I invite your thoughtful reading of the lead article in this issue of the Journal. It is a success story of our latest adventure in the exciting field of education.

The ten-year history of our Evening School is an impressive one, judged simply from the statistical record. Beyond the simple statistical picture are implications which our alumni and friends will quickly recognize.

Our faculty and facilities are involved to a degree approximating maximum use and operation. This is a condition that has a strong appeal to everybody who respects efficiency. It also makes for an economical operation.

Through the Evening School the College is serving two communities, the individuals who are enrolled, and those who employ them. In the 1962 spring term, for example, the 395 students came from 83 southeastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey communities, and among them were employees of 197 business and industrial firms and 23 schools and school systems. I have been particularly pleased that a large number of housewives are working for a baccalaureate degree and that a fair number of students elect each year to study courses in religion.

Moreover, these students without doubt help to make the name of Ursinus College better known where they live and where they work. It is evident that the Evening School meets a real need.

The success of this department of our college is due in large measure to the exceptional capabilities of its director, Dr. William J. Phillips. In Dr. Phillips we have additional convincing evidence that a competent scholar can be an able administrator.

As it enters the second decade of offering significant educational opportunity to ambitious people who are already a part of the workaday world, I salute the Evening School, its director, its faculty, and its student body.

WHEN THE SHADES OF EVENING GATHER

by WILLIAM J. PHILLIPS

A ten years' retrospect of the Evening School leaves me with a feeling that I certainly never had during the first two or three years of its existence. I recall that summer of 1952 when the organization of it was going forward and newspaper and direct mail publicity was being prepared and sent forth.

I can well remember the discouraging evenings—two weeks of them—when I sat in the office disappointed and depressed because we were not deluged with applications or even encouraged with more than an occasional person seeking information. In those evenings the custodian of the building during the evening hours—an Englishman by birth, and a former horse and dog man with racing and fox hunting tags behind him—used to come in and hear me up by the hour with fetching tales of a life I had read about but actually knew very little of.

As Evening School opened that fall of 1952 we had an enrollment of only 5 students in 9 courses. Our faculty consisted of 9 instructors. Five years later the enrollment was 240 students enrolled in 24 courses, while this year there are 484 students in 37 courses. The Evening School faculty now numbers 34.

In one of this year's courses, First Year English, there are four sections with a combined enrollment of 89; in another, Economic Principles, three sections totaling 76 students; in another, Fundamentals of Accounting, three sections totaling 60 students. All this is very different from the situation of a few years ago, when we were not always sure there was going to be a large enough registration to enable us to hold even one section.

The significance of this remarkable growth must be evident to everyone.

From its inception the Evening School had sought to make college work available to men and women employed in business and industry, to teachers in service, and to the general public. It therefore has emphasized courses in liberal arts, and in business administration, and in fields closely related to business administration, such as economics in its wide varieties, political science, history, English composition, and public speaking. As time went on, however, it became apparent that the needs of the public were so many and varied that additions to the curriculum would have to be made.

Among the first additions were non-credit courses in elementary and intermediate algebra and plane geometry. These were included primarily for students who had never taken them in high school or who needed refresher work before attempting the college mathematics they needed in their jobs, or to enter science courses at the college level. These non-credit courses have been well attended from the start, and have recently become so popular the enrollment in them has had to be limited.

William J. Phillips, Director of the Evening School since its founding in 1952 and author of this article, received his B.S., M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Pennsylvania, where he later served in the Department of English. He has been teaching at Ursinus since 1946, and was the College registrar from 1948 to 1952.

Dr. Richard M. Fletcher, professor of psychology, must not be talking about Freud at the moment!

Additions and extensions to Evening School courses in accounting and business law, and the inclusion of courses in industrial traffic management, electronic data processing, and computer programming have been made this year in response to popular demand. Next year additional courses are planned, including organic chemistry.

At first it was thought that only a certificate of proficiency would be available to Evening School students. Later it seemed desirable to award the degree of associate in business administration to students whose secondary school education had provided them with at least fifteen acceptable high school credits (the same number as that required for admission to candidacy for a baccalaureate degree). At the same time, the certificate of proficiency remained available to students who pursued integrated programs of study, but whose high school courses had not provided at least the required fifteen acceptable credits.

Only two certificates of proficiency have so far been awarded. The great majority of our Evening School students appear to desire to make up high school credits if they need them, so as to qualify for at least the associate degree. Many are planning to go on to the bachelor's degree.

The student body of the Evening School is interestingly constituted of business executives and employees, factory workers, laboratory technologists and technicians, teachers, housewives, students who for one reason or another found it impossible to attend college full time, laborers, and in one case a mother whose son is in the day school and who wishes to set him an example.

In addition to members of the regular Ursinus faculty the Evening School has drawn thirteen teachers from the outside. These include one public school teacher, a sales representative of a large business machines corporation, a production manager of a large manufacturing firm, a distinguished attorney with an international reputation, and several accountants, one of whom owns his own firm. Of the foregoing most have advanced degrees and past teaching experience.

This term the student body live in 96 communities and work for 233 different organizations. Norristown provides 89 of our students, Pottstown 60, Lansdale 57, Phoenixville 40, and Collegeville 21. The top five employers provide 26, 16, 15, 12, and 11 students each. There are 24 housewives and 5 who list themselves simply as "students."

Despite the time and effort and money that have been expended on Evening School publicity, it would seem that our best advertisement has been good public relations and satisfied students. One of our students has been responsible for more than a dozen others coming to us. Others have helped in the same way, and numbers of them have told us how work they have taken and are taking here has benefitted them in their jobs.

The Evening School Office has provided some interesting and enlightening information. At present we have a student who is middle aged and whose early educational background was practical rather than academic. Now he has decided that he must have a degree, even though he will be nearly sixty by the time he receives it. And before he can do so he must return to high school and make up credits. One cannot help being heartened by such things.

The only office assistants of the Evening School have been "self-help" students to whom it would be impossible to give sufficient credit. Their conscientiousness, their interest, their loyalty, and their efficiency have played a large part in the success of this department of the College.

And now for a look at the future. If the present rate of growth continues, and it might easily do so, it is conceivable that by the hundredth anniversary of the college the enrollment of the Evening School could equal that of the full time day students.

This, of course, would pose new problems of classrooms and teachers and general services. However great a challenge all this might be, it is certain to be met with a positive, constructive attitude, based upon service to the community.

Registration is a pain in the neck: Notice the student standing to the left of the center of the picture.

Chief McClure

One of the most interesting students enrolled in the evening school this year is Richard M. McClure, chief of police of Collegeville and a familiar figure to many recent graduates of Ursinus.

Perhaps it was more than coincidence that brought him to enroll in the course listed as "Municipal Government and Administration," since the professor is Dr. G. Sieber Pancoast, the present mayor of Collegeville!

However, Chief McClure explains his decision to enroll very simply by saying, "I think that the more knowledge a man has about government the better citizen he is likely to be."

In enrolling at Ursinus College Chief McClure is picking up an educational story which was interrupted thirty-six years ago when, after two years at the University of Notre Dame as an arts and journalism student, he had to drop out due in part to a prolonged bout with appendicitis and the aftermath of surgery. He was a 1924 graduate of the Clearfield, Pa., high school.

He was a member of the boxing team at Notre Dame and in 1925 beat the Naval Academy inter-collegiate champion in his class. After leaving Notre Dame, he was for five years employed by the Pennsylvania and Philadelphia highway departments; for about three years of that time he engaged in professional boxing, first in the welter-weight class, later as a heavyweight. He claims only two defeats in twenty professional bouts.

He quit professional boxing when in January, 1931, he entered the Philadelphia Police Academy, from which he graduated the following June. He served almost twenty-two years in the Philadelphia Police Department, first as a patrolman, later for five years in the detective bureau as a plain-clothesman. The last nine years of his service he was a street sergeant; one year he acted as captain of his division.

He was a member of what came to be called the "Shooey Malone Squad" named after James Malone, then director of public safety. It was labelled the "little mob" by the gangsters and hoodlums of the post-Prohibition era because this squad of special officers proved able to meet the criminal element and deal with it on the only terms gangsterism of those days understood.

Retiring from the Philadelphia police force in February, 1953, Mr. McClure took the Collegeville post in May, 1954.

Chief and Mrs. McClure with daughter Nancy, 13, and son Wilson, 11, live on Collegeville Road in Skippack Township.

All four are interested in horses, but Wilson is not yet quite old enough to join his parents and sister as a member of the Kimberton and Ridge Hunts. Mrs. McClure engages professionally in equestrian instruction and is active as a 4-H Club leader, while both she and daughter Nancy ride professionally at area horse shows.

Chief McClure describes Collegeville as "a nice town whose citizenry as a whole is of a very high type. We have very little juvenile delinquency, and any criminal acts usually can be traced to outsiders."

Police Chief Richard M. McClure

Dr. Phillips' day goes long into the night. Here he is seen approving a student's change of course.

