Abstract- This paper aims to improve our understanding about the prevalence and determinants of Hindu law in both historical and comparative perspectives with an introductory reflections on the nature and role of law in society, the inter relationship between religion and their sources in general, further issues covered include the triple origins of Hindu law in priestly codes, Dharmas religious law and the controversy over religion and secularism in the courts today. ## I. INTRODUCTION

Hindu law cannot be separated from morality and culture-specific ethics in the broader sense of practices and social realities or relativities on the ground.<sup>1</sup> To do so is to impose the template of a much later development of the idea of 'law' from the natural law tradition and the Roman secular version<sup>2</sup> Dharmasastra is a rhetoric of law, a "meta-discourse" in Olivelle's phrase and more closely resembles modern textbooks or training manuals that legal codes or legislation. Training in Dharmasastra led in the originally put to a knowledge of how law managed in theory, i.e. a knowledge of theologically motivated jurisprudence, and only secondarily to a knowledge of what the law was, i.e. lawyer's knowledge of substantive law. Part of the reason for this is the fact that substantive law and dharma itself derived its content from sources beyond the dictates of the sastra, namely the standards [normative ethos] of good people (sadacara) and personal preference (atmatusti). While its is likely that a significant proportion of rules in Dharmasastra had, at some place and time, a practical reality, that reality in most cases existed prior to the text, which "records" the law in particular way.

II. METHODOLOGY

This study based on secondary sources and invariable beneficial analogical appliance of research method by balancing antithetic applicable rules regarding main source of the applications of Hindu law. The secondary sources which have been reviewed are: books, journals, reports, news papers and data from various official and unofficial sources. Internet sources have also used to collect informations on the principle of Darshans under Hindu law.

a) Objectives of the study

Against the milieu of the set statement, the main objectives of the study are as follows:

- i. To examine how the arrangements and principles of Darshans applied in Hindu Law.
- ii. To identify and equate with the various Scriptures relating to Hindu Law
- iii. To perceive and detect the reliability and changeability of the acceptability of Agama alongwith Itihasa in diverse facets of Hindu Law.
- iv. To signify the outcome of extension and deliberate Justification of Sanskrit and Hindu Scriptures.
- v. To become aware of the split application of different scriptures of Hindu Law.

Who is a hindu: A Hindu is he who believes that the Vedas contain self-evident and axiomatic truths and who believes in a religion which has originated in India." "A Hindu is one who regards India as his motherland and the most sacred spot on earth." Some others define: "He who calls and considers himself a Hindu is a Hindu." Some define: "He who accepts the Vedas, the Smritis, the Puranas and the Tantras as the basis of religion and of the rule of conduct, and believes in one Supreme God (Brahman), in the Law of Karma or retributive justice, and in reincarnation (Punarjanma), is a Hindu. There is no correct and complete definition of "Hindu" but for a narrative definition we may consider this "He who is a follower of the Vedanta and He who has perfect faith in the Law of Karma, the law of reincarnation Avatara, ancestor worship, Varnashrama Dharma, Vedas and existence of God, he who practices the instructions given in the Vedas with faith and earnestness, he who does Sandhya, Sraaddha, Pitri-Tarpana and the Pancha-Maha-Yajnas, he who follows the Varnashrama Dharmas, he who worships the Avatars and studies the Vedas, is a Hindu.<sup>3</sup>

Dharma-shastra: the words derived from Sanskrit which means Righteousness Science. the ancient Indian body of jurisprudence that is the starting point, theme to legislative modification, of the family law of Hindus living in territories both within and outside India (e.g., Pakistan, Malaysia, East Africa). Dharma-shastra is primarily concerned not with legal administration, though courts and their actions are dealt with comprehensively, but with the right course of conduct in every dilemma. Some fundamental principles of Dharma-shastra are known to most Hindus brought up in a conventional environment. Those include the proposals that duties are more significant than rights, that women are under perpetual guardianship of their closest male relatives, and that the state must protect the subjects from all harm, moral as well as material.

Hindu Law and Hinduism: The term "Hindu law" was coined by the British Orientalists and administrators in the later 18th century to refer to the general system of law preponderating among the Hindu majority before the British Colonial encroachments.<sup>4</sup> Principles of Hindu Law emphasizes that for the ancient Hindu his 'law was revelation, immutable and eternal Shruti [as Vedas] was the fountainhead of his law.<sup>5</sup> Next is smrti (smriti), the immemorialized or 'memorized' tradition<sup>6</sup> on the other hand Hinduism has no founder or date of origin. The authors and dates of most Hindu sacred texts are unknown, although the oldest text (the Vedas) are estimated to date from as early as 1500 BCE. Scholars describe Hinduism as the product of religious development in India that spans nearly 4,000 years, making it perhaps the oldest surviving world religion. inclusive of the commentaries and digests which as a corpus is transmitted through the sages and scribes and as such forms Hinduism's literary and religious canonical texts with implications for social and cultural, also political, practices.<sup>7</sup> But the term "Hinduism" encompasses a wide variety of traditions, which are closely related and share common themes but do not constitute a unified set of beliefs or practices. Hinduism is not a homogeneous, organized system. Many Hindus are devoted followers of Shiva or Vishnu, whom they regard as the only true God, while others look inward to the divine Self (atman). But most recognize the existence of Brahman, the unifying principle and Supreme Reality behind all that is.

