The President's Wife Writes . . .

I am grateful to Mr. Schellhase for the privilege of publishing some of my own ideas. As the wife of the president of our College, too frequently my role is of the Edgar Bergen—Charlie McCarthy type. I am especially pleased for this opportunity to record my joys as the daughter-in-law of Nora Shuler Helfferich.

There are many important things to be learned from a woman who served for thirty-five years as the wife of a clergyman, who spent twenty-five years as a preceptress at Ursinus College, and who sought always to carry more than her share of the world's work.

She early learned to assign the proper weight to all problems, never raising "fuss and feathers" over small matters but always keeping things in proper perspective. She has taught me that happy family living depends upon a respect for physical and intellectual privacy, upon the right of self-expression, and upon knowing when to surrender both for the benefit of all.

The independence of Mother Helfferich is beyond belief. She has her own apartment, her own garden, and her own bridge club. She makes her own decisions, does her own shopping and insists that John Daly talks too much.

It is a deep religious experience to live with a woman who has suffered disappointments and sorrows, yet daily thanks God for his gifts of love, family, beauty and hope of an everlasting life.

The loyalty Mother Helfferich has for her church, Ursinus College, and her family, which includes her girls from Clamer, South and Hobson, inspires all who know her to strengthen their own loyalties.

It is a real pleasure to have such a mother-in-law. In fact it is rather exciting and gay to live with the Helfferichs. I, too, would like to live beyond the age of ninety, if I could also manage to retain the zest for life exhibited by Nora Shuler Helfferich, Ursinus College, Litt.B., 1893.

Mater Ursini

The most popular and prominent contemporary Ursinus mother is Nora Shuler Helferich. Proudly and with dignity she carries her name, Mrs. William Ursinus Helferich. She, more than any other woman in the history of the College, deserves to bear the title, Mrs. Ursinus.

Born in Trappe, a mile from the campus, her heart has never left and her presence has never gone far from the College she loves so fondly. She attended Washington Hall, a preparatory school in Trappe, entered Ursinus in 1890 and was graduated in 1893.

In the 1800's, Mrs. Helferich reported, some colleges thought it inappropriate to grant the "bachelor" degree to women. Instead, they would substitute and confer upon women such degrees as "Award of Arts," "Maid of Arts," or "Laureate of Arts." With emphasis, and in disgust for such a practice, she concluded, "Ursinus never agreed with this silly trend, and the women in my class had the 'Bachelor of Literature' degree conferred upon them."

One of Mrs. Helferich's most delightful stories of her student days involves her illegal entrance and exit from Bomberger Hall during the period of its construction. She and her classmate,

"Sis" Hendricks, climbed around the scaffolding in the partially constructed building. The watchman, hearing the "intruders," began his search. "But," proudly reports Mrs. Helferich, "we crawled out the window in the girls' day study room." All girls in those days were day students and, obviously, they knew their way around.

One of her classmates was Wharton A. Kline, later to become the Dean of the College, who, Mrs. Helferich reports, fed her inside information concerning the College and its officers and its affairs which surprised her son, who as vice-president of Ursinus could never quite figure out where his mother got all her knowledge of what went on in the Board of Directors' meetings.

Her memories of college days are clear and sharp, entertaining and humorous. For instance, in Dr. Ruby's English class, held in the room now occupied by the Treasurer's Office, she confided to me that the girls (and I took this allusion to "the girls" to be a veiled reference to herself) were always devising means to get the boys' attention. One of their schemes was to say, "I'm cold," or "I'm warm." Thereupon one of the boys had to rise and adjust the transom above the door. One day, after hearing

"I'm warm" and "I'm cold" a half dozen times, Dr. Ruby called for order, stomped his foot and said, "I wish the young ladies would decide whether they are cold or hot."

In 1896 she was married to her classmate, William Ursinus Helferich, who was born and reared in Fogelsville and who, as a boy of ten, was taught Latin and Greek by his clergyman father and grandfather. After Mr. Helferich's graduation from the Ursinus School of Theology, he and his wife served churches in Dillsburg, and in 1898 they moved to Bath, where they ministered until his death in 1933.

Mrs. Helferich returned to Ursinus to open Clamer Hall as a preceptress in 1935, and she remembers some fascinating events from that era. Once, at midnight, she was awakened by a student who claimed that she could no longer tolerate her roommate. Determined to act at once, she moved at that late hour into another room. At two a.m. the girl again awakened Mrs. Helferich and told her that she was moving back with her roommate, adding, in explanation of the quiet move at that hour, "I don't want the other girls to know that I moved out!"

husband of Nora Shuler Helfferich.*

On her 90th birthday we kept the ax from her hands for the century oak on the hill which we are saving for her 100th birthday.

Mother's great-grandfather, Gabriel Shuler, cut down a great oak on his 100th birthday, and we look forward to mother's doing the same.

Mrs. Helfferich, her son, Randolph, '29, and his family.

One of my first official acts upon becoming president of Ursinus College was to ask my Mother to retire from her position as preceptress of Hobson Hall. She complied with my request and submitted a formal resignation to me to which the following postscript was added: "I hope this is the last serious mistake you make in your new position."

This I offer as indicative of the type of generosity and honesty one can expect from a mother.

No other woman has lived so intimately with Ursinus College; no other woman is more widely known among Ursinus women. What she has done with her life, what her life has stood for, has been of tremendous significance to those who have known her.

It is with great pride as an Ursinus alumna and as her daughter-in-law that I salute Nora Shuler Helfferrich as Mrs. Ursinus.

After spending four years at Clamer Mrs. Helfferich moved to South Hall and in 1943, when the College acquired Hobson Hall, she moved in before the furniture arrived. She reports, "I slept on the floor in back of chests of drawers." She was a preceptress at Hobson for fourteen years, retired in 1957, but came out of retirement in 1959 to spend another year on the job with the girls in 942.

Good advice has often come from Mrs. Helfferich as she counseled a generation of girls at the College. Once, for instance, when a young swain called for a girl who had asked him to the Lorelei, he—upon seeing the unusual bouquet which had been made for him—threw the flowers in a corner and ran out. Crying, the girl came to Mrs. Helfferich for comfort. "Don't undress; he'll be back," she said. And she was right!

Mrs. Helfferich is a mine for little known facts about Ursinus. Last year, for example, she handed me a note which listed the names of "the first girl bell ringers." According to her records, on November 11, 1944, after Ursinus beat Franklin and Marshall 2-0 on Patterson Field, the following girls rang the Freeland bell to proclaim this pigskin victory: Roberta Blauch, '47; Carolyn Howells, '47; Barbara Djorup, '45; Beverly Cloud, '45; Erma Keyes, '47; and Betty Waddington '47.

Asked to compare today's students with those of her day, she said that students now have a better opportunity to acquire knowledge, but that the required reading of the classics by students in her school days gave them a superior kind of learning. "The library then," she said, "was small but used greatly; it was located in the space that is now used as a cloakroom in Freeland Hall, at the entrance to the present dining room." With her characteristic twinkle and chuckle, she added: "Oh, yes, it might surprise present students to know that the biology and chemistry departments were housed where the morning coffee klatsch is held—what was formerly called 'the farmer's dining room' and which still is used as a dining hall for the service people.

Mrs. Helfferich was most serious and forceful when pressed further about the differences between the College in her student days and the one that she sees now. "Look at the physical growth," she said. "We had three buildings and ten acres in my day; now we have thirty-six buildings and one hundred acres. The scholarship of the faculty was evident in 1890 and it is just as obvious today. The curriculum has always been liberal, and the atmosphere at Ursinus has always been Christian. The character of the students has not changed perceptibly; we have always had a good percentage of serious scholars, and, fortunately, the foolish students have always been in a minority. Faces and forms change, but Ursinus has the same spirit of friendliness now as that which she had in the 1890's."

In speaking of her recollections of Dr. J. H. A. Bomberger, the first president of Ursinus, Mrs. Helfferich became almost reverential. "When you looked at him you shook in your shoes," she explained. "You played no pranks on him. He was medium tall, had a long beard, and was stately, kind, fair and strict. He looked like his picture in Bomberger Chapel. He lived in Shreiner, taught in the Seminary, and didn't mingle with the students. I never saw Mrs. Bomberger. I think they both kept pretty much to themselves."

On the subject of the presidents of Ursinus Mrs. Helfferich said, "I have known all eight presidents of Ursinus College. They were all very different in appearance and in personality, but they all had respect for the history of the College and had reasonable plans for its future."

No sketch of Mrs. Helfferich could ever be complete; her life has been too full and rich to be put into words. But her chief pride has always been her sons. She has had five. Her eldest born, Roderick, died of diphtheria when he was six. The remaining four were all graduated from Ursinus. Little wonder, then, that when Mrs. Helfferich remembers Ursinus, she speaks of her sons; and when she speaks of her sons, she remembers Ursinus. Cyril, '24, also a graduate of Harvard University School of Business, was an investment banker and broker who died in 1946. Donald, '21, a graduate of Yale University Law School, is president of Ursinus College. Reginald, '28, was graduated from the Chicago Theological Seminary and succeeded his father as the pastor of Christ Church in Bath. Since 1947 he has been the executive secretary of the Commission on World Service of the Evangelical and Reformed Church. Randolph '29, is director of the Automotive Training Center, Spring Garden Institute.

The Ursinus College European Tour

Dr. Maurice W. Armstrong, professor of history at Ursinus since 1945.

A big, blue bus came to a halt in the Faculty parking lot at seven o'clock in the morning of June 28. Only one member of the faculty was present at such an unacademic hour, but an eager class of Ursinus students and grads, including one with a black beard, quickly mounted the bus and waved good-bye to the boiler-house, the library and other old friends standing around the campus. Four men, fifteen women and one professor of history were off on the first Ursinus College Travelling Seminar and Tour.

By 10:00 p.m., a French-Canadian policeman on a dark steamship dock in Montreal was telling a weary Pottstown travel agent to take off his sunglasses, and the tourists were mounting the gangway of the Holland-American liner Ryndam. The girls were charmed by their Dutch stewards and the mighty St. Lawrence River. They could even overlook the necessity of listening to the professor lecturing for one hour a day in the forward lounge, but they could not overlook the storm on the third day out. That really made them sick.

A boat-train whisked them from Le Havre to Paris in an early summer evening, and soon everyone was venturing forth to find supper in the street-side cafes, restaurants and back alleys of not-so-gay Pairee. The trip was planned so that there was plenty of free time interspersed with organized sight-seeing tours. Some went shopping for hats and antiques; some spent their time looking for eating places; and some followed the Professor to Notre Dame, Sainte Chapelle or in search of the ten best masterpieces in the Louvre. There were shows too—opera, ballet, and other kinds, and half-day trips to Versailles and the Cathedral of Chartres.

Too soon, but not before some had learned the high cost of fresh strawberries and cream in Paris, the group set out on a motorcoach tour of Western France. Pierre, the bus-driver, was every tourist's dream. He drove his bus to beaches, off-the track castles and churches, and cared for the girls with true Gallic gallantry, singing French songs with such verve that one day on a lonely country road he completely ran out of gas and the bus sat by the side of the road for an hour or more while Pierre thumbed his way to the nearest town. In return, the students sang. They sang as a group in the talent show on the Ryndam, and they sang on trains and busses all across Europe. A memorable scene was a cold, foggy night on the isle of St. Michael, when they sat in the gateway of the great abbey and sang "Our God our Help in Ages Past."

