The Board of Directors each year reaffirms its commitment to the historic concept that Ursinus College shall be an independent coeducational college devoted to education in the highest branches of learning under Christian influences.

Several years ago the Board of Directors elected a Committee to study and to crystallize the objectives of the College, to project them into the future and to take the steps necessary to reach established goals. This committee spent several years in over-all institutional planning. It has assigned to the officers of the College the responsibility of designing a systematic method for the long range financing of its designs.

An important phase of the Board of Directors' plans is to remind and acquaint many people with the traditional values in the type of education established by the founders of Ursinus. It is a fact that these values have been the basis of virtually all the advances in learning and living since the beginning of our great country. We believe that the people who benefit from these advances will choose to support the kind of learning that produces them. These people include the alumni, former students, faculty, parents, foundations, business and industry, the United Church of Christ and the wider public touched by our alumni and friends.

On another page in this issue of the Journal is a brief biography of James Wagner, the new vice-president of our College. Dr. Wagner will assist me in developing a low-key sustained program for interesting friends and for raising funds to complete a building program, to increase endowments, to improve faculty salaries and to provide more scholarships for needy and deserving students.

Dr. Wagner is committed to the Ursinus brand of Education. He has a wide acquaintance in the United Church of Christ; he is experienced in the duties assigned to him; he has a capacity for hard work and he is not striving for a higher position at Ursinus nor is such a part of the design for him.

Those of us who are alumni can provide the task force necessary for the success of the program. We hope to involve 1,000 of our graduates in the effort. In the near future you will be learning the details. The important thing to do at this date is to help Glenn Eshbach and his committee to reach the 1961-62 Loyalty Fund goal.

PENNSYLVANIA FEMALE COLLEGE

by WILLIAM T. PARSONS, '47

During the year 1961, the Guillian I. Clamer Fund was established at Ursinus College. With that, custody of the Glenwood Memorial and responsibility for its maintenance were legally given to Ursinus. The Glenwood Memorial was built in 1920 by Francis J. Clamer and the Clamer family to commemorate the site of the Pennsylvania Female College, a pioneer in liberal arts education for women. There are many reasons why this latest liaison of Ursinus College and the Pennsylvania Female College is appropriate, as we hope to demonstrate.

The idea of a full-fledged liberal arts, degree-granting college for women was conceived by Rev. Abram Hunsicker of Freeland Seminary and Professor J. Warren Sunderland between 1848 and Oct. 27, 1851, when Dr. Sunderland and his wife opened the Montgomery Female Seminary in the Fetterly House, which is now used by the College as a residence hall for men. W. Sunderland, a native of Vermont and a graduate of Wesleyan College, had some college teaching experience prior to 1848. Indeed he was on his way from New England to St. Louis to assume the presidency of a new college here. In Philadelphia he learned that a yellow fever epidemic had cancelled the St. Louis plans; a newspaper advertisement for a teacher in the Classics and Mathematics at the newly-opened Freeland Seminary caught his attention. During his tenure at Freeland the plans for a college for women were formulated.

Also in 1851, property a quarter-mile east on the Philadelphia and Reading Turnpike was purchased, and in that same year on the twenty-six acre tract "overlooking the beautiful stream known as the Perkiomen," a new stone building was begun. On Apr. 6, 1853, the Pennsylvania Legislature passed the act which incorporated the Pennsylvania Female College, as it was henceforth known. This granted to the college "power to confer such literary degrees and academic honors as are usually granted by colleges." This placed it in a category shared by few others, although the P.F.C. claim to be the first four-year degree-granting legally incorporated liberal arts (Greek and Latin as graduation prerequisites) college for women in the United States had been challenged by several other institutions.

Dr. Sunderland, his wife LuAnnie, and his teaching staff were several steps ahead of most of their educational contemporaries and there is adequate evidence that skeptics abounded. Dr. Sunderland pointed out that the movement toward education for all was "confined almost exclusively to one of the sexes," but he was bending his untiring efforts (and all the financial support he could obtain) to this school for women's education. As at Freeland Seminary and later at Ursinus College, a Preparatory School functioned as part of the college operation.

The main building of the Pennsylvania Female College was Glenwood Hall ("Dear Glenwood") described as a "handsome structure of stone, forty feet by seventy-five, four stories high, and calculated to accommodate one hundred students." By 1870, 999 women had studied at the College and Preparatory School under such teachers as Dr. Sunderland and Professor Francis M. Blaufus, as well as under a succession of P.F.C. graduates who returned to share in the teaching program. According to a sketch map of the college grounds published in the 1870 Catalogue of Pennsylvania Female College, Glenwood was surrounded by shade trees and fruit orchards with a long mall lined with maples along what is now Glenwood Avenue. Flower and vegetable gardens were also kept, as was a paddock due east of the main college building. The Pennsylvania Female College grounds fronted on the Philadelphia and Reading Turnpike, now Route 422, Main Street, Collegeville.

Approximately one hundred twenty-five women earned degrees at P.F.C. Many of them became teachers in schools and seminaries over an area of at least ten states. Others became lecturers and several became doctors; a great many of the young ladies married men in the professions. Several husbands of graduates were elected to the Board of Directors. The contributions of these six score women extended to all parts of the nation and suggest the values inculcated by the staff of teachers which never exceeded ten in any single year. The student body (college and preparatory) of 166 in 1861 was apparently the largest in the history of the college.

When Dr. Sunderland retired from the presidency in 1868, he was replaced by Professor Josiah P. Sherman, who

William T. Parsons, '47

Dr. William T. Parsons, assistant professor of history at Ursinus since 1953, is writing a biography of Isaac Norris II. In June 1961, he was named Chairman of the Publication Committee (Editor) of the Bulletin of the Historical Society of Montgomery County. He has had several historical articles published in recent months. In the current semester he is teaching a course in the Economic and Social History of the United States, Civil War Era. Any additional letters, reminiscences, records or information concerning the Pennsylvania Female College or about students who attended, will be appreciated.

Dr. Parsons received his A.B. from Ursinus and his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Pennsylvania.

COLLEGE SOUVENIRS: CLASS OF 1862

In the Pennsylvania Female College Archives of the Historical Society of Montgomery County is a small envelope labelled, "Photographs of students of Penna. Female College." It turned out to be a collection of photographs gathered by Miss Mary Kathrine Schreiner, of Berrysburg, Lancaster County, while she was a student at the Pennsylvania Female College, with some pictures added at a later date. Mary K. Schreiner was a graduate of P.F.C. in the Class of 1862. A closer inspection shows this to be quite a revealing collection. Unhappily, it contains no photograph of Mary K. Schreiner (later Mrs. M. S. Smith), but four of her six classmates are included: Elizabeth Roberts Chatham, Mullica Hill, N. J., Valedictorian and Salutatorian of the Class of 1862; Frances G. Hagaman (Mrs. Lee E. Wills), Slatedale, Pa.; Lydia G. Pierson, Woodbury, N. J. and Lydia Ann Tustin (Mrs. Hartman Prizer), of Chester Springs, Pa. The remaining classmates not included are Rebecca Eicholtz (second wife of Dr. J. W. Sunderland), of Frankstown, Blair Co., Pa., and Sarah Preston (Mrs. S. P. Schreiner), of Wilmington, Delaware. There is no explanation for the missing pictures, nor whether they ever formed a part of the collection. We do not know whether the Schreiners were related.

Also interesting are six other photos of young ladies either definitely or tentatively identified as ex-1862, or as Mrs. Smith identified them, "Class of 1862—Did not graduate." Helen Morton Lewis of Philadelphia was included with the Class of '62, even on the Commencement program, but for some reason, perhaps illness, was not graduated until 1863, and then, with honors. Others identified are Elizabeth U. Rittenhouse (Mrs. John Brooks), of Germantown; Annie F. Guilbert (Mrs. George Mahon), of Philadelphia; Martha Potts Rittenhouse (Mrs. Joseph Wise), of Germantown; Mary High of Reading and Emma [Mary M.] Dunlap of Philadelphia. The latter two are not definitely labelled ex-'62, but by order of listed students, appear to be.