The article below is an intelligent response to Dr. Toynbee's article entitled "Has America Neglected Her Creative Minority?" which appeared in the Spring issue of the Alumni Journal.

Richard P. Richter was graduated cum laude in 1953 from Ursinus. He received an M.A. in English Literature in 1957 from the University of Pennsylvania, where he studied under a University Scholarship.

Married and the father of a two year old daughter, he is at present editor of the Philadelphia Gas Works News.

THE FRONTIER DR. TOYNBEE FORGOT

by RICHARD P. RICHTER, '53

In his essay on America's neglected creative minority (Spring '62 Journal), Dr. Arnold Toynbee raised some important questions about American life and gave some answers which, to at least one reader, were less than complete.

Commenting about the high premium on social conformity, he joined with American social critics in lamenting that "the conventionally approved career for an American born into the affluent majority of the American people is to make money as the employee of a business corporation within the rigid framework of the existing social and economic order."

In a nation where the production of goods undergirds our whole society, this fact is hardly surprising. How else will the majority of our people apply their energies if not in the offices and plants and laboratories of our industrial world? The business corporation is our basic social institution. It is the medium that enables the majority of our population to build meaningful relationships with contemporary society.

Dr. Toynbee certainly knows this, but fails to take it into account in his essay.

He dismisses American business by tentatively describing it as "rigid" and then as "dismal." He urges the creative minority to turn from conformist corporation life and become new American pioneers, who, armed with a 19th-century-missionary-like zeal, will go out and help remake mankind around the world.

Dr. Toynbee fails to give due weight to two important and related facts. First, America's ability to help mankind hinges rather largely upon the vitality of our commerce and industry. Second, this vitality cannot be instilled by mediocre corporation men; members of the creative minority are needed to generate it.

In short, one of the most important frontiers for the regeneration of American society is right in conformity's own back yard—the business corporation. When a member of the creative minority enters business, Dr. Toynbee seems to fear that another soldier for constructive change will be crushed under the dead weight of the organization. Another possibility, which he overlooks, is that the gifted individual may well be creative and resourceful enough to help move the organization off dead center. After gaining a position from which leverage can be applied, he may well maneuver it into a more constructive place in American life.

This is not to minimize the existence of strong pressures on the individual to channel his thoughts and his personal behavior along an accepted norm. But it would be quite alien to the pioneering spirit that Dr. Toynbee invokes, if, when faced with these pressures, the creative individual immediately dropped his guns and either surrendered or turned on his heels and fled. No frontier was ever won thus.

If the vested interest of the business organization has become a potential threat to our national mission, the American thing to do is not to take all our best spirits and shuttle them to the rice paddies of Asia and the jungle villages of Africa, where they will be safe from the domestic malady. This would not only deprive some people of suitable fields for their creative bent; it would also assure the complete petrification of our business institutions by leaving them entirely to the mediocrities we all deplore.

Providing his call for world pioneers is answered by the creative minority, Dr. Toynbee seems unconcerned about the lasting effects of the "rigid framework of the existing social and economic order" which he has pinpointed. Yet he certainly knows that America's future is inextricably linked up with our business activity. What path will business cut for itself? Will it operate in a narrow, selfish sphere, heedless of the larger goals and problems of the whole of American society? Or will it pursue its special purposes as an integral and responsible part of the nation at large? The answers will be provided by the people who will lead the business world and shape its principles.

Those people should come from the creative minority. And to believe that our business institutions are so rigid that they can stifle all of our best spirits is surely to misread America. It has been demonstrated that the modern American business corporation can be made to respond to the challenge of a creative individual. It is not only possible but increasingly necessary, if our society is to remain healthy.

Let's join Dr. Toynbee in encouraging a new burst of American pioneering all round the globe. Let's also recognize that we need some first-rate pioneers on the home frontier.

FOUNDERS' DAY

The Founders' Day convocation on November 4 emphasized the church relationship of the college since its founding in 1869 by a group of German Reformed pastors and laymen, and honored the name of the 16th century reformer, Zacharias Ursinus, after whom the college was named.

Dr. James I. McCord, president of Princeton Theological Seminary, gave the address on "The Heidelberg Catechism: An Ecumenical Confession". Ursinus was the primary if not the sole author of this catechism which was brought to America by early German and Swiss Reformed immigrants and is still in use among churches of the Reformed constituency in the recently established United Church of Christ.

Four representative churchmen, including Dr. McCord, received honorary degrees at the convocation.

Dr. McCord, who was given the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters (L.H.D.), was cited as "a leading exponent of the Calvinistic tradition in Protestantism" who "on the other hand . . . exemplifies the concern of the great historical confessional bodies to find and walk on the common ground of essential Christian faith."

Theodore Raymond Schwalm, Lancaster, Pa., industrialist, was honored as "a distinguished layman of the Evangelical and Reformed constituency in the United Church of Christ who typifies the strength which a devoted lay member can bring to the whole wide scope of the Christian mission in our times." He was given the degree of Doctor of Laws (LL.D.).

The Rev. Walter King Beattie, '23, pastor of the Indian Creek United Church of Christ near Souderton, Pa., and the Rev. Roy Clark Snyder, '41, Frederick, Md., president of Potomac Synod of the United Church of Christ, were given honorary Doctor of Divinity degrees (D.D.).

The Rev. Mr. Beattie was cited for having "magnified the office and work of the parish ministry on which so largely the spiritual health of the churches depends", while the Rev. Mr. Snyder was honored for his "sensitivity to the major areas of Christian concern and responsibility, skill in the conduct of synodical affairs, and imagination during a period of change in denominational life."

Dr. William D. Reimert, '24, managing editor of the Allentown, Pa., Call-Chronicle newspapers and president of the Board of Directors of Ursinus College, presided at the convocation.

In welcoming the guests and introducing the speaker, he noted that "we are recalling today the historic relationship of Ursinus College to the Christian communion in which it was founded and which in so many ways has nurtured it through the years." He pointed out that the convocation was being held "on the eve of the year when here in the United States, in Britain, Europe, and elsewhere in the world where Reformed and Presbyterian Churches are found, there will be special religious services, academic lectures, and other observances of the 400th anniversary of the publication of The Heidelberg Catechism."

Noting that the constitution of the College states that its "religious and moral principles shall always be . . . in essential historical harmony with the principles represented by him whose distinguished name the College bears," Dr. Reimert asserted that "this provision does not place constricting limitations on us." He recalled that when Dr. Eugen Carson Blake made his proposal for church union on which four denominations are now negotiating, Dr. Blake mentioned the Heidelberg Catechism as one which might offer an "acceptable formula" and become "the confession of the whole church."

In addition to the conferring of honorary degrees the program of the convocation included graduation of six students who over the summer had completed the requirements for the bachelor degree; forty-nine students were cited for having achieved the Dean's Honor List for the two preceding semesters.

Title-page of the first English language edition of the lectures on the Heidelberg Catechism by Zacharias Ursinus, cherished possession of the Ursinus College library. The volume, published in 1595 at Oxford, was presented to the college by the noted English Congregational scholar, Dr. Nathaniel Micklem, following his series of lectures before the 1941 session of the Collegeville Summer Assembly.

RALPH F. WISMER DIES

Ralph F. Wismer, attorney-at-law and treasurer of Ursinus College, died September 10 after an illness of several months. He would have been 81 years old on November 29. His only survivor is his wife, Elizabeth (Smith) Wismer.

Graduated from Ursinus College in 1905, he read law with the late J. Carroll Hoover, of Norristown, and was one of the last remaining county attorneys who did not receive a formal law school training to qualify for his profession. He maintained a law office in Norristown.

A member of the Board of Directors of Ursinus College since 1938, Mr. Wismer had been college treasurer since 1941. The college awarded him an honorary Doctor of Laws degree in 1955.

An active participant in the life of the Collegeville-Trappe community, he was a charter member of the Trappe

Fire Company and a past president of the Collegeville Lions Club, of which he was a member for more than thirty years. He had been a justice of the peace in Trappe for the past eighteen years and from 1924 to 1960 was solicitor to the Montgomery County Treasurer. Active professionally in spite of his advanced years, he was at the time of his death borough secretary in Trappe and solicitor for the borough and school board of that community.

A lifetime member of St. Luke's United Church of Christ in Trappe, he had served as treasurer and trustee of the congregation and for fifty years as a teacher in the Sunday School.

The local newspaper, in noting the passing of Mr. Wismer, called him, "a man of quiet and reserved persuasion."

According to newspaper reports Ursinus College will receive his entire estate, which was tentatively listed at $75,000.

URSINUS: THE MAN AND HIS WORK

The Church in which the German Synod adopted the Heidelberg Catechism in 1562.

Ursinus College was named for Zacharias Ursinus (1534-1583), a German theologian who, along with Caspar Olevianus, a colleague at the University of Heidelberg, was commissioned to write a catechism which would help to bridge the gap between the Calvinistic and Lutheran positions.