The tour through France included a visit to the grave of William the Conqueror, the Bayeux Tapestry (with many an allusion to Dr. Foster), the illuminated chateaux of the Loire, the Prehistoric cave paintings at Lascaux, and the walled city of Carcassonne. Outstanding were the fields of ripening grain with wild, red poppies, the nine thousand crosses, "row on row," at The American War Cemetery at Omaha Beach; and the flower gardens of many of the houses. There were rare moments, too, such as when two weary girls took off their shoes in front of Matilda's Abbey des Dames and walked barefoot through the dark streets of Caen. Hotels, reserved ahead by American Youth Abroad, were comfortable and sometimes even luxurious. French fried chicken turned out to be almost as common as French fried potatoes, but even then there were opportunities to savor the special dishes of each region: rabbit and cider in Normandy, Mere Poulard's flaming omelettes at Mont St. Michel, black truffles in Perigord, green noodles in Perugia, steaming haggis in Edinburgh, and a few Yorkshire puddings and beef-and-kidney pies tucked in along the way. All this caused some concern about whether clothes would continue to fit, but the Professor's insistence on taking "constitutionals" successfully held the line for Ursinus. Sometimes his little pedometer registered as high as nine miles a day; walking kept everyone in shape.

The tour of France ended with a day bathing on the Riviera and an evening drive to Monaco, where it was discovered that most of the group were minors and could not visit the Casino but had to console themselves with large glasses of orange juice while their elders tinkered with the bank at Monte Carlo.

A swift train ride along the Italian Riviera, past snow capped Apennines, ended in a beautiful sunset over the Leaning Tower of Pisa. Some of the best walks of the summer were the evening strolls when old palaces, churches and ruins were flood-lighted and ghosts of the Holy Roman Empire seemed to come alive as they seldom do in Colleveville, except after a History I test. Perhaps Florence was the favorite of all the cities visited. As the guide said, it was "home" for all descendants of western civilization. The girls were ecstatic over the straw hats, kid gloves, jewelry and sandals in the Straw Market and on the Ponte Vecchio. They appeared with great straw shopping bags in their arms and sometimes with two hats on their heads. This was ominous in view of the fact that the Professor was already turning gray trying to keep track of thirty-seven suitcases. Vainly he tried to interest some in Michaelangelo's "David" or Fra Angelico's "Annunciation." Yet, Florence was a great experience, from the Medici Chapel and the Uffizi Gallery to the horse and carriage drives past the illuminated Gates of Paradise.

The memorial stone of Zacharias Ursinus, as seen in the wall of the church at Neustadt, Germany, where he is buried.

The journey to Rome was made by C. I. T. motorcoach via Assisi and the Central Italian hill towns with their red tile roofs and narrow streets. Men and women were working in the harvest fields, and here and there, among the olive groves, cows were hauling haycarts. The sense of poverty and hard toil hung heavy over the land. Gazing at Giotto's famous frescos of St. Francis of Assisi feeding the beggars, one realized that Italy's old problems remain unchanged. The first evening in Rome, looking out over the illuminated Forum and recalling the wild beasts which once were in the Colosseum, the same lesson was driven home. Rome could only be enjoyed by some if the present squalor was forgotten and the past grandeur was revived in imagination.

Sightseeing trips to St. Peter's, the Vatican, the Catacombs and the famous fountains (where coins were hopefully deposited to insure a speedy return to the Eternal City), were followed by evenings at the opera or driving in horse and carriage over the seven hills, or just eating chocolate ice-cream as only the Romans make it. Some went back to see Michelangelo's "Moses" or the Sistine Chapel a second time, others with a more classical taste wandered with open guide book through the ruins of the Forum or sought the Temple of Vesta.

The second Ursinus College European Tour, led by Dr. Armstrong, will leave about June 15 and will return in the middle of August.

Alumni are welcome to join the tour. The cost will be approximately $1,300. Those interested may write to the Alumni Office.

It was natural or at least historically correct to proceed from Rome to Ravenna, the capital of the Ostragoths and of the later Byzantine Exarchate. The transition was made by a train which seemed to get lost enroute and, after wandering around the mountain villages of eastern Italy, finally deposited the group, with suitcases, hats, straw baskets, and a laundry bag, on a remote station platform where no one could speak a word of English. Eventually it was learned that all were expected to move to another platform and board an incoming express. Undaunted, the legion with its impedimenta moved on to Ravenna. There, amidst the mosaics of Theodorici, Justinian and Theodora, was discovered the one air-conditioned hotel of the whole trip. Everyone loved Ravenna. There was an organ recital in a twelve hundred year old church with Byzantine mosaics gleaming in the semi-darkness, there was Dante's tomb, and there was swimming in the nearby Adriatic.

Swimming was continued at the Lido in Venice, but not air-conditioning, and there were mosquitos. In the morning some visited the glass factories and returned starry-eyed and bejewelled with glass beads and reports of fabulous bargains and guides. In the afternoon a flotilla of four or five gondolas floated along the narrow canals and Ursinus students added color to the Venetian pageant with their newly acquired gondolier hats, as they went to visit the paintings of Titian and Bellini. At night there was almost a riot along the Grand Canal when an Ursinus red-head and a brunette decided to go for a walk.

Obviously it was time to go north—to "Paradise" as one student of German ancestry called it. The trip by train through the Austrian Alps was beautiful, especially the views from the dining-car windows. The cool air and the mountain scenery soothed fevered Venetian moods. Salzburg with its glockenspiel, its baroque churches, its castle and gardens, and its Mozart Festival was one of the happiest experiences of the summer.

From Munich, where certain students got lost in the Hof Brau Haus, there was a memorable trip and climb up to the romantic castle of mad King Ludwig of Bavaria at Neuschwanstein, and a visit to the rococo Wieskirche. There was also the state museum with its magnificent collection of Reubens and Durer. Then, on to Heidelberg, where the Professor and four loyal children of Ursinus hired a station wagon and set off for Neustadt-am-Weinstrasse in search of the tomb of Zacharias Ursinus. (But that should be the subject of an entirely new article; suffice it to say that after a student had climbed an eight foot iron fence, the stone was found in the Stiftskirche and a health drunk to Z.U.) Shades of U.C. were also evoked on the next day as the Rhine steamer swept around the Lorelei rock and students thought yearningly of Sunnybrook. Everywhere West Germany seemed busy and prosperous, and the people did not seem to be worrying about war.

After one last rush for cuckoo-clocks in Cologne, tourists, baggage, bags, hats and clocks entrained for Amsterdam

ADMIRAL MOREELL

Looks at a Philosopher

A response to Dr. Mattern's article, "A Philosopher looks at Barry Goldwater," which appeared in the July Journal.

Admiral Ben Moreell

Mr. Robert D. Quinn
115 Mayfair Drive
Mt. Lebanon, Penna.

Dear Bob:

I appreciate, greatly, your thoughtfulness in letting me have the Ursinus College Bulletin for July, 1961, which contains the article on Senator Barry Goldwater by Dr. Mattern.

I frequently find it bewildering to follow the lucubrations of the pedantic mind, especially when it ventures into realms with which it has little or no personal familiarity. By the very nature of things, the denizens of Academe must survey such areas from the tops of tall ivory towers, figuratively speaking. This frequently leads them into the error of mistaking the evanescent configurations of cloud structures for the realities of men and things.

I am reminded of the pungent statement uttered by General Hugh "Iron Pants" Johnson, famous Captain of Shock Troops in the Roosevelt New-Deal Dynasty. The General had been roundly criticized by some of the professional master minds of the new Administration who were dedicated to the thesis of "authority without responsibility." His defense was as follows:

"While an item can be put on paper and somebody who never did it himself can sit and tell you all about it, it is likely to be an enunch lecturing on love."

I wish I had the time to discuss in detail Dr. Mattern's article. I have read it carefully and have underscored numerous statements and made marginal notes. Unfortunately, I have so many other things to do that I can only "hit the high spots."

Dr. Mattern's basic argument is that, while he likes Senator Goldwater's central thesis very much, (i.e., that freedom is our prize possession), he finds it "unrealistic" and "romantic." This is so because, he asserts, Goldwater's idea is "out of season," "out-moded," and cannot attract "young blood," or the politically realistic.

He states that the Goldwater concept does not give people what "they want," which he defines as "patios and convertibles to swimming pools and out-door barbecues."

So, Dr. Mattern proposes to "give people what they want." In order to do this, he states that "over-all planning for hundreds of millions of persons will be imperative." In other words, we will require authoritarian regimentation of the masses because individual freedom is "out of season."

I believe that Dr. Mattern's alleged political "statistics" are "out of season." If we refer to the last elections (1960), we find that in spite of massive spending by the union hierarchy and by other pressure groups (spending which was not always legal or ethical) and dire predictions of defeat for a number of conservative Senators and Representatives, not one single conservative Senator was defeated. In the House, 23 new, young conservatives replaced "Welfare-State" adherents, and only one dedicated conservative was defeated, a net gain of 22.

In the recent Senatorial election in Texas, John Tower, a "Goldwater conservative" was elected, the first Republican Senator from Texas elected by popular vote. Senator Tower is said to "out-Goldwater Goldwater" in some respects.

In addition to these signs of the times, conservative organizations are springing up on campuses all over the country. Youth is fed up with the idea that "Papa knows best." Papa, in this case, being the head of a political machine that believes in that planning of people's lives which Dr. Mattern thinks is "imperative."

With respect to the massive productivity which will "provide people with earthly blessings, not promise them celestial ones" (Chairman Khrushchev's words) i.e., establish conditions which give the greatest promise of "patios and convertibles to swimming pools and out-door barbecues," to which Dr. Mattern attaches such great importance, I quote from Dr. Wilhelm Ropke, noted political economist and architect of the phenomenal economic renaissance of West Germany. He wrote, "We should stand for a free economic order even if it implied material sacrifice and even if Socialism gave the certain prospect of material increase. It is our undeserved luck that the exact opposite is true. More important, the free economic order is indispensable as the prerequisite of liberty, human dignity, free choice and justice. That is why we want it, and no price would be too high for it, even if the Communists would make bigger and better washing machines."

Not only is authoritarian planning incompatible with human dignity and freedom, it is far less productive than the free market economy, as is amply proved by a comparison between the economy of Communist East Germany and that of free West Germany, where the same kinds of people with the same cultural backgrounds function under two differing social orders.

But the foregoing does not constitute my principal objection to Dr. Mattern's position. His thesis is that we must give the people "what they want," not what they earn and choose for themselves. Obviously, "what they want" is to be determined by majority vote. Thus, he subscribes to the thesis of the "divine right of the Majority," although realism indicates that, under present conditions, the alleged "will of the majority" is determined by a small clique of political masters who are adept at manipulating the majority to serve their own purposes, i.e., the ruling masters determine "what the people want," as is shown in Russia and all other totalitarian regimes. Dr. Mattern, by implication, denies the natural or God-given rights of the individual which no one, not even government, can take from him without violating the moral law. (Parenthetically, Dr. Mattern nowhere mentions God and the moral law!)

He says, "A man who is dead in his own time, it has been said, is dead in all time." And he defines "being dead," as being "out of season," i.e., being ahead of one's time or behind one's time. Well, then, what of Jesus? If one bases his judgment on the "people's choice" of Barrabas, in preference to Jesus, when Pilate gave the crowd the option it is obvious that Jesus was "out of season," that is, he was, according to Dr. Mattern, "dead in his own time" and therefore, "dead in all time."