Portraits of Dr. and Madame Sunderland are also a part of this collection. President Sunderland inscribed one of these "To Mary K. Schreiner," and a second one of Dr. Sunderland by the George A. Lenzi Studio of Norristown, appears to be from an oil painting. Most of the photos of the girls, but not those of the Sunderlands, are rounded at the edges, as if they had been in a frame of sorts or in a photo album containing oval frames.

The Class of 1862, Pennsylvania Female College, was a very distinctive class indeed, for five of the seven graduates also earned the Master's degree, and four of the seven taught at least one subsequent year at P.F.C. Miss Chatham taught Latin and Greek there. Some stories and reminiscences of class members have appeared in various accounts over the years. A "Junior Exhibition" held in the Christian Meeting House (now Trinity Church, Collegeville) in 1860, had songs and speeches by Misses Schreiner and Lewis, among others. Mary K. Schreiner Smith's copy of the printed Commencement Program of Sept. 24 and 25, 1862, indicates the participation of every Senior in the graduation exercises at the Augustus Lutheran Church, Trappe. "The Present Crisis," subject of the chief Alumnae Oration on Sept. 24, seems appropriate considering the threat posed by Lee before his defeat at Antietam, Sept. 17, 1862. We are certainly thankful that Mary K. Schreiner collected these photographs as college souvenirs, and that she preserved them so carefully for our enlightenment.

conducted the Pennsylvania Female College for five years. At no time after 1865 did the college enrollment reach the height it had prior to 1861. Even though sixty years of age, President Sunderland in 1873 resumed his old post at the head of Pennsylvania Female College and remained until it was forced to close in 1880. Reasons given for the failure of the school include the Civil War, which caused a drop in the number of students from the South, but especially the rise of state operated normal schools which educated greater numbers of students at minimal costs. Lack of endowments, a fire in 1875, and finally the drain on the personal funds of J. Warren Sunderland, all contributed to the closing. Mrs. Rebecca Eicholtz Sunderland, Class of 1862 and the second wife of the founder, explained briefly in 1898 in an address to the Historical Society of Montgomery County, "We could not hope to successfully compete with the enormous power and resources of the State. All the circumstances then existing served to indicate that our useful work was finished and the mission of the institution fulfilled."

At the founding of Ursinus College, Dr. Sunderland was a member of the original Board of Directors and taught briefly in the first years of Ursinus. According to the late Joseph Shrawder, it was Sunderland who appealed to the Reading Railroad in 1869 to take note of the two colleges; the name Collegeville was given to the local station. The 1870 Catalogue of the Pennsylvania Female College lists its location as Collegeville, whereas in 1866 it was listed at Perkiomen Bridge. Dr. Sunderland and Prof. Francis M. Blaufus were also among the men who organized Warren Lodge No. 310, F. & A. M. The Board of Directors of Pennsylvania Female College was headed by Wright Bringhurst and included such illustrious names as Abram Hunsicker, Henry Hunsicker, Abraham Hendricks, Horace Royer, Theodore W. Bean and Frank M. Hobson. The latter also served as Treasurer of Ursinus College and on the Ursinus College Board of Directors.

Student life in the mid-Nineteenth Century seems to have engendered a special kind of esprit de corps, which was renewed in a series of reunions in the early Twentieth Century. The Glenwood Association was also organized to perpetuate this spirit. Graduates and friends met at Glenwood until the building was demolished in 1918, and subsequently met at Ursinus College. In May 1921, the Glenwood Association presented to Ursinus College the $3000 Pennsylvania Female College Memorial Scholarship, which has benefited numerous students in the past forty years.

Material for this article comes from the P.F.C. Catalogues, Glenwood Association Collections and P.F.C. Archives at Ursinus College and the Historical Society of Montgomery County. See also P. A. Mertz, An Historical Account of Pennsylvania Female College, [1927], and Joseph Shrawder, History of Warren Lodge No. 310, F. & A.M., 1957.

Dr. and Mrs. Eugene Miller

by EUGENE H. MILLER, '33

Living and teaching in India has been fascinating and rewarding experience. We were told before we left the United States that Calcutta was one of the most difficult cities in the world for an American. It is an overcrowded, extremely hot, humid, and very unhealthy metropolis. At the same time it is an exciting, colorful, and vitally alive corner of India; to the local people, the Bengalis, it is India, or they regard themselves as the political, cultural, and intellectual elite of the nation. In living up to this self-portrait they have provided leadership for "advanced" political movements and have developed the richest literature in India as well as a distinctive music, art, and dance. The great Bengali, Rabindranath Tagore, earned a reputation as a "universal man" not only in India but throughout the world. Since this is his centenary year Calcutta has been sated with performances of Tagore plays, dance dramas, lectures, and art exhibits. Tagore theater, we find, is characterized by a harmony of elaborate staging, dramatic lighting, beautiful dancing, and haunting songs.

Calcutta has another culture—that of the masses who crowd its bustees (slums), its sidewalks, and overflow into the streets. They worship Kali, the Goddess of Destruction, and the city's patron saint. In October there is a three day Puja, or religious celebration, in her honor. Every year no less than two thousand shrines are erected in the city. One, covered by a huge Pandal or canopy, was built right outside our flat and completely blocked the street. For three days the faithful came to worship before the statue, Indian music blared over the loud speaker continuously, and for the last twenty-four hours frenetic drummers appeared every thirty minutes. The Kali

Vice-President Radakrishnan greeting Judy Miller at a reception for Fulbrighters in the Presidential Palace at New Delhi.

Puja was climaxed by torchlight processions in which the 2,000 images were paraded through the streets accompanied by drummers, dancers and "foo-foo" bands. Their destination was the Hooghly, a branch of the sacred river Ganges, where the images were "immersed"—or in American parlance, dumped into the river. Since we live in North Calcutta on the direct route to the river all the processions passed our intersection. We spent an exciting and sleepless night.

Every morning at five o'clock we are reminded that we live in the orthodox Hindu section of the city. At that hour five priests appear before the house across the street to chant the morning service. It's a good way to start the day. Our only regret is that we don't have a tape recorder for this performance as well as for innumerable other Indian sounds. In fact, to capture the true atmosphere of India both a sound track and an odor track should go along with the kodachromes.

Not only Kali, but other Gods and Goddesses are honored. This week we have a two-day vacation dedicated to the Goddess of learning, Saraswati, the "last best hope" of the scholar who has procrastinated throughout the two year academic term. There are no mid-semesters and no final course examinations, hence the student who has coasted for the two years needs to reinforce his frantic ninety day cramming. If Saraswati grants him her favor the Jadavpur student receives his diploma at a colorful convocation where the graduates and faculty appear in saffron robes in an academic procession led by twelve bagpipers. Ten thousand guests crowd the special pandal or tent erected on the campus for the ceremonies.

The Fulbright assignment at Jadavpur University involves teaching two courses to second year M.A. students. American Government has been no problem and, with Galbraith in New Delhi and Nehru in Washington, the course in American Foreign Policy was, for several months, a honeymoon. Then came Goa—and the roof fell in! My students, who are intelligent, eager, and very patient with my American-English, have learned to co-exist with my explanation of what makes Americans and American policy tick. In addition to regular work at the University various lectures are called for in the city and countryside. I have also been to Patna, the capital of Bihar, and to Midnapore, a center of the Freedom Movement, to lecture and to answer questions at the United States Information Service exhibit on "College Life in America." You'll be glad to know that a special electric bulb lights up on the exhibition map to indicate the location of Ursinus College.