The Heidelberg Catechism, the resulting document, was largely the product of Ursinus' mind and hand. 1963 marks the 400th anniversary of the Heidelberg Catechism, and throughout the year churches of the Reformed tradition will be celebrating this fact.

Born in Breslau, Ursinus (whose surname was "Baer" before he latinized it) studied at the University of Wittenberg under Melancthon from 1550 till 1557. He began his work as principal of the "Collegium Sapientiae" at Heidelberg in 1561, a position he held until 1576, when, after the death of Frederick III, he, along with six hundred other Reformed ministers and teachers in the Palatinate, was deposed. With other university colleagues, he fled to Neustadt, where he established a theological school under the protection of Frederick's second son, John Casimir, who in 1583 (the year Ursinus died) succeeded his Lutheran brother in the Electorate, recalled the exiled preachers, and reestablished the Reformed Church in the Palatinate.

The catechism which Ursinus wrote was commissioned by Frederick III (1515-1576), later called "the pious," who in 1599 became the Elector of the Palatinate. He was the first German prince to profess the Reformed doctrine, as distinct from the Lutheran position. He reshuffled the university faculty and directed twenty-eight year old Ursinus and twenty-six year old Olevianus to prepare an evangelical catechism which, he hoped, would be satisfactory to his subjects.

Olevianus, whose role in preparing the catechism was minimal, began his work at Heidelberg in 1560. He taught theology at the University and was the court preacher and the Elector's chief counselor. He had studied law at Paris (where he had saved Frederick's son from drowning) and theology at Zurich and Geneva under Calvin.

In December, 1562, Frederick submitted the catechism to a general synod which he had assembled in Heidelberg. Meeting in the Church of the Holy Ghost, and after a few minor revisions, the synod approved the work, and it was published in German early in 1563.

Its irenic spirit, its theological depth and its disarming simplicity made it an immediate success. Since its appearance 400 years ago, it has been one of the most widely used documents of the Reformed confessions. And it is still considered an important catechism among people of the Reformed communions.

Ursinus developed lectures based on his catechism which he revised and delivered annually. These lecture notes were later arranged by his friend and disciple, David Pareus, who published them in 1591 under the title of The Commentary of Dr. Zacharias Ursinus on the Heidelberg Catechism.

NEW PROFESSORS

Five new teachers have joined the faculty this fall, it was announced by Dr. Donald L. Helfferich.

The five include Enrique A. Garcia, instructor in Spanish, Eberhard H.

Geiger, part-time instructor in German, Elmer C. Hoffman, instructor in economics, Ross G. Penna, instructor in mathematics, and Dr. John C. Vorrath, Jr., associate professor of romance languages.

Mr. Garcia, a native of Bolivia, came to the United States in 1956 as an exchange student and was graduated in 1960 from Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn. He also attended the University of Oruru, Bolivia, did graduate work at Bucknell University while he was an instructor at Lycoming College, and is currently doing graduate work at the University of Delaware.

Mr. Geiger, who lives at 128 Powderhorn Rd., King of Prussia, is a graduate of the Universities of Tübingen and Munich in Germany and is currently engaged in graduate study at the University of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Hoffman, 11 Clamer Ave., Collegeville, is a graduate of the Wharton School of Business and has a master's degree in education from the University of Pennsylvania. From 1931 to 1956 he taught accounting at Norristown High School. He was formerly associated with the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia and the Provident Traders Bank and Trust Company.

Mr. Penna is a graduate of the University of Toronto and of the Ontario College of Education. He has been teaching at the Ogontz unit of the Pennsylvania State University.

Dr. Vorrath, a native of Ramsey, N.J., has his graduate and undergraduate degrees from Yale University. For the past ten years he taught at the University of Delaware. Prior to his teaching career he served with the United State Consular Service in East Africa, Angola, and Latin America.

MAURICE O. BONE

Professor Maurice O. Bone, professor of economics at Ursinus since 1929 and adviser to the Economics and Business Administration Department, died on September 8.

Loved and respected by the entire Ursinus community, he was a warm and genuine person, whose friendly smile and patience are already sorely missed. A member of the Class of 1962, now in graduate school, wrote, when he learned of Professor Bone's death, "A finer teacher and man did not walk the campus."

Prior to coming to Ursinus, Mr. Bone taught at Northwestern University, where he spent both his undergraduate and graduate years.

He is survived by his wife, the former Lucille Hunt, who is a secretary in the Ursinus College alumni office.

The following memorial minute on the death of Professor Maurice O. Bone was adopted at the meeting of the Faculty on September 24, 1962:

In the death of Professor Maurice Oberlin Bone the College has lost a devoted and experienced teacher and this faculty has lost a respected and beloved colleague. Professor Bone came to Ursinus in 1929, and for thirty-three years gave faithful service in a department which at his coming was only beginning to assume the importance it now has in the pattern of our curriculum. That importance is in large measure the fruit of his labors. As we mourn his passing we testify to his faithfulness, his integrity, his quiet humor, his balanced and dispassionate judgment. Firm but not partisan in his convictions, he always placed the higher, permanent aims of the College above temporary or adventitious goals. He exemplified the idealism, the intellectual honesty, the devotion to truth which are the hallmarks of a truly civilized man and teacher. We shall miss him.

Report From The Admissions Office

The freshman class at Ursinus numbers 290, according to Mr. Geoffrey Dolman, director of admissions.

"We have a total enrollment of 982, which is the highest in the history of the college, with the exception of the first several post-war years when the flood of GI students were here," commented Mr. Dolman.

There are seven transfer students, and twenty special students. The 55-45 ratio of male to female students continues to be maintained.

Mr. Dolman pointed out that this year's enrollment represents the absolute maximum of girls the college can enroll at present and that twelve male students are being housed in private homes near the campus.

HOMECOMING

Sun-drenched and victory-quenched, the largest crowd of alumni to return to Ursinus in recent history were treated to a bag-full of tricks by the Whatley-coached men who scrubbed highly-touted Swarthmore to a 14-8 shellacking.

Merrily, 3,500 fans rooted and tooted, warmly appreciating an afternoon full of fun.

Striking for two early touchdowns, then calling upon its defensive resources to repulse the rival's rally, Ursinus registered one of the great football wins in recent Grizzly history.

Swarthmore, winner of three straight, was jolted early when Ron Ritz, '64, blasted into the end zone from six yards out in the first period. A pass attempt at the two-point conversion failed and Ursinus led 6-0.

The Grizzlies struck through the air for their second score, when Ron Emmert, '64, hit Tony Sermarini, '64, for a 16-yard TD effort in the second period. Sermarini did some fancy work to get into paydirt. The same combo, Emmert-to-Sermarini, clicked for the two extra points, and Ursinus led 14-0 at half-time.

Swarthmore, unable to move in via offensive momentum, hit the scoreboard in the third quarter by picking up a blocked punt and romping 16 yards for a TD.

Ursinus defense held the Garnet at bay the rest of the way; in fact the defense, hitting hard, forced three Swarthmore fumbles during the afternoon.

The half-time parade of fraternity queens was climaxed by the crowning of Sue Miller, '63, as the Queen of queens.

After the game several thousand fans adjourned to the New Gym for refreshments. More than one-hundred Loyalty Fund Class Chairmen and Vice-Chairmen attended the Kick-Off Dinner at 5:30 p.m. in the College dining hall.

Young and old alike twisted to modern tunes at the Varsity Club dance in the evening.

News of Preceptresses

Three well-known and well-liked preceptresses retired in June: Mrs. Lloyd A. Hazlett, who returned to her former home, 43 Elm Street, Warsaw, N.Y.; Mrs. John H. McCandless, who now resides in Apartment 220, Jerico Manor on Highland Ave., in Jenkintown; and Mrs. Samuel Buckwalter, whose present address is Buckwalter Road, Phoenixville, Pa.

The three new preceptresses are: Mrs. Brainard Benner, Thompsettown, Pa. She was formerly a Resident Head at Pine Manor Junior College, Wellesley, Massachusetts. Mrs. Benner is in charge of Stauffer Hall.

Mrs. Herbert Jones, Palm, Pennsylvania. Mrs. Jones was a practical nurse in hospitals in California and Massachusetts and has attended private patients in Pennsylvania. She is in charge of Clamer Hall.

Mrs. Clarence E. Walck, Sr., Norristown, Pennsylvania. Mrs. Walck was associated with a junior high school in Norristown and substituted as preceptress on various occasions last year. She is the head of Shreiner Hall.

Sue Miller, '63, the Homecoming Queen sponsored by Demas, is a political science major from Johnstown, Pa.

More than 5,000 telephone calls in behalf of the Mental Health Association of Southeastern Pennsylvania were made by 120 Ursinus students in May, 1962. SUMMER MAINTENANCE

During the summer the following projects were completed, reports Russ Remig, Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds:

Hobson Hall was completely renovated. Wall paper was removed, all rooms were painted, and two new tiled bathrooms were installed. The home also got a new oil burner and additional electrical circuits and outlets. A new roof was put on Duryea.

