

How do you feel about the parking situation at Parkland?

Mary Rector—The lots are too far away, and there are not enough spaces. Having to get here 20 minutes early is a waste of time.

Carrie Richards—We need more spaces! I don't like having to show up 30 minutes before class just to find a spot!

Kiley McCormack—I think it's horrible. Every time I come to class it's hard to find a spot. Then when I leave, I have scratches all over my doors.

Beth Etcheson—I think that for the amount of students on campus there aren't enough parking spots and too much time is wasted driving around looking for a spot.

Artie Berns—My first class is at 8 a.m., but I still have to show up half an hour early to get a decent parking space. Parking at Parkland is pretty crowded.

Anthony Burkert—On first thought, I would label the parking situation as horrendous, but on closer inspection, taking in mind the extra exercise I acquire each day, it's still, at the least, horrible, nerve-racking, etc.

Parkland art faculty more than just instructors

By Leah Nelson

In the fall of every year, the Parkland Art Gallery has their annual faculty show. Until September 24, you can see the talent of your art teachers through their own work; which includes paintings, pottery, photography and mixed media pieces.

The faculty show "is a nice way to introduce ourselves to our students as artists," said professor Don Lake, who teaches Watercolor and Advanced Watercolor. "(Many students) think of their art teacher as a teacher, and not as an actual artist." The show lends credibility to the art department faculty, and serves as an introduction to the program.

Lake has participated in the show since he began teaching at Parkland in 1970. He said that most of the pieces in the show are recent work of the artists. "We usually show, and I show, only the work we've done this calendar year. So the people who see the show year after year can see the evolution of the work." Usually, the artists choose a few pieces for the show. But sometimes it is necessary to display many pieces that fit in together, as Peggy Shaw did this year with her mixed media pieces that take up an entire wall.

Lake chose three watercolor paintings for this year's show. Two are scenes from his beloved property in Kansas, and one,

Notice to Parkland students, faculty regarding final examinations

A final exam is expected in each credit course at Parkland College.

Final exams for all full-semester and second-half-semester courses will be given during final exam week (December 13-17) according to the official published schedule. These final exams are not to be given early (during regular class periods). Final exams for all other courses (those ending earlier) will be given at the last regularly scheduled class meeting.

All requests from faculty to alter scheduled final exam times or dates must be reviewed and approved by the Department Chair and the Vice President for Academic Services.

In courses where a final exam is not appropriate, as determined by the Department Chair, an educational alternative scheduled during the week of final exams is expected.

Students: These official College guidelines were established to more fully insure that you receive the full set of instructional class periods for which you paid and to which you are entitled; and that you have the appropriate amount of time to prepare adequately for your final exams. If your final exam is given earlier than scheduled, please contact the Department Chair or the Vice President for Academic Services (351-2542, Room A117).

Three final exams scheduled on the same day may be considered a conflict. Conflicts may be resolved by arrangement with the faculty of these courses.

Questions or concerns about these guidelines should be directed to the Vice President for Academic Services.

Advantages of being a Parkland student

By Allison Smith

Prospectus Staff Writer

Many of the advantages offered to Parkland Students go unnoticed every day. Between classes, homework, and jobs, not all of us have the time to hunt down available opportunities, let alone take advantage of them. So if you can spare a moment between history class, basketball practice, and studying for your next test, you may want to take a look at the following.

Dental Hygiene

One of Parkland's better-known programs is through the Dental Clinic. The clinic is open to everybody, not just students, and is located in the L wing. The standard $10 fee applies to everyone, though it may be waived for the following; those possessing a public aid card, those on social security disability, senior citizens over the age of 62, and children ages 4-11 (those under 4 not permitted). Receptionist Renee Catlin says the clinic operates by appointment only from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Services offered range from a basic oral exam and fluoride treatment to oral irrigation and desensitization, all included in the base fee. Bleaching is offered at additional cost. All services are performed by students in the program, though Catlin assures that for all services both an instructor and a dentist are present. To make an appointment, or for further questions, you may call the clinic at 217.351.2221 or stop by L148.

Massage Therapy

If you find yourself tensing up at the thought of going to the dentist, you may want to stop by the Health Professions office and sign up for one of the massages offered by the Massage Therapy Program. Program Coordinator Richard Smith has been with the program since it began, three years ago, and was eager to offer information. Smith says every year massage therapy students offer Parkland students and staff a 60 minute, full body massage for just $10. Sign-up begins in January in the Health Professions office.

All appointments are first come, first served and a maximum of three appointments per person is enforced. Massages are given by students with 38 semester hours in the program. If lack of professionalism is a concern, Smith insists that it will not be an issue. "Professionalism is basic to the field and one of the main focuses of the program," he says. Any further questions about the program, or interest in applying to be a student, should be directed to Richard Smith at 217.373.3871.