In addition to the lectures there have been many opportunities for travel outside Calcutta. Professional conferences in Delhi, Cuttack and Dacca, East Pakistan, have given us an excellent chance to meet Asian and European historians and political scientists as well as to sight-see in areas quite different from our "native" Bengal. Two of the best vacations of our lives were spent in the Himalayas, one in the Kulu Valley of the Punjab, on the borders of Tibet, and one in Kathmandu in Nepal. The mountain people welcomed us to their villages and, after the heat of Calcutta, the pine forests and the snows of the high passes were a life-saver. In the Kulu Valley we rubbed shoulders with 4,000 Tibetan refugees and in Nepal we had the thrill of seeing both Annapurna and Everest—the reward for climbing an 8,000 foot mountain. Republic Day week-end (January 26th) we made a hegira to Benares—a place which lives up to the tourist blurbs billing it as the most dramatic and holy city of India.

It is fun being in India in an election year. As a political scientist I have visited the Bengal state legislature several times, the Bihar state legislature, and the upper house of the national parliament in Delhi. The Bengals put verve and drama into their politics as into everything else they do. In Delhi, the Communist leader of the Upper Chamber was performing so brilliantly and with such "style" that I recognized him immediately as a citizen of Calcutta. Both in the legislatures and in the press orthodox and heretical views are expressed freely and vehemently. Mr. Nehru, whom we have heard speak several times—in large gatherings and in a special round-table meeting with sixty Fulbrighters—is still a father image whom the people love. He does not hesitate to scold and speaks with a frankness unusual for a politician seeking votes. However, he is still very good at the latter, and the prediction is that his Congress Party will be returned to power. The Communists have lost many of their supporters because of the Chinese invasion of northern India, and the Rightist parties are divided. Calcutta is an excellent place from which to observe the political campaign. Mrs. Indira

Dr. Miller and his students on the campus of Jadavpur University in Calcutta, India.

Ghandi, Nehru's daughter, spoke at a big Congress rally in our block last night. She drew a large crowd which cheered enthusiastically, although my neighbor said most of those present were leftists and not in sympathy with her speech.

The election rallies and processions add to the everyday Calcutta excitement of demonstrations by refugees, protests by college teachers, strikes by students, and labor unrest. Also, as the capital of Bengal and the largest city in India, Calcutta is host to VIP's touring the country. Each visit is the occasion for parades, triumphal arches, and receptions. All this helps compensate for the daily frustrations of overcrowded and non-existent transportation, the reddest of red tape in dealing with the government, and a telephone that works only fifty percent of the time.

Dr. Miller talking to the author of a recent biography of Gandhi at the Asian History Conference in New Delhi.

In the last analysis, however, it is the Indian people that make me forget the character-building nature of the daily struggle for existence. They are the most hospitable people we have ever come across. Families you have just met will invite you to dinner, those whom you know only slightly better will insist that you spend the night in their homes, and strangers will go far out of their way to help an American. Our entry into the strange world of South Asia was eased by Indian friends in Bombay, and in the last seven months they have made life pleasant for us wherever we have gone. We, in turn, have learned to like Indian food, to travel Indian style, and to follow many Indian customs.

Dr. Eugene H. Miller, Chairman of the Department of Political Science at Ursinus since 1942, has been a Fulbright Lecturer in American Government and American Foreign Policy at Jadavpur University in Calcutta, India, for the 1961-62 academic year.

Dr. Miller was graduated from Ursinus in 1933 and received his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Clark University.

His wife, Jessie, Lecturer in Sociology at Ursinus, and his daughter, Judy, accompanied him to India.

It is difficult in a brief article to sort out our many contradictory impressions. One thing of current interest is the great influence of astrology which is noted in all strata of society. It is said that many important business men and government officials will not make any significant decision without consulting an astrologer. The recent conjunction of the eight planets caused many people to panic. As I write this the evil day has passed and the sun is still shining. Thus, Mr. Nehru, who pleaded with his people to be rational about this phenomenon, has been vindicated. Incidentally, the furor worked to my personal advantage. I was invited to attend a conference in East Pakistan, a trip that involved a return flight on the fateful day of February third. If most people had not been afraid to fly at that time, I probably could not have gotten space on the plane.

The short time spent in Pakistan provided a valuable insight into that country's problems, its attitudes toward India and its reaction to United States policy. The university students were on strike in protest against the arrest of an opposition leader and the muzzling of the press. President Ayub Kahn, who received us at tea, seemed untouched by the demonstrations.

The longer we are here the more we realize that we know and understand little and that, to use the old cliché, India is a continent, not just a nation. Unfortunately we have only a few more weeks to learn more about India and to appreciate her hospitality. A final Fulbright Conference at Ootacamund, a hill station in Madras state, will give us a brief view of Southern India. Then, in the middle of April, we take off for Formosa where I have been invited to lecture for two weeks. From Taipei we plan to go on to Japan for some more lectures and to renew friendships made there during our Fulbright year in 1954-55. Judy, who has been working hard as a third year B.A. student at Jadavpur University, and Mrs. Miller, who as a sociologist has found India fascinating, join me in greetings to all the Alumni. We have reserved a serious discussion of Indian politics and life for talks when we return to the campus.

James E. Wagner Elected

Vice-President of Ursinus

Election of the Rev. James E. Wagner, D.D., L.L.D., Th.D., L.H.D., as vice-president of Ursinus College was announced on February 15 by President Helfferich.

"Dr. Wagner's position as one of the most respected leaders of the ecumenical movement, his widespread experience as an administrator and his familiarity with higher education make him eminently qualified to help in the development of Ursinus," Dr. Helfferich said.

Dr. Wagner announced that he will continue to act as president of the General Council of the Evangelical and Reformed Church. The Council is a board of trustees for the legal corporation of the denomination, the major remaining vestige of the communion which in 1957 united with the Congregational Christian churches to form the United Church of Christ.

Dr. Wagner was president of the Evangelical and Reformed Church from September 1, 1953, until the position was superseded by the adoption of the Constitution of the United Church. He was elected co-president of the latter denomination upon its formation.

From 1954 to 1961 Dr. Wagner was a member of the Central Committee of the World Council of Churches. He represented the United Church at the Assembly of the World Council in New Delhi last December.

He is vice-president of the World Alliance of Reformed and Presbyterian Churches. Since 1950 he has been a member of the General Board of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U.S.A.

Dr. Wagner, a former reporter on the Harrisburg, Pa., Telegraph and columnist on the Lancaster, Pa., Advertiser, was ordained a minister in the Churches of God in North America October 8, 1921, at Shippensburg, Pa.

Before his election as president of the Evangelical and Reformed Church in 1953, he served for twenty-two years as pastor of St. Peter's E. & R. Church in Lancaster. During his pastorate in Lancaster he served as instructor in Bible and Religion at Franklin and Marshall Academy from 1935 to 1942, as director of public relations, Franklin and Marshall College from 1942 to 1946, and as acting professor of practical theology at the Lancaster Theological Seminary from 1946 to 1947.

Dr. Wagner is a graduate of Findlay, Ohio, Colgate and the Lancaster Theological Seminary and did post graduate work at Columbia University and Union Theological Seminary in New York City. He holds honorary degrees from the Reformed Theological Academy of Budapest, Hungary, Chicago Theological Seminary, Ursinus College, Franklin and Marshall College, Heidelberg College and Findlay College.

In 1958 the Government of West Germany awarded Dr. Wagner the Knight Commander's cross of the Order of Merit.

Dr. Wagner is a resident of Havertown, Pennsylvania.

NEW POWER PLANT BEGUN

Architect's drawing of the proposed building

During the summer of last year, one of the oldest features of the Ursinus Campus, the Barn, was razed. From its rubble will soon rise the College's new Heating Plant. The creation of this power plant is the first step in a long-range program of building for future generations of students. The tearing down of the old "Barn" and the erecting of the new "Plant" adequately epitomize the change which the nation and the economy in general, and our College in particular, are undergoing.

The present boiler house, so reminiscent of Dante's inferno with its leering red furnace bed and steam belching funnels, is now inadequate, and it too will soon disappear. The new heating plant will be the distribution center for all gas, water, electric and telephone services. It will contain the latest machinery and automatic control devices now so necessary for the growing campus. The proposed date for construction to begin is May 1.

