John Giardi, LL.D. Ursinus 1964, has said, "An ulcer is an unwritten poem." This page might have been triggered by Dr. Giardi's remark. It might be the product of the humidity or it might be a revolt against academic jargon. Regardless of the reason:

*I suppose I may use any language I choose
To describe with collegiate propriety
How the summer is spent, an annual event
That lacks much of the full year's variety.
Though it deserves the sweet tones of Calliope
It has taken the form of a gallimaufry.¹*

There are some things done on campus in the summer when it's hot, that would certainly annoy us in the winter when it's not, e.g., the aroma of paint that is in the air, carpenters hammering here and there; janitors dusting with vigorous care, and the sound of the mowers everywhere. All summer mechanics move things about. By October 1 students straighten these out. But I can spend a quiet hour in my private Ivory Tower reading books on education, a ridiculous occupation for any man's vacation.

*From such an enterprise it must be plainly seen,
At least anyone can reason
That summer's not the season
For the privilege and pleasure that I treasure beyond measure
Which is running little errands for the Faculty and Dean.
But I get some consolation from the exhaustive information
These noble fellows send on picture cards of places they have been.*

Bomberger's new roof of slate, tar and tin will direct rain outside, instead of in. Stine, Freeland and Derr get a new coat of paint to look on the outside like inside they ain't. Where once the clover drenched the air and hockey sticks by maidens fair were plied to leather ball, there burly laborers strained and bent and mighty engines gushed cement to form our dining hall. The building appears just as extensive as Stadium Shay, and quite as expensive. No problems this summer with the kitchen's force. Cooks and helpers are playing it loose. Their cooperation must be due, of course, to the dreams of the new caboose.²

The erection of this big building has created the greatest continuing interest and excitement among the women students on campus since the arrival of the Navy V12 Unit in 1943 and among the men students since the admission of women as students in 1879.

The auditors arrive for the scrutiny of the fiscal affairs of the treasury. They find red ink in tedious monotony, which conforms to a yearly expectancy. An eleemosynary place with tax sanctity must consider black ink a form of iniquity.

There are students on campus, some who started late, and others to accelerate. The sturdy corps of teachers was recruited from those who refused grants from foundations to teach in Yemen or study in Timbuctoo. The faculty residents of Collegeville mow their lawns, picnic within rain check distance of home, swim at Montgomery Park and scan the books assigned the students for summer reading. As I consider the summer sessions soberly, I admit the bank of the Perkiomen is a pleasant place for all seasons.

SUMMER IS PROLOGUE

*Summer sessions are but a sequence, an array
Of secondary causes. Dull or gay
We know that in them lies the argument
For another academic year; as eloquent
As those gone before.
Each summer tells as oracles of old
In obscure formal meters told,
There will be more;
The next one we are waiting for.*

THE LIBERAL ARTS CURRICULUM

by JOHN CIARDI

John Ciardi, right, delivered the speech which begins on this page at the commencement exercises on June 6. His address was given without notes, and what follows is precisely what the tape-recorder registered. What was a delight to the ear is also, as you can see, a delight to the eye. To ponder its truth will bring delight to the mind and the spirit.

I think I find a kind of hopeful frivolity in your asking a poet to talk on this occasion. A commencement speaker is supposed to be a man of purpose, to look forward with doubt but hope, to put his finger on, to face issues, to announce, to define, to exhort. As an act of honesty I have cancelled my own license in these specialties. I am by occupation a frivolous man. I fool around looking for rhymes, for cadences, for figures of speech, for indirections. I think I am qualified as a master of frivolity. I think I am getting a doctorate of frivolity today. I have qualified in the past. I am the man who did a TV show for CBS for a year and who was taken off the air and replaced by Mr. Ed, the Talking Horse.

I think there is a comment in that, probably, on poetry and our society. I think I am a doctor of confusions, and I am going to invite you to join me in some of these confusions. If you are not confused you haven't been thinking. The only way to get yourself clarified is to close your minds, and certainly you don't have to look far in American society today to see that there are demands upon you from all directions to get yourself over-clarified. I suspect that the core of your curriculum, if you have taken it seriously, has been to invite you to enter your confusion meaningfully.

I used to say to my students that I didn't want them to be sane; I just wanted their insanities to work for them rather than against them. That's about as much as one can hope; we are not entirely rational creatures. I think the point I am trying to make can be begun by putting it this way:

As a former faculty member and as a parent, I know very well that we are not born human. As a matter of fact, one holds his children in hope and dismay and finds himself thinking—at least I found myself thinking—"I've got to get this in contact with the human race." I haven't succeeded yet, but I am still hopeful, still working on it, and if nothing else my character will probably be improved by it. What it comes down to simply is that—I don't know what any of you got out of the genetic grab bag. I did not get angels. I got young savages—healthy, insolent, hopeful—and I have been trying to get them in touch with the human race ever since. It occurs to me that a savage is a human being that has not received enough news from the human race.

Two Bodies of News

I think there are two bodies of this news that particularly concern a college, and in the United States in general one of these bodies of news gets overstressed and the other tends to be ignored. I think there is a body of news that concerns everything the human race has been finding out about its environment, about matter, about physical objects. We call that body primarily science. There is another body of news that consists of the stored up memory of the emotional experiences of the human race, and we call that literature, religion, philosophy, the arts.

There are certain impurities in the middle; I think history is one of those impurities. I am not saying that history professors are impure—they probably would do a better job if they were qualified as such—I am saying that history is a literary style. History has to be written; it doesn't happen. Event is what happens. And as soon as any man begins to write about event he starts to select it according to premises he already has established in him and according to his writing styles, and he interprets and leaves out; and I do say we have a necessary impurity. It was Napoleon who said "history is a lie agreed upon." He might have said it's a style agreed upon. But let's leave history out of consideration (because history is going to leave us out of it soon enough) and put it another way.