Fish Trap, was a commissioned work. Lake acknowledged that he can tell the difference between commissioned work and personal work. "There's a spirit in them," he said of the Kansas pieces.

So if a watercolor professor exhibits watercolor paintings, is it safe to assume that a photography professor will exhibit photography? That's true in Craig McMonigal's case. McMonigal has been teaching at Parkland since the spring of 1994. His photography style is easy to recognize, as he tends to use black and white film and nude models.

The use of nude figures has not caused him controversy since his first show at Parkland because he employs a form of "self-censorship. I choose my venues carefully. The Campaign Public Library, for example, is not an appropriate venue (for my work.) Everyone has different ideas and morality, and I take that into consideration."

This year, McMonigal has something a little different for his audience. He processed many years' worth of photography using high-end digital equipment, and, with the help of Lincoln Bindery in Urbana, created a set of books of his work. One is available to look through at the faculty show, making this year's show interactive as well as interesting.

McMonigal's book, as well as many other works on display, is for sale. Price lists are available. If purchased from the show, the Parkland Art Gallery receives a commission. Having the art for sale is another testament to the purpose of the show—the art teachers at Parkland are artists.

You can view the works of talented faculty members McMonigal, Lake, Shaw and others at the art gallery in the X-wing until next Friday.

Hours are Monday through Friday 10 a.m.-3 p.m., Monday through Thursday 6-8 p.m., and Saturday 12 noon-2 p.m. The gallery is closed on Sundays.

Protesting due process

By Jon Volkman

Prospectus Staff Writer

The Republican National Convention was in New York City, from August 30 through September 2. On the streets of the city, crowds of people gathered from all over the country to protest the convention, the Republican agenda, and the nomination of George W. Bush for re-election in 2004.

The first few days of the convention yielded over 1,000 arrests. Caught within the arrested were tourists and everyday people who happened to be caught in the massive crowds. The Urbana-Champaign Independent Media Center had eight reporters in New York, and five were arrested with the protesters.

Their experiences were published to the Media Center's website, and below are excerpts from their accounts. These excerpts start as follows:

"From August 31 until September 1, I spent an unexpected 23 hours in jail without access to lawyers, limited access to a telephone, transferred between 9 different cells, put in handcuffs 4 times, rode on 2 prison buses, and ate nothing but 3 stale white bread sandwiches. All because I was walking on a sidewalk. Not blocking the sidewalk, as me and 200 other people were taking up half of a sidewalk with a clear path for other pedestrians to use (I know the path was there because the police used it when they arrested us!).

According to the police we were parading without a permit and conducting ourselves in a disorderly manner by impeding the flow of pedestrian and vehicular traffic. Frivolous charges that hundreds, including myself, were not guilty of.

A friend of mine was held for 50 hours without access to a lawyer. The 16-year-old girl who was in my temporary legal custody was held for 37 hours. Another was held for 24 hours. Another friend of ours was held for 30 hours. The city has been held in contempt of court and fined $1000 for each person held for more than 24 hours without an arraignment before a judge. Civil suits on the basis of false arrest, false imprisonment, and inhumane prison conditions are all being worked on."

The legality of the arrests and the actual intent of the New York Police Department have been hotly debated in various news outlets. The police were accused of using delay tactics, as evidenced in the following excerpt:

"After almost no one was processed or released on Tuesday night, somewhere I knew the delay was part of a deliberate strategy to keep the streets clear of demonstrators until Bush could give an expertly directed, perfectly choreographed acceptance speech on Thursday. And, while that knowledge didn't prevent me from hanging onto every false estimate of my release time given to me by my wardens, I placed more stock in the combination of rumor and information circulating among the cells about habeas corpus and threats of contempt charges and fines levied against the NYPD. I left the courtroom at 6:45 pm on Thursday, a bit disoriented that I wore no chain on my right wrist and that no one was yelling at me to keep my shoulder to the wall. But I knew Bush's speech would start soon and I would miss it because I needed a medical exam, legal advice, and the first nutritious food I'd eaten since breakfast two days before.

We weren't used to being immobilized like this. We were going to miss the big event, and it was going to go on with or without us."

Indeed, the protesters were swiftly demobilized at the beginning of the Republican National Convention and the number of arrests declined sharply as the Convention wore down. The tactics used effectively immobilized a large number of the people involved.