New Offices

Dr. Wagner's offices are located in two rooms on the first floor of 620 Main Street, next to Duryea Hall. The Alumni Office has moved from its small building on the campus to a three-room suite opposite Dr. Wagner's offices at the same address.

620 Main Street was the former residence of Paul Levensgood, '35. It was pictured on page 14 of the November Journal.

Bequests Committee Formed

A Committee on Bequests for Ursinus has recently been organized. The committee will seek to develop a meaningful and continuing source of funds for Ursinus from bequests of alumni and friends of the College. Most of the members of the committee will be available to interested persons for professional assistance and advice.

The organization of a Committee on Bequests for Ursinus is in line with similar action by virtually every college and university in the country. Not only have our colleges and universities received most of their existing endowments by way of requests, trusts, insurance policies and other forms of deferred giving, but these methods of donation are especially attractive in these days of high taxes because they very often involve tax advantages that sharply reduce the donor's cost of giving.

Thomas J. Beddow, '36, of Washington, D.C., is Chairman of the Committee. Other members, all of whom are lawyers, are the following:

Alfred C. Alspach, '33, of Lancaster; Mark D. Alspach, '40, Thomas P. Glassmoyer, '36, Paul I. Guest, '38, H. Ober Hess, '33, Herman H. Kreckstein, '19, Donald J. Williams, '51, and Paul L. Wise, '41, of Philadelphia; Russell C. Bartman, '18, and Mabel Ditter Sellers, '39, of Harrisburg; Richard C. Brittain, '58, of Danville; E. Dillwyn Darlington, '41, of Feasterville; J. William Ditter, Jr., '43, and Louis D.

Stefan, '50, of Ambler; Nelson P. Fegley, '07, Warren Y. Francis, '30, A. Benjamin Scirica, '32, Robert W. Treddinnick, '44, and Paul P. Wisler, '27, of Norristown; S. Maxwell Flitter, '24, of Easton; Austin Gavin, '30, of Allentown; Raymond K. Hess, '40, and The Honorable Warren K. Hess, '31, of Reading; Donald G. Jewitt, '56, of Morton; Joseph H. The architect, Samuel C. Bond, Jr., of Bond & Miller Company of Allentown, is a member of the Board of Directors of Ursinus College. Mr. Bond also designed the Beardwood-Paisley-Stauffler Hall. The engineering firm is John W. Furlow Co. of Philadelphia.

The proposed building will be attractive as well as functional. The north and south sides will be of stone and glass while the west side facing will be of stone matching that of Paisley Hall. A unique feature of the plant will be its east side which will be aluminum and steel panelled. This side is extensible and will allow for expansion of the plant if and when the need for more power arises. The thirty-foot high plant measures seventy-one feet long by sixty feet wide and is topped by a 120-foot buffer stack.

The present boiler house produces its power by one 100 h.p. boiler. The new plant will have twin 350 h.p. boilers, heated by fully automatically controlled burners. This addition to the Ursinus Campus combines all the efficiency and power of modern engineering with the beauty and taste which have always been evident on the College grounds.

America has been made the great country that she is by a series of creative minorities; the first settlers on the Atlantic seaboard, the founding fathers of the Republic, the pioneers who won the West. These successive sets of creative leaders differed, of course, very greatly in their backgrounds, outlooks, activities, and achievements; but they had one important quality in common: all of them were aristocrats.

They were aristocrats in virtue of their creative power, and not by any privilege of inheritance, though some of the founding fathers were aristocrats in conventional sense as well. Others among them, however, were middle-class professional men, and Franklin, who was the outstanding genius in this goodly company, was a self-made man. The truth is that the founding fathers' social origin is something of secondary importance. The common quality that distinguished them all and brought each of them to the front was their power of creative leadership.

In any human society at any time and place and at any stage of cultural development, there is presumably the same average percentage of potentially creative spirits. The question is always: Will this potentiality take effect? Whether a potentially creative minority is going to become an effectively creative one is, in every case, an open question.

The answer will depend on whether the minority is sufficiently in tune with the contemporary majority, and the majority with the minority, to establish understanding, confidence, and cooperation between them. The potential leaders cannot give a lead unless the rest of society is ready to follow it. Prophets who have been 'without honour in their own country' because they have been 'before their time' are no less well-known figures in history than prophets who have received a response that has made the fortune of their mission.

This means that effective acts of creation are the work of two parties, not just one. If the people have no vision, the prophet's genius, through no fault of the prophet's own, will be as barren as the talent that was wrapped in a napkin and was buried in the earth. This means, in turn, that the people, as well as the prophet, have a responsible part to play. If it is incumbent on the prophet to deliver his message, it is no less incumbent on the people not to turn a deaf ear. It is even more incumbent on them not to make the spiritual climate of their society so adverse to creativity that the life will have been crushed out of the prophet's potential message before he has had a chance of delivering it.

Creativity Must Be Given a Chance

To give a fair chance to potential creativity is a matter of life and death for any society. This is all-important, because the outstanding creative ability of a fairly small percentage of the population is mankind's ultimate capital asset, and the only one with which Man has been endowed. The Creator has withheld from Man the shark's teeth, the bird's wings, the elephant's trunk and the hound's or horse's racing feet. The

*Dr. Arnold Toynbee, probably the world's best-known historian, writes on a topic integral to his theory of history—and to the future of America. His theory, advanced in the best-selling A Study of History, is that civilizations arise from a challenge—and response. Progress and growth occur when the response to the challenge, which can be human or environmental, is successful; part of the success is always due to leadership by a creative minority.*

Professor Toynbee retired in 1955 as Director of Studies in the Royal Institute of International Affairs and as Research Professor of International History in the University of London. Last winter he was a visiting professor at the University of Pennsylvania.

creative power planted in a minority of mankind has to do duty for all the marvellous physical assets that are built into every specimen of Man's non-human fellow creatures. If society fails to make the most of this one human asset, or if, worse still, it perversely sets itself to stifle it, Man is throwing away his birthright of being the lord of creation and is condemning himself to be, instead, the least effective species on the face of this planet.

Whether potential creative ability is to take effect or not in a particular society is a question that will be determined by the character of that society's institutions, attitudes, and ideas. Potential creative ability can be stifled, stunted, and stultified by the prevalence in society of adverse attitudes of mind and habits of behavior. What treatment is creative ability receiving in our Western World, and particularly in America?

There are two present-day adverse forces that are conspicuously deadly to creativity. One of these is a wrong-headed conception of the function of democracy. The other is an excessive anxiety to conserve vested interests, especially the vested interest in acquired wealth.

What is the proper function of democracy? True democracy stands for giving an equal opportunity to individuals for developing their unequal capacities. In a democratic society which does give every individual his fair chance, it is obviously the outstandingly able individual's moral duty to make a return to society by using his unfettered ability in a public-spirited way and not just for selfish personal purposes. But society, on its side, has a moral duty to ensure that the individual's potential ability is given free play. If, on the contrary, society sets itself to neutralize outstanding ability, it will have failed in its duty to its members, and it will bring upon itself a retribution for which it will have only itself to blame. This is why the difference between a right and a wrong-headed interpretation of the requirements of democracy is a matter of crucial importance in the decision of a society's destiny.

There is at least one current notion about democracy that is wrong-headed to the point of being disastrously perverse. This perverse notion is that to have been born with an exceptionally large endowment of innate ability is tantamount to having committed a large pre-natal offence against society. It is looked upon as being an offence because, according to this wrong-headed view of democracy, inequalities of any and every kind are undemocratic. The gifted child is an offender, as well as the unscrupulous adult who has made a fortune at his neighbours' expense by taking some morally illegitimate economic advantage of them. All offenders, of every kind, against democracy must be put down indiscriminately according to this misguided perversion of the true democratic faith.

There have been symptoms of this unfortunate attitude in the policy pursued by some of the local educational authorities in Britain since the Second

Has America Neglected Her Creative Minority?