I have been trying for years to teach this second body of news that concerns the experiences human beings have had on this planet. And I've had trouble with it. I have had trouble with it for a number of reasons, partly because the students don't like to take it as it is. They don't want to read a poem; they don't want to read the Book of Job; they don't want to read Homer; not as it was written; they want to read it for the examination answers.

When they come to a poem they want to be told what it means, what's it about. Tell me so that I can get it memorized and put down. That's one of the despairs of poets. Supposing I said, honestly enough, "I'm not sure what this poem means. I think I know what meaningful confusion it is engaged in; I think I know what area of mankind it's exploring; I think I know what experience it is; but I can't give you a flat examination answer."

Isn't this the basic difference between the two parts of the curriculum? If you are in that part of the curriculum that is gathering information about our environment you can begin with answers in the back of the book. They are there. In review algebra you can turn to the back pages and find out whether you are right or wrong. If you stay with mathematics long enough you are going to run out of answers. That's when you become a mathematician: when you are dealing with asking questions, instead of an apprentice bookkeeper with answers in the back. But in the humanities you have to start right away in an area that has no answers. It's confusing in a way. You are never quite sure of what happens.

I started out to college with a notion that eventually—it was the family's notion, not mine—that eventually I would go to law school, become respected. I began taking English courses until I was obviously unemployable, and my only hope was to teach the stuff for a while; and then when I found some other avenues I reformed and stopped teaching it. But I recall the men of my family coming around to me: good practical, admirable souls, and they would say, "John, it's nice to know about all these poetry things, but you have to be practical." I didn't say it, because I respected them, but I had to keep my thoughts going, and what I'd think as I looked at them was, "I wonder what practicality ever did for him." It hasn't become obvious to me yet.

Perhaps it's better to fail in some ways than to succeed in others. One of the kinds of failures that distresses me is what I want to call intellectual backsliding. Part of the business of a liberal arts college (and a liberal arts college doesn't know what it is about; it shouldn't know what it is about) is to know what confusion it's involved in. Part of the business of a liberal arts college is to lead students to ask questions more sensitively—which is the same as more complexly. In a way, getting the question asked properly is in a sense the answer. And I have seen time and again students led up to the point where they can ask a question at a fairly high level, but having asked it they turn away and find they are staring into a whole buzzing hive of confusion. More than they can stand. And, therefore, they settle for a simpler answer than the question is entitled to. I think that's intellectual backsliding. We know a great deal about the courage of one's convictions. I am not asking you to throw it away; I am inviting you to join me in the courage of one's confusions. It takes a certain amount of courage to stay confused, to keep the whole question visible. Because too often one slides back down the scale of intellectual evolution in order to settle for a simpler answer than the question has coming to it.

I said earlier that there are these two kinds, these two main bodies, of experience. I am certainly not qualified to discuss what science has discovered on this planet; in fact I am a little appalled by it. I submit to you one thing: whatever else science has found, it has found no values. The scientist may also be a human being—there's no law against it—and after having developed something he may begin to ask a question. Having developed a certain machine or principle as a scientist, he may find himself as a human being asking value questions about it, but it is not as a scientist that he makes these value questions. I think it is significant that the minute the physicists got the atom bomb to go off they all turned theologians, or at least philosophers. It just took one explosion to get them out of the laboratory and onto their intellectual knees, wondering what hath God wrought.

What is this other body that asks questions? I submit to you that when you read, let us say, the Book of Job, you are not given a set of answers; you are not given a set of particulars. You are given an experience to try on your human nervous system. You are not told about Job, you are invited to become Job. In a sense you find yourself on the dungheap asking his questions. You find yourself trying this experience on your nerve ends. And I don't think a human being can become a developed personality until he has tried a number of such questions.

I like to look over the shoulders of teachers, and I was reading a pamphlet some time back about advice given to teachers on what to say to parents instead of what they mean. That isn't what they called it, but that's what it came to. What it actually listed was a list of negative expressions, and with it a list of more positive expressions. Don't say the negative thing; say the more positive thing.

For example, I saw one that said, "Never refer to a slum area; say rather, 'older, more densely populated areas in our community." I can just see myself saying that to some parent. Or for example, don't say "Johnny's a dope"; say rather "Johnny is working at his own level." (I am not making this up; I am quoting exactly; and if any of you parents have been told by a teacher that your son is working at his own level, you know what he meant.) The New York school system prepared a special list for itself and one that got my attention runs, "Never refer to an underprivileged child; say rather 'a child whose experiences have been limited to his immediate environment'."

I'm reminded of a thing Robert Frost said. "A poem begins in delight and ends in wisdom." It's a good formula. As a matter of fact, it's the old Horatian admonition, isn't it? Delectando monendo: "in the act of delighting, the act of teaching." It begins in delight and ends in wisdom.

I like this statement about an underprivileged child being one whose experiences have been limited to his immediate environment; it begins as jargon but ends as wisdom. I don't know what it is to be intellectually underprivileged, if not to be confined to one's immediate experiences.

Just as the high school student of chemistry needs to go back and relive the major experiments of past chemists in order to catch up with what the human race has found out about this, we all need to go back and relive the major experiences of the arts. There's a cumulative thing there. It gets one out of his immediate environment; that is the essential function of a liberal arts college. And where in your immediate environment are you going to meet, say Dante or Shakespeare? Chances are there isn't a one in your town, unless you happen to live close to the library and can get him out of it.

There is this quality of vicarious experience, and I don't think a man or woman has time enough in one lifetime to meet all the people that have to be met and to live all the experiences that have to be lived if you do it on the clock. E. E. Cummings was asked once, "What about the world, Mr. Cummings?" He said, "I live in so many, which one?" Short of a kind of schizophrenia that leaves you atomized, I think that is part of the process.

The Categorical Mind

Practicality does enter into it to a certain extent, but I don't like the categorical mind when it engages this kind of thing.