<sup>3</sup> It is the scholastic system of the Maxims that has gone to the greatest length to preserve the epistemological and moral autonomy of the Vedas, bereft of a supreme transcendent authority. See P Bilimoria, 'The Idea of Authorless Revelation', in Perret.

<sup>6</sup> Flavia Agnes, describes the smrti as 'the memorized word' (op.cit. p.12), while Robert Lingat's seminal work The Classical Law of India, Oxford University Press (New Delhi), 1998, simply describes smrti (or smrti) as 'tradition', pp.7-8.

<sup>7</sup> A. M. Bhattacharjee cites several modern scholars and writers on Hindu Law who appear to be committed to this characterization, notably, Mulla in his, Principles of Hindu Law, 14th Ed. 1974, p. 77; Mayne's Treatise on Hindu Law and Usage, 11th Ed., 1953, p. 19 [and add others on page 13]; including J D M Derrett, Paras Diwan, Tahir Mahmood et al. Menski also takes them and a few others to task on this score. And Fyzee repeats the stereotype introducing God in connection with dharma for the Hindus, in his Outlines of Muhammadan Law p 15.

b) Origin of Hindu Law and Hinduism

That part of the great Aryan race which migrated from Central Asia, through the mountain passes into India, settled first in the districts near the river Sindhu, now called the Indus, on the other side of the river. The Persians pronounced the word Sindhu as Hindu, and named their Aryan brethren Hindus. Hindu is only a corrupt form of Sindhu. The Hindu Aryans spread themselves over the plains of the Ganga. Then the Persians gave the name Hindusthan, or abode of the Hindus, to the whole of those districts between Punjab and Benaras.<sup>8</sup> In perception of pullock Hindu Shastra is a 'cultural grammars' that both reflect and regulate practice.<sup>9</sup>

But there are so many religious reference that manifestly create a scenario of the three foundational elements - scriptural authority, tradition, 'exemplary conduct', and only marginally custom, are said to underwrite the central principle of Hindu life, known as dharma (righteous order and obligations).<sup>10</sup>

c) Sanskrit literature and Hindu Law

The literature of Hindu shastra is divided into two main periods: the Vedic period and the Sanskrit. When classical Sanskrit preponderate. The Sanskrit means perfected and the language was adopted as an improvement of the Vedic. Sanskrit literature can be classified under six orthodox heads and four secular heads. The six orthodox sections form the authoritative scriptures of the Hindus. The four secular sections embody the later developments in classical Sanskrit literature.

Nearly all Sanskrit literature, except that dealing with religious construction, is in verse. The first period of <sup>8</sup> Latest historical researches have now proved that the Aryans did not come from outside India, but were the original inhabitants of India.

<sup>10</sup> Derrett includes sruti and smrti under Dharmasastras, which is the only category he otherwise notes as the sources of 'Anglo-Hindu Law'. Paras Diwan lists (1) sruti, (2) smrti (3) Digests and Commentaries, and (4) Custom. Whereas Tahir Mahmood describes Hindu Law as 'that body of law in its entirety which originated from religious scriptures of various indigenous communities of this century'. All cited in A M B, p 13

the Sanskrit age is one of epics, they are separated into two main assemblage

- i. The natural epic (Mahabarata)
- ii. The artificial epics ( Ramayana)

The subject matter consecutively became subsidiary to form, and intricate laws were setup to regulate style.

d) Scriptures in Hindu Law

The Vedas positively ordain injunctions and moral responsibility toward performance of sacrifice and rules are set down for the correct recitations and incantation of mantras accompanying this performative act. There are even exhortations towards certain 'alterity' virtues, such as 'gift giving' (dāna), welcoming the guest (atithi), and care for the ancestors.<sup>11</sup>

The six scriptures are: (i) Srutis, (ii) Smritis, (iii) Itihasas, (iv) Puranas, (v) Agamas and (vi) Darśanas.<sup>12</sup>

Shruti: is a Sanskrit word which means "What Is Heard" in Hinduism, the most-revered body of sacred literature, measured to be the artifact of divine revelation. Shruti works are considered to have been heard and transmitted by earthly sages, as contrasted to Smriti, or that which is remembered by ordinary human beings.<sup>13</sup>