How wrong that is! For, all the armies that ever marched, all the navies that ever sailed, all the kings that ever reigned and all the parliaments that ever sat, taken together, have not affected human destiny as has this one Solitary Life which Dr. Mattern would have us believe was "out of season." I will go further and state that if Western civilization is to be saved from the modern Huns and Vandals, it will be saved by a mass turning of the people to the teaching of Jesus, from which we have so tragically strayed!

There is a fundamental conflict between expediency, as decreed by the regimented "will of the majority," and moral principle, as defined by such expressions as The Sermon on The Mount and The Ten Commandments! Even if it were true that only expediency now appeals to the American electorate (which the facts deny), my bet would be placed on "moral principle" as the ultimate victor.

I'm sorry I cannot go into the several misinterpretations of Senator Goldwater's statements which are revealed in Dr. Mattern's article.

Perhaps I could summarize my position by saying that Right is not what the majority says it is (as asserted by Dr. Mattern) but what God says it is, the word of God having been interpreted for us over the ages by the Saints and Sages.

Kindest regards,

BEN MOREELL

Admiral, U.S.N. (Ret.)

ZUCKER LOOKS AT MOREELL

It is not often that an avowed liberal is treated to the spectacle of one convinced conservative clutching another by the throat. It is even more rare that a liberal is invited to referee the bout, so to speak. And, not to push the wrestling metaphor too far, I find it a pleasure as well as a duty to separate the antagonists and to point out where either, or both, are in error—according to my liberal lights.

In one corner we have Professor Charles D. Mattern, academic conservative, and in the other Admiral Ben Moreell, industrial conservative. At issue is Academician Mattern's analysis of Senator Barry Goldwater in the last issue of this Journal. A copy coming into the hands of apparently pro-Goldwater Industrialist Moreell moved him to challenge Mattern's evaluation of the very conservative Senator from Arizona.

Now if the antagonists are both conservatives, then whence stems the misunderstanding? Partly the difficulty arises from a non-ideological cause: the compulsive predisposition of many men directly involved in the management of the American economy to view professors as "denizens . . . of tall ivory towers" and as having no realistic contribution to make to the improvement of American life. Exempt from this cate-

Admiral Moreell's letter, which begins on page 9, was written to his young friend, Bob Quinn, '58, who forwarded it to the Alumni Office. It is his "critique" of Dr. Mattern's article, "A Philosopher looks at Barry Goldwater," which appeared in the July issue of the Journal.

Admiral Moreell, who organized the "Sea Bees" in 1941 became, in 1946, the first naval officer in history, not a graduate of the Naval Academy, to hold the title of four star admiral. In 1944 at 51 he was the youngest vice admiral in the history of the U.S. Navy.

In 1947 Admiral Moreell went to the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, fourth largest steel company in the United States, as Chairman of the Board of Directors and President. He retired in 1958.

Dr. F. Donald Zucker, the well-known liberal professor in the Department of Political Science at Ursinus, reviews Admiral Moreell's letter and records his comments in the columns which follow.

gory, of course, are those campus researchers who help to develop and sell new profit-making products. But captains of industry in general, and this Admiral of Industry in particular, are so susceptible to intellectual myopia that even when a scholar states his ideas in the most obvious terms, their Pavlovian reaction is to dismiss the academic viewpoint as "the lucubrations of the pedantic mind."

One wonders, parenthetically, why they entrust their children to the educational care of college professors, or why they seek employees from the ranks of students who have been exposed to fuzzy-minded pedants?

Admiral Moreell is so engrossed in his sniping at Professor Mattern (who has been in business and who therefore is not a "somebody who never did it himself," and who is not venturing "into realms with which [he] has little or no personal familiarity,") that he fails to see the obvious. This will become clear in a moment, when we come to grips with the core issues in the Mattern-Moreell dialogue.

First, however, we must be fully aware at the outset that Mattern is a firm advocate of the competitive economy. He is apparently a conservative of the non-compulsive variety, who does not want to see the demand for economic stability "penetrate deeper and deeper into the hallowed ground of individual freedom."

But as a scholarly philosopher he is able to rise above this position and project his perceptive mind into the future.

He does not like the problem he sees, nor the solution he envisages. This, however, does not becloud his vision, nor prevent him from alerting the rest of us to the problem and its almost inevitable solution. Particularly he avoids "preachment," and one wishes, in the interest of understanding our difficulties, that Moreell, Goldwater and Company would follow his example.

One of Moreell's major criticisms of Mattern centers on Mattern's statement that: "As humans come to be more and more massed together" due to the "startling increase" in world population, "over-all planning for hundreds of millions of persons will be imperative."

Mattern does not say this is now desirable, because "our national problem is not yet acute, only sobering." What he is saying is that unless the United States and other nations take steps to limit the world population, the pressure of too many people in the not-too-distant future will make that future "a time of little fat or surplus" in which planning will be "imperative."

Goldwater, Mattern correctly observes, is unaware of or ignores this problem and so fails to offer any solution for it. I might add here that this is another symptom of the intellectual nearsightedness to which compulsive conservatives are subject. Thus Mattern declares that Goldwater's philosophy, because it disregards the future, is "unrealistic," "romantic," "outmoded," and "out of season."

Moreell, in his anxiety to attack "planning," like Goldwater overlooks or ignores the pressing population problem which is what prompted Mattern's "over-all planning" statement in the first place. Moreell here sees Socialism which would, by majority vote, the "Divine Right of the Majority," give the people "what they want." He is probably correct, and Mattern undoubtedly agrees in viewing this as presently highly undesirable.

I am at a loss to explain why Moreell criticizes his fellow conservative on this score. Mattern makes his philosophical position extraordinarily clear at the beginning of his article. Perhaps it is merely a matter of Moreell's being totally hostile to any Goldwater critic, however mild.

And so rather than face approaching reality, Moreell, looking only backward, unlimbers any ancient rhetorical artillery that seems to support old style unregulated enterprise against even necessary governmental economic planning. He equates the latter with "authoritarian regimentation." He speaks of the elected leaders of the country collectively as "Papa . . . the head of a political machine that believes in . . . planning of people's lives . . ." Apparently planning is legitimate for corporations, but it is "authoritarian" when society, by majority rule and free elections, does the same in an effort to avoid economic disaster.

One wonders why Moreell should criticize Mattern for advocating giving the people "what they want," since free enterprise makes much of the idea that it merely supplies what people "earn and choose for themselves." Moreell himself points out in his quoting of Dr. Wilhelm Roepke that the business of business is to provide the people with "what they want," as determined by a free market economy.

Dr. F. Donald Zucker

His objection undoubtedly stems from his conviction that Mattern is promoting "authoritarian" planning, that such planning is far less productive than free enterprise, and that even if it weren't, planning should not be considered because it is "incompatible with human dignity and freedom."

Perhaps Moreell can show us how un-planned enterprise can meet the need for "stability . . . for our cramped economic existence" in the crowded world of the future, or how the world can avoid becoming crowded. If so, then let him bring forward his proposal instead of ignoring the problem while attacking those who, like Mattern, have the courage and foresight to face it.

In his efforts to demonstrate that Mattern is wrong in declaring Goldwater "out of season," Moreell leaves no sacred stone unturned. By a cleverly contrived but not too subtle switch, Moreell attempts to equate Goldwater with God. He criticizes Mattern for asserting that, on the basis of his "out of season" ideas, Goldwater is "dead in his own time," and before the reader can catch his breath he is presented with Jesus, whom, Moreell tells us, "was, according to Dr. Mattern, 'dead in his own time' and therefore, 'dead in all time.'" At this point in his letter, Moreell plays the hero and rushes to the defense of Jesus with his eloquent peroration that begins "How wrong that is!"

Moreell not only tries to make Mattern anti-Christ, but he also attempts to associate him with the Soviets. In his "earthly blessings . . . not . . . celestial ones" remark, Moreell makes it appear that Khrushchev endorses Mattern, or is it vice versa? The same sort of stragem is employed in his observation that "ruling masters determine 'what people want,' as shown in Russia and all other totalitarian regimes."

As if to clinch his case, Moreell trots out natural rights and God-given moral law, which, he indicates, Mattern doesn't mention. Apparently no discussion with the Admiral can be considered complete until it is determined which side God is on.

Few "denizens of Academe" would claim, as Mattern puts it, "that they are hearing God's first or last words," and offer their interpretation of God and the moral law as definitive. Mattern does not deny the existence of natural or God-given rights. If he says anything by implication, it is that such rights exist but whose interpretation, among the many offered, are we obligated to accept? Moreell, self-righteously, says he and Goldwater are in possession of timeless truth. One has pretty well run out of arguments when he has to insist that God is on his side.

The most distressing aspect of the whole Goldwater-Mattern-Moreell debate is the persistence of all three men to confuse economic freedom with all other kinds, and the tendency to place economic freedom at the top of the list of desirable freedoms. This emphasis is the dominant characteristic of conservatism today, which is carried over from what is usually labeled 19th Century liberalism.

Liberalism's main concern has always been with freedom of the individual to develop himself to the limit of his capacity—whether in the social, artistic, political, scientific, professional or economic realms—to the extent that he does not infringe on the freedom of other individuals to do the same. A Woman's Approach to Peace

The Founders' Day address delivered by Senator Smith.

I am particularly pleased to be honored by Ursinus College today because of what Ursinus symbolizes and epitomizes—the projection of moral force—the nurture and development of the mind and the spirit. For this is the very spirit and the very core upon which Ursinus College was founded—and it is most appropriately the very theme of your Founders' Day Convocation.

Yet, we meet at a time when the seeming dominance of physical force over moral force threatens not only the peace of the world—but the very physical existence of the world itself. For so long we have been saying, "When, oh when, can we live in real peace?" But now that saying is changing to "How long can we live?"

One of the greatest hopes for eventually attaining permanent peace in this world—for defeating would-be world conquerors—is through the maximum of education throughout the world. For education is truth—and truth is the greatest shield and weapon against evil.

Yet, the power of knowledge—the power of truth—is lost if we do not have the courage to speak that truth. And therein exists what I feel is the real nature of religion—the combination of truth and courage.

Such is the importance and greatness of our colleges such as Ursinus—for the very fundamental and original purpose of our colleges going back to the colonial days was to supply the spiritual needs of the colonists and to educate ministers of the Gospel.

The real ingredients of moral force are truth and courage. Too many of us too often think of courage only in terms of physical force. We think only of physical courage—the will to overcome fear of physical danger.

Yet, the more exacting and more difficult courage is moral courage. It is the courage to hold your tongue at times when you would like to get something off your chest. It is the courage to speak your mind even though you know that you may be misunderstood—that what you say will be unpopular and bring down vituperation and recrimination on you.

Moral courage is that attribute of speaking your mind—of saying the very necessary truths—when most everyone else has become a mental mute for fear of criticism and ostracism for the unpleasant truth they might otherwise speak.

Man has not made much of a success at achieving peace. He seems to vacillate and alternate between the extremes of war and killing on the one hand and the extremes of appeasement and softness under the guise of compromise and negotiation on the other hand. And both extremes prevent any real and lasting peace.

It has been suggested by some that women would do better. I do not necessarily accept this suggestion. I would only say that I don't see how women could do any worse—and, of course, we will never know unless women are given a chance.

There is a desperate need for a world conference on ways and means of achieving peace—and I propose that the women throughout the world aim at such a conference while the men leaders in the United Nations and the various countries of the world continue to deal with the threat of war.