Shreiner Hall had two new tiled bathrooms installed. A new oil burner was installed in Clamer. 944 received a new coat of paint, from top to bottom, on the inside. All rooms and halls of Fetterolf House were repapered, a new roof was added, and the oil burner was rebuilt.

Brodbeck renovation, begun in 1961, was completed; all rooms and halls were repainted and linoleum was laid on the floor corridors. New furniture was also placed in all rooms. The exterior of the Library was repainted and waterproofed and new fire alarms were installed.

Bomberger Hall also had its exterior repainted and waterproofed. Vinyl tile was installed on landings and second floor hallways. Eighty-eight new tablet arm chairs were placed in two classrooms. In Rec Center a partition was built to form a "TV Corner."

Pfahler Hall's basement corridor and basement classroom ceilings were repainted, and the basement physics laboratory was partitioned into two smaller classrooms and two new offices, for Dr. Snyder and Mr. Marsteller. Fluorescent lighting was installed and all cabinets were painted in the Chemistry Lab. New electrical and gas outlets were installed on the tables in the Comp. Anat. Lab. All first-floor blackboards in the building were resurfaced.

Fluorescent lighting was installed in the offices of the Vice President and the Alumni Secretary. The old alumni office was repaired and furnished as two faculty offices. New concrete sidewalks were laid at Duryea, 620, 646 and 724 Main Street. All lockers and locker rooms in both gymnasiums were repaired and repainted.

CO-EDS WORK WITH INDIANS

Among the interesting summer jobs held by Ursinus students, few were more demanding or rewarding than the work done by four co-eds at an elementary boarding school for Indian children in Wahpeton, North Dakota.

For nine weeks these girls lived with the children and, without financial remuneration, taught them basic courses in English, history and social studies.

PARENTS' DAY

The second annual Parents' Day, held on October 12, brought hundreds of parents of present day students to the campus. A section of the over-flow crowd is pictured below.

After the Bears downed Johns Hopkins 20-12 on the gridiron, students and parents joined faculty members for refreshments in the new Gym. All dormitories and college buildings were open for the visitors.

In the picture below, Dick Dean, '63, can be seen surveying the crowd from his vantage point above the news booth.

THE BREAD AND WINE MISSION

by JOHN M. MATLAGA, '55

During the past decade Protestant churches in America have become increasingly aware of the harsh fact that they have been isolated from many communities in our culture. Urban man, especially the man of the inner-city, had been completely forgotten by the established denominations. The intellectual communities of our colleges and universities had been fed talk of "spiritual values" while they soared far ahead of such meaningless generalities. The kind of Christianity which could take the rigors of intellectual analysis and search was unknown to them. These groups serve only to illustrate the fact that American culture has become a pagan culture, and the church's involvement in it has been about as powerful as the drop of orange dye in the blue Pacific!

The awareness of these special groups and the nascent flirtation between seminary professors and the works of contemporary writers led to the realization that the church must have some kind of creative contact with the artistic community. The Great Divorce between the church and the arts had to be faced squarely. Recognizing its own lack of contact with the world, the church suddenly discovered that the modern artist had maintained that contact and he could reveal to us the real condition of our time. Some few churchmen realized that the puritanical rejection of the arts, coupled with Protestantism's acceptance of all that was mediocre in architecture, music and painting, would have to be thrown out the nineteenth-century stained glass window through which the church was seeing the world. Men like Paul Tillich, Amos Wilder, Tom Driver and Nathan Scott had already pointed up the artist's unique apprehension of the world and his ability to speak to the world through his work. The Great Gap of almost three hundred years was being closed—at least on one level. It was time that the church's concern for the artist become particular, concrete and alive. A minister must be sent to such a community. Thus, the Bread and Wine Mission was begun.

The Mission is a ministry of the Northern California Conference of the United Church of Christ and the Board for Homeland Ministries of the United Church to the artistic community of San Francisco. The project was begun in the summer of 1958 by the Rev. Pierre H. Delattre, who served as minister of the Mission until his resignation in the spring of 1960. After finishing my work at Union Theological Seminary in New York City I came to resume the work in August, 1960.

The ministry here has always been carried on outside the accepted structures of the church. There is no church building with an established membership, no clubs or groups, no fund raising, no church school. The cultural success standards of large numbers, large budgets and large buildings have no relevance for this ministry. There is a geographical parish, the North Beach area of the city, and there is also the whole Bohemian community, which spreads throughout the city.

For three years the work has been centered in a storefront, known simply as "The Mission." It is in this place that we have held poetry readings, play readings, and discussion meetings. In addition, exhibitions of works by painters, sculptors and photographers are also held. The storefront serves also as the center for the "conversational ministry," which is the heart of the project's life. By meeting and talking with people, for the most part artists who have committed themselves to their craft, opportunities develop for much that is meaningful and even theological. Only after the barriers of distrust and hostility are broken down can there be any real speaking and hearing. By his very nature the artist is sensitive to the religious aspects of man's life. And only by talking about these things to one who has some training and concern in these areas can he test his views of Christianity and its place in our culture. Needless to say, many are shocked to find a minister who can be honestly and openly critical of the church and who can see it is bound to many of the most unfortunate and un-Christian goals of our society. The greatest shock comes, however, when they find that this minister has committed himself to the church and her gospel in spite of the false gods so many of our churches worship.

One way of making the church's concern with the arts concrete is by the commissioning of works of art. Therefore, the Mission has commissioned two works by San Francisco artists. The first is a large metal Chi Rho which hangs in the Mission. The Chi Rho is an ancient Christian symbol, a monogram for the name Christ. The stylized, contemporary rendering of this symbol that hangs in the storefront is a constant reminder that the Mission is an expression of the church of Christ.

The second commission which sprang from the work of the Mission was a grant to a young composer to write a Missa Brevis. The stipulations of the commission were that the composition be short enough to be used in a worship service and that it be written with the needs and limitations of the volunteer church choir in mind. Both of these conditions were admirably met by the composer, Neil Pace.

The first performance of the new music was given in a service of Holy Communion held in early March at the Mill Valley Community Church, Mill Valley, California. The chancel choir sang the parts of the liturgy traditionally assigned to them. This event was a high point in the life of the Mission because it incarnated another aspect of the Mission's ministry. That is to say, the work of this experimental ministry is also aimed at the churches of the immediate area as well as throughout the country. If it can be said that as a minister of the church we interpret Christianity to the artistic community, then it must also be said that we seek to interpret the arts—and the contribution of the artist—to the church. By speaking, teaching and leading seminars we are constantly trying to show church people the exciting contribution the artist makes to our faith and to our understanding of ourselves and our world.

One of the most encouraging encounters with a local church that I personally have had was the establishment of a group of lay people at the Pilgrim Congregational Church in Redding, California, to read and present plays that have significance to the church. This group has persisted under the leadership of a layman and proves, to me, that any church can have good drama as a meaningful part of its life.

A twelve-week series of television shows, sponsored by a local commercial station and our Conference in cooperation with the State Council of Churches, was another way that our ministry reached out to the wider community of the Bay Area. The show was called "Religion and the Arts," and the series ran from January to April, 1962. I served as producer and host on all of the telecasts. We dealt with the specific problems of religious art in half-hour shows devoted to painting, sculpture, music, drama and the liturgical arts. By having guest artists on the show to discuss their work, and by using the time to show as much of their work as possible, I believe that we succeeded in effectively dramatizing the church's concern for all of the arts.

In terms of the literary arts the Mission has begun publishing a new quarterly journal called Lagos Review. I serve as an editor along with two fine, young writers. The first issue received many favorable comments and contained poetry, short stories, an essay and a satire by previously unpublished authors. The scope of the magazine is not limited by any dogma, aesthetic or otherwise, and we hope to attract writers who live in all parts of the country. At present we are fiercely at work on our second issue!

All I can hope for in this work at the Bread and Wine Mission, and all that the church anywhere can hope for, is that we fulfill our mission and our ministry as faithfully as we can. To that end all of us, as members of Christ's church, work.

In the center of the picture on the right is the author of this article, John M. Mattaga. This scene shows Mr. Mattaga in a San Francisco TV studio, discussing the relationship of Christianity to the arts.

At Ursinus Mr. Mattaga was president of the "Y" and a member of Cub and Key. He received his B.D. degree from Union Theological Seminary, N.Y.C., and, before going to the Bread and Wine Mission, worked for one year in the East Harlem Protestant Parish and served for two years at the Broadway Tabernacle (U.C.C.) in New York City.

Prehistoric Times

Little is known about higher education during the Stone Age, which is perhaps just as well.

Because of a weakness in the liberal arts, the B.A. was not offered, and there was only the B.S., or Bachelor of Stones. Laboratory facilities were meager, owing to a lack of government contracts and support from private industry, but the stars were readily available, on clear nights, for those interested in astronomy. (Scholars, who went around without much on, looked at the stars with the naked eye.)

