The Open Access Journals Toolkit: Broadening participation and supporting diversity in OA journal publishing

This poster presents the Open Access Journals Toolkit, an online resource that aims to help the scholarly community start and manage open access journals. The Toolkit provides information on a range of topics, covering journal creation, costs, staffing, policy development, through to indexing and key technical aspects.
Signposting users to trusted resources

Toolkit content covers topics across the journal development lifecycle and day-to-day operation.

Curating content with a diverse Editorial Board

The Toolkit was written by an international Editorial Board with expertise across the journal lifecycle.

Prioritising accessibility and usability

The Toolkit can be downloaded for offline use for those without a reliable internet connection.

Providing information in multiple languages

The Toolkit is currently available to browse and download in both English and French.

Supporting the open access community

Toolkit contents support different roles from editors and reviewers to technical providers.