Such an international conference should not be of short duration. Just a few days would not do. Instead it should be for at least a month—and if it has even a modicum of success and achievement, it should lead to periodic conferences. An appropriate site would be Berlin with meetings alternating in West Berlin and East Berlin.

It should be attended by women of the caliber of Eleanor Roosevelt and Clare Booth Luce of the United States, Madam Furtseva of Russia, Queen Elizabeth and Lady Reading of Great Britain, Madam Pandit Nehru of India, Madam Chiang Kai Shek of Nationalist China, Mrs. Sirimavo Bandaranaike (the Prime Minister of Ceylon), Mrs. Golda Meir (the Prime Minister of Israel), Queen Juliana of Holland—women leaders of all nations of the world.

Such a conference might fall far short of the high hopes I, and millions of women throughout the world, would have for it—but it would at least be worth the try. And it would be indicative—not conclusive—of what women could or could not do.

It would provide a means of greater understanding between the women of the world. It would provide an opportunity for the marshalling of moral force by women throughout the world. It would greatly increase the dissemination of truth throughout the world. It would test the moral courage of women—and I am confident they will not be found lacking.

Founders' Day

Four outstanding women who have played a considerable role in the shaping of our country's educational policies at both the local and national levels were honored at the annual Founders' Day Convocation held on October 29.

This year marks the eightieth anniversary of the admission of women to the College, and Ursinus was proud once again to recognize the important role of women in higher education by conferring honorary degrees upon the following women.

CATHERINE DRINKER BOWEN

Mrs. Bowen, born on the campus of Haverford College, is the daughter of Dr. Henry S. Drinker, a former president of Lehigh University. A graduate of the Peabody Institute of Music and the Juilliard Institute of Music, she is an accomplished musician. However, she was to find her fame in the field of letters. Her most widely read books have been Yankee From Olympus and John Adams and the American Revolution; both were Book-of-the-Month Club selections. Ursinus conferred upon Mrs. Bowen the degree of Doctor of Letters.

ANNA L. ROSE HAWKES

Mrs. Hawkes, National President of the American Association of University Women, received the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters. A former Dean and Professor of Mills College in California, Mrs. Hawkes has waged a lifelong battle against public prejudice and apathy regarding the education of women. In her address at the Convocation she made it clear that in her opinion the vast potential of American women who are college graduates is not being utilized.

EVELYN GLAZIER HENZEL, '32

Mrs. Henzel, a graduate of Ursinus, was awarded the Doctor of Laws degree. A former school teacher and long an active voice in local and state educational circles, Mrs. Henzel, as a member of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives, has served as a member of the Education Committee of that body. At present she is the Administrative Assistant to the Superintendent of Schools in Abington Township.

MARGARET CHASE SMITH

Mrs. Smith, the senior senator from the state of Maine and the only woman in history to serve three full terms in the United States Senate, received the degree of Doctor of Laws. Mrs. Smith began her career of public service as a school teacher; later she turned to journalism and became a widely read nationally syndicated columnist.

FIVE RECEIVE BACHELOR DEGREES

At the same convocation, Dr. Helfferich conferred B.A. degrees upon Victoria Hoffman and Robert Shisler; Joseph Hobson, Jr., Joy Kline, and John Struthers received the B.S. degree.

PHILADELPHIA WOODWIND QUINTET

The Evening School opened its tenth year on Sept. 25 with 441 students, an increase of 14% over last year. Of these students 357 are men and 84 are women. Veterans number 160.

The Physical Education Department is participating in President Kennedy's "Youth Fitness Program" by acting in an advisory capacity to local school districts in the establishment and/or continuance of the recommended fitness and fitness testing programs.

At the Young Republican College Council Convention held recently in Harrisburg three Ursinus students were elected to state offices. James Minnich, Jr., son of Ursinus' Professor of Education, a senior, was elected state treasurer. A junior, Valerie Weiss, sister of Charlotte Weiss, '60, was elected state vice-chairman. Arlene Messig, also a junior at Ursinus, was appointed district coordinator.

Two new foreign students at Ursinus are Mohammed Zabarah and Paul Pradervand. Mohammed's father is the ambassador to the United States and the delegate to the United Nations from Yemen. Paul's family lives in Switzerland, where his father acts as the general secretary of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches.

The first Parents' Day at Ursinus was held on October 14. Despite the rain, 1,000 parents enjoyed their five or six hour visit at the College. According to the signs in Bomberger, the students referred to this occasion as "Get-to-Know-Your-Parents Day."

Senator Joseph S. Clark, who spoke at the Ursinus College Forum on November 8.

CUTTIN

The Office of Admissions reports that the day school enrollment totals 935 students. There are 295 new students, 270 of whom are freshmen. The college board scores of the incoming students average in the mid 500's. 55% of the student body are men. 68% of the students come from Pennsylvania, 22% from New Jersey, and 10% from a total of eleven other states.

Dr. Evan Snyder, '43, professor of physics at Ursinus, spent the summer as an analyst in the Air Force Operations Analysis Office in the Pentagon.

"The Late George Apley," a satirical portrait from J. P. Marquand's Pulitzer Prize winning novel of the same name, was presented by the Curtain Club on Nov. 17 and 18.

This residence, 620 Main Street, was recently sold to the College by Paul W. Levingood, '35. At present men are occupying the second floor apartment.

1962 Forum Programs

Alumni and friends of Ursinus are always welcome at the monthly forum programs. On Wednesday, Jan. 10, an Ursinus alumnus, C. Kenneth Snyder, 40, will be the featured speaker. Mr. Snyder is Area Program Officer for Africa, Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs, U. S. State Department.

On Monday, Feb. 12, Will Herberg, an outstanding Jewish theologian who teaches at Drew University, will address a special College Convocation on the subject, "Faith, History, and Self-Understanding."

On Monday, March 12, Dr. Linus Pauling, well-known physicist and Nobel Prize winner, will be the speaker.

On Wednesday, April 11, a piano duo will be presented; the artists will be Dr. and Mrs. Vladimir Sokoloff.

All of these affairs start promptly at 8 P.M. and conclude at 9:30 P.M.

CAMPUS

Enjoying the 75 degree heat on November 4, 1,500 alumni returned for the Homecoming festivities. Ursinus beat Haverford 22-6 on the gridiron and six fraternity queens, Miss Pennsylvania and Miss Liberty Bowl (both Ursinus beauties) made up a half-time parade which added beauty to the battle!

Following the game alumni chatted with friends and former classmates as they drank coffee and hot chocolate and ate donuts in the New Gymnasium.

Sorority luncheons, fraternity "social hours," the Loyalty Fund Kick-Off Dinner, and the Varsity Club dance rounded out the day's activities. Sandy Holl, '62, was crowned "Homecoming Queen."

Early in October forty-seven seniors began their practice teaching in fifteen near-by Junior and Senior High Schools. By the Christmas holidays they will have completed 90 hours of observation and 90 hours of actual teaching.

Dr. William Parsons, '47, professor of history at Ursinus, recently published an article on Isaac Norris III in The Pennsylvania Magazine of History and Biography. Dr. Parson, whose doctoral dissertation was on Isaac Norris II, expects to publish more material about the Norris family.

J. Douglas Davis, '41, professor of history, was recently promoted to Major, United States Army Reserve.

On November 16th Rev. Richard H. Thomas, chaplain at Princeton University, and Eastern Field Representative for the Peace Corps, visited the campus and met informally with students interested in that program.

Dr. Roger L. Shinn, professor of Applied Christianity at the Union Theological Seminary, New York, who spoke on "Existentialism and the Christian Faith" at a special College Convocation on October 16.

Sandra Holl, '62, has been named "Miss Liberty Bowl" for 1961. Brown-haired Sandra, a psychology major, is the daughter of State Representative and Mrs. Edwin G. Holl of Lansdale. She is the second Ursinus co-ed to be honored with this title. Her predecessor was Sandra Motta, '61.

Dr. G. Sieber Pancoast, '37, professor of political science, was elected Mayor of Collegeville on the GOP ticket on November 7.

Mrs. Elizabeth Read Foster, professor of history, has been given a year's leave of absence to complete research on diaries of members of the British Parliament in the early seventeenth century.

The Campus of Alaska Methodist University at Anchorage.

From Alaska to

by RICHARD R. GAY, '42

A year ago the Gay family, which includes five children and one black cat, wondered whether it had made the right decision in leaving the comfortable home and pleasant surroundings it had enjoyed in Delaware, Ohio, for ten years. As the parents, Averill, whom I had met at Ursinus, and I pondered over the decision which had landed all of us in temporary housing without any necessary personal effects, which were tied up in a warehouse by a local strike. The cat wasn't speaking, but the children were sure that this period of inconvenience proved what they had contended all along: the whole move was WRONG.

Now, a year later, Averill and I are convinced that the incredible scenery, the attractive new house, the thriving new university, and the many fine experiences more than justify the move. The children are yielding reluctantly. Of course the two youngest, Jerilee, now sixteen months, and Ricky, a brand new first grader, have no complaints. Judy, almost seventeen, still calls the move an interim, for she will soon go away to college (perhaps Ursinus). Patti varies from day to day in her evaluation of the move. She is quite busy with the work of an eighth grader, and a flourishing baby-sitting business. Sherry, the fifth grader, is most vocal about the alleged lack of parental good judgment. The cat, Inky, maintains her silence, but she is systematically exploring the many moose trails which surround the site of the house in the foothills of the Chugach mountains.

The invitation to become Associate Professor of Religion and Philosophy and the University Chaplain on the first faculty of the new Alaska Methodist University, College of Liberal Arts, in Anchorage, Alaska, came after I had served for ten years on the faculty of Ohio Wesleyan University in the religion department and as Assistant to the President.

Living in a new state, on the campus of a new university, and sending one's children to three new schools, via unpaved streets, is like being in on the creation of a new world. Optimism, energy, and high prices abound. Whatever one's interests or talents, they will be used in this "great land", as the name Alaska implies.

Since the charter of the university was granted in 1957, a campus has been cut in the 505 acres of wilderness purchased as the site for the school. The student body already totals 220 in this the second academic year, and the school is destined to become one of the truly fine church-related liberal arts colleges. Not only have Methodists from all fifty states contributed several million dollars to build the first units, but many Alaskans have pledged and contributed another million dollars. Anchorage is culture-hungry, and Alaska Methodist University heralds the development of a great city. The local enthusiasm and support is gratifying.

Fortunately, we have also had time this year to visit other parts of the state. Family camping trips have taken us to Fairbanks, Kenai, Homer, and Soldotna. On day trips we have seen Seward, Palmer and Wasilla. My speaking engagements have taken me to Nome, Juneau, Metlakatla, and Fairbanks. The Switzerland of Alaska is Valdez. A trip there was postponed until next summer. It is an understatement to say again that all of the scenery is incredible, even to lovers of the beautiful eastern Pennsylvania terrain!

This is a country for young people, and opportunities are here in every profession or pursuit. The pace is rapid; yet it can be slowed down for those who love outdoor living. From the windows of my study and office, I can see the Arctic Ski Bowl, one of the several fine skiing areas within reach of Anchorage ski enthusiasts. And the majority of men and women here also engage in hunting and fishing. People rent lockers for the storage of moose, caribou, bear, and salmon which they have shot or caught. Having tried wild game, we prefer steaks from Texas, which, we are sure you must know, is the second largest state in the union!

Here are some capsule observations: public education is tops, politics have a frontier rough and tumble manner, business competition is keen, social life is sophisticated, new construction is endless, roads are few and far between, and progress is everywhere.