Our society tends to put a premium on this kind of categorical mind. My last year at Rutgers I found myself teaching teachers. They would come in with what I thought were appalling questions. They would say such things as "What are the twelve aims of education?" I was afraid of that way of putting it, and I think I know what happened. I think they went into a course called "Philosophy of Education," and the professor, who had his work to do, came in and said, "We have a lot of material to cover; we can't spend all of every hour in splitting hairs; and, therefore, for the purpose of this course we will treat the material as if there were twelve aims to education." But the categorical mind hears, "There are twelve aims to education." And so you have a metaphor established: there are twelve cubic boxes lined up and everything has to be jammed into these twelve cubic boxes. If there is a little space left, you fill it up with shredded footnotes. If the tail of something hangs out, you cut it off and throw it away. But you come out with twelve cubes.

This is the categorical mind at work, and it cannot engage literature. It has no way of being delighted. It simply wants the examination answers. That's why it prefers nineteenth century poetry; because nineteenth century poets give you the examination answer in the last few lines, as you know. I think you could pass a course in romantic poetry without reading anything but the last stanza. You remember in which poem he said, "A primrose by a river's brim a yellow primrose was to him and it was nothing more." If you have any shrewdness that ought to get you through the examination question on that one. Or "stretching blind hands of faith toward some far-off divine event toward which the whole creation moves"—that and a minimum amount of oil will get you through Tennyson, and so on for the rest of the romantic curriculum; but you are not engaging poetry; you are not going through this self-delighting process; you are not having an experience. You are looking for that extract of meaning that can be memorized categorically and put down and immediately lost.

What I find myself thinking is a parable that occurred to me some time ago. Perhaps one of the most delightfully, engagingly, fulfilling frivulous poets of our time was Wallace Stevens. He used to write poems full of nonsensical little echoes. Let's say, "cu-cu-cu-rico". A categorical person would look at it and say, "What do you do with a poet who says "cu-cu-cu-rico?" I don't know. What do you do with a poet who says "hey-derry-down"? They've been doing that for some time now.

Loving What Is To Be Loved

Wallace Stevens is probably one of the most difficult to explain to the categorical mind. You can't really try to explain; just get out of there. There's no conversation left. He'd say such things as, "I taste at the roots of the tongue the unreal of that which is real." What sort of nonsense is that? Or he'd say, "The sound of that slick sonata coming across the lawn makes music seem to be a nature, a place in which itself gives rise to everything else." And how are you going to say to a categorical person "a place in which itself gives rise to everything else"? I submit it's a superb first definition of poetry, and of music.

It's easy to lose Wallace Stevens at these points, but when Wallace Stevens was eighty-two he wrote a line that I think is probably as good as any line of poetry that I know of. He said, "What has there been to love that I have not loved?" If you can get to eighty-two and have earned that line, you won't have wasted much. "What has there been to love that I have not loved?" I hope one of you gets to be President and gets to Washington and scratches all the other mottoes off those stone walls and puts that one up. I'd much rather be legislated at (I've given up being legislated for; I think we're past that age.) under that slogan than under any of the others I've seen on the marble walls. "What has there been to love that I have not loved?"

I was reading Wallace Stevens' obituary, in Boston, and on the same page I read what I thought was an interesting story about a man who had come down from New Hampshire as a young man, penniless, had found a job in the Federal Street financial district of Boston, and had begun as office boy and had worked his way up the Horatio Alger success story. He ended as president of three railroads. All he had was his three railroads. He had never married, he had survived all his family, he was alone, he was a success. His last words were, as quoted in the paper, "I wurn't wuth it."

I wish I'd had that answer to make to the practical men of my family who came around and said, "John, it's nice to know about those poetry things, but you've got to be practical." You may find out "I wurn't wuth it." But I think if you get to "What has there been to love that I have not loved," you will have something in the spiritual bank.

I am trying to say that we have to extend ourselves in these ways, not looking for answers but for engagements. A poem is not a statement, it's an experience. It's an experience held—undertaken—in high company. When you go through the Divine Comedy, for example, you are not only having a magnificent allegorical experience, but you are having it in the company of one of the great guides of all time. It's a mistake not to get to know Dante. You've missed something; you couldn't have imagined him for yourself. That's part of it. And one other is the resonance of the language.

You all know that the Freudian theory tries to explain human behavior in terms of sex. It has been altered and adapted since Freud's death. And it works. There are fundamental truths in it. But I don't know of any psychologist or psychiatrist who is engaged in an area I'd like looked at. I wonder if language could not be one of the formative personality motivators.

I think the process a child goes through in acquiring the language from adults, listening, being outside this magical code, the business of learning to make sounds, the business of learning to put them together and so to engage the language, might very well be the basis for a theory of behavior. At what level do our language habits and the process of acquiring language shape us and become a personality factor? Karen Horney goes through weaning frustrations and various other things, but nothing is said about language adaptation.

I'm sure that there are language types that relate in this way. There is something about the resonance of language greatly used without which, I submit, it is impossible to be a developed human being. If we use the language on a tinny level, that tells one something; but when the language is greatly used—well, let me put it this way: There are people in this room who could quote to you passages of poetry from dead languages. The language has fallen apart, but its moments of real splendor are still with us, because we need them.

Sounds To Tell A Man By

The human race needs its language, and I think it needs it in about this way. (This will be my last parable, and then I will conclude this final gift from Ursinus to your minds, and I join you in regretting that it is not a richer gift.) When I was small my uncle had a fantastic collection of Caruso recordings. I used to put them on one of those hand-cranked victrolas, and turn them out on rainy days and listen. They were scratchy, and they were certified the lowest of low-fi, great discs that were smooth on one side and had grooves only on the other. And the winding would go down after a while; you couldn't get a constant speed on them. I now have a record player that's supposed to adjust its speed, very fancy; but this one, as it unwound, would slow down and pretty soon the tenor would become a baritone, become a basso, and you would have to wind it up again; but despite all these imperfections this was undoubtedly the great voice of the century. You could hear it.

