditional students with families.

I am a very approachable person and I want any student who has any problems or concerns to come to me and I will make sure the situation is addressed in a timely manner. I understand that although students' needs are different, every need is very important. Parkland has many resources that many students are not aware of, and I believe I am knowledgeable enough to point students in the right direction, so you can receive the quality education you deserve. Please, vote for me because of my friendly and outgoing personality, past experience, and willingness to serve the needs of all Parkland students.

Thank you,
Lisa Barnes
Candidate for Student Government Senator

Carl Chu represents "YOU" for Senator

Program of work for 2001-2002

Where am I? How do I find this class? I'm completely lost. These are some common statements expressed by students on their first day of class at Parkland. One way we can ease the stress of lost students is by color coding the school. For example, make the "B" wing blue. Even something as simple as blue trim along the border of the walls, it will make it much easier for students to navigate through the halls. A bright color can be quickly identified from any side of the building, so students can locate the correct wing more efficiently.

Although many students drive to school each day, there is still a large number of those who ride their bikes. We need to add more bike racks to each wing of the building. This will encourage more people to ride their bikes instead of driving their cars every day.

My goal is to make Parkland a better school for everyone. As a former Jr. Olympic Taekwondo Team member and a four year varsity tennis player, I understand how important discipline and teamwork is. As the Illinois Association of DECA President, I helped lead Illinois' team at nationals in Anaheim, California last year. As your 2001-2002 senator, I plan to do my best to make your Parkland experience a positive one.

Thank you,
Carl Chu

New Building Follow-up

by Prospectus Staff

In May of 2001 Parkland College started construction of the new D-wing. Yes, it will be called the D-wing. For those of us who were here long enough to see the smaller buildings go up for the Child Care facility and classrooms will recall there was a "D" building there. It has been redesignated as the "G" building.

The new D-wing will house several departments and services. For those of us who are here now a review is in order.

Here are some basics:

- classrooms will hold 500 students
- 22 classrooms/labs
- 14 classrooms/labs/multi-media classrooms
- 42 offices and 4 conference rooms
- Art classrooms
- Language laboratory

The Department of Social Sciences and Human Services:

- Psychology
- Sociology
- Criminal Justice
- Education
- History
- Political Science

Instructional Support Services Center:

- Learning Lab
- Peer Tutoring
- Writing Center

Instructional Technology Center:

- The Center for Virtual Learning
- Campus Technologies/Academic Computer Support

Plus a Conference Center and Storage space

All You Need To Succeed

by Danish Nagda
Staff Writer

The first step to recovery is admitting you have a problem. When it comes to academic difficulties, many students are hesitant to ask for help. Daud Nagda, a second year Computer Science student, echoed these sentiments, "Going to someone, other than somebody else in my class, is usually the last thing I do when I'm stuck on a problem," Daud said.

The reasons behind this plague of apprehension are varied. Many students fall victim to general social anxiety. Others aren't sure where to go for answers, although there are entire departments dedicated to providing student support. The final, and often most prominent culprit, is laziness, though I just don't feel like writing anything about that.

For those willing to overcome the daunting forces of shyness, confusion and laziness, there are plenty of tutoring resources available on campus for free. This article focuses on the broadest programs available to students of all majors. Yet, for each specific major and course there are a number of alternatives for academic assistance.

One successful program is The Peer Tutoring Program in X-109 & C-150. In this 1-on-1 type program a student can ask a tutor to assist him/her in understanding certain aspects or topics taught in a specific class. Directed by Omar Adawi, the program focuses mainly on classes with low retention rates such as Math, Physics, Chemistry & so on. Just pass by the Peer Tutoring Lab in X-109 for more information.

There are also other good resources of information such as the Learning Lab. The Lab is situated in C-150 and provides, as Paula Boyd calls them, "individually tailored guided independent study courses of 1-3 credits in Math, Reading, Writing, Study Skills, and Basic Computer Skills". One of the most encouraging things about this program is that you can begin a lab credit course as late as the 9th week of the semester. For more information contact the Learning Lab assistant, Gail Hoke, or the Director, Paula Boyd.

Sometimes you have to present papers in a sociology class, an English class or even a chemistry class but you're really not very comfortable in your structure, organizational, or even your writing skills. Drop by the writing center which provides 1-on-1 writing support from the Parkland College English Faculty. This is a completely walk-in service, so no appointments and no hassles. Be sure to drop by the Writing center in X-109 if you need any assistance in writing.