Thus far we have heard that two other Ursinus alumni are in the state. We have not been able to track them down, but we have heard about their good works. Perhaps we will have our own alumni meeting. In the meantime, we say to any others who may be thinking of prospecting: come for a visit or come to stay, but by all means come. Not only can you believe everything you have heard about the fabulous size, potential, and beauty of our 49th state, but you can double it and it would still be unexaggerated!

Greenland

by E. G. PARKS, '47

Dye 2.

My assignment in Greenland started on July 7, 1960, with my arrival in Sondrestrom. My impression of life in the Arctic was quite startling. Our airplane landed near midnight and it was still daylight. The weather was rather warm with plenty of mosquitoes, to remind me of South Jersey, but not a tree was in sight; we are well north of the "tree line." Summer in Sondrestrom is very delightful with an average temperature of sixty degrees. Many people, including the Royal Family of Denmark, visit here and stay at the very modern and attractive SAS Hotel. Unfortunately, very little of my time was spent at Sondrestrom, which serves as the logistic support facility for the DEW East sites. During one of my brief stops in Sondrestrom between trips to the sites on the icecap, I attended Chapel Service at the Base and was pleasantly surprised to hear a sermon delivered by a guest Chaplain, U.S. Army Captain Howard Marsh, Class of 1941.

Most of my time in Greenland has been spent at the two sites on the icecap. As an Engineer in the Outside Plant Organization, my responsibility is to supervise the erection of antennas and radomes and the installation of cables and waveguides that connect the antennas to electronic equipment in the buildings. Some of this work is performed by the Contractor of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the remaining work is done by our people. A major problem with a project of this nature is the transportation of material, which must be ordered well in advance, delivered to some east coast port for loading, and shipped north during the summer months when the water is free of ice. In the case of the icecap sites, this material, which includes cranes, bulldozers and large power generators, is then air-lifted to its final destination. All the material for this huge "Texas Tower" type of building and all the equipment in it were flown on the icecap by the 61st Troop Carrier Squadron of the U. S. Air Force using ski-equipped C-130 type airplanes. This feat has never ceased to impress me.

The icecap varies in thickness between the two sites Dye 2 and Dye 3. The thickness of the icecap is estimated as 7000 feet at Dye 2 and 10,000 feet at Dye 3. Dye 2, the Westerly Site, with the lower elevation, has the greater summer melt. Temperatures often go above freezing, causing it to be slushy under foot; however, this is true only during July and August. The rest of the year there is a continual buildup of snow on an average of six feet a year. Because of the snow accumulation, the type of building used at the icecap sites is one large structure supported on eight steel columns. By means of a lifting mechanism on each of the columns the building can be raised to the level of the snow. The lowest temperature since my arrival was sixty-two degrees below zero, but the average during the winter is thirty-five below. Several times winds have exceeded 100 miles per hour. The combination of below zero temperatures and high winds causes a chill factor that can be quite hazardous. Extreme caution must be exercised when exposed to these severe weather conditions.

From July until October 1960, we lived on the ice in a work camp consisting of canvas huts and temporary buildings. The work camp was located about 1000 feet from the building site. The walk from camp to the job became quite hazardous under phase conditions. Phase condition, or whiteout, can set in within a matter of minutes and is caused by blowing, blinding snow. Visibility is zero and hearing is distorted. Once I got lost trying to make it from the job to camp in a phase condition. Unable to see and realizing that I was lost, I attempted to orient myself by the sound of the generators at the temporary camp powerhouse, since these could be heard over the howling wind. I soon realized this was not reliable, and I was up to my hips in snow in a short time. This sort of experience teaches one respect for the North Country. Because of the altitude a person tires very rapidly. This fact, plus the mental anxiety of being lost, could be cause for panic. Fortunately, I could still make out my tracks in the snow; I quickly retraced my steps to the building and was thankful when it came into sight. Shortly after this experience a rope-guide was installed from the camp to the building, and an order was issued that people should never travel alone outside the buildings.

Dye 4, which is located on Kulusuk Island off the east coast of Greenland, is a very interesting and scenic site. Extremely rugged mountains drop abruptly into the waters of the Denmark Strait. Kulusuk Island has an active glacier, a beautiful sight in the summer. The view of icebergs formed by the glacier in contrast to the deep blue water, is most impressive. However, Kulusuk Island in the winter is quite a different place. Then the area becomes a frozen barren waste with heavy snowfall and extremely cold polar winds.

Keflavik Air Base on the west coast of Iceland is the location of Dye 5. Iceland appears to be a much more civilized country than Greenland. The climate is more moderate, a great advantage. Transportation from Sondrestrom to Kulusuk Island and Iceland is provided by Iceland Air. The most interesting thing to me about Iceland, a country so far north, is the presence of hot springs, which provide hot water heat for most of the houses in Reykjavik with its 60,000 population.

The author at the site of Dye 4 in Greenland, in the spring of 1961.

In August E. G. Parks completed two years of work with the Defense Project DEW, the Distant Early Warning system. "E.G.", since he wrote this article, moved to Labrador and is now in Iceland. He expects to return to work with the N.J. Bell Telephone Company next summer.

FAITH AND FREEDOM IN TAIWAN

by EDWARD K. KNETTLER, '41

"VISIT TAIWAN - FREE CHINA" is not only a heading used on posters and in travel literature put out by the growing tourism industry here, but it is also a happy invitation to you to share our enthusiasm in the remarkable progress made here during the past ten years. We have been living in the capital city of Taipei with over one million inhabitants since December, 1952, except for a year's furlough back in the States in 1959-60.

Permit us to give you a brief glimpse of this province of China which, since the takeover of the Mainland by the communists, has become the seat of the government of The Republic of China.

Beginning in 1949 as a last ditch stand against the communist onslaught, this island, with a sense of destiny for the free world, a stoic determination to correct previous ills, and the friendly aid and encouragement of America, has built an economy that, next to Japan, is highest in the Orient.

Taiwan is a semi-tropical island in the Western Pacific less than 100 miles east of the China coast. To early Portuguese navigators who first saw the island in the late 16th century it seemed one of the loveliest places on earth, and they called it Formosa (Beautiful Isle). Visitors still agree with this assessment. They find a green gem in the blue waters of the Pacific, the beauty of terraced rice fields blending with the high mountains and luxuriant valleys, the clean and orderly cities, the industrious tempo of men and women building a new economy and laying the foundation for a model nation committed to democracy and representative government.

Taiwan, the Chinese and official name for the island, means Terraced Cove. The island is shaped like a long narrow leaf and is about two hundred and fifty miles long and eighty miles wide. It has an area of fourteen thousand square miles, a little larger than Holland or about the size of Massachusetts and Connecticut combined. Its population of ten million is about the same as Australia and larger than the population of over half the member nations in the United Nations.

This population is divided into three major groups. There are more than six million Taiwan Chinese—the so-called "Formosans," whose ancestors came from Fukien Province early in the fourteenth century. As a result of this immigration the Taiwan language is a blend of the Amoy and other dialects spoken in parts of Fukien Province. The second group is the Mandarin speaking Chinese people who number over three million and have come from the mainland of China, fleeing the communist rule. Problems and misunderstandings between the Taiwan and Mandarin speaking Chinese are still factors in need of continued and concentrated efforts toward alleviation. The third major group in the population is the two hundred thousand aborigines of Polynesian origin, who live in the mountains and are divided into ten different tribes. Several decades ago these were head hunters, but in the last ten years over half of them have been converted to Christianity. Small chapels dot the mountainside giving rich evidence to the grace of God and the pouring out of His Spirit among these "Tribes People." Approximately 13,000 foreigners reside on this island. Five-sixths of these are Americans, including military and diplomatic personnel with their dependents and 1,300 businessmen and missionaries.

Taiwan's political history is most interesting. In the fifth century Chinese from the Mainland settled here. Later the island was made a part of the Chinese empire. Portuguese, Spanish, Dutch, French, Japanese, and Chinese have all had their turn in dominating the island. After the Sino-Japanese war in 1895 Taiwan was ceded to Japan, and the Japanese ruled the island for fifty years. In 1945 Taiwan was returned to China. After the communists took over the Mainland of China in 1949, the Nationalist Government set up its capital in Taiwan. There is also a Provincial Government and numerous local governments, all operating by elected personnel in a democratic and representative framework.

Since the Tropic of Cancer runs through the middle of the island, the summer season lasts from May to October, and the temperature ranges between 75 and 100 degrees. During the few months of winter there is no snow and the temperature stays above 40 degrees, but a high humidity makes it seem much colder. A large part of Taiwan is rugged mountain area, leaving only the wide, fertile plains along the west coast suitable for planting. Rice, sugar cane and tea grow in abundance and are major export items. Pineapples, bananas, mangoes, papayas and oranges are but some of the many kinds of fruit grown both for local use and for export. The salt, fertilizer, aluminum and cement industries are growing rapidly and are contributing to the new economy. There is also a first rate petroleum refinery, a pulp and paper corporation, 1500 textile plants of various sizes, and the production of a wide range of consumer goods such as jeeps, trucks, bicycles, sewing machines, electric fans, radios, refrigerators and fluorescent lamps. Taiwan's communications and transportation network is one of the best in Southeast Asia, including modern bus, train, ship and air travel.

The successful land reform program was peacefully carried out in less than two years. In all, 121,394 tenant farmers bought the land they tilled and 468,701 families became new land owners through their purchase of public land. Land tenancy in Taiwan has thus been almost eliminated.

This does not mean that there are no economic problems pressing upon the people. The war economy geared to the cost of maintaining a large military machine has meant a general austerity with wages not keeping pace with the rising costs. Low wages and over-crowded housing increase tensions and put a constant strain on the emotions. The net population gain of three percent yearly is putting further strains upon the economy. To help solve some of these problems many plans are being put into effect to encourage investment of overseas capital in new industrial developments. Tourism is being promoted, and the government is constantly working to keep the currency stabilized to prevent any disastrous inflation.

Elementary education is compulsory. There are 226 high schools, ten normal schools and 109 vocational schools with about a quarter of a million students. There are seven universities and fifteen colleges, but educational buildings and facilities are still inadequate. Of over 26,000 students taking college entrance examinations each year only 9,000 can be accepted. The remainder see their future drastically curtailed. The rapid growth of new industries has helped to absorb some of these young people, but this is not sufficient to combat the rapid rise in juvenile delinquency.

Popular sports are gaining wide recognition. Public health organizations and programs have helped rid Taiwan of cholera, smallpox, malaria and typhoid. The thirty newspapers, 507 publishing houses, 65 radio broadcasting stations and the Taiwan Film Studio keep all in current contact with local and international issues.

Several million of the Taiwan and Mainland Chinese are either Buddhists or Taoists. There are many superstitious practices, and the worship of idols is an obvious feature of their religious life. Ancestor worship, sacrificial offerings and feast days are sponsored by the 1400 Buddhist and 1800 Taoist temples which are seen everywhere. Less than five percent of the population is Christian.

Thousands of young people have overthrown the old religious beliefs of their parents and are in a religious vacuum, groping for a satisfying cause that will secure their future and give them a present dynamic for action. The future of China belongs to them, and the church is being given an unprecedented opportunity to lead them out of their despair.