I think the voice partook of two characteristics. Part of its strength was in the physical power. There seemed to be no end to the man's range; he could do anything. When baritones showed up at rehearsals he used to bet with them that he could hit a lower note than they, and he usually won. He never bet with the sopranos that he could hit a higher one than they, but nevertheless here is a tenor who could hit a lower note than most baritones, and you'd think as you listened, "This is the top (or the bottom) of the range," and effortlessly he'd be beyond it.

He was forever exceeding your expectations. That was a richness. You see, when you heard Caruso sing, you not only heard the song being sung, but you underwent an expansion of your whole conception of the possibility of music. You had not known it was possible to sing this well. And therefore you had a new dimension to imagine.

Part of it, too, was his fantastic breath control. I think he breathed about three times a day. He just went on the rest of the time. But more than that, there was a kind of musical intelligence to his way of going. Caruso was born to sing Neapolitan folk songs and Verdi, those two things. Somehow the Neapolitan folk songs and the Verdi had grown to be sung by just this voice. I used to kid, and say that it took two thousand years of spaghetti and olive oil to marinate just that tone into a human throat. Nevertheless, that is the tone for these songs and these were the songs for this tone.

I had all this in mind some time later when I heard Mario Lanza sing, because Mario Lanza was being touted as a new Caruso. He was a man of power and dimension; as a matter of fact he was even more physically powerful than Caruso. But he did not know what to do with the physical power. What he lacked was this perfect musical marriage of voice and song. There is a line by Yeats that comes to mind: "Oh body swayed to music, oh brightening glance, how shall I know the dancer from the dance?" The two have become one: that perfect union of things which is the joy of the arts: it's the delight of them, and finally, it's the instruction of them.

Lanza had more musculature than Caruso; as a matter of fact he used to bull the song. He reminded me of a nice old man who came around to me once when I was first learning to play billiards and he said, "Son, you have a sledge-hammer touch." I've never forgotten that. He said, "You don't hit that ball, you stroke it." Well, I had a perfectly sound categorical theory of billiards. If I could just hit the first ball with infinite speed it would go round and round the table and eventually contact the second one. The only trouble with this theory was the ball kept jumping off the table. That wrinkle I couldn't get out of it.

I had this in mind as I listened to Mario Lanza. He had more power; he had more dimension; but he lacked this perfect marriage. And what I found myself thinking (I think it's the gist of the curriculum, really) is—a bull cannot sing like a man.

I submit to you that's a very important piece of information. It concerns more than the girls in the graduating class: it is a mistake to take a bull to be a man; I think it concerns the man too. When I listen to some of the sounds from Washington I think the electorate keeps confusing these two sounds, and that we probably send as many bulls to Washington as we do men. We'd probably be better off if we had a firmer sense of what the man sounds like. But there is only one way you can tell that difference: you have to have heard the man sing. If you haven't heard him, if you haven't got his voice, his dimension, his imaginations, his resonance in your heads, you are going to make this confusion.

I am going to suggest in my own confused way that this is really the essence of a liberal arts curriculum: To give you the sounds you tell a man by and so try to stay off some of the horns of the bull.

Thank you very much.

Commencement

A class numbering 222 young men and women was graduated from Ursinus on June 8. The Bachelor of Arts degree was granted to 116 students; 100 received the Bachelor of Science degree.

In addition, four persons received a degree of associate in arts and two were awarded the degree of associate in business administration. These latter degrees were granted to those in the Evening School who had completed the equivalent of two full years of college study. Five other Evening School students were among those who were granted the regular four-year Bachelor of Arts degree.

John Ciardi, LL.D.

John Ciardi, poetry editor of the Saturday Review, delivered the commencement address and received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

His citation read in part as follows: "Mr. Ciardi's is a voice that expresses the humanist's hope, in our proudly begadgeted age, that having achieved a technology, mankind may yet go on to achieve a civilization. It is the poet's vision of this paradox of our era—the existence of breeding places of ignorance, violence and hate that flourish luxuriantly, primitively, in the midst of a society that thinks it has mastered nature—that gives his words authority in our land."

He was further cited "for his special vision and his engagement in the transcendent problems of our age, and for his affirmative and provocative stimulation in the special realm of liberal education."

The second recipient of an honorary degree was John Updike, winner of the 1963 National Book Award for "the most distinguished work of American fiction for the year," who received the honorary degree of Doctor of Letters.

John Updike, Litt.D.

In addition to The Centaur, which won him the 1963 NBA, Mr. Updike has published six other volumes in the past six years, including Rabbit, Run and The Poorhouse Fair.

Mr. Updike is a native of Shillington, Pa., and the son of Wesley R. and Linda Hoyer Updike, both of whom were graduated from Ursinus in 1923.

The novelist was graduated from Harvard University in 1954 and worked on the staff of The New Yorker from 1955 to 1957.

Part of his citation said, "John Updike is a native of neighboring Berks County, whose people and places form the ambiguous but always tangible and true fabric of a large part of

Honor Graduates

The valedictorian of the Class of 1964 was Barbara Ann Greim of Norristown, who was graduated magna cum laude, with departmental honors in mathematics.

Wade Alan Alexander of Hatboro was salutatorian of the class and was also graduated magna cum laude, with departmental honors in history.

A third magna cum laude graduate was Jacqueline Irene Kroschwitz, of Trenton, New Jersey; she received departmental honors in chemistry.

Miss Greim received a Carnegie Institute Fellowship for three years of graduate study in mathematics at the University of North Carolina, and Miss Kroschwitz plans to begin work on her doctorate in chemistry at the University of Pennsylvania. Mr. Alexander will return to Ursinus next year for selected courses in economics prior to returning graduate study in that field.