Smriti: it means Recollection that class of Hindu sacred literature based on human memory, as distinct from the Vedas, which are considered to be the product of divine revelation. Smriti literature elaborates, interprets, and codifies Vedic thought but, being derivative, is considered less authoritative than the Vedic Shruti. Most modern Hindus, however, have a greater familiarity with Smriti scriptures. The Smriti literature is a corpus of diverse varied texts.<sup>14</sup>

The Smriti texts structurally branched, over time, from so-called the "limbs of the Vedas", or auxiliary sciences for perfecting grammar and pronunciation (part of Vedāngas).<sup>15</sup> the Dharmasūtras, the Arthashastra, the Purānas, poetical literature, extensive Bhāshyas and numerous Nibandhas covering politics, ethics.<sup>16</sup>

Purana: the purana are ancient Hindu texts rave about various deities, primarily the divine Trimurti God in Hinduism through divine stories.<sup>17</sup> Puranas may also be described as a genre of important Hindu religious texts alongside some Jain and Buddhist religious texts, notably consisting of narratives of the history of the universe from creation to destruction, genealogies of kings, heroes, sages, and demigods, and descriptions of Hindu cosmology, philosophy, and geography. The Puranas are frequently classified according to the Trimurti (Trinity or the three aspects of the divine).<sup>18</sup> The Padma Purana classifies them in accordance with the three gunas or qualities as Sattva (Truth and Purity), Rajas (Dimness and Passion) and Tamas (Darkness and Ignorance), an apparent means by which to rate the texts based on sectarian merit.<sup>19</sup>

Itihasa: Itihasa means history in Sanskrit, consists of the Mahabharata and the Ramayana. The Mahabharata includes the story of the Kurukshetra War and also preserves the traditions of the Lunar dynasty in the form of embedded tales. The Puranas narrate the universal history as perceived by the Hindus – cosmogony, myth, legend and history. The ancient Sanskrit epics the Ramayana and Mahabharata comprise together the Itihāsa ("History") or Mahākāvya ("Great Compositions"), a canon of Hindu scripture. Indeed, the epic form prevailed and verse remained until very recently the preferred form of Hindu literary works. The term Indian classical drama refers to the tradition of dramatic literature and performance in ancient India. The origin of dramatic performance in Indian subcontinent can be traced back to as early as 200 BCE.<sup>20</sup> Its drama is regarded as the highest achievement of literature.<sup>21</sup>

Buddhist philosopher Asvaghosa who composed Buddhacarita is considered to have been the first Sanskrit dramatist. The rules of classical Indian poetics prescribe that the themes of the mahakavyas. Many texts of Sanatana Dharma record history - just in a form that is different than what is now considered to be the norm. (ornate epics) and natakas (drama) should be primarily selected from the itihasa. It's have been variously described as a revelation through anubhava (direct experience), or of primordial origins realized by ancient Rishis. In Hindu tradition, they have been referred to as apauruṣeya (authorless).<sup>22</sup>

Agama: Agama is a Sanskrit word meaning "a traditional percept "collection of doctrines" or "handed down and fixed by tradition." The term is used to recognize a part

The term also refers to six orthodox schools of Hindu philosophy and their literature on spirituality and soteriology. Atman is eternal and free, and liberation is to realize this clearly and not to mistake it for something else. The darshanas differ in the technicalities like how binding comes, and the methods and meaning of liberation. They are not unanimous in accepting Veda as the highest authority on Truth.<sup>32</sup> They are not unanimous in accepting the existence and nature of Iswara or a unitary Godhead. It is most commonly used for Theophany "manifestation/visions of the divine", in Hindu worship, of a deity or a very holy person or artifact. One can receive darśana or a glimpse of the deity in the temple, or from a great saintly person, such as a great guru.<sup>33</sup>

Many of the darsanas have developed along with spiritual philosophy, elaborate methods and practices that help the individual's liberation. The methods are based on the theory of consciousness. There are six principal of Hindu Darshanas.

- iii. Nyaya
- iv. Vaishesika
- v. Mimamsa
- vi. Vedanta

III. CONCLUSION

Hindu law is of divine origin, having been derived from Vedas, which are revelations from the Almighty and which Austin calls the laws of God. It is based upon immemorial customs, which existed prior to and independent of Brahmanism. When the Aryans penetrated into India, they found that there were a number of usages either the same as, or not wholly different from, their own. They accepted these usages with or without modifications rejecting only those which were incapable of being assimilated, such as, polyandry, incestuous marriages and the like. Brahmanism modified the current customs by introducing the religious element into legal conceptions firstly, by attributing pious purposes to purely secular acts; secondly, by adding restrictions to those acts suitable to those pious purposes; and thirdly, by altering the customs themselves so as to further the special objects of religion or policy favoured by Brahmanism.