Missionaries from various countries, and their organizations which formerly had work on the Mainland, have come to Taiwan. Of these groups twenty-nine are establishing churches of their own while seventeen have integrated their work with cooperating denominations. The Roman Catholic Church is spreading throughout the island and constantly strengthening its work by the appointment of new personnel. The denominations which have followed the evacuees who fled from the Mainland are working primarily with the Mandarin speaking Chinese. With Mandarin as the national language and used in all the schools, Mandarin speaking people will soon be found everywhere throughout the island. Other institutions established by church groups include theological seminaries, hospitals, clinics, a university, four colleges, numerous high schools and scores of kindergartens.

Now for a personal word. After I received an M.A. from Drew Theological Seminary in 1945 my wife, Jean, and I began Chinese language studies at Yale University and sailed for China in September, 1946. The first term of service was spent 1800 miles inland in Szechwan Province, as district missionary engaged in church and evangelistic work and as professor of Pastoral Theology and Homiletics in West China Union Theological Seminary. The last two years of this period were spent under communist detention and harassment with the complete curtailment of our work. We were permitted to leave China early in 1952. After a seven months' furlough in the States we answered the call to pioneer the opening of the work of our Methodist Church in Taiwan. This began as a continuing ministry to Mainland Methodists who had fled communism, but has now grown to an established church, including twenty missionary colleagues, Chinese pastors and deaconesses, and scores of voluntary lay workers. Established churches are now located in three major centers in the north and south of the island, with new church-extension developments in numerous outlying areas.

From a small group meeting in our living room in Taipei in 1953 the Wesley Methodist Church of which I am pastor has grown to a membership of 1,000. Two associate pastors, a deaconess, 35 Sunday School teachers for both Chinese and English Sunday Schools, which enroll over 450 pupils, a daily kindergarten with 187 pupils, monthly prayer and Bible-study groups meeting in thirty-nine homes of the members all witness to God's grace in the growth and vitality of this church. Jean has taken major responsibility in Women's Christian Education and Teachers' training programs. As Superintendent of the North District and pastor of Wesley Church my major emphasis is in evangelism and church extension programs. This year new congregations have been started in four areas in and near Taipei. This, along with being a member of the board of trustees of the Wesley Kindergarten, Wesley Girls' High School, Soochow University, Taiwan Theological Seminary, and president of the Taiwan Leprosy Relief Association, accounts for a busy schedule.

The family has grown too. Paul, who was born in Chengtu, West China, is now eleven years old. The other three, all born in Taiwan, Marilyn, age 8; Timothy, age 7; and Christopher, age 4; have with us adopted the Orient as our home and are happy with this choice.

More than eight years have passed since the beginning of our ministry among the Chinese people in Taiwan. What began as an interim ministry among refugees from communism has now become an established church with roots deep and secure. In the main, the evacuees had come not to stay but to return—some time. This hope has not changed. On the other hand, many will stay in Taiwan. These have established themselves in business or in satisfactory employment.

One thing has been very significant: the remarkable growth of the Christian churches in Taiwan during the past decade. This growth has been brought about by a blending of faith and freedom. By faith, since there has been a new recognition of the relevance of the Gospel. Having suffered the loss of their country, their homes, possessions, and family members they have been shocked out of any dependence on man and material things and have found reality in the spiritual. A new faith in the life of the Spirit has gripped many hearts; Christians and non-Christians everywhere have a religious hunger.

The role of freedom, which fills out this picture, is rooted in the Free World. Here is a land that permits a wide open door to the spread of the Gospel. Here in symbol and in reality this outpost of the Free World is charting the course for free Chinese everywhere and maintaining the hope for freedom of the hundreds of millions under the communist yoke less than one hundred miles across the Taiwan Straits. This freedom is in vivid contrast to the curtailment of the spread of the Gospel and the subjugation of the church in the Mainland. The spiritual role that Free China is beginning to play may well chart the course for the future of the Orient. Has God permitted Taiwan to be free for just such a mission as this? Is this spiritual ministry to become a nation under God related to a new day in Asia? We like to think so. On the frontiers of the Kingdom and of the Free World Taiwan is in the throes of a movement for Christ which is growing in intensity. Even though this is in its infancy it may well be the wedge to be used by God in overcoming the powers of darkness which are trying to engulf Asia. This possibility gives us an ever challenging reason for being here.

NORA SHULER HELFFERICH

Modestly, Mrs. Helfferich states, "My son's characteristics are my husband's," but her pride for her progeny is unbounded and justified. Her enthusiasm for her family is equalled only by her enthusiasm for Ursinus. And these two loves are often combined, since eleven of her immediate family are graduates of the College. She and her husband and her four sons make up the first half dozen. Two of her daughters-in-law, Anna Knauer, '20, and Isabel Johnson, '27, are also graduates, along with a grandson, William Ursinus Helfferich, '51, and his wife, Marjorie Justice, '51. Two other grandchildren, Isobel and Merritt, also attended Ursinus, while another granddaughter, Megan, married an Ursinus graduate, George Kane, '53.

Since her retirement, Mrs. Helfferich has been busy either substituting for vacationing and sick preceptresses or visiting her ten grandchildren and fifteen great grandchildren.

This past summer she spent four months in Connecticut cooking and caring for three teen-aged granddaughters, their two dogs and three cats. In a letter describing her chores and charges she signed off—"In the country for sure," she was over a mile away from the nearest neighbor and paved road! Her son, Reginald, writing of this said, "The gang of teen-agers which gathers here thinks she's cool. Her sense of humor and her appreciation of modern art and music are astounding. Her strength—physical, spiritual and mental—is phenomenal, and a joy. At present she is thinking of flying to Munich, Bavaria, to visit another granddaughter."

Her concern about Ursinus and her sons, her interest in the present, her sense of humor and her feeling of responsibility are all reflected in a short letter which, along with a $2.00 check, arrived at the Alumni Office in September. The note read in part: "I hope you can find a better picture of the President for the next Journal . . . Is that my son on the inside cover? . . . I am responsible for that face, but really don't think I did that bad a job. Here is two dollars; take another photograph."

All who have known Mrs. Helfferich agree that her influence upon them for good has been incalculable. Seldom is it one's privilege and good fortune to meet a person in whom you can put such trust and for whom you can have such respect. Her physical vigor, mental

Reginald Helfferich Honored

Reginald H. Helfferich, '28, was awarded the Commander's Cross of the Order of Merit of the Federal Republic of Germany in ceremonies at the German consulate in Kansas City, Mo., on September 1, 1961.

Dr. Herbert Kuhle, Kansas City, Consul of the Federal Republic of Germany, in presenting the award to Dr. Helfferich said, "We have in the Federal Republic of Germany only one outstanding decoration—The Order of Merit established in 1951. This Order is awarded by our President himself in recognition of truly outstanding services."

"On June 5, 1961, our President, Heinrich Luehke, bestowed upon you, Dr. Helfferich, the Commander's Cross of the Order of Merit," said Dr. Kuhle. "My government wishes to express its deep appreciation and recognition of your meritorious services rendered to the Evangelical churches in Germany after World War II. You and your church have given considerable assistance in easing need and distress in Germany, especially during the first terrible years after the ending of hostilities," the Consul pointed out.

"By doing so you have manifested a true spirit of Christianity and thus contributed to better understanding among peoples and therefore to peace," Dr. Kuhle said. "It is in this spirit that we all in the free world should try to remove the Iron Curtain in divided Berlin and in the heart of Germany in order to restore again human contacts and human relations and promote peace on earth."

Dr. Helfferich, a native of Bath, Pa., former pastor of Christ UCC Church in Bath, and now general secretary of the Division of World Service of the United Church Board for world ministries, said in accepting the award: "This is a humbling experience, for I realize that the honor is not mine but belongs to the people whom I have been serving. It is the people of the Evangelical and Reformed Church to whom the honor is due—from the officers and pastors down to the littlest child in the Sunday School, who shared his gifts with some unknown little child across the sea in Germany."

Art King, ex '62, who spent two years at Ursinus, recently published a book of poems entitled Sixty-Six Preludes to Faith. Art, born in Wildwood, was reared and now lives in Audubon, N. J.

He has visited most of the states and many countries in Europe and South America and at present he is employed by the U.S. Post Office.

Friendly and modest, Art will be remembered at Ursinus for his good will as well as his good poetry. While a student he was a frequent contributor to the Weekly and the Lantern.

In the "Preface" of his book he writes, "By comparison with my models, I own my verses to be inferior to my pretensions." One of his poems ends with these lines:

*Perhaps 'tis true that poesy's fires burned brighter and golden towers were taller in days gone by;
and music swelled more lovely, with notes lighter and sweeter; or that once thoughts soared more high.
Yet minor poets have been known to raise an anthem worthy of a word of praise.*

Henry P. Laughlin, '38

HENRY P. LAUGHLIN, '38

Few American psychiatrists have been more highly and more widely honored than an Ursinus alumnus, Henry P. Laughlin, '38. On May 12, 1961, Dr. Laughlin was awarded a Certificate of Commendation by the American Psychiatric Association, the largest psychiatric association in the world. Two months later he was made a member of the Royal Medico-Psychological Association of Great Britain, the oldest national psychiatric association in the world.

Dr. Laughlin has a most enviable record of achievement and action in his professional career. Graduated from Temple Medical School in 1941, he completed his internship while in the Navy at the George Washington University Hospital in Washington and his residency in psychiatry and neurology at the U.S. Navy Medical Center at Bethesda. He had combat duty in the South Pacific while on the U.S.S. Strong, and he also served as a staff psychiatrist and as an instructor in neuropsychiatry at U.S. Naval Hospitals at Bethesda, at Philadelphia, and in California.

After his discharge in 1947 he opened a private practice in psychiatry and psychoanalysis, and, concurrently, from 1947 to 1952, he was a student of the Washington - Baltimore Psychoanalytic Institute.

In 1948 Dr. Laughlin became a Diplomate of the American Board of Psychiatry and Neurology, and since that time has served as an Assistant Examiner for the Board. He has been associate clinical professor of psychiatry at George Washington University Medical School since 1947. A Fellow of the American Psychiatric Association, he was chairman of the Committee on Public Information for five years and was the first chairman of the Modern Founders group of the A.P.A. He was founder and president of both the Washington Psychiatric Society and the Metropolitan Washington District Branch of the A.P.A. At present he is Chief of Psychiatry and Neurology at Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, Md., and president of the Medical Council of the Washington Metropolitan Area.

As a representative of American psychiatry, he has twice—in 1953 and 1957—made around-the-world tours, visiting and lecturing at the leading medical centers all over the globe.

Dr. Laughlin has published more than forty articles in professional journals of psychiatry and psychoanalysis, and in 1956 he published a text book, The Neuroses in Clinical Practice, written primarily for use by medical schools, young psychiatrists and Board candidates. A Psychiatric Glossary, which he has written and edited, has run through six editions. Frequently he has served as a consultant to governmental agencies.

Born in Hagerstown, Md., in 1916, Dr. Laughlin and his wife, the former Marion Durkee, live in Chevy Chase, Maryland. Connie, the eldest of their five children, is a Freshman at Ursinus.

URSINUS' EUROPEAN TOUR

where a very plush hotel helped to relieve the heavy laden. Once again there were canal trips, visits to fishing-villages, diamond factories, and Rembrandt's paintings. There were Delft ware and Edom cheeses to be bought, and then everything had to be moved to the Hook of Holland and onto a Channel steamer to England. (It had to be moved again twice more that day before all arrived safely in London. Moral: travel light and leave your shopping until the end of the trip. Futile advice!).