Eight other students were graduated cum laude. They were Alma K. Altemose, also with departmental honors in mathematics; Marie E. Devine, also with departmental honors in English; Mary Ann K. Haas, daughter of Paul P. Haas, '39; Joan F. Kleinhoff; Samuel N. Stayer, who also received departmental honors in both English and history; Charles J. Stevens, also with departmental honors in political science; Donald H. Stock; and Bonnie Lou Willson.

Departmental honors were granted to sixteen seniors, the highest number in the history of the College. Along with the students mentioned above who won departmental honors, they were James P. his work. A writer who can provoke the diverse reactions that he has provoked is a writer whose words breathe truth which his readers can recognize, even though, for each one who savors the vibrancy of the life depicted, there be another who is disturbed by a vision of what he cannot appreciate, and perhaps fears.

"Mr. Updike shed upon his material the light of a consummate art of writing; rarely has an author emerged in our land who has used the English language with the precision and brilliance of the man we now honor.

"It is high time to rectify the error made by Mr. Updike's parents in sending him to Harvard, and to legitimize him as a son of Ursinus College; and so Mr. President, I present to you John Hoyer Updike, that you may confer upon him the degree of Doctor of Letters."

Edward K. Knettler, D.D.

The Reverend Edward K. Knettler, '41, was the third recipient of an honorary degree; he received the Doctor of Divinity from the hands of Dr. Helferich.

After graduate work at Drew Theological Seminary and Yale University, he and his wife went to China in 1946, where Mr. Knettler served as a district missionary and as professor of homiletics and pastoral theology in the West China Union Theological College at Chengtu.

When the Communists took over in China in 1950, he and his wife were put under detention until 1952.

They were re-assigned to Taiwan in 1953, where he has been, since that date, the pastor of the Wesley Methodist Church in Taipei, the capital of Taiwan. Last year he became district superintendent of a group of Methodist Churches on Taiwan.

Mr. Knettler delivered the baccalaureate address to the graduating class on Sunday, June 7.

His citation included the following statement: "Mr. Knettler is one of the many graduates of Ursinus College who in the service of his church in far places has found harassment and hardship as well as recognition and honor."

Philip W. Weiss, D.D.

The Rev. Philip William Weiss, since 1946 the pastor of Bethany United Church of Christ in Philadelphia, was the other recipient of an honorary Doctor of Divinity degree.

Mr. Weiss is moderator of the Philadelphia Association of the Pennsylvania Southeast Conference of the UCC, and both of his daughters were graduated from Ursinus College, Charlotte, in 1960, and Valerie, in 1963.

His citation said: "One of Pastor Weiss' distinctions, perhaps the one that links him most closely with our own particular section of the country and with the traditions of the German Reformed Church, is that his parish is the last of the United Church of Christ in Pennsylvania to continue the old custom of a regular weekly worship service in the German language."

DINING HALL CONSTRUCTION

Construction of the new dining facilities building began on Wednesday, May 13, 1964. After a small bulldozer stripped the top soil from the ground, larger equipment was brought in to begin excavation for the basement and for digging the twenty-foot deep storm sewer network.

By July 26 all concrete walls for the front basement were completed, and on August 1 all footings and walls for supporting the structural steel were ready.

At this writing erection of the structural steel has begun, and this work will be finished by mid-September. All sanitary and rain lines under the basement floor have been laid, and some of the large equipment for the building (particularly, the air conditioning unit) will be moved into place during the erection of the structural steel.

It is expected that the roof of the building will be on and that inside work will begin before Christmas. Authorities report that construction is slightly ahead of schedule and that the building will be ready for use in the fall of 1965.

Bond and Miller are the architects, Irwin & Leighton are the contractors, and John W. Furlow & company are the engineers.

Capital Funds Campaign Contributions

Total $356,225

Contributions from 2,588 alumni to the 1964 Loyalty Fund (Capital Funds Campaign) totaled $163,657.02. Total contributions toward the half-million dollar Capital Funds Campaign goal now amount to $356,225.25.

The largest gift to the 1964 campaign was $15,000. (The largest single gift in 1963 was $24,000.) The next largest gift was $5,000 followed by a gift of $4,000. The average contribution this year was $63.38, five dollars less than the average gift last year.

Four hundred and seventy alumni were members of the Century Club; that is, they contributed $100 or more to this year's campaign. Twenty-six alumni were members of the President's Club; they contributed $1,000 or more to the 1964 campaign.

The Class of 1939, which celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary of graduation from Ursinus, had the largest number of Century Club members, twenty-six. The Class of 1940 had twenty-four Century Club members, and the Classes of 1938 and 1943 each had twenty-three members.

Forty companies which match the contributions of their employees who are alumni contributors to our fund sent Ursinus College $7,311.50.

In the 1964 campaign eight classes raised their percentage of participation. They were the Classes of 1899, 1914, 1916, 1919, 1940, 1958, 1959 and 1960. The Class of 1960 had the biggest gain, rising from 44% to 52% participation.

The one disappointing feature in the 1964 campaign was the drop in percentage of participation. The College fell from its all-time high of 56% participation to 50% in 1964.

Copy of a letter received in the Alumni Office in April informing us that the college would receive $125 as an award for improvement in annual giving.

By August 1, 1964, 492 alumni had paid in full their pledges to the Capital Funds Campaign. A letter was sent to each of these alumni on August 15, thanking them for their generous and prompt support of the Capital Funds Campaign and telling them that they would no longer receive a "Statement of Account" but that they would be asked to continue their support of the annual giving program, the Loyalty Fund. Any contributions which they make to the Loyalty Fund before June 30, 1966, will be added to their permanent record at Ursinus of their participation in the Capital Funds Campaign.

Statements of Account will continue to be sent in December and in June to all alumni who pledged to the Capital Funds Campaign, with the exception of those who have paid their pledges in full.