World War. From their ultra-egalitarian point of view, the clever child is looked askance at as a kind of capitalist. His offence seems the more heinous because of its precocity, and the fact that the child's capital asset is his God-given ability and not any inherited or acquired hoard of material goods, is not counted to him for righteousness. He possesses an advantage over his fellows, and this is enough to condemn him, without regard to the nature of the advantage that is in question.

It ought to be easier for American educational authorities to avoid making this intellectual and moral mistake, since in America capitalists are not disapproved of. If the child were a literal grown-up capitalist, taking advantage of an economic pull to beggar his neighbour, he would not only be tolerated but would probably also be admired, and public opinion would be reluctant to empower the authorities to curb his activities. Unfortunately for the able American child, "egg-head" is as damning a word in America as "capitalist" is in the British welfare state; and I suspect that the able child fares perhaps still worse in America than he does in Britain.

The Clever Child May Be Unpopular

If the educational policy of the English-speaking countries does persist in this course, our prospects will be unpromising. The clever child is apt to be unpopular with his contemporaries anyway. His presence among them raises the sights for the standard of endeavour and achievement. This is, of course, one of the many useful services that the outstandingly able individual performs for his society at every stage of his career; but its usefulness will not appease the natural resentment of his duller or lazier neighbours. In so far as the public authorities intervene between the outstanding minority and the run-of-the-

by ARNOLD TOYNBEE

mill majority at the school age, they ought to make it their concern to protect the able child, not to penalize him. He is entitled to protection as a matter of sheer social justice; and to do him justice happens to be also in the public interest, because his ability is a public asset for the community as well as a private one for the child himself. The public authorities are therefore committing a two-fold breach of their public duty if, instead of fostering ability, they deliberately discourage it.

Ability Can Be Discouraged Easily

In a child, ability can be discouraged easily; for children are even more sensitive to hostile public opinion than adults are, and are even readier to purchase, at almost any price, the toleration that is an egalitarian-minded society's alluring reward for poor-spirited conformity. The price, however, is likely to be a prohibitively high one, not only for the frustrated individual himself but for his step-motherly society. Society will have put itself in danger, not just of throwing away a precious asset, but of saddling itself with a formidable liability. When creative ability is thwarted, it will not be extinguished; it is more likely to be given an anti-social turn. The frustrated able child is likely to grow up with a conscious or unconscious resentment against the society that has done him an irreparable injustice, and his repressed ability may be diverted from creation to retaliation. If and when this happens, it is likely to be a tragedy for the frustrated individual and for the repressive society alike. And it will have been the society, not the individual, that has been to blame for this obstruction of God's or Nature's purpose.

This educational tragedy is an unnecessary one. It is shown to be unnecessary by the example of countries in whose educational system outstanding ability is honored, encouraged, and aided. This roll of honor includes countries with the most diverse social and cultural traditions. Scotland, Germany, and Confucian China all stand high on the list. I should guess that Communist China has remained true to pre-Communist Chinese tradition in this all-important point. I should also guess that Communist Russia has maintained those high Continental European standards of education that pre-Communist Russia acquired from Germany and France

Alumni Seminar

In June, 1961, the Alumni Association sponsored the first Alumni Seminar, which drew a total of seventy-seven alumni and friends to at least one of the lectures.

This year the second annual Alumni Seminar has been planned. Three popular Ursinus professors will lecture in their respective areas of research and scholarship.

WHEN WILL IT BE HELD?

The Seminar will begin with dinner at 6 P.M. on Friday, June 15, and end with dinner on Saturday, June 16. Participants, however, may occupy their rooms until noon on Sunday at no extra cost. All participants will be housed in the new girls' dormitories.

WHAT WILL IT COST?

The total fee is $11.00. This includes registration, four meals and room (for one or two nights). For those who cannot come for the entire Seminar, or for those living in the environs of Collegeville and who wish to participate on a commuting basis, individual meal tickets will be sold at $1.00 for lunch and $1.50 for dinner. Part-time participants will be charged at the rate of $1.00 a lecture.

WHAT IS THE PURPOSE OF THE SEMINAR?

The Seminar is designed to provide intellectual stimulation and physical relaxation for Ursinus alumni and their friends. Competent professors will offer stimulating lectures and lead the discussions. The lovely, green-swarthed campus will provide a restful and delightful atmosphere for informal, between-the-lectures chit-chat.

WHO MAY PARTICIPATE?

You and your friends. The Seminar is sponsored by the Alumni Association, and we naturally expect most of the participants to be alumni. But we welcome any of your friends and all adult members of your family. (Older children may wish to attend the lectures; younger children may play tennis or croquet or use the other recreational facilities of the College.) Last year the lectures were attended by alumni, faculty members and their wives, members of the Board of Directors and their wives, a few older children, and other friends of the College.

HOW DO YOU ENROLL?

Detach the form on the opposite page and mail to Richard T. Schellhase, Ursinus College, Collegeville, Pa. Enclose a check for $4.00 to cover registration. Make the check payable to Ursinus College. Pay the remaining $7.00 when you arrive. THE DEADLINE FOR RESERVATIONS IS JUNE 4.

Foster L. Dennis, '31

Dr. Foster L. Dennis

Dr. Dennis, professor of mathematics, received his B.S. degree from Ursinus in 1931 and has been teaching here since 1938. He received his Ph.D. degree from the University of Illinois in 1938. For the last six years he has spent his summers with the Philco Corporation.

Mr. H. Lloyd Jones

Mr. Jones, assistant professor of English and the assistant director of admissions, has been teaching at Ursinus since 1947. He is a graduate of the University of Delaware and received his M.A. degree from the University of Pennsylvania in 1946.

Richard M. Fletcher

Dr. Richard M. Fletcher

Dr. Fletcher, who is head of the Psychology Department at Ursinus, is a graduate of Franklin and Marshall College and earned his Ph.D. degree in industrial psychology at Pennsylvania State University. After graduating from college he studied a year at the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration and then worked in business, first as an accounting supervisor and later as assistant to the vice-president of a manufacturing concern. After securing his doctorate, and before coming to Ursinus in 1956, he spent a year heading a Navy research project on classroom teaching methods with the results being published by the Navy.

Jessie Royer Greaves, '92, Recipient of First Alumni Award

"A blind child, mentally retarded." Most of us can hardly endure the thought of such a condition; few of us would ever consider working with the person in such a condition. Jessie Royer Greaves, '92, is one of those few.

More than forty years ago Dr. Greaves founded a school for such doubly-handicapped children. Shocked by the fact that mentally retarded blind children were refused admittance by recognized schools for the blind, Dr. Greaves in 1921 gave up her teaching at the Overbrook School for the Blind and established a home which would minister to the needs of such children. Without money, and without any prior experience in this highly specialized area of education, "Mother Greaves," as she has always been called by her children, was among the first to work seriously with the mentally retarded blind child.

The first year she operated her school from a rented house in Strafford; the following year, 1922, increased enrollment forced her to move to a larger house in King of Prussia. In 1941 she borrowed $13,000 and moved to a beautiful estate in Paoli, which has served as her home ever since and which now accommodates forty-five of the older children. Last year Payton Hall, a building designed to care for the needs of thirty children from four to ten years of age, was erected at a cost of $140,000. Construction of a gymnasium will begin this summer.

In speaking of her decision to found her school she said, "I did not go into the work for the mentally handicapped blind armed with preconceived ideas of how it should be done. It was an unexplored field. We were the pioneers. To be sure, I had had twenty years' experience teaching the normal blind, but that is a very different work. I had to learn how to meet the difficulties presented by added physical and parental complications, which are augmented when the child is blind."