Prehistoric students, being before history, failed to comprehend the fundamentals of the subject, such as its being divided into Ancient, Medieval, and Modern.

There were no College Boards. This was fortunate, because without saw or plane, boards were rough.

Nor were there any fraternities. The only clubs on the campus were those carried by the students or, in self-defense, by members of the faculty.

Alumni organizations were in their infancy, where some of them have remained. The alumni secretary occupied a small cave, left behind when the director of development moved to a larger one. While waiting for contributions to come in, he idly doodled on the wall, completely unaware that art critics would someday mistake his drawings of certain members of the board of trustees for dinosaurs and saber-toothed tigers.

The Classical Period

In ancient Athens everyone knew Greek, and in ancient Rome everyone knew Latin, even small children—which those who have taken Elementary Greek or Elementary Latin will find hard to believe. Universities wishing to teach a language which had little practical use but was good for mental discipline could

Mr. Armour, the well-known author of twenty-two books of humor and satire, wrote this article last year when in Japan. He reports that it was written "in an unheated Zan Buddhist Temple while the author was clad in long underwear, heaviest suit, overcoat, sweater, and goose pimples."

Since he had no access to any but Japanese books, he indicates that this history "had to be out of my head, which is what I am most of the time, anyhow."

In his spare time Mr. Armour is professor of English and dean of the faculty at Scripps College in Claremont, California.

have offered English if they had thought of it.

Buildings were all in the classical style, and what looked like genuine marble was genuine marble. However, philosophy classes were sometimes held on the steps, the students being so eager to learn that they couldn't wait to get inside.

The Peripatetic School was a college where the professors kept moving from town to town, closely followed by students and creditors. Sometimes lectures were held in the Groves of Academe, where students could munch apples and olives and occasionally cast an anxious eye at birds in the branches overhead.

Under the Caesars, taxation became so burdensome that Romans in the upper brackets found they might as well give money to their Alma Mater instead of letting the State have it. Thus it was that crowds often gathered along the Appian Way to applaud a spirited chariot race between the chairman of asticism, a ten-year course. If some found it hard to concentrate, it was because they were dreaming about quitting before exams and going off on a crusade.

Some left even sooner, before the end of the lecture, having spied a beautiful damsel being pursued by a dragon who had designs on her. Damsels, who were invariably in distress, wrought havoc on a young man's grade-point average.

Members of the faculty were better off than previously, because they wore coats of armor. Fully accoutered, and with their visors down, they could summon up enough courage to go into the president's office and ask for a promotion even though they had not published a thing.

At this time the alumni council became more aggressive in its fund drives, using such persuasive devices as the thumbscrew, the knout, the rack, and the wheel. A wealthy alumnus would usually donate generously if a sufficient the funds drive and the tax collector, each trying to get to a good prospect first.

The word "donor" comes from the Latin donare, to give, and is not to be confused with danare, to dun, though it frequently is.

When a prominent alumnus was thrown to the lions, customary procedure in the alumni office was to observe a moment of silence, broken only by the sound of munching. Then the secretary, wrapping his toga a little more tightly around him, solemnly declared, "Well, we might as well take him off the cultivation list."

The Middle Ages

In the period known as the Dark Ages, or niighthood, everyone was in the dark. Higher education survived only because of illuminated manuscripts, which were discovered during a routine burning of a library. It is interesting to reconstruct a typical classroom scene: a group of dedicated students clustered around a glowing piece of parchment, listening to a lecture in Advanced Mon-number of alumni, armed with pike-staffs and halberds, could cross his moat and storm his castle walls. A few could be counted on to survive the rain of stones, arrows, and molten lead. Such a group of alumni, known as "the committee," was customarily conducted to the castle by a troubador, who led in the singing of the Alma Mater.

The Renaissance

During the Renaissance, universities sprang up all over Europe. You could go to bed at night, with not a university around, and the next morning there would be two universities right down the street, each with a faculty, student body, campfire, and need for additional endowment.

The first universities were in Italy, where Dante was required reading. Some students said his "Paradise" and "Purgatory" were as hard as "Hell." Boccaccio was not required but was read anyhow, and in the original Italian so much being lost in translation. Other institutions soon followed, such as Heidelberg, where a popular elective was Duelling 103a,b, usually taken concurrently with First Aid, and the Sorbonne, which never seemed to catch on with tourists as much as the Eiffel Tower, the Folies Bergere, and Napoleon's Tomb. In England there was Oxford, where, by curious coincidence, all of the young instructors were named Don. There was also Cambridge.

The important thing about the Renaissance, which was a time of awakening (even in the classroom), was education of the Whole Man. The graduate of a university was supposed, above all, to be a Gentleman. This meant that he should know such things as archery, falconry, and fencing (subjects now largely relegated to Physical Education and given only one-half credit per semester), as well as, in the senior year, how to use a knife and fork.

During the Renaissance, the works of Homer, Virgil, and other classical writers were rediscovered, much to the disappointment of students.

It was more successful, however, in starting Phi Beta Kappa, a fraternity which permitted no rough stuff in its initiations. At first the Phi Beta Kappa key was worn on the key ring, but the practice went out with the discovery of the watch chain and vest.

During the Colonial Period, alumni officials limited their fund-raising activities to those times when an alumnus was securely fastened, hands and legs, in the stocks. In this position he was completely helpless and gave generously, or could be frisked.

Revolutionary America

Higher education came to a virtual standstill during the Revolution—every able-bodied male having enlisted for the duration. Since the ROTC was not yet established, college men were forced to have other qualifications for a commission, such as money.

General George Washington was given an honorary degree by Harvard, and kites. The first such publication was probably Poor Alumnus' Almanac, full of such homely sayings as "Early to bed and early to rise makes a man healthy, wealthy, and wise enough to write his Alma Mater into his will."

Contemporary America

In the nineteenth century, denominational colleges were founded in all parts of the country, especially Ohio. In the smaller of these colleges, money was mostly given in small denominations. A few colleges were not named after John Wesley.

State universities came into being at about the same time, and were tax supported. Every taxpayer was therefore a donor, but without getting his name on a building or being invited to dinner by the president. The taxpayer, in short, was in the same class as the Anonymous Giver, but not because he asked that his name be withheld.

About the middle of the nineteenth century, women were admitted to college. This was done (1) to relieve men of having to take women's parts in dramatic productions, (2) to provide cheer leaders with shapelier legs, and (3) to recruit members for the Women's Glee Club, which was not prospering. Women students came to be known as co-eds, meaning that they went along with a man's education, and he could study and date simultaneously. It was not realized, when they were admitted, that women would get most of the high marks, especially from professors who graded on curves.

In the twentieth century, important strides were made, such as the distinction which developed between education and Education. Teachers came to be trained in what were at first called Normal Schools. With the detection of certain abnormalities, the name was changed to Teachers Colleges.

John Dewey introduced Progressive Education, whereby students quickly knew more than their teachers and told them so. Robert Hutchins turned the University of Chicago upside down, thereby necessitating a new building program. At St. John's College everyone studied the Great Books, which were more economical because they did not come out each year in a revised edition. Educational television gave college professors an excuse for owning a television set, which they had previously maintained would destroy the reading habit. This made it possible for them to watch

OF EDUCATION*

By RICHARD ARMOUR

Alumni officials concentrated their efforts on securing a patron, someone rich like Lorenzo de' Medici, someone clever like Machiavelli, or (if they wished to get rid of a troublesome member of the administration) someone really useful like Lucrezia Borgia.

Colonial America

The first universities in America were founded by the Puritans. This explains the strict regulations about Late Hours, Compulsory Chapel, No Liquor on the Campus, and Off-Limits to Underclassmen which still exist at many institutions.

Some crafts were taught, but witchcraft was an extracurricular activity. Witch-burning, on the other hand, was the seventeenth century equivalent of hanging a football coach in effigy at the end of a bad season. Though deplored, it was passed off by the authorities as attributable to "youthful exuberance."

Harvard set the example for naming colleges after donors. William and Mary, though making a good try, failed to start a trend for using first names.

and this helped see him through the difficult winter at Valley Forge. Since he gave no commencement address, it is assumed that he made a substantial contribution to the building fund. Then again, mindful of the reputation he had gained through Parson Weems's spreading of the cherry tree story, he may have established a chair in Ethics.

Unlike the situation during World War I, when colleges and universities abandoned the teaching of German in order to humiliate the Kaiser, the Colonists waged the Revolutionary War successfully without prohibiting the teaching of English. They did, however, force students to substitute such good old American words as "suspenders" for "braces," and themes were marked down when the spelling "tyre" was used for "tire" and the "colour" for "color."

The alumni publication, variously called the Alumni Bulletin, the Alumni Quarterly, and the Alumni Newsletter, was probably invented at this time by Benjamin Franklin, who invented almost everything else, including bifocals

How Scholarships Are Founded

By Donald L. Helfferich

Several alumni who accepted the challenge of carrying the Alumni Fund Campaign to the homes of Ursinus graduates said to me, "I don't like to ask for money, but I'll do it."