The opening letter of the 1965 Loyalty Fund Campaign will be sent to all alumni early in September. The form of this letter will be quite different from those of previous years. This time a four-page letter will be sent in order that information concerning Homecoming, fall football and soccer games, Forums and cultural events, and other information of interest to alumni may be included.

American Alumni Council Award

Dear President Helfferich:

It is indeed a pleasure to inform you that Ursinus College has won honorable mention for Improvement Among Large Coeducational Colleges in the 1964 Alumni Giving Incentive Award Competition. The presentation to the College of this award will take place during an award session of the AAC's 49th general Conference at the Denver Hilton Hotel in Colorado.

On behalf of the judges the American Alumni Council, and the United States Steel Foundation may I extend warm congratulations. The notable record of alumni support registered by your former students has brought another mark of distinction to your institutional family.

Cordially,

(Signed)

Dr. and Mrs. Eugene H. Miller point out Calcutta, India, where they spent a year on a Fulbright fellowship in 1962.

Dr. and Mrs. Miller

Dr. and Mrs. Eugene H. Miller are serving as "professorial lecturers" in sociology and political science for the summer term in the George Washington University graduate study program of the Army War College at the Carlisle, Pa., barracks.

Dr. Eugene H. Miller, '33, head of Ursinus' department of political science, teaches a graduate seminar on "International Organization and the United Nations." His wife, Dr. Jessie Ashworth Miller, lecturer in sociology at Ursinus, is conducting a similar seminar on "Contact and Change."

Mrs. Miller has the distinction of being the first woman ever to teach at the Army War College.

The classes taught by the Ursinus couple include approximately 40 of the 202 army, navy, marine and air corps officers and representatives of federal government agency staffs who make up the student body of the Army's senior educational institution.

They began teaching at Carlisle on a part-time basis the first week of May and continued on a five-day schedule until July 15. Although this is Mrs. Miller's first assignment with the Army War College graduate level program, her husband has been conducting seminars there for the past two years on "Diplomatic Relations Since 1945."

participating in an eight-week Institute sponsored by the National Science Foundation at Michigan State University, East Lansing, Michigan, this summer.

Miss Schultz

Miss Blanche B. Schultz, '41, assistant professor of mathematics, received a National Science Foundation grant to attend a summer conference on linear algebra June 7-26 at the University of Arkansas.

Dr. Paul Wagner

Dr. Paul R. Wagner, '32, head of the biology department, was chosen as one of twenty participants in a summer Conference on Genetics Teaching in College which was held during August at Colorado State University, Fort Collins, Colorado, under the auspices of the National Science Foundation.

Dr. Staiger

Dr. Roger P. Staiger, '43, professor of chemistry, was granted a U. S. Patent on a method for the economical production of chemical compounds which are exact duplications of grape and other fruit flavorings.

All the experiments which resulted in the new-found process were carried on in the chemistry laboratory at Ursinus. Technically the process is described as one for preparing esters of anthranilic acid.

For the sixth summer Dr. Staiger served as instructor at the Berks County Summer Science Seminar, which was held for four weeks beginning June 15 at Albright College, Reading. The seminar was sponsored jointly by the college, the Berks County Science Teachers Association, and the Reading Chemists Club.

Approximately thirty high school seniors are chosen, one from each of the county's high schools, each judged to be "the best chemistry student" in his or her school, and in the four-week seminar they are given an introductory college course in chemistry.

Mr. Marsteller

Walter W. Marsteller, '49, assistant professor of physics, received a National Science Foundation grant to spend the month of August at the University of Colorado at a conference for college teachers of physics.

In addition to his classroom and laboratory duties Mr. Marsteller designed and built the observatory, mounting and drives for the Elihu Thomson Telescope located on the observation deck of Pfahler Hall of Science.

Mrs. Marsteller, the former Deborah Norton, '49, accompanied her husband to Colorado. She shares many of her husband's interests, especially in the field of astronomy. They have an astronomical observatory in their home at 204 E. Seventh Avenue, Trappe.

Dr. Hartzell

Dr. George W. Hartzell, head of the Modern Language Department, will be on sabbatical leave during the first semester of the 1964-65 academic year. He and Mrs. Hartzell, with their youngest son, spent the summer in Europe.

Dr. Yost

ing" at the June commencement exercises.

Dr. Pancoast

After eighteen years, including thirteen winning seasons, Dr. G. Sieber Pancoast, professor of political science, has resigned as head baseball coach. Dr. Pancoast, who is mayor of Collegeville, recently received the Republican nomination as the candidate for the State House of Representatives from the fourth district, Montgomery County.

"To become more active in politics, baseball was one thing I had to give up," he said.

Anticipating his election to the House in November, Dr. Pancoast said that he had arranged his teaching schedule in order that he will be free on certain days of the week in order to handle his legislative duties.

Dr. Howard

Dr. Robert S. Howard, associate professor of biology, received a National Science Foundation grant to attend the nine-week Summer Institute for College Teachers of Biology which was held at the University of New Mexico June 15 to August 14. The institute concentrated on developments in radiation biology.

Dr. Howard was recently notified that his biographical sketch will be included in the forthcoming edition of Leaders in American Science.

Miss Rothenberger

Miss Ruth H. Rothenberger, '36, dean of women students at Ursinus, directed the Counselor-in-Training course at Camp Indian Run, Glen Moore, Chester County, during the month of July.

Dr. Hinkle

Gerald M. Hinkle, instructor in English and administrative assistant in charge of registration at Ursinus, was awarded his Doctor of Philosophy degree by Yale University at its commencement program in June.

An ordained minister of the United Church of Christ, Dr. Hinkle did his graduate study in church history and historical theology. He wrote his dissertation on "The Theology of the Ursinus Movement with Particular Reference to the Thought of Dr. John Henry Augustus Bomberger." Dr. Bomberger was one of the founders and the first president of Ursinus.

Dr. Snyder

Dr. Evan S. Snyder, '44, associate professor of physics, was an instructor at an Institute for College Teachers of Physics this summer at New Mexico State University, University Park, New Mexico.

