A relay race in which teammates are rescued from a smoke-filled room is one of the activities students can participate in during the Fire Safety Awareness event scheduled from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Tuesday in the Student Union's south quad in Edinburg.

During the race, students will put on a firefighter's uniform, extinguish a fire and rescue teammates from a smoke-filled room using the Edinburg Fire Department trailer and then return to a fire truck.

The event is part of UT Rio Grande Valley's first observance of National School of Music Professor Art Brownlow has incorporated iPads in his courses.

Two UTRGV professors are using iPads in their classes to integrate technology into education.

Art Brownlow, a professor in the School of Music, and Elias Villarreal Jr., a clinical associate professor in the Physician Assistant Department in the College of Health Affairs, attended the Apple Distinguished Educator (ADE) institute program for members from Latin America and North America July 9-14 in Miami, Fla.

One of ADE's goals is to create a system of networks for institutions that allows students to have access to the necessary materials in a cost efficient way.

Brownlow's mission to use technology as a device to expand music education began when he was awarded a grant to improve computer-based instruction in music classes. His wide-ranging use of the Apple iPad in almost of all of his music history classes has helped students be more engaged in the classroom environment and it has been reflected in their grades.

"I've always been excited to use technology to teach music," Brownlow said. "In the early years of Apple, I developed a Hyper-Card Program to explain music to music and non-music majors. Between 2012 and 2013, [UT

With the opening of the University of Texas Rio Grande Valley, Sodexo will expand to the Brownsville campus with three new food services, The Grid, The Grille and SubConnection.

Sodexo Inc. is a North American branch of the Paris-based management company that provides numerous support services, such as restaurants, to businesses and institutions. The University of Texas Pan American first signed a 10-year contract with Sodexo in 2001. When UTPA and the University of Texas at Brownsville merged to become UTRGV, the new school signed a 10-year contract to expand Sodexo's business.

"A representative from each company will come and present their company to the university and whoever fits the university perfectly will be [chosen]," said Alyssa Reyna, unit marketing coordinator for UTRGV.

Reyna works closely with the university's Auxiliary Services to determine what concepts and ideas from Sodexo will be placed on either of the two campuses.

The Edinburg campus has 10 places to eat, including Jazzman's, Chick-fil-A and Slice of Life. Soon, the Brownsville campus will have access to The Grille and SubConnection, which closely resembles the one on the Edinburg campus. Currently, the only food service

Price ranges for the three new food services won't be much higher than other places to eat off campus.

"Well, they're not a dollar menu," Reyna said. "The price structure is the same you could see here at the Edinburg campus. They are retail pricing, so they're a little more than let's say a Whataburger or McDonald's menu. But to compete [with] restaurants we do try to keep our prices around the same price structure you would see off campus. So, an average meal would be about six [or] seven dollars."

More information regarding the new food services on the Brownsville campus will be released as soon as both Sodexo and UTRGV finalize the details.

Brownsville] had an iPad pilot program where they offered professors [the opportunity] to submit a proposal for an iPad-based project in their classrooms, and that's what got me started on my current project."

Apple had already recognized Villarreal's work when the Physician Assistant Department at the University of Texas Pan American was selected as an Apple Distinguished Program for the 2013-2015 award cycle. Villarreal, alongside Frank Ambriz, chair of the UTRGV Physician Assistant Department, invented an iBook that exhibited the way the UTRGV program will make use of the iPad in an environment of diversity and ambience in these programs.

The biomedical sciences program at UTRGV is also applying the TEx app into the curriculum for medical students. The physician assistant program will allow students to download all course materials into their iPads for all classes in the program.

TEx (Total Educational Experience) is a revolutionary, mobile-first, application designed by the University of Texas System to boost student engagement and retention, according to an Aug. 25 system news release.

"Students are still doing traditional work, they're still taking notes, and taking exams, but now they're doing it in a modernized way," Villarreal said. "They're now doing things through the cloud, and instead of reading a textbook, they're reading an electronic textbook. They're able to access a vast amount of textbooks through the iPad now."

Although Brownlow and Villarreal work in different academic departments the iPads have enabled equivalent results with their students.

"ADE really helped me understand the Apple software," Villarreal said. "It helped me integrate and incorporate those type of things to my classes here on campus. It also helped me gather new ideas from other successful educators that are using the iPads in their own disciplines, and how I can apply them here."

UTRGV Patron of the Arts season to begin Friday

Soprano Alisa Jordheim will kick off the 31st season of the Patron of the Arts program with a recital at 7:30 p.m. Friday in the Texas Southmost College Arts Center in Brownsville.

Jordheim, a native of Appleton, Wisconsin, recently performed as Lulu Baines in “Elmer Gantry” with the Florentine Opera and as Marzelline in “Fidelio” with the Madison Opera, according to the Patron of the Arts booklet.