For my part, I like to ask for gifts to the College. As President of Ursinus, it has been one of my duties to seek financial support for the school, and in the seeking I have been rewarded with heart-warming and thrilling experiences beyond compare. These experiences add up to a revelation of the American dream in at least one of its myriad manifestations.

The story of the genesis of two recently founded scholarships illustrates the unforeseeable and far-reaching consequences that attend an exercise of the spirit of giving.

Two months ago I called on an alumnus who took me to the office of his senior associate. On the wall of the partner's office was pinned a faded letter dated May 16, 1960. The letter was handed to me, and I read:

"The good news I have to share with you seems appropriate since you were instrumental in helping me get my start. My daughter, who graduates from high school in June, has been accepted by a women's college in New England. She is eleventh in her class of 290 and was one of 350 freshmen selected from about 2500 applicants. Needless to say we are very proud of her.

"What greater living memorial can there be for my father, an illiterate immigrant, whose granddaughter can now be accepted into one of the finest colleges in the country?"

"Truly, this land is one of great opportunities. My thanks and gratitude to you, again after twenty years, for the opportunity to rise above my humble beginnings, and now my daughter can continue to make the most of these advantages."

As I finished reading this moving letter, I was told by our alumnus that his partner had assisted not only the writer but also her brother, now a physician. Just a week before, these two graduates of Ursinus had made known their desire to establish a scholarship in memory of their father, and what I had just learned placed their gift in an entirely new perspective. I was proud that Ursinus College had been able to participate with their father in the education of the minds and spirits of his children.

Before I departed, the man who thirty years earlier had made it possible for two students to attend Ursinus but who could not have envisioned what would follow in 1962, spontaneously said, "I'll have a contribution for Ursinus." His generous gift arrived by mail a few days later, followed by a letter from the alumnus enclosing a pledge and requesting that the two gifts be combined to establish a scholarship in the name of the partner and his wife.

The glow of a single candle may not light the entire world, but for me it is sufficient that it illuminate the human heart.

Report

Capital Funds Campaign

On November 15 the alumni office reported that pledges totaling $261,482 had been received from 673 alumni. Four of the thirteen areas had not made any report by that date, and no area had made its final report. Returns from direct-mail solicitation were just beginning to flow in.

"Since at this early date one-seventh of the alumni community has subscribed more than one-half of the campaign goal, there is every reason for encouragement," said Glenn E. Eshbach, General Chairman of the Capital Funds Drive. And we are particularly happy, he added, that already many alumni have begun sending in their cash contributions. "I have learned," he continued,

"that cash receipts in the alumni office during the past six weeks have totaled $23,416."

The Loyalty Fund Committee will meet on December 2, at which time Area Chairmen will make their final reports. A "Follow-Up" period of two weeks will permit them to make contact with alumni in their respective areas who were missed by the area solicitors.

On January 1 Harold L. Wiand, president of the alumni association, and Glenn E. Eshbach will address a letter to all alumni who, by that date, have not been personally solicited. Subsequent appeals will be sent by Loyalty Fund Class Chairmen and their vice chairmen.

The figures below indicate the position of Ursinus in comparison to other well-known colleges and universities in Pennsylvania. These statistics, reported by the American Alumni Council, are for the 1960-61 annual giving programs.

Dr. Helfferich Says

"Thank You"

Occasionally I exercise my prerogative as President of the College and insert an item in the Alumni Journal without referring it to the editor. This is such an item. If you read it, the reason for circumventing the editor will be obvious.

I am deeply grateful to the 650 alumni who are helping in this year's Loyalty Fund campaign. The prompt acceptance by this many graduates of a single written invitation to serve as solicitors must have established something of a record in college fund raising. This spontaneous demonstration of loyalty to our college has given me a permanent sensation of pardonable pride. I thank all solicitors everywhere for their efforts to date and for their work in the future.

I am also grateful to Richard Schellhase. To the position of Secretary of the Alumni Association he brought insight, understanding, imagination, and zealous effort. He designed the campaign, organized the areas, wrote most of the promotional material and instructed the solicitors. All this he did without an increase in staff and without an increase in budget. I know that Mr. Schellhase's modesty will make him squirm with a warm feeling of embarrassment when he reads this testimony! Therefore, I have purposely understated the case. Thank you, Mr. Schellhase.

William R. Shuster, '39, Richard T. Schellhase, '45, Paul W. Yoh, '13, Paul W. Levensgood, '35, D. L. Helfferich, '21, and Mrs. J. Harold Brownback, '20, at Area VIII's dinner held at the Spring-Ford Country Club on September 21.

AREA DINNERS

In order to solicit personally 85% of the alumni in the current Capital Funds Drive, the Loyalty Fund Committee divided the eastern section of the United States into thirteen areas. During September and October dinners were held in each of these areas; a total of 652 alumni attended these dinners, where they were informed of the facts concerning the campaign for $500,000 and then asked to act as solicitors in their respective areas.

In localities where there is a smaller concentration of alumni, more informal luncheons and dinners were held. Lancaster, Pittsburgh, State College, Chambersburg, Sunbury, Kingston, Wilmington (Del.) and St. Louis (Mo.) were the cities where these gatherings convened. A total of 94 alumni attended these affairs.

Meetings in Cleveland, Ohio, and Boston, Mass., were planned for late November.

In all, almost 700 alumni were engaged as solicitors in the Drive. Without this army of eager and enthusiastic volunteers the campaign could not have been conducted.

The Loyalty Fund Committee directed the Journal editor to make public, in print, its deep appreciation for the inestimable help given to the College by these loyal sons of Ursinus.

Dr. Wagner Reports On His Trip To Nigeria

Dr. James E. Wagner, vice president of Ursinus, spent twenty-two days in Ghana and Nigeria in August. This was Dr. Wagner's ninth overseas trip in the past seven years.

Dr. Wagner, in addition to his responsibilities at Ursinus College, is president of the continuing legal corporation of the former Evangelical and Reformed Church, which is now a part of the newly-formed United Church of Christ. He is also a vice president of the World Alliance of Reformed and Presbyterian Churches, and it was in this capacity that he made the recent trip to Africa. The annual meeting of the Alliance executive committee was held at University College, Ibadan, Nigeria.

"I came back this time still clinging to the viewpoint with which I returned from another trip to Africa five years ago, namely, that in spite of the apparent instability of the governments of many of these new independent nations, and their tendency sometimes to play the United States against Russia and vice versa for the purpose of getting as much as possible from both, our own government ought to continue extending as much economic and technical aid to these new nations as we possibly can," Dr. Wagner said.

He pointed out that nearly twenty new and independent nations have come into existence in Africa in the past three years. "Many of them are small in territory and in population, and some of them lack enough natural resources to give much promise for their future.

"Others appear to be rich in natural resources. Ghana, which is so much in the news today, produces more than one-third of all the cocoa in the world—more than 200,000 tons a year. It produces approximately one million ounces of gold a year and has rich deposits of industrial diamonds. It mines almost 1,000,000 tons of manganese each year, more than any other nation except Soviet Russia. It has as yet unmeasured deposits of bauxite in which American aluminum manufacturers are already greatly interested.

"In some ways Nigeria has the most stable government of a parliamentary form; yet while I was there, several different hearings were being held dealing with charges of corruption among those sitting in high places. In Ghana, the day I arrived was the day the Anglican bishop of Accra was expelled by the Nkrumah government, and before I returned home Nkrumah had had three of his longtime close associates, two of them members of his cabinet, arrested on suspicion of their disloyalty.

"If we Americans are to keep a true perspective in seeking to evaluate what is happening in such new nations as these, we have to remember that they have been plunged overnight into the quest for nationhood while lacking adequately trained leaders in agriculture, industry and government. Moreover, they are not blessed as were our founding fathers who had behind them a 500-year tradition of freedom under law beginning with the signing of the Magna Carta. We owe these new nations a considerable amount of patience and generosity in the judgments we form of them at this stage."

HISTORY OF EDUCATION

Westerns and old movies without losing status.

Of recent years, an increasing number of students spend their junior year abroad. This enables them to get a glimpse of professors who have been away for several years on Fulbrights and Guggenheims.

Student government has grown apace, students now not only governing themselves but giving valuable suggestions, in the form of ultimatums, to the presidents and deans. In wide use is the Honor System, which makes the professor leave the room during an examination because he is not to be trusted.

Along with these improvements in education has come a subtle change in the American alumnus. No longer interested only in the record of his college's football team, he is likely to appear at his class reunion full of such penetrating questions as "Why is the tuition higher than it was in 1934?" "Is it true that 85% of the members of the faculty are Communists?" and "How can I get my son (or daughter) in?"

Alumni magazines have kept pace with such advancements. Expression has reached such a high point of originality that a request for funds may appear, at first reading, to be a gift offer.