The New Mexico institute is sponsored by the National Science Foundation, and approximately forty college teachers of physics were enrolled. Dr. Snyder taught a course on Newtonian mechanics.

Dr. Helen Garrett, Chairman of the French Department, took a sabbatical leave of absence during the spring semester. She sailed for Paris aboard the Queen Mary in March and remained aboard until the end of the summer.

In Paris Dr. Garrett engaged in independent research at the Bibliothèque Nationale on modern French philosophy and literature, in particular, Balzac and the French novel in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. Dr. Garrett's interest in Balzac extends from her Ph.D. thesis, which concerned Balzac.

While she was abroad Dr. Garrett also traveled for pleasure in England, Spain and Italy.

This was Dr. Garrett's first leave of absence in her twenty years with Ursinus. She has in the past visited France several times during the summer months; her last trip was in 1961.

Dr. Parsons

Dr. William T. Parsons, '47, assistant professor of history, served as a member of the summer faculty at Eastern Baptist College, St. Davids, Pa., in a five-week American Studies Program offered this summer under a grant from the William Robertson Coe Foundation.

Fifty Coe Fellowships for high school teachers of history, the social sciences, and literature were provided to aid the program, in which the basic required course on "The Growth of American Democracy" was taught by Dr. Parsons.

Dr. James Wagner

Dr. James E. Wagner, vice-president of Ursinus, left on July 24 for Europe where, after visits to Rome and Geneva, he went to Frankfurt, Germany, for the 19th General Council of the World Alliance of Reformed and Presbyterian Churches.

Dr. Wagner has been a vice-president of the World Alliance since the previous General Council at Sao Paulo, Brazil, in 1959, and has been a member of the organization's executive committee since 1954.

Shaw-Bernard Collection

During the summer months the Shaw-Bernard Collection of over four hundred artifacts, formerly housed in the museum room above the Ursinus Library, was recatalogued and reentered. For nearly a half-century no formal appraisals had been made of this interesting assortment of items from around the globe. Now re-evaluated, several of the more outstanding objects in the Collection have been put on permanent display in the foyer of the campus library; and a booklet describing the origins and total listings of the Shaw-Bernard Collection has been made available to the public for the first time.

Dr. Gerald Hinkle, an English professor at Ursinus, supervised the museum project, and Miss Carolyn J. Mattern, '67, was responsible for the Collection's new system of classification. Also helpful was Miss Helen M. Feree, Dr. Gerald Hinkle, above, who completed his first year as instructor in English at Ursinus, is shown seated before a book-stack containing part of the private library of Dr. Bomberger, which Dr. Hinkle catalogued this summer. The three Bomberger volumes on the table date from the late 17th century.

Dr. Hinkle also catalogued the Shaw-Bernard Collection, several items of which he is seen holding.

'14, whose interest in the Shaw-Bernard artifacts reaches back to her own student days on the Ursinus campus when she was instrumental in getting the Collection here.

Students, faculty, and friends of Ursinus are welcome to consult the library staff, should they wish to arrange for the loan of artifacts from the Shaw-Bernard files.

Campus Chest

The Campus Chest at Ursinus raised more than $1,700 during its drive in 1964. $400 was sent to each of the following charities: World University Service, the Montgomery County Association for Retarded Children, St. Gabriel's Hall (where many of the students are doing volunteer work,) and the Royer-Greaves School for the Blind (of which Dr. Jessie Royer-Greaves, '92, is the head).

Student Agency

Under the auspices of the campus Student Agency, Lewis R. Linet, Jr., president, the "New Lost City Ramblers," one of the country's top folk-music groups, presented a concert in the gym at Ursinus on May 15.

The trio was organized in 1958, appeared at the 1959 Newport Folk Festival, and has recorded several albums under the Folkways label, according to Linet.

The Student Agency was organized last fall in order to bring to the campus, under students auspices, outstanding folk-music programs. Previous performances included The Four Freshmen, Joe and Penny Aronson, and Lonnie Johnson and Gordon Bok.

St. Andrew's Society Award

Dale Arthur Jones, a sophomore at Ursinus, was awarded a scholarship by the St. Andrew's Society of Philadelphia to spend his junior year in study at the University of Aberdeen, Scotland.

He is the third Ursinus College student to receive a St. Andrew's Society Scholarship since the Society established the grant in 1957. In 1957 the recipient was William Godschalk, and the following year's award went to another Ursinus student, Philip Rowe.

The Society requires that candidates nominated for the scholarships must be "American citizens who are outstanding examples of the finest type of American youth."

A.P.O.

The Ursinus College chapter of Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity, has been chosen as one of three of the national's 320 local chapters for major participation in the program of the organization's national convention at Denver, Colorado, in December.

Alumni As Teachers

Fifty-one (25%) of the 222 members of the Class of 1964 qualified for certification as secondary school teachers.

Thirty of these recent Ursinus graduates will join the faculties of Pennsylvania schools this fall. Ten others will teach in New Jersey, and the remainder will teach in Maryland and the State of New York. Eighteen of those who will teach in Pennsylvania will be employed by Montgomery County Schools.

Eight of the fifty-one qualified teacher-graduates plan to go on immediately to fulltime graduate school study.

Alumni should note that Ursinus still does not offer a major in education. Rather, in accord with its emphasis on a liberal arts education, it requires all students to major in specific subject fields such as history, mathematics, and biology.

In addition to a major in a specific field, students who expect to teach usually take the required courses for state certification. This work includes a ten-week period of practice teaching done with the cooperation of nine area high schools and under the supervision of Dr. Mark G. Messinger, '17, professor of education at Ursinus.

According to Mr. J. Allen Minnich, professor of education and director of placement at the college, approximately 450 Ursinus graduates have gone into secondary school teaching during the past ten years.