In conclusion, it is interesting to note the battles the individuals arrested still face in New York City. Though the convention is over, the legal process is still ongoing. And for many, it won't be over for a while. I conclude with this snippet about the ongoing bureaucratic struggle:

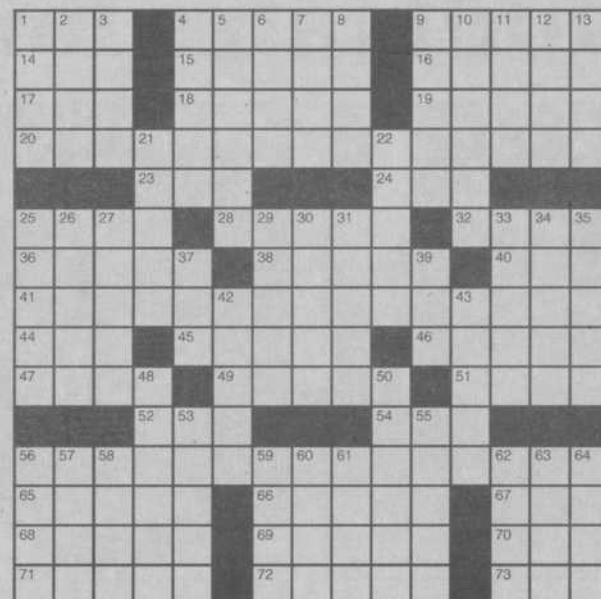

"My stuff is still all in New York City. All told there's probably around $1000 worth of stuff in a plastic bag in a police trailer in Manhattan that belongs to me. I'll have to send a notarized letter to a friend in New York City in the next 120 days authorizing them to pick up my stuff. If I wanted to get my stuff directly I'd have had to sit in line for three to four hours and then I would have missed my plane to Denmark. I sat in that line for an hour or so before I got frustrated and left it. In that time the possessions of 2 or 3 people were returned to them. The police took the possessions of 2000 people. At the rate they were making progress it will take months before every arrested person is done with this ordeal. What do you want to bet that many people will simply never see their possessions again? Many arrestees were professional filmmakers and other independent (not indymedia) journalists whose livelihood depends on their seized electronic equipment. Some of them got DAT (desk appearance ticket) rather than ACD which means they have to come back to a second court date in order to be declared innocent. They can't get their property back until then because it has all been declared "evidence".

Parkland instructor running for Champaign Co. Coroner

By Sarah Trusty

Prospectus Staff Writer

Mark Medlyn, part-time Parkland instructor, is running for the office of Champaign County Coroner. Elections are on November second, and the term will last for four years. Medlyn has been an instructor at Parkland for ten years, teaching Traffic Law in the fall semester and Current Issues of Law Enforcement in the spring semester.

When asked why he is running for coroner, Medlyn replied that he feels that the Republican candidate doesn't qualify for the position. The coroner holds a law-enforcement position, and is to take over in the absence of the sheriff. He is also the only person who can arrest the sheriff; therefore someone with law enforcement background would be best qualified.

Medlyn has been a patrol officer for twenty-five years, giving him more experience in law enforcement than his opponent. Medlyn has also been a member of the special weapons team and has had training in weapons of mass destruction for twenty years. This further qualifies him for office. Medlyn feels that since our country is at war, the county should be able to deal with any terrorist attacks that may hit, and with his training he would be able to do that. He believes that the county is currently "ill-prepared" for any possible terrorist threats.

Medlyn has also considered the taxpayers. In the state of Illinois, the Coroner is responsible for anyone who is brought into the county from other counties, therefore possibly having to investigate in other counties as well. This currently costs $60,000 of the taxpayer's money, and Medlyn feels that that sum is unnecessary. His opponent, on the other hand, feels that it isn't enough.

If elected, Medlyn plans on continuing his teaching career at Parkland as well. He really enjoys his classes, and he also enjoys seeing his students around town. Some of his former students have also joined the Champaign law enforcement team, and are now working with him. "I enjoy the students and everything about the students," said Medlyn. He also enjoys working with the other instructors at Parkland, and stated that even though he would make more money working overtime as a patrol officer, he enjoys Parkland too much to leave it behind.

Which teams do you favor this year for the NFL? Why?

Cody Diskin—New England Patriots. Tom Brady + Alumni U of I Eugene Wilson.

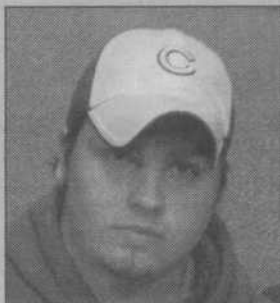

Alexa McCoy—St. Louis Rams. I know someone playing for that team and I wish him well.

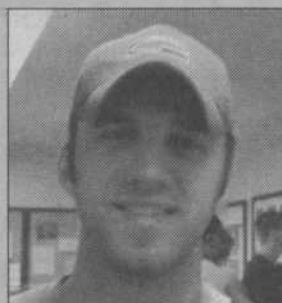

Terrell Cooper—Philadelphia. Always been a fan and they haven't won the playoffs in a while.

Shane Lucas—Bears because I have always been a huge fan.

Landon Young—Packers by far. I think they got the best quarterback and 4 good receivers to go along with him. I also think that Green is going to lead the league in rushing this season.

Eric Wendt—Da Bears, because I am from Chicago.