However, if pictorial content continues to increase, it will not be necessary for alumni to know how to read.

This cannot come too soon.

SPORTS SHORTS

HOCKEY

For the first time in more than a decade the hockey team finished the season undefeated. The game scores were: Wilson, 2-0; Beaver, 4-0; West Chester, 4-2; Swarthmore, 7-0; Temple, 2-1; E. Stroudsburg, 5-0.

More than half of the Ursinus goals were scored by freshman Sue Day. Janet Smith and Sallie Ann Murphy were other freshmen on the varsity team. The only seniors on the first team were Sallie Andrews, captain, and Judy Tignor.

Four Ursinus coeds made the All-College First Team: Sue Andres, Judy Smiley, Lee Spahr, and Sue Day. Judy Tignor, Sue Honeysett, June Ritting and Sallie Ann Murphy were placed on the All-College Second Team.

LACROSSE

At try-outs conducted during the summer, Lynn Crosley, '62, and Vonnie Gros, '57, retained their positions on the United States Lacrosse Team; Pat Woodbury Zelle, '58, and Enid Clinchard Russell, '65, also made the first team.

Sue Honeysett, '64, was selected for the U.S. Reserve Team and Lee Spahr, '65, received honorable mention.

Ron Ritz, '64, Ursinus' aggressive right-halfback, received the Kenneth E. Walker Trophy (presented by the late Kenneth Walker's mother) as the outstanding player in the Homecoming game.

FOOTBALL

Despite encouraging pre-season predictions, the football team chalked up a disappointing 2-5 record, scoring its only wins over Johns Hopkins, 20-13, on Parents' Day and over Swarthmore, 14-8, on Homecoming.

The Bears succumbed to Susquehanna, 0-28; Wilkes, 6-12; Wagner, 8-14; Haverford, 0-6; and Lebanon Valley, 12-21.

The Whatley and Gurzynski-coached Grizzlies operated from a Split T pro offense, often with split ends and flankers, and alternating quarterbacks Dennis Quinn, '65, and Ron Emmert, '64.

Co-captains Tony Sermarini, '64, and Dave DiEugenio, '64, sparked the squad, which returns almost intact next year.

Along with these stand-outs, this year's starters who will be back in 1963 are: juniors Degenhardt, Ritz, Hakanson, Kohr, Maschock, Rutledge, Scholl and Siebensohn, and sophomores Rhile and Wirth.

Ritz and DiEugenio will be co-captains in 1963.

BASKETBALL

Basing his offense around Walt Dryfoos, the MAC's most valuable player, Coach Warren Fry has great expectations for the Ursinus College basketball team. Also returning from last year's starting five are Chuck Schaal, second high scorer on the team, and Walt Korenkiewicz, defensive ace. Among other prospective candidates for the first team are senior Jack Travis; juniors Bob Kenschaft, Ron Emmert and Marshall Genter; sophomore Jack Parker; and freshman Barry Troster.

The season opens December 1 against Eastern Baptist at Ursinus. Added to this year's schedule is Drew University. With the addition of Drew, this year's schedule has been enlarged to seventeen games.

If the spirit and drive observed in pre-season practice is indicative of the team's potential, then Ursinus College fans may look forward to a winning season.

WRESTLING

With all of last year's squad returning and at least fifteen incoming freshmen who have had wrestling experience, the wrestling team is anticipating one of the best seasons in the history of the sport at Ursinus. Last year's record was six wins and three losses.

Dick Dean, '63, former MASCAP wrestling champion, will again captain the team, which set a new school record last year by shutting out two opponents, Johns Hopkins and P.M.C.

A possible lineup composed of hold-overs would be: 123 lb. class, Roger Dreyling, (6-3); 130 lb. class, Don Smith (8-1); 137 lb., Mike Reed (7-2); 147 lb., Dick Dean (undefeated 9-0); 157 lb., Fred Powers (undefeated 9-0); 167 lb., Dale Kratz (5-4); 177 lb., Roy DeBeer (3-3); Heavyweight, Bill Siebenson (7-2).

NEW WRESTLING COACH

Mr. Robert C. McCreary, 410 Drayton Road, Oreland, Pa., was appointed head wrestling coach, to succeed Richard T. Schellhase, who gave up his wrestling duties in order to devote more time to his responsibilities as alumni secretary.

In 1960-61 Mr. McCreary coached the Springfield (Montco) High School wrestling team, and in 1961-62 he was freshman coach at the University of Pennsylvania. At present he is teaching health and physical education at Hillcrest Junior High School in Springfield, Montgomery County.

A graduate of Cheltenham High School in 1950, where he was captain of the team and twice a district champion, he was graduated from Temple University, where he was voted "most valuable wrestler" in 1953. He captained Temple's team in 1954 and that year was runner-up in the E.I.W.A. Tournament. He was M.A.A.A.U. Champion in 1955.

During his army service he continued to wrestle and was runner-up in the All U.S. Army Tournament in 1957. After his discharge he again won the M.A.A.A.U. crown.

Although he has been practicing with the Ursinus squad less than three weeks, he is encouraged to predict that "this season will be a successful one."

VERNON MORGAN '61

Vernon Morgan, '61, all-time Ursinus track star, now a University of Pennsylvania medical student, established a new State of Delaware mile record of 4:12.9 in an A.A.U. meet held at Wilmington, June 28, 1962. Morgan won over two of the best milers in the East, Vic Zwolok formerly of the Quantico Marines and now of Villanova, and Kevin Quinn, formerly of St. Joseph's College, and Middle Atlantic States Athletic Conference University Division mile champion.

Morgan set the pace the first two laps with a 61 first quarter and a 2:08 half. Zwolok led at the three quarters in 3:13, but Vern ran a 58 last quarter to win by eight yards.

Vern's best times in his other distances this past summer were: 1:54.3 for the 880 yard run in the Wilmington AAU Meet on July 19, a new meet record; 3:05 in the 3/4 mile invitational run at Neshaming High School on August 1; 1:21.7 in the 660 yard run at the Philadelphia AAU Meet on July 30; and 9:44 for the two mile run at Franklin Field on April 11.

NEW MASCOT

Pictured below is Ursinus' spanking new mascot. Housed in the basement of Brodbeck Hall, it has already proved difficult to keep well-fed.

At first it demanded a freshman a week, but lately it is satisfied with nothing less than a Dean's Lister. This fare has been unsatisfactory, however, since (as everyone knows) many intellectuals are indigestible. Any suggestions?

Allen C. Harman, '26

Allen C. Harman, '26, was recently appointed Superintendent of Schools of Montgomery County. He was assistant county superintendent of schools since 1941 and had been a teacher in county schools since 1926.

The appointment, approved by Dr. Charles H. Boehm, state Superintendent of Public Instruction, will be for four years, the unexpired term of Dr. Gerald G. Hottenstein, his immediate predecessor.

Allen C. Harman, '26

Dr. Harman began his teaching career at Upper Moreland High School, Willow Grove, in 1926; he was principal of that school from 1933 to 1941.

He received his master's degree from Temple in 1934 and his Ph.D. degree from the University of Pennsylvania in 1947, where he has since lectured at various sessions in the graduate school of education.

Concerning his new post, he said, "The office of the County Superintendent of Schools has a unique challenge to offer leadership in fields such as re-organizing school districts, maintaining public confidence in education, improving the quality of education, meeting the needs of students of varying abilities, bringing persons of high quality into education as a professional career, and striving for the enactment of legislation which will maintain the highest possible support for education."

Active in county, state and national educational activities, he has written numerous reports, articles and books on education and administrative procedures. In 1956 he received the Montgomery County Co-ordinating Council Award for outstanding contributions to education.

Holding membership in a score of professional educational organizations, he has also been coordinator of the annual Montgomery County Science Fair. He is treasurer of the Montgomery County Free Library, a mason, and a member of Faith U.C.C. in Philadelphia.

Asked to comment about his feelings for Ursinus, he replied, "Like countless other alumni, I appreciate the opportunity I had of graduating from Ursinus College."

"Our Alma Mater," he continued, "is highly accredited, is administered efficiently, has a very competent staff of professors, and offers a thorough program of instruction. These strong qualities have prevailed in past years, and they continue to stand out today. They are reflected in the noteworthy achievements and the high stations in life which have been attained by those who have had the opportunity of attending Ursinus College."

Craig Reginald Reckard, '62, became the second Montgomery Countian to win a 1962 National Foundation Health Scholarship.

The scholarship, with a total value of $2,000 for four years, is financed by public contributions to the March of Dimes.

Craig graduated from Abington High School in 1958. A biology major at Ursinus, he was president of the Brownback-Anders Pre-Medical Society in his senior year. Besides his medical interests, he was a member of the Messiah Chorus, treasurer of Beta Sigma Lambda, and Chancellor of Stuics, a club whose purpose is to maintain good faculty-student relationships.