Mrs. Greaves was born in Trappe on September 9, 1874. Her physician father, J. Warren Royer, aided Dr. Bomberger in establishing Ursinus, and for a brief time he taught anatomy at the College. All of his children attended either the Academy or the College. At her graduation

The Alumni Award, a recently devised honor whereby the Alumni Association will recognize outstanding alumni, faculty members, students and friends of Ursinus, will be presented for the first time on Alumni Day, June 2. Harold Wiand, '28, president of the Alumni Association, will make the award at the General Meeting of the Association. Malcolm Derk, '26, chairman of the Awards Committee, will present Dr. Greaves to Mr. Wiand for the award.

Other members of the Awards Committee are Grace I. Kauffman, '27, G. Sieber Pancoast, '37, J. Robert Hitchcock, '49, and Donald L. Helfferich, '21.

in 1892, the youthful Jessie entitled her commencement address "The Higher Education of Women." Here she made articulate and public a philosophy which, in retrospect, seems to have dominated her life during the seventy years since she expressed it. In speaking of the benefits of a broad education for women, she said, "The breadth of her education gives her that safer judgment, that deeper sympathy and that calmer conviction which enable her to bear more easily the burdens of her own heart, and then—to help the overburdened."

Continuing her education, she was graduated from the Emerson College of Oratory in 1901, and the same year she opened a Studio of Expression in Philadelphia, where she taught for nine years. Also, in 1901 she began teaching "declamation and physical expression" at the Overbrook School for the Blind; she left Overbrook in 1921 to found her own institution, which she named the Royer-Greaves School for the Blind in memory of her father, Dr. Royer, and of her husband, Harry E. Greaves, a young artist whom she married in 1905 and who died in 1919.

Almost from the beginning of her work with retarded blind children her patient and selfless labors have been recognized. As early as 1926 Kiwanis International of Montgomery County awarded her their Distinguished Service Medal for "the most unselfish service done in Montgomery County." In 1939 Ursinus College conferred upon her the honorary degree of Doctor of Pedagogy, and in 1955 Emerson College awarded her the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters. She was named "Chester County Woman of the Year" in 1954. In 1956 she received the Philadelphia Gimbel Award and the Louis Braille Award, the first such honor ever bestowed upon anyone by the Philadelphia Association of the Blind. Last year Dr. Greaves was the recipient of the 1960 Lane Bryant Award.

The Philadelphia Inquirer, in an editorial written after Dr. Greaves was honored by Lane Bryant, said, "This is one of those things which reminds us, forcibly, in this greatly troubled world, that there are openings—if we would seek them—to help others. That's what Dr. Greaves discovered in 1921 and set to work to make many child lives happier."

Reflecting upon her forty years of service, Mrs. Greaves commented, "We did not learn overnight how to overcome obstacles, and undoubtedly we made many mistakes; but we never lost our passionate desire to help the child or our faith in the ultimate success of our undertaking."

Mr. Richard T. Schellhase
Alumni Association
Ursinus College
Collegeville, Pa.

Dear Dick,

Has it been six years since I frantically pulled "khakis" over my pajamas and made that early morning sprint to chapel?

Many things have happened since then.

After graduation I went to work in Philadelphia as an "organization man" in the field of industrial relations. Then one day it happened; my face started to get fuzzy and took on a grayish hue. I was turning into gray flannel!

One month and 5200 miles later I drove down 5th Avenue in Anchorage, Alaska. Then I begin working for the Matanuska Valley Bank in Palmer, Alaska, which is located about 50 miles from Anchorage.

Things went well for me. I bought a house and a few city properties. On weekends I would drive away from the towns to see some real nature. I liked what I saw. One Sunday I avoided the established roads and found a narrow, nearly impassable trail, and followed it. When the road ended I continued on foot. After a mile of stumbling, I found my homestead. The site was perfect—virgin land, a small lake almost one mile long, and a range of mountains that wouldn't stop. I filed a claim for 120 acres and made arrangements to build a cabin on this claim. Within one year I had quit the Bank and was a carpenter. Another year and it was completed. Last week I received my patent from the Federal Government; the land was finally mine. (As you probably know, a patent is, in effect, a deed of title.)

FROM GREY FLANNEL TO ALASKAN SEAL

Two years ago I married an Alaskan school teacher. She is the daughter of a Southern California rancher, and a real beauty.

Enclosed are some summer shots of the homestead. In the winter it is pretty barren, just snow and moose. In fact, I saw more moose than people. They don't make good playmates. I've been chased by them several times—just cannot reason with them. The only thing to do is run for a tree. Even if the limbs are 10 feet from the ground, jump. If you don't get a limb on the way up, you'll get one on the way down! However, the best way to stop them is with a 18 gr. slug just below the rack from a 30-06. Moose meat is the basis of a homesteader's menu. My first small moose dressed out at 732 lbs. The meat was as bad as a New York cut, but considerably less expensive! Bears like good food too. If one gets wind of a fresh moose kill before you have dressed it out, he considers himself invited for dinner. It is about that time that you decide the bear deserves the meat more than you. Grizzlies don't argue. They don't find it necessary. About thirty miles from the homestead, one hunter tried to avoid being dinner by climbing a tree. Grizzlies don't climb. The tree stump is still there. The trunk, about eighteen inches in diameter, was severed by four-inch claws slashing at it.

Back to civilization.

This past September I enrolled in the School of Law, Montana State University. I'll be going back to the old homestead this summer and, I hope, every summer.

School is keeping me busy, but I still have time for a little music. I guess playing for Ursinus dances and parties gave me my start. On weekends I play with a group that just got off the "road." Last month we put out our first L.P. album. Luck is still with me. Our drummer is a University of Pennsylvania graduate. He knows quite a bit about Ursinus; I don't allow him to forget.

Sincerely,

BILL

Bill Tull and "Eskimo."

Ursinus Homecoming in Alaska

In October Dick Gay, '42, and his wife, Averill (Fox) Gay, '42, requested at the alumni office send some Ursinus cards and stickers. Then in December, the editor of the Journal received from Mrs. Gay a photograph and the following note.

"On Saturday evening, November 4, we had our own Ursinus Homecoming here in Alaska, 4500 miles from the College campus. From the Journal and the Directory we discovered at least two other graduates living in the area—John C. Hart, '49, and William F. Tull, '56. We learned that Mr. and Mrs. Tull are 'outside' this winter, pursuing studies in Montana. However, Mr. and Mrs. Hart were able to join us and our five children, and we had a delightful evening. We discovered that we had known John's brother, Bob, class of '43. Another astonishing fact we learned was that we had all been reared within a few miles of each other. John lived in Norristown, Ruth, his wife, was from Conshohocken, Dick grew up in Phoenixville, and I was from Pottstown. John is teaching eighth grade history at Orah Dee Clark Junior High School in Anchorage. Ruth, although not a graduate of Ursinus, took some courses there and is now a cost accountant for Reeve Aleutian Airways."

AMERICA'S NEGLECTED MINORITY

er Peter the Great had opened Russia's doors to an influx of Western civilization. A contemporary instance of enthusiasm giving ability its chance is presented by present-day Indonesia. Here is a relatively poor and ill-equipped country that is making heroic efforts to develop education. This spirit will put to shame a visitor to Indonesia from most English-speaking countries except, perhaps, Scotland. This shame ought inspire us to make at least as good a use of our far greater educational facilities. If a misguided egalitarianism is one of the present-day menaces in most English-speaking countries to the fostering of creative ability, another menace to this is a benighted conservatism. Creation is a disturbing force in society because it is a constructive one, upsets the old order in the act of building a new one. This activity is salutary to society. It is, indeed, essential for the maintenance of society's health; for the one thing that is certain about human affairs that they are perpetually on the move, and the work of creative spirits is what gives society a chance of directing its instable movements along constructive instead of destructive lines. A creative spirit works like yeast in dough. But this valuable life service is condemned as high treason in a society where the powers that be have themselves to stop life's tide from flowing. This enterprise is fore-doomed to failure. The classic illustration of this historical truth is the internal social history of Japan during her two hundred years and more of self-imposed insulation from the rest of the world. The regime in Japan that initiated and maintained this policy did all that a combination of ingenuity with ruthlessness could do to keep Japanese life frozen in every field of activity. In Japan under this oppression, the penalty for most kinds of activity was death. Yet the experience two centuries demonstrated that this policy is inherently incapable of succeeding. Long before Commodore Perry first cast anchor before Yedo Bay, an immense internal revolution had taken place in the mobile depths of panse life below the frozen surface, and, with it, the reality of power, had flowed irresistibly from the pockets of the feudal lords and their retainers into the pockets of the unobtrusive but irrepresible business men. There would surely have been a social revolution in Japan before the end of the nineteenth century, even if the West had never rapped upon her door.