London swept everyone off his feet. It was like coming home after a month in foreign speaking lands. There was so much to see and do. The sight-seeing tourists looked after the Tower, Westminster Abbey, the changing of the Guards, Windsor Castle, and Hampton Court. "Brandy Anne, left in the lurch, with her face to the pub and her back to the church," was soberly viewed by all, as was Gray's "country churchyard." Select groups visited the Wax Works, the Elgin Marbles, the Old Curiosity Shop, and the Sutton Hoo Hoard. Some attended the ballet, others The Music Man or My Fair Lady, and, with many a fond reference to Dr. McClure, several tramped off to Old Vic to enjoy Twelfth Night or Romeo and Juliet. Some stuffed themselves at the Elizabethan Room and others at and with Cheshire Cheese. One at least even put in a half day in the Guildhall Library (obviously not a student).

Too soon the Great North Road was leading out of London. There were stops in Cambridge with short visits to King's College Chapel, Trinity and St. John's Colleges, an evening walking around the old walls of York and visiting the great Minster, a visit to the grave of the Venerable Bede in Durham Cathedral, then "ower the border and awa" to Scotland.

In Edinburgh the tour agent was the Scottish Students Union. They not only conducted the usual sightseeing tours to the Castle and Holyrood Palace, but also provided luncheons at the University and a Saturday evening party with Scottish students (including a weird beatnik in kilts). Sunday afternoon after kirk, there was a trip to Sir Walter Scott's home at Abbotsford and to the beautiful ruins of Melrose Abbey, and on Tuesday there was a trip to the Highlands and a long walk along the bonnie, bonnie banks, and even a row, on Loch Lomond. But picking heather could not compete with buying tartan neckties for the fathers who had paid for the trip, or choosing kilts or tartan cloth for other members of the family. Sailing down the Clyde on the C.P.R. liner Empress of England on August 16, one could almost hear the echo of the pipes that used to play every meal time in the Learmonth Hotel—"Better loved ye cannot be, Will ye no come back again?"

ROBERT PEASE, '33

"A rough count shows that during our nights this past week over 3,000 students registered in our Evening College." This statement appeared in a recent letter sent to the alumni office by Robert Pease, '33. "You can see we have been busy," he concluded.

In August, 1961, Dr. Pease was appointed Dean of the Evening College of the Rochester Institute of Technology. Since he has been associated with the Evening College, enrollment has grown from 3200 in 1951 to 6200 in 1961. Part of this growth has been due to the development of the extension work of the Institute. This became so large in volume that a separate division in the Evening College, the Division of Extended Services, was created in 1960. Under his guidance this division has continued to grow until it now has a staff consisting of a director and three assistants who are engaged full time in the creation and promotion of extension services. Dr. Pease devotes his full time to the development of the evening and extended services aspects of the Institute's educational program.

Beginning as an instructor at RIT in 1948, he has held a number of administrative posts in this New York institution. Prior to his labors at RIT he was a social worker for the Pennsylvania Department of Public Assistance from 1935 to 1941. From 1941 to 1948 he was production engineer for the Taylor Instrument Company in Rochester.

He received his M.A. from the University of Rochester in 1951 and the Doctor of Education degree from the University of Buffalo in 1959. He and his wife, the former Pilar Careaga, have one son, Bruce, 16.

Along with his work at RIT he carries a full load of community activities. He is chairman of the advisory committee on adult education to the Gates-Chili Central School Board, chairman of the committee on alcoholism of the Health Association, treasurer of Boy Scout Troop #103, a deacon in Gates Presbyterian Church, and on the steering committee of the industrial training group of the Industrial Management Council of Rochester.

Competent in his profession, responsible as a citizen, Robert Pease represents the kind of son of which Ursinus can boast.

Edwin Myers, '64, pictured below, represented the National Education Association at the Governor's and the White House Conferences on Children and Youth. Excerpts from a speech he delivered at the "Governor's Conference to Implement the Recommendations of the 1960 White House Conference on Children and Youth" are printed to the right. At present Ed is serving as president of the Southeastern Region of the SPSEA.

Ursinus Student at White House Conference

As an airplane was winging its way across the country the pilot interrupted his passengers to say, "I'm sorry to have to tell you that we're lost; however, you'll be glad to know that we're making good time."

No matter how fast we go we must have a worthy objective and be on the right road toward it. Today we can move forward with speed and assuredness because we are on the right road to a noble goal, the improvement of opportunity for children and youth.

We are living in an exciting day. We've set worthy objectives and mobilized the people to reach them. The time for action has come and will not be denied.

It is in this vital time that youth have been given a tremendous challenge—the challenge to help themselves. In the work of the White House Conference and the Governor's Conference, youth were commissioned to help as much as they could.

The youth saw their challenge and accepted it. They have been working, and working hard.

Wisely, adults realize that the problems of youth are too gigantic to be solved by youth alone. Enthusiastic, well-meaning, and capable as they may be, youth cannot cope with the problems confronting them.

You have often heard it said that today's youth are tomorrow's adults, but what is more important, they are today's youth. In the battle to solve the problems which face youth as they cross that span between today's youth and tomorrow's citizens, youth will take their stand; but having taken it, they will not stand but move—forward with you—step by step; and with God's help, we'll make our country a place where all children and youth can realize their fullest potential for a creative life in freedom and dignity.

This is the third in a series of articles designed to help alumni know members of the Board of Directors of Ursinus College.

HARLESTON R. WOOD

During the half hour that I talked with Mr. Wood, it was obvious that his natural modesty and his unassuming nature would not permit him to speak about what he had done. But the facts speak for themselves. His company, Alan Wood Steel, had a net worth of $37 million several years ago and then, under his leadership, began an expansion program which cost over $30 million. This aggressive and courageous action has elevated Alan Wood to a top position among the "little" producers of steel. Although Mr. Wood represents the fifth generation of Woods who have controlled and led the company, established in 1826, it is apparent that he refuses to content himself with past performance; he has skillfully guided AW into a forceful position in the present.

Born in Philadelphia in 1913, he attended the Haverford School and was graduated from Princeton University in 1936 with a degree in Economics. During World War II he served as a Naval Officer in the Bureau of Ships. His experience at Alan Wood began in 1938, and he has labored in the open hearth, held positions in the Metallurgical and Operating Departments, and been Sales Development Engineer and Director and the Manager of Planning and Development. He became president of the company at the age of 42.

Mr. Wood settled his tall youthful frame into his chair and explained why he accepted Dr. McClure's invitation to become a member of the Board of Directors of the College. "My first visit to Ursinus was in the Spring of 1956. I was invited there to a banquet and to sit on a panel sponsored by the ACES. Seniors, I believe, were the only students present, and I was greatly impressed with their intelligent questions and general deportment. My contact with them on this occasion sold me on the quality of Ursinus, and when Dr. McClure called to ask me to serve on the Board, I was ready and eager to say yes."

Asked about the type of contribution which he, with his industrial experience, can make to Ursinus as a member of the Board, he replied; "At Alan Wood we have a competent first team. I try not to get in their way, but I am here to help when they need me. Likewise, my impression is that at Ursinus the Board and its committees are competent. I am there, too, to help when they need me."

With a grin Mr. Wood assured me that his managerial skills are also carried over into his personal life; "I have to help my wife manage our five sons!"

His abilities in steel production were recently recognized formally by his colleagues in the industry when they elected him as the United States delegate to the Steel Committee of the Economic Commission for Europe, an arm of the United Nations. "In fact, I am flying to Europe tomorrow for a three-week meeting," he said.

Called to serve on the boards of half a dozen industrial firms, Mr. Wood's guidance is widely sought for and highly regarded. Ursinus is fortunate indeed to have the counsel of such a competent friend. "Tell your alumni," he said as I walked toward the door, "that they have a college of which they can be proud." It is encouraging to know that men like Mr. Wood concur with us in this conviction.

Football

Even though plagued by injuries to key players, the Ursinus Bears have played a fine brand of football this season. All who have seen the team in action have been pleased with the high spirit and morale of the team; indicative of this is the fact that in each game Ursinus has shown its better playing in the second half.

Still more encouraging is the knowledge that the team is, basically, a sophomore one. There are only two upperclassmen on the squad, and four freshmen have been among the starters; they are tackles Joe Rhile, John Wirth and Bill Frazier and quarterback Dennis Quinn. A pre-season knee injury has kept the team's captain, Dick Allebach, son of Richard S. Allebach, '32, from playing at all.

The team lost their opener 6-28 to a strong Susquehanna eleven; then they dropped a heart-breaker to Johns Hopkins, 8-13. In mud on the home field they came from behind to top Wilkes 12-6. Swarthmore upset the Bears 0-6 on an 85-yard punt return, and Wagner beat the Grizzlies 12-20.

On Homecoming Ursinus ran over Haverford 22-6. Gary Leach, the sole senior playing for Ursinus, was awarded the Kenneth E. Walker Memorial Trophy. The slim offensive fullback averaged six yards a carry for the game and also played defensive end during most of the sixty minutes. Quarterback Quinn passed to sophomores Sermarini and Kohr for two touchdowns and to sophomore Scholl for extra points. Quinn completed 8 out of 22 passes, for 144 yards.

Ursinus has played Haverford 39 times; the series began in 1894. The record now stands at 21 to 15, in favor of Ursinus; three games were played to a tie.

In the Southern College Division of the Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Conference, Ursinus ranks among the highest for pass offense and defense. Scholl has been leading the Southern College Division in passes caught.

Soccer

As we go to press the soccer team's record stands at 4-2-1. We have beaten Muhlenberg, St. Joseph's, Eastern Baptist and the Alumni; we lost to Swarthmore and Delaware, and we tied Haverford.

outstanding player, the Bear booters have, as a team, worked nicely together; Dr. Baker, their mentor, can still be seen leading the plays in their daily scrimmages.

Hockey

All eleven of the Ursinus girls who participated in the All-College Tournament held in Philadelphia on Nov. 4 and 5 placed on one of the selected teams. Five of these girls were chosen for the All-College First team; they were Lynne Crosley and Debbie Shaw, co-captains of the Ursinus team, Anne Sansenbach, Ruth Fatscher, and Judy Smiley, a Freshman.

The team this year has already chalked up impressive wins against Swarthmore, Gettysburg, E. Stroudsburg, and Beaver; they tied Temple 3-3.

The alumnae of the College are still represented by a winning team in the Philadelphia Field Hockey Association. On several occasions their forces were seriously depleted when our five U.S. players were engaged elsewhere in competition with the English Touring Team.

Basketball

On Oct. 23 twenty-five candidates reported to head basketball coach Warren Fry and his assistant, Bob Handwerk. These players will be joined by another dozen men after the football and soccer seasons are past. Not having the height of most of their opponents, the Bears will rely on a fast-breaking game and they are already whipping into shape their lightning attack.

The team is captained this year by All-District star Walt Dryfoos of Hazleton.

Wrestling

Dick Dean, Middle Atlantic champion in 1960 and runner-up in 1961, was undefeated last year and returns to captain the squad. Coach Richard Schellhase reports that most of last year's team has returned and that seven freshmen with high school experience will add depth to what should be an excellent season.

acuity and moral integrity are immediately obvious. Her dignity of carriage, her depth of character, her delight in life conspire to make better all those whose lives she has touched; she touches nothing which she doesn't adorn. To have felt the impact of her personality is to have felt the brush of angels' wings.