“She has a beautiful, light, lyric soprano voice,” Daniel Hunter-Holly, UTRGV interim associate director for the School of Music, said about Jordheim. “She’s going to be doing a variety of songs, ranging from Respighi, [who] is one of the composers, to Poulenc and then some American musical theater as well.”

Jordheim will be accompanied by UTRGV Staff Accompanist Eric Jenkins.

Students may buy a Patron of the Arts membership for $20, Hunter-Holly said.

“Every concert they go to is $5, so if they’re going to go to more than four concerts, it’s a great deal,” he said. “Patron is on both campuses, both in Edinburg and Brownsville. We have about 60 or 70 concerts in Brownsville; there’s another 40 in Edinburg that students can all go to with just one pass.”

Saturday’s Hispanic Heritage Concert will feature a Cuban theme.

The concert is part of the Patron of the Arts program at the University of Texas Rio Grande Valley and will take place at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in the Texas Southmost College Arts Center in Brownsville.

Members of the UTRGV faculty and local artists will perform.

“In the past, our Hispanic Heritage [concert] has been more of a potpourri of different music from all over Latin America,” said Daniel Hunter-Holly, UTRGV interim associate director for the School of Music.

The event will showcase different musical performances highlighting the many influential characteristics of Cuban music and culture.

“Cuban music is exceptional in terms of its influence worldwide. It has a variety of influences from Africa, as well as Spain, so there is a unique quality to that music that’s been very influential,” Hunter-Holly said.

The 2015-2016 season will be the 31st for Patron of the Arts in Brownsville and its first in Edinburg. Tickets ($5 for students and $10 for non-students) to this and other events may be purchased in advance in Eidman Hall or at the box office at the TSC Arts Center. The Patron of the Arts offers a variety of memberships for students and the public that allow admission to both concerts and art exhibits in Brownsville and Edinburg.

Concert attendees are encouraged to arrive early to secure parking and seating.

Thank you, Mom

Jesus Sanchez
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

On Oct. 10, 1995, I was pronounced dead. Ironically, that was also the day I was born. I'm still here and this column is proof that I'm safe and sound. I have only one person to thank, my mother.

When all hope of me making it was gone, my mother still had faith that I'd be OK. She said a prayer and promised our Lord she would name me after him if I somehow lived.

I don't need to wait for Mother's Day or her birthday to express how grateful and thankful I am to have her. I will do it right here and now.

Mom, I know I've let you down before. I know I'm not the perfect child and I know I've said things I don't mean. Sometimes, you get on my nerves and frustrate me like no one else can.

I can't express how hard it's been growing up as a young man without a father. I've had to take a back seat whenever the other children talked about their adventures with their dads. I didn't have any cool stories to share or any dad to speak of. Instead, I had something better; I had you.

My sister and I have only you. It's only us three. In a world where my sister and I weren't supposed to make it far, we are both in college with stable jobs, and it's all because of you. We're trying our best to make you proud, yet we still have a long way to go.

In the darkest days and most dreadful times, you always made everything better and kept us safe. When I would tell you I wanted some toy or my sister wanted new shoes, I could see the sadness in your face when you had to tell us no. We didn't always get everything we wanted but we always had everything we needed.

All the times you said no, all the times you punished me, it was always for my own good. I didn't understand then but I get it now and couldn't be any more thankful.

The numerous times I screwed up and failed, you were always there by my side ready to tell me to try again. No other person has ever made me feel as safe as you do.

All you did, all you said, you did your best to raise us both. Even though I say I don't, of course I care and want you here with me forever. I want you to guide and enlighten me about how to be a great parent for my kids just as you are for me.

I want you to watch me graduate from college and see me become successful. I want you to be there with me forever to tell me when I'm doing something wrong or that I'm the craziest boy you've ever seen. I need you with me forever because I have no one else.

All children fight with their parents and a few of their arguments may be as crazy as ours, but I love you Maria Jimenez. Even though I didn't have a father figure to look up to, I promise you that I will never be a bad father to my kids.

If they took everything away from me and I had to travel across the world to find my kids, I would. That's what you would have done for me.

Most people have two guarantees in life, death and taxes. I have one more: As long as I'm alive, my kids will always have a dad no matter what.

You were my role model before I even knew what those words meant. Do you know what the best part about having you as a mom is? My kids will have you as their grandmother.

I know one day we'll have to go our separate paths, and as I write this I'm overwhelmed with sadness, but I want to take this opportunity to thank you for being my mom and my dad. I love you, Mom.

Back for year two

SPORTS EDITOR

With a year of experience under their collective belt, Vaqueros women's soccer looks to improve on the 2014 season, in which they finished 8-9-4 overall and 2-7-1 in Western Athletic Conference matches.

Head Coach Glad Bugariu knows that another year means not only more confidence for his team but also more expectations among the squad.