The Tokugawa regime in Japan might possibly have saved itself by mending its ways in good time if it had ever heard of King Canute's ocular demonstration of the impossibility of stopping the tide by uttering a word of command. In present-day America the story is familiar, and it would profit her now to take it to heart.

The Affluent Majority Resists Change

In present-day America, so it looks to me, the affluent majority is striving desperately to arrest the irresistible tide of change. It is attempting this impossible task because it is bent on conserving the social and economic system under which this comfortable affluence has been acquired. With this unattainable aim in view, American public opinion today is putting an enormously high premium on social conformity; and this attempt to standardize people's behavior in adult life is as discouraging to creative ability and initiative as the educational policy of egalitarianism in childhood.

Egalitarianism and conservatism work together against creativity, and, in combination, they mount up to a formidable repressive force. Among American critics of the present-day American way of life, it is a commonplace nowadays to lament that the conventionally approved career for an American born into the affluent majority of the American people is to make money as the employe of a business corporation within the rigid framework of the existing social and economic order. This dismal picture has been painted so brilliantly by American hands that a foreign observer has nothing to add to it.

New Ideals Needed in Crisis

The foreign observer will, however, join the chorus of American critics in testifying that this is not the kind of attitude and ideal that America needs in her present crisis. If this new concept of Americanism were the true one, the pioneers, the founding fathers, and the original settlers would all deserve to be prosecuted and condemned post-humously by the Congressional committee on un-American activities.

The alternative possibility is that the new concept stands condemned in the light of the historic one; and this is surely the truth. America rose to greatness as a revolutionary community, following the lead of creative leaders who welcomed and initiated timely and constructive changes, instead of wincing at the prospect of them. In the course of not quite two centuries, the American Revolution has become world-wide. The shot fired in April 1775 has been "heard around the world" with a vengeance. It has waked up the whole human race. The Revolution is proceeding on a world-wide scale today, and a revolutionary world-leadership is what is now needed.

It is ironic and tragic that, in an age in which the whole world has come to be inspired by the original and authentic spirit of Americanism, America herself should have turned her back on this, and should have become the arch-conservative power in the world after having made history as the arch-revolutionary one.

What America surely needs now is a return to those original ideals that have been the sources of her greatness. The ideals of 'the organization man' would have been abhorrent to the original settlers, the founding fathers, and the pioneers alike. The economic goal proposed in the Virginia Declaration of Rights is not "affluence"; it is "frugality." The pioneers were not primarily concerned with money-making; if they had been, they could never have achieved what they did. America's need, and the world's need, today, is a new burst of American pioneering, and this time not just within the confines of a single continent but all round the globe.

America's manifest destiny in the next chapter of her history is to help the indigent majority of mankind to struggle upwards towards a better life than it has ever dreamed of in the past. The spirit that is needed for embarking on this mission is the spirit of the nineteenth-century American Christian missionaries. If this spirit is to prevail, America must treasure and foster all the creative ability that she has in her.

SPORTS SHORTS

Wrestling

In thirty years of wrestling Ursinus teams have shut-out only four opponents; this year's mat-men registered two of these shut-outs, beating, in successive meets, Johns Hopkins 34-0 on February 17 and P.M.C. 32-0 on February 24. The season record was 6-3. Other colleges conquered by the Bears were Haverford, 31-3; Lebanon Valley 25-9; Elizabethtown 26-8; and Delaware 27-3. The losses were sustained at the hands of Swarthmore, 13-15; Albright 13-17; and Drexel, 11-15.

Dick Dean, a 147 lb. junior and team captain from Norristown, closed the season by registering his eighteenth consecutive dual meet win. Fred Powers, a 157 lb. freshman from Wellsboro, had a 9-0 record. Since the entire team will return next year, the prospects for the 1963 season are promising.

Girls' Basketball

By March 12 Ursinus' court-women had defeated Temple, Immaculata, East Stroudsburg State College (twice) and the Philadelphia College of the Bible. Their sole loss was to West Chester State College.

Basketball

The Ursinus basketball team won its first, last, and middle games, posting a disappointing 3-13 record. Academic casualties were the main cause of the squad's poor showing. The single star in the otherwise dark B-ball sky was Walt Dryfoos, a junior from Hazleton, who for the second year was scoring champion in the Middle Atlantic Conference, Southern Division.

Team captain Dryfoos has established himself as one of Ursinus' all-time great basketball stars. He now holds three Ursinus College records. He bettered the most-points-in-one-season record of 313 made by Bob Swett in the 1951-52 season. Last year, Walt, in seventeen games, scored 388; this year he scored 355.

With still one more year to play, Dryfoos has already smashed the school record for the most points scored by an individual.

November 19 was Appreciation Day as our United Church of Christ, Harrisburg, recognized the retirement of the Rev. A. M. Lman, D.D., from the active pastorate. The congregation honored Dr. Billman and wife at special morning and evening services of thanksgiving.

Dr. and Mrs. Billman came to Fourth Church in Harrisburg in 1932 from the pastorate in the First Church of McKeesport, bringing their nearly 30 years' ministry in our Church. 1,317 new members have been added to the congregation, the church property has been enlarged and modernized and addition to the sanctuary was rebuilt after a disastrous fire. The staff of the church has been increased and the program of Christian witness has been expanded.

Dr. and Mrs. Billman continue to live at 15 Market St. They have two sons, John, a teacher, and Karl, '56, a local business man.

Mrs. Leighton Smith
88 Sixth Avenue
Collegeville, Pa.

Ulrich D. Rumbaugh, M.D., recently had book of his poems published, a copy of which is in the College library.

915

John H. Beltz, '15, was a delegate from the American Water Works Association to the International Water Congress in Berlin in 1961. Mr. and Mrs. Beltz were able to end several days in East Berlin prior to the "wall." After the Congress, they toured a rented car through Germany, France, Switzerland, England and Scotland. They were showing of their color slides to church or club groups.

919

Edna M. Boyd
School House Lane
Apt. 1122
Philadelphia 44, Pa.

Rebekah S. Sheaffer, since retirement from Millersville State College in 1958, has been anything but retired, for without solicitation on her part, she has actively engaged in an lied field, after-dinner speaking. To date she has addressed more than 350 different audiences and more than 35,000 people.

Miss Sheaffer's own "Lift of Laughter" is probably her most often demanded speech; she has given it over 100 times. She finds that most people want a "novelty program," and in this particular speech, she talks on humor itself, develops its psychology and illustrates it with her own experiences. Her diversified list of speeches include several on professional subjects, education in particular, one religious, "For Me and My House," two on Christmas, and general topics.

Clyde L. Schwartz
733 Marcellus Dr.
Westfield, N. J.

On January 19 dedication ceremonies were held for the new Moorestown Senior H.S. gym, which honored the school's former athletic head, Paul H. Isenberg. The tribute was held preceding the basketball game with Lenape Regional. The building was named the "Paul H. Isenberg Gymnasium" and a brochure depicting the gym and its facilities was presented to Mr. Isenberg, who was coach and athletic director for 34 years prior to his retirement in June, 1960.

First coming to South Jersey in 1926, he coached track for 27 years, football for 17 years, basketball for 16 years and baseball for 5 years.

His teams won nine county track titles, seven state relay championships, and South Jersey Group III championships in basketball and football.