53.5% Contribute to Loyalty Fund in 1961

Number of Contributors

Amount of Contributions

1961 Campaign Results

Never before have so many given so much to Ursinus College. During the 1960-61 Loyalty Fund campaign, 2,476 alumni, 53.5% of the living graduates, contributed $44,215.34. The amount of contributions in 1961 increased over 35% compared with the 1960 figure, and the number of contributors rose over 8% during the same period. Since the inauguration of the Loyalty Fund eight years ago, the amount of contributions and the number of contributors have more than doubled.

The average contribution in 1961 was $17.85, an increase of two dollars over the previous year. There were 132 members of the Century Club, almost double the number of alumni who contributed $100 or more in the 1960 campaign.

The Century Club

The Century Club, the newest "baby" of the Loyalty Fund Committee, has had an auspicious first year. During the 1960-61 campaign 132 Ursinus alumni joined the club; that is, they contributed $100 or more to the Loyalty Fund.

The money from these alumni arrived at the alumni office in various forms. One alumnus sent $10 a month until he had reached his goal; several people forwarded $25 quarterly. A few folks gave stock certificates.

In order to encourage more alumni to join the ranks of those who contribute $100 or more annually to Ursinus, we urge you to support education to this extent by choosing the easiest way for you to give this amount.

Paul Wise, Loyalty Fund Chairman for the Class of 1941, was recently appointed to the executive committee of the Loyalty Fund as vice-chairman in charge of The Century Club. Further inquiries concerning the club may be made by writing to him, or to the alumni secretary; address your mail to Ursinus College.

Loyalty Fund All-Stars

At the Loyalty Fund Kick-Off Dinner on Nov. 4, General Chairman of the campaign and toastmaster at the banquet, Glenn Eshbach, '39, presented the eighteen All-Stars, the Loyalty Fund class chairman who led their respective classes to new highs during the 1960-61 campaign. Paul Wise, '41, was acclaimed "the all-star's all-star" for the brilliant progress made by his class.

The other seventeen All-Stars are Amos Heinly, '11; Marian Reifsnider, '17; Herbert Howells, '23; Allen C. Harman, '26; Benjamin Scirica, '32; Francis Tworzydlo, '37; Paul Craigie, '38; Glenn Eshbach, '39; George Kratz, '43; Mrs. Charles Dando, '45; Mrs. Robert Everest, '47; Mrs. Richard Reid, '48; Mr. and Mrs. Ken Reinhart, '49; Paul Scheirer, '51; Hermann Lintner, '52; Robert Hartman, '54; and Richard Winchester, '57.

Progress Report 1962 Campaign

On October 10 the Alumni Office received Loyalty Fund contributions from 185 alumni. This was the biggest single day in the nine-year history of the Loyalty Fund.

By November 1, one month after the first appeal in the campaign, 785 alumni had contributed a total of $15,125. These figures show a marked improvement over the 565 and $9,115 statistics of last year at this date.

Already there are thirty-seven members in the 1961-62 Century Club.

Loyalty Fund Kick-Off Dinner

On November 4, after the 22-6 spanking which the Bears gave Haverford, 30 Loyalty Fund Chairmen and vice-chairmen gathered in the Freeland Hall dining room for their annual dinner, the formal opening of the 1961-62 Loyalty Fund Campaign.

Flanked by Miss Pennsylvania and Miss Liberty Bowl, General Chairman Glenn Eshbach, '39, wore a smile even wider than his usual one. Helping his good humor was also the fact that he had the privilege of announcing the results of the 1960-61 campaign; never before had there been such a response. "The College is now one of the few institutions in the country to have over 50% of its living alumni support its annual giving campaign," he reported.

Following a delicious roast beef dinner, Dr. Charles Mattern, chairman of the Department of Philosophy, addressed the crowd on the subject, "The Wonderful People of Ursinus." After he took his tongue from his cheek, Dr. Mattern, '30, spoke of the rewards which accrue to dedicated teachers. "The account is never closed," he said. "One never knows how far his influence goes or how deeply it is felt."

Dr. Helfferich concluded the dinner meeting by thanking all those who worked for the fine results achieved, promising that there would be an even larger campaign for capital funds in the near future.

The chairmen then patted each other on the back, the All Stars picked up and carried away their prized Captain's chairs, and the caretaker came and blew out the red, old gold and black candles. Another Kick-Off Dinner was over; the ninth Loyalty Fund drive was under way.

Matching Gifts

Many Ursinus alumni have doubled their contributions to the College at no extra cost to them; that is, they are working for corporations which participate in "matching gift programs," and every dollar they give to Ursinus is matched by their employers.

Elsewhere on this page of the Journal you will find a list of the companies which match gifts. If you are employed by one of these firms, you should make inquiry concerning the procedure to be taken in order to have your gift to Ursinus matched. Usually, the form to be filed is simple and costs you little in time and effort. But the benefits are obvious; you are credited with giving twice as much as you actually have, and Ursinus has double the number of dollars which you have given.

This whole program was conceived and inaugurated by the General Electric Company in 1954.

Ed Krall, '31, is vice-chairman in charge of Matching Gifts on the Ursinus College Loyalty Fund Committee. If you have any questions concerning this program, write to him, c/o Loyalty Fund, Ursinus College.

From time to time the Journal has reported on the significant honors accorded Dr. Bacon or his tremendous achievements in the field of Colon and Rectal Surgery, and the following most recent awards represent just the best expressions of his international standing.

Harry E. Bacon, M.D., Professor and head of the Department of Proctology, Temple University Hospital and Medical center, received an honorary degree from the University of Bologna, Italy, and from the University of Quayaquil, Ecuador. Also, he is accorded an honorary fellowship in the Surgical Society of Chile as well as an honorary admiralty in the Texas Navy. Recently, Doctor Bacon was given a gold medal by the Philippine College of Surgeons of which he is an honorary fellow. The International Society of Colon and Rectal Surgery rendered him a gold medal at their recent meeting at Tangiers, Morocco.

SING ALONG WITH US

by G. BRANDON DONAHUE, '51

Never underestimate the whopping musical appeal of a little close harmony! And proof of this lies with the many former Bears who have kept up a singing tradition that started either on the steps of Freeland or out on the campus in the late summer evening.

A number of Ursinus graduates have helped in the phenomenal growth of the S.P.E.B.S.Q.S.A., which is not a brand of alphabet soup but a fast growing, coast to coast musical movement, the "Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America."

Several musically inclined Ursinus men have kept up in this society a hobby which they started while attending school. Jerry Batt, '45, of Easton, Pa., has been singing for over ten years with the Chord-blenders of the Allentown-Bethlehem Chapter. The quartet has garnered many awards and for five years was among the top twenty quartets in the country.

Possibly the hottest class for membership in the Society is 1951. Singing as the "51ers" while at school, and being members of the York Chapter, all four men have kept up their association with SPEBSQSA. H. Page "Buck" Ross and Russ Lord both belong to the Wilmington Chapter and sing as the Travelers. Commander Russ Fisher isn't around one town long enough to join, but he drops in to any one of the 660 chapters throughout the country. Don "Whistler" Donahue lives in Cedar Knolls, North Jersey, and sings with the "C" Notes, one of the top ten quartets in the Mid-Atlantic District. He also sings with the chorus from the Livingston, N. J., Chapter, which has won its area championship for three years.

Gordon Tait, '53, was until recently a member of the Medford Lakes, N. J., Chapter; he has now been transferred to Atlanta, Ga. He'll find company down there with the Peachtree Chapter. Nearer home Joe Beardwood, '51, finds time to sing with the Philadelphia Chapter Chorus, which, in addition to having won the District Championship, also hosted the International Convention from June 21-24, when ten thousand barbershoppers heard the top forty-five quartets and fifteen choruses in the country vie for the International Champion Title.

Based in Philadelphia also is Ray Rauenzahn, ex '52, who sings with the Pennsmen. In 1959 they were among the top forty in the country and have been among the top ten in the Mid-Atlantic District for the past five years.

Being statistically-minded, we venture to say that for its size no other college has turned out so many barbershoppers from a span of seven years, or, has had five men from one class who are active ten years later, or has had a group which has garnered so many awards for excellence of singing. We think this is something of a record.

What do we barbershoppers get out of this? One of my friends suggests, "It helps one get away from the pressure of daily life. You sing and enjoy yourself as a member of an organization basically devoted to singing for fun." In addition to this, many local chapters have earned community respect for their charitable endeavors. The Livingston Chapter sponsors a Little League Ball Club, a Junior League Ball Club, a musical scholarship, and donates their singing services to every PTA and church group in town free of charge. One chapter on Staten Island in New York has given $7,000 in six years to Cerebral Palsy. This group numbers 22 men!

Several Midwestern colleges have enhanced their endowment funds by holding a barbershop show on an annual basis. Needless to say, they are always sold out well in advance. Sudbury, Ontario, has an annual Christmas toy drive and has gotten $50,000 in cash and $6,000 in toys over a nine year period.

The modern revival of barbershop quartet harmony began April 11, 1938, in Tulsa, Oklahoma. A tax attorney by the name of O. C. Cash became alarmed at what he considered to be a shift from the traditional, individualistic way of life in America. He invited fourteen friends for some quartet singing. The response was roughly similar to what Ben Franklin received over his kite string—electrifying! Wire services got wind of the organization and, from that day on, requests for membership in this non-profit fraternal order have poured in from far and near.

tives are those striving to conserve this traditional American liberal ethic, our most valuable heritage from the Founding Fathers.

Too many current conservatives, however, emphasize the economic side of the liberal tradition, claiming that all the other freedoms are dependent on economic freedom. They fail to realize that a balance of freedoms is necessary for a truly free society. They fail to recognize that freedom entails the necessity of change when change is for the better and is desired by the community. The dogged determination of economic conservatives to preserve unregulated enterprise absolutely unmodified (or more accurately to restore it) is what I think makes Goldwaterism "out of season."

Neither the conservatives' claim that unrestrained free enterprise is in the "national interest"—and this is essentially what Goldwater and company is saying—nor their conviction that they hold "the key to national salvation" today reaches the majority of the American electorate. A handful of new young conservatives elected to Congress can hardly be interpreted as a decided swing to the right. Goldwaterism is still the philosophy of a distinct minority of Americans.

Only a severe crisis, one that leads to panic, could turn Americans to the current conservative panacea. Then Goldwater's "intellectual helch" could well become a nation-wide stomach cancer. Christian Anti-Communism Crusades and John Birch Societies represent only a noisy though potentially dangerous minority. But the heavy economic overtones of these groups—frantic opposition to the welfare state and the income tax—serve to underscore the inclinations of the new American Right.

As to those "conservative organizations [that] are springing up on campuses all over the country," I hope an Ursinus Chapter is soon established. Given the Goldwater interpretation of conservatism, the Young Republican Club with its image of modern Republicanism hardly qualifies. Unless there is a secret John Birch Cell here, this avowedly "conservative" college has been bypassed by the national ultra-conservative movement.

Just as Moreell could not discuss in detail all of Mattern's article, so by editorial fiat I have been confined to the more outstanding issues raised by Moreell's letter.

In conclusion, and at the risk of incurring the permanent wrath of my able colleague whose look at Goldwater began this whole polemic, I must confess that my analysis of his critique and of the Admiral's answer leads me to classify him as a philosophical conservative but a practical liberal. His deeply ingrained attitudes try desperately to keep him in the conservative camp, but when the time for decision arrives his logical and humane mind wean him away into the camp of conservatism's critics. Perhaps this observation completes the explanation of why Moreell attacks Mattern—he sensed all along that he was dealing with a liberal! At any rate it is questionable whether Moreell has helped us very much to distinguish cloud structures from reality.