In addition to the National Foundation Health Scholarship, Craig also won a Pennsylvania State Senatorial Scholarship, worth $450 per year.

He entered the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine in September, under a full-tuition scholarship awarded by the university.

Craig R. Reckard, '62

Craig Reckard is seen here receiving congratulations from Dr. Allen S. Weed, chairman of the medical advisory committee of the county chapter of the National Foundation, upon receiving his National Foundation Health Scholarship. Dr. Paul R. Wagner, 32, chairman of the Department of Biology at Ursinus is on the extreme left. On the right is Dr. Eugene Stull, Abington High School principal.

Kenneth S. Kauffman, '24

"I might not remember all of them," he said, "but here are a few."

Sara Abel Stuebing, '60, Arthur Arena, '57, Doris Bethke, '61, Roger Brittain, '63, William Brown, '50, Ethel Cunningham Stein, '45, Judy Dreguba Foltz, '61, Gail Ford, '61, Herbert Griffiths, '37, Frank Hyatt, '43, John Innes, '60, Shirley Klein Cleary, '45, Larry Koch, '62, Jacqueline Kroschwitz, '64, Milton Marion, '48, Kathleen McCullough Hodge, '49, Reginald Miller, Doninck Misciascio, '61, Wayne Owen, '61, Lynn Politt Loesch, '52, Allan Sare, '55, Marian Sare Scott, '48, Carl Schenely, Robert Sharp, '58, Roger Staiger, '43, Florence Tindall, Carole Widmaier, '63, and Julius Yaeger, '54.

"As you know," Mr. Kauffman continued, "these names represent successful doctors, dentists, chemists, school administrators, teachers, research workers, housewives and mothers." You will understand, he said, that perhaps my greatest joy, and the climax, came this year when my son, Kenneth, chose to enroll at Ursinus.

"I consider it a privilege to have played some small part in the education of all these former pupils of mine who are now a part of the Ursinus family. Teaching has discouraging moments, but to reflect upon these and other students who have done well makes the work satisfying and highly rewarding. If I have helped a few individuals to pursue higher goals and to build wholesome lives, then my time and energy have not been spent in vain."

Before his long teaching career in Trenton, Mr. Kauffman taught for six years in Allentown, N.J. Married in 1931 to the former Elizabeth Richard, they have three children.

Active in professional science and educational associations, he has also been a teacher, councilman and chorister in Bethel Lutheran Church, Trenton. For years he was a sponsor of Hamilton's canteen for teen-agers, and he has directed numerous boys' clubs and athletic teams.

Prodded to say more about his son's coming to Ursinus, he added; "Ursinus was his first and only choice; he didn't even consider applying for admission elsewhere. If Kenney enjoys Ursinus as much as I did, and if he gets the well-rounded, full education that I know is available to him during the next four years at Ursinus, I will be very happy. And if, in addition, he acquires an abiding interest in and love for Ursinus, if he develops an urgent desire to make some worthwhile contribution to humanity, if he graduates with a high resolve to aim high and to live courageously and nobly, then I shall be doubly blessed."

A further footnote to this father's testimony and hope is that others have seen in Kenneth a young man of ability. He was the first Trenton student ever to win an Elks National Foundation scholarship. This $700 award was made as part of the nation-wide "Most Valuable Student" contest sponsored by the Elks. Ursinus College also awarded him a full-tuition "Open Scholarship."

Dorothy J. Marple, '48

Dorothy J. Marple, '48, former dean of women and foreign student assistant at Thiel College, Greenville, Pennsylvania, was elected executive secretary of Lutheran Church Women, an organization which came into being this summer following the merger of the United, Augustana, American Evangelical, and Finnish Lutheran Churches.

Miss Marple, who recently completed resident work at Columbia University for her doctorate in education, heads the 300,000-member organization which merged the United Lutheran Church Women, Augustana Lutheran Church Women, Lutheran Guild of Suomi Synod, and the Women's Missionary Society, AELC.

She began her new work on September 1. Prior to her eight years as dean of women at Thiel College, Miss Marple served on the staff of the Women's College at Duke University, Durham, North Carolina, as counselor and assistant in the office of the dean of women. She was graduated cum laude from Ursinus and received her M.A. degree in education and student personnel from Syracuse University in 1950. During 1952 she served as a work camper in Italy under the World Council of Churches.

She is a member of the National Association of Women Deans and Counselors, the American College Personnel Division, and the Greenville Business and Professional Club, of which she was president from 1958 to 1960.

Dorothy J. Marple, '48

James J. Peifer, '48

JAMES J. PEIFER, '48

"One could do worse than be a chaser of cholesterol," Robert Frost might muse, and few men have made more concentrated and persistent efforts to run down this heart attacker than James J. Peifer.

Since 1954 he has been working on fats and oils at Hormel Institute, a graduate school unit of the University of Minnesota on the Hormel estate in Austin, Minnesota. From 1956 to 1961 he was research associate and assistant to Dr. W. O. Lundberg, Director of Hormel Institute. In 1959 he became a research fellow of the American Heart Association, and in 1961 he was awarded a five-year grant as an Established Investigator of the A.M.A.

These investigatorships, awarded on the basis of the individual's scientific publications, research proposals and personal interviews with representatives of the Research Council of the A.M.A., are usually open only to those investigators who have had three to five years of post-graduate doctorate research experience and who have shown potential for continuing in basic research concerned with some phase of cardiovascular disease.

Left to develop his own research program, Jim says that his studies are "aimed at establishing a relationship between the chemical composition of dietary fats and oils, including marine oils, and the biochemical changes occurring in the blood and cardio-vascular tissues of rats." Some of the studies, he reports, have established that certain highly unsaturated fatty acid fractions from marine oils can promote a more significant lowering of blood and tissue lipids than can the more common plant oils and the more abundant pure unsaturated acids.

Other studies in his five-year project make use of a new genetic breed of miniature pigs, bred at the Hormel Institute specifically for medical research because their vascular system is very similar to that of man's. He gives these miniature pigs tracer doses of radioactive cholesterol, fatty acids, and phospholipids, hoping to establish, from his tests, the influence of intakes of high fat versus low fat diets and of "hard" versus "soft" fats on the development of atherosclerosis in the minipig.

Prior to his work at Hormel, Jim was a laboratory technical assistant in biochemistry at Sharp and Dohme. He earned his Ph.D. degree in biochemistry and physiology at Rutgers University. In 1961 he was named a Fellow of the New York Academy of Science and in 1962 he was appointed to the American Heart Association's Council on Arteriosclerosis.

In addition to his scientific accomplishments and endeavors, he has been, for two years, a member of the Citizens' Advisory Committee for Austin Public Schools, and for five years he has taught the senior high church school class at Austin's First United Church of Christ. "Other interests," he writes, "are collecting and reading books, photography, assembling a Peifer hi-fi system, and participating in adult discussion groups in our church."

He is married to the former Miriam Schellhase, '48, and they have three children: Richard, 10, John, 8, and Audrey, 5.

THE INNKEEPERS

One of the most popular combinations of student folksingers in recent Ursinus history, the Innkeepers, made up of John Swinton, '62, Judd Kinzley, '62, Don Martin, '63, and Betsy Kolbe, '65, had an interesting summer touring the West and strumming their way to the World's Fair, where officials of the United Nations Pavilion welcomed them and put them on a folk-singing program.

The group left Philadelphia on July 2 in Howard, '62, and Betsy, '62, Friend's Volkswagen bus. According to Howard, "We decided that part of the fun of such a trip was to plan from day to day what we wanted to do; our route, therefore, was anything but a straight line. From start to finish it went something like this: Cleveland, Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, Denver, Colorado Springs, Phoenix, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle, Yellowstone, Rushmore, La Crosse, Chicago and home!"

Although the group had no advance bookings, they made out quite well. Their first job was at a Kiwanis Convention in Leavenworth, Kansas. While working for a week in Phoenix they stayed with Judd's parents.

In L.A. the Innkeepers sang at various coffee houses and played auditions at Desilu, Paramount, Welk Associates and for other professional companies.

Commenting on these facts, Howie said, "It is ironical to note that we left L.A. on the threshold of real success. The group had an agent who had them set to go to Las Vegas on September 1.

Local record companies had also expressed real interest. However, obligations at the end of the summer (particularly school!) ruled all these out."

Depending upon what newspaper you read, you will learn that "money problems" arose either in San Francisco or Eugene, Oregon. "Six Students Stranded by Thieves" ran the headlines in dozens of papers across the country. Whether stolen or spent, there is no doubt that the Innkeepers' cupboard was bare. "We arrived back," quoth

Howie, "on August 27 with $1.19 in the pot."

At present John Swinton is studying at Dickinson Law School, Judd Kinzley is working as a probation officer in Hackensack, N.J.; Don Martin is a senior at Ursinus; Betsy Kolbe is a sophomore at Gettysburg (to which she transferred in order to major in music). Howard Friend is attending Princeton Theological Seminary, and his wife, Betsy, is teaching school.