1923

Mrs. Henry Beck
412 Carlton Ave.
Wyncote, Pa.

Erma Beck wishes to extend her thanks for the many holiday greetings received from classmates, especially for those with notes. The following items were gleaned from some of them.

Siegfried C. Baden is still a Hollywood sound technician, happily associated with most major studios, including Hal Roach, Metro Goldwyn Mayer, United Artists, Universal Pictures, Pathe, Fox, Samuel Goldwyn, Warner Bros., and others. At present he is working on the "Untouchables."

Ruth Hespeneide's father passed away after being confined to his bed for fourteen months. Ruth has now moved into an apartment closer to the school where she has been teaching. Her new address is 642 Pennsylvania Ave., York, Pa.

Clair Lavelle has reluctantly given up her farm "with its wonderful view, and moved into town", which she admits "has some compensations." Her new address is 1052 N.E. 104 Ave., Portland 20, Oregon.

Helen A. Snyder writes of a long vacation she enjoyed in Alaska last summer, a trip to New York for Thanksgiving, and another to Panama for the Christmas holidays, but she is glad to get back to East Carolina Teachers College, where she is happy in her work with all her "girls".

The Reverend Herbert R. Howells, pastor of the Stonehurst Hills Methodist Church, in Upper Darby, sends news of the extensive building program being undertaken there; his people are constructing a new Youth Department, a larger sanctuary, and larger study for the pastor.

1924

Mrs. Samuel T. Roeder
429 Sheridan Ave.
Roselle Park, N. J.

Edith (Fetters) Harper attended the Science Research Associates Guidance Institute in Washington, D.C., August 7 to 11, 1961, under the leadership of Dr. Anna Meeks, Director of Guidance in Baltimore County, Maryland; this was one of 14 such institutes in the United States this past summer.

Naomi (Kistler) Roeder and her husband enjoyed a wonderful vacation this past summer. They took the Saguenay-Gaspe-Bermuda Cruise, sailed from New York on the M.S. Gripholm, Swedish American Line, August 16, 1961, and returned the 25th. "The weather was ideal and the trip was just perfect," they wrote.

Randal and Helen (Reimer) Zendt flew to San Francisco by jet last summer from Floral Park, L.I., N.Y., and also visited Victoria, B.C., while on the West Coast.

Miss Ruth Kistler
1615 Chew Street
Allentown, Pa.

Ernest A. Heebner, supervising principal of the Lower Providence-Worcester Joint School System for the past three years, submitted his resignation, effective July 1. At the end of the 1961-62 term, Mr. Heebner will have been in school work for 45 years. All of it has been in Montgomery County.

While attending Norristown High School, Mr. Heebner took a teacher training course. Upon graduation in 1916 he was given an examination by J. Horace Landis, then county superintendent of schools. The successful candidate found employment as teacher in a one-room school in Towamencin Township. He was there for four years.

Mr. Heebner became principal of the Hatfield consolidated schools of township and borough. During his tenure a junior-senior high school building was erected. After filling this assignment for four years, he became supervising principal of the Worcester Township schools. In recent years a junior high school building was erected. Mr. Heebner has been with Worcester District for 34 years.

Soon after becoming supervising principal of the Lower Providence-Worcester Joint School System he began, with others, to plan for the construction of a junior-senior high school building. These plans came to fruition during the present school term with the opening of portions of the new $2 3/4 million Methacton Junior-Senior High School, Fairview Village.

Mr. Heebner received his master's degree from the University of Pennsylvania. He holds certificates as elementary school principal, high school principal, and supervising principal.

He is past president of the Montgomery County Chief School Administrators' Association. He is a member of the Pennsylvania Chief School Administrators' Association, the Eastern Chief School Administrators' Association, the Pennsylvania State Education Association, National Education Association and the A.A.S.A. He has served on various committees of those organizations.

He will retire to his farm in Worcester Township.

Dr. Elmer Herber has been at Dickinson College for 32 years, where he is head of the Biology Department, the largest science department in the College. There are 53 majors and an all Ph.D. faculty working with Dr. Herber. Everyone has a problem in research. His specialty is Parasitology and he has written some 25 papers which have been quoted in four books and about a dozen or more citations in magazines. He receives requests for reprints from countries interested in his work. He is an honorary collaborator of the Smithsonian Institution. Last summer he was awarded a research grant to work with the University of Minnesota Biological Stations. Also there have been study awards for him in Central America, Cornell University and the University of Oregon. The next Who's Who will carry his name. Kutztown State College awarded him a distinguished alumni award last year. Mrs. Herber goes with her husband on his trips and helps in his work. They have one son, who is a professor of history at George Washington University, in Washington, D.C.

1219 W. Russell St.

Walter W. Tropp was named to the Merchantville Council. Mr. Tropp, an attorney with the firm of Schantz, Tropp and Hutchinson took office on February 26. He received his law degree from Temple University and was admitted to the bar in 1939. Before entering law, he taught school for four years in Haddon Heights and Collingdale. He makes his home in Merchantville, N. J.

1935

Mrs. Joseph H. Large
R. D. No. 3
Doylestown, Pa.

Dr. C. Roger Kurtz was elected an active member of the Medical Arts Society of Metropolitan Washington on January 11. Election to membership in the society is on the basis of achievement and leadership in a physician's particular area of professional competence.

On May 4th Dr. Kurtz will receive his official parchment of membership "in recognition of his superior personal and professional qualifications and his achievements in his chosen field of medical endeavor." Membership in the society is only possible for a selected few physicians in the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area, since membership in this honorary medical group is limited to a total of fifty. Another Ursinus alumnus, Dr. Henry P. Laughlin, '38, is currently serving a second term as secretary-treasurer of the Medical Arts Society.

E. Wayne Covert of 1415 Bryant Lane, Meadowbrook, Pa., vice-president of claims for the Harleyville Insurance Companies, has been appointed chairman of the Committee on Insurance of the Pennsylvania State Chamber of Commerce. 1936

Mrs. Lachman Rinehart
56 Pinetree Way
Belmar, N. J.

Helen (Laubenstein) Marshall writes, "From July 31, 1961 to June of 1962, we have a Turkish Exchange student staying in our home as one of our family. He is a very mature 17 years and a most intelligent boy. He is the son of a judge in Trabzon, Turkey, where we Americans have many radar installations. It is a most rewarding experience for all concerned. Our student's name is Mustafa Ergencyu.

Tuition at the University of Turkey is free, but students have to take an extremely stiff entrance examination and only the cream of the crop get a university education."

Dr. Henry A. W. Schaefer assumed the pastorate of first U.C.C. in Sunbury, Pa., on February 1 and was installed on February 25. He had been pastor of Bethany Church Bethlehem, since 1948. He succeeds the Rev. Grant E. Harvitt, '46, who was pastor in Sunbury for the past seven years. Dr. Schaefer's daughter Ethel Kathryn will enter Ursinus as a Freshman in the Fall.

1937 Plans 25th Reunion

Plans were developed recently for a bi-twenty-fifth reunion of the Class of 1912 and their guests. Each member is hereby notified to mark the appointment book now with a "must attend" note for Saturday, June 2, 1962, at Collegeville. A preliminary mailing is planned to supply information about the class since graduation. Further details will follow.

Participation in the Alumni Day activities on campus will include a get-together with other classes of the thirties. A class group tournament in the afternoon is optional. The required courses will start with a social hour at 5:30 p.m. to be followed by a banquet at the Spring-Ford Country Club, Royersford.

A booklet with current data about every classmate will be distributed at the reunion. It is essential that a questionnaire now being prepared be answered promptly upon receipt.

A successful twentieth anniversary luncheon in 1957 brought forth the idea of getting everyone together this year. Preparations for a gala celebration demand special effort by every member to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Rahn (Virginia Beck) '38) and their three children have moved into their new home at 19 Indian Run, Scotch Plains, N. J. Their daughter, Cathryn, is a freshman in the College of Home Economics at Michigan State University, Lansing.