"Well, there's more pressure this season. The first year, basically, it's a year where nobody expects anything from you," said the native of Romania, in his second year at the helm of the team. "The second year those expectations grow and those expectations continue to grow every year. They've created a culture. There's a women's soccer culture now here at UTRGV, and they're the founders of that. It's partly on them to spread that culture to our newcomers."

In nonconference play a season ago, the team's record was 6-1-3 before entering WAC. A pair of games remain on the schedule before the WAC opener Sept. 27 in New Mexico, including a match at 7 p.m. Wednesday against Texas Southern University at the UTRGV Soccer and Track & Field Complex. Bugariu knows this part of the season, before conference begins, is important for players new and returning alike.

"Obviously, we want to win every game we play but at this point we're still trying to blend in 13 new players and that has its challenges both tactically and from a team chemistry standpoint," the nine-year coaching veteran said. "We work very hard to make sure these things are set before the first conference game."

One of those 13 newcomers is freshman Meghan Oram from Calgary, Canada. The forward's first goal came Sept. 6 against Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi.

Oram also stressed the importance of the early season and nonconference play for the team's chemistry.

"I think these games are just as important as those conference games because this kind of gets our team starting to build together, our chemistry on and off the field," the 5-foot-6-inch Oram, from Western Canada, said. "It helps with getting ready to prepare for those big games in the conference, to see where we're at and start putting the pieces together and start getting ready."

The forward's experiences are shared with 12 other players who are playing for UTRGV for the first year with the program. Oram says that training, despite this fact, has gone smoothly.

"With all new teams, I think, the beginning is always a little bit rocky, because we all don't know each other, we've never played together, people all play differently," Oram said. "But I think, so far, we've all been training together very well, considering the fact we've got half the team being new players, either freshmen or transfers. I think we are improving every day and getting better all the time."

There are two more opportunities for the team to get better before conference begins and the games will count for standings and seedings in the end of season tournament.

After the WAC opener on the road against New Mexico State University Sept. 27, the team returns for its conference home opener. That game, against Grand Canyon University, will take place Oct. 2, when UTRGV will attempt to improve its conference record and carry momentum to the WAC tournament in November.

Athlete of the Week

Name: Bojana Mitrovic
Classification: Sophomore
Major: Marketing
Sport: Volleyball
Position: Right side hitter
Hometown: Novi Sad, Serbia

Who is your favorite athlete? "Ivan Miljković. He was the right side hitter in the national team in my country. Now, he is retired. He's such a beast, so I really like him."

Who is your role model? "I would say my mom because she's been through a lot and she's a fighter and she's pushing me through everything and she's giving me a huge support here."

What is the best advice you've ever been given and by whom? "I would say my mother and my coach. The best advice that I got from my mother is that the more confidence you have the more you're going to accomplish more stuff, and the best advice I got from my coach is that everything in the court is related to life and if you're making other people better, you're a great player."

What do you like to do for fun? "I like to read. I like to listen to music and hang out with my teammates."

When did you begin playing volleyball and why did you start playing? "I started playing volleyball when I was 13 and I always liked the sport. Nobody in my family played it ever, but I always watched it on TV. I just liked it and started playing it."

Did you play in high school and did you get any awards? "Yes. I played in high school and I got a lot of awards at home but, I mean, it's not going to help you a lot."

What are your goals for the season? "Our goal this season is to win the conference and to get as far as we can as a team."

What is your favorite movie? "My favorite movie I would say is 'Inception.' I've watched it five times and every time I take it on a different way. There's so many different ways to understand that movie."

Is there a song that gets your head in the game? "I have a lot of favorite songs, so every week I'll find a new one. As long as I like the song, it's good."

What are your plans for the Fall 2015 semester? "I think school is very important for every human being. Of course, for athletes as well because we don't have a lot of time to commit at it but, I mean, it's all time management. My goal is to have 4.0 GPA this fall, so I'm going to try my best."

How do you feel about being part of the first UTRGV Volleyball Team? "It's a big deal. It's a new school, a new team. Everything is new for us and I'm really proud of how hard we are working and I know that we're going to get far."

Members of the Edinburg Fire Department will also distribute information on fire safety.

The Clery Center for Security on Campus, an organization created to bring a safe learning environment to college students, started the campaign in 2008. Each year, the center comes up with a different slogan to encourage student involvement. This year's slogan is "Know More, Do More."

The organization also aims to keep college campuses aware of sexual assault, domestic violence, dating violence and stalking.

"It's part of the overall national campaign on campus safety that's sponsored by the Clery Center for Campus Security," David Mariscal, assistant director for UTRGV Student Rights and Responsibilities, said about the event.

This is the second year the event is held on the Edinburg campus; it was previously hosted by the University of Texas Pan American, Mariscal said.

NCSAM events will be held on the Brownsville and Edinburg campuses throughout September. However, programs promoting risk reduction and student safety will continue throughout the year, said Doug Stoves, associate dean for Student Rights and Responsibilities.