Sometimes you are sitting at home possibly doing some homework and you realize that you don't really understand an important topic. You look at the clock it's 10:00 p.m. What can you do? Luckily there are Online Student Support Systems such as Classmate, the online Tutor, which is a statewide online tutoring center that provides 24 hour tutoring in Math, Chemistry, Physics, English and more. You can access Classmate at <http://orca.parkland.cc.il.us>.

Every student should know there are alternatives to using classmates or professors for help, and each student needs to be aware of exactly what those alternatives are. Don't miss out on those higher grades just because you were shy, confused or just plain lazy. Parkland is doing its utmost helping you succeed in your academic life, but in the end, it's up to you.

Representative Johnson Enthusiastic About New Farm Bill

by Anna M. Polite
Contributing Writer

Tim Johnson (R, 15th Dis.) was enthusiastic about the new farm bill that was unanimously approved and will go into effect in 2002, and some but not all his audience at Parkland on Wednesday night seemed to share his opinion.

One resident said the bill, which is still awaiting approval by the Senate, will "dilute the delivery system" although Johnson replied that the bill is still a work in progress and a number of amendments probably will be added to it.

Johnson voted to normalize trade with China, and he also was in favor of normalizing trade with Cuba. However, that proposal was rejected.

He recently introduced a bill to help Paxton residents prevent a casino from being built nearby. Rather than eliminate the right of the Miami Indian tribe to seek compensation, this bill would wave sovereign immunity on the part of the federal government and allow district action against the U.S. for monetary compensation. Johnson said this bill allows justice to prevail where there is a claim but will not give the tribe the right to take land from individual owners.

Johnson recently returned from a trip to Israel sponsored by the Champaign and Chicago Jewish Federation. He said he left feeling sympathetic and came back feeling empathetic toward the Israelis. He said he feels Israel is being targeted by Palestinians who want to wipe out the Zionist state and that U.S. support is warranted.

He thanked his staff and supporters, saying he could not have made it through the last eight months without their help.

Have you ever wondered how many children the old woman who lived in a shoe had. And, how big was that shoe anyway. No, seriously, how can we calculate the number of children she had without knowing the size of the shoe. Here's another question, do we measure the shoe in square footage or cubit feet.

Parkland second at Rock Valley

By Mike Mears
staff writer

The Parkland men's golf program began the season with two teams entered in the ICC Classic at the Snag Creek Golf Course in Washburn Illinois.

The Green team shot a 307 to finish second to Rock Valley. Josh Borchardt led the Green team with a 71, earning medalist honors, while Jason Holdren shot a 76 to tie for fifth place.

The Gold team finished seventh, lead by a 78 and a 79 from Brian Burns and Kai Kulmala, respectively.

Cobra men's soccer wins opener

By Mike Mears
staff writer

The Cobra men's soccer team opened their season in come-from-behind fashion Wednesday over the ICC Cougars in East Peoria, winning 2-1.

Down 1-0 with six minutes remaining in the second half, freshman Nic Webster found freshman Ryan Fonner for the tying goal. With 2 minutes left, freshman Jason Curtiss scored the winning goal off a chip from Yeong Goo Choi.

Parkland was assisted by excellent defensive performances from Jeremy Kawakami, Mariano Zuk, and Jeff Morrison. The Cobras play in the Praira State College tourney this weekend.

Volleyball second at Kellogg

The Lady Cobras' volleyball team finished 2nd at the recent Kellogg CC Classic.

By Mike Mears
staff writer

Joana Ramsey's second Parkland team began the season Friday by defeating Kankakee 30-17, 30-18, and Mott CC(MI) 30-20, 30-23. They were defeated by host Kellogg 30-28, 30-22.

The Cobras completed pool play on Saturday, defeating Kishwaukee 30-28, 30-26, and bouncing back to defeat Kellogg 30-22 and 30-25. They were then defeated by defending national champions St. Clair(MI) 30-27, 30-15.

In tourney play, Parkland defeated Grand Rapids 30-25, 32-30, and beat host Kellogg for the second time, 30-25 and 30-23, this time in the semis.

Parkland once again got the short end of 30-24, 22-30, 14-16 score to St. Clair in the championship.

After dismantling John Wood Tuesday night, 30-16, 30-22, and 30-13, the Lady Cobras are now 7-3 overall, 1-0 in defense of their CCCI title