Women's Sports

The women's softball team had another undefeated season; their proficiency is reflected in the following typical scores: West Chester, 15-3 and 17-7, and the University of Penn., 36-1.

The women's lacrosse team was handed its first defeat since lacrosse was introduced at Ursinus in 1955. West Chester State College upset Ursinus, 8-9, but in a return match the Ursinus squad trounced W.C., 14-4.

Seven Ursinus women were chosen for positions on the United States Lacrosse Team following the National Tournament. Those who gained a berth on the first team were Vonnie Gros, '57, Mrs. Enid Clinchard Russell, '66, Judith Smiley, '65, and Sue Day, '66. Those who made the reserves were Sue Honeysett, '64, Pat Woodbury Zellej, '58, and Lee Spahr Bush, '65.

All but one of the girls mentioned above were invited to go on the nine-week tour of the British Isles.

Because of school work and other commitments, Vonnie Gros, Sue Day and Pat Zellej decided not to make the tour.

Sue Honeysett, Enid Russell and Judy Smiley, however, have consented to accompany the team on their tour through Britain during August and September.

Dr. and Mrs. Roland F. Doane, above, will be on leave of absence during the coming academic year in order to serve Miles College, a Negro college on the outskirts of Birmingham, Alabama. The Doanes' interest in Miles was aroused by a story they read in a nationally known weekly periodical.

Mrs. Doane will teach French and Russian, and Mr. Doane will teach French and assist the college in setting up a major in that language.

The Doanes joined the Ursinus faculty in 1960. Both have their doctor's degrees from the University of Paris; they came to Ursinus after many years of teaching at the University of Vermont.

STURGIS RETIRES

Dr. Russell D. Sturgis, who for thirty-nine years has served Ursinus College, stepped into semi-retirement on June 30. During his life at Ursinus he literally brought the Chemistry Department from the bottom to the top—that is, from the basement laboratories in Bomberger Hall to the third floor of Pfahler Hall of Science.

The 1964 Commencement weekend may well go down in campus history as "The Russell D. Sturgis Weekend;" a succession of events marked the retirement of this veteran member of the faculty.

Appropriately, the first event honoring Dr. Sturgis came at the annual Faculty Club Dinner at the Spring Mountain House, where his colleagues lauded him for his work among them. Three faculty members, Dr. Frank L. Manning, Dr. Calvin D. Yost and Dr. Roger P. Staiger spoke briefly of him as a good friend and a great educator.

On Alumni Day, June 6, more than ninety of his former students surprised him with a luncheon at the Perkiomen Bridge Hotel in Collegeville.

Among the alumni who gave interesting and pleasant testimonials of their teacher were: Alfonso Balch, '30, an industrialist and fellow worker on school board activities with Dr. Sturgis; Dr. Trygve R. Meeker, '51, a chemist with Bell Telephone Laboratories; Dr. Herbert Barron, '28, his family physician; Dr. Robert L. Bate-man, '31, of Union Carbide, who represented all the former laboratory assistants in the Department of Chemistry; and William Evans, '35, who founded the Hall Chemical Society, which later became the Beardwood Chemical Society at Ursinus College.

The only non-Ursinus speaker was Dr. William Mosher, Chairman of the Department of Chemistry at the University of Delaware, Dr. Sturgis' alma mater.

At the luncheon Dr. Sturgis was presented with an Ursinus Captain's Chair, and it was announced that already 104 of his former students had contributed $2,736 toward the establishment of "The Russell D. Sturgis Fund." (The Fund may eventually develop into an endowment for a professorship, and all alumni are invited to designate their Loyalty Fund gifts to this permanent Fund.)

The luncheon was arranged by Mrs. James E. (Judith Adams) Feig, '59, of Oreland; Dr. Roger P. Staiger served as master of ceremonies.

At each place-setting at the luncheon was a card on which was imprinted a picture of Dr. Sturgis and a message which read in part as follows, "Esteemed and admired by his many students, Dr. Sturgis' interest, guidance, wisdom, fatherly counselling, and keen sense of humor have done much to ease the burden of our college years and to inspire us on to new achievements."

Sunday, June 7, the University of Delaware, from which he was graduated in 1919, bestowed on him its honorary degree of Doctor of Science. At these same commencement exercises four of his former Ursinus students received their Doctor of Philosophy degree, and two other former students of his received a Master of Science degree.

The following day, Monday, June 8, Dr. Sturgis was back on the Ursinus campus serving in his usual capacity as grand marshal of the Ursinus College commencement academic procession. During these exercises he was also lauded by Dr. Helfferich and his colleagues on the faculty.

Dr. Sturgis is seen, left, receiving an Ursinus Captain's chair as a gift from his former students. The presentation was made by Dr. Staiger, Dr. Sturgis' successor as chairman of the Department of Chemistry, who also acted as toastmaster at the June 6 luncheon honoring Dr. Sturgis.

Mrs. Judith (Adams) Feig, to the right of Dr. Sturgis, made all the luncheon arrangements. Mrs. Sturgis is seated to the left; Marylee Sturgis and Dr. William Mosher, chairman of the Department of Chemistry at the University of Delaware, are seated to the right.

Eight Ursinus alumni and Dr. Sturgis received degrees from the University of Delaware on June 7. Pictured above are Dr. Sturgis, who received an honorary Doctor of Science degree, and six of his former students, all of whom received earned degrees in chemistry. They are, left to right, Christine E. Kuhn, '62, M.S.; Donald W. Bretzger, '58, Ph.D.; Henry Richmond, '60, Ph.D.; John E. Innes, '60, Ph.D.; Walter E. Meier, '59, Ph.D.; Barbara Eichel Schultz, '62, M.S.

Dr. Sturgis received his master's degree and his Ph.D. degree from the University of Pennsylvania. After a year of teaching at Franklin and Marshall College, he came to Ursinus in 1925 and was made Head of the Department of Chemistry in 1926.

Along with his work at the college he has carried major civic, religious and educational responsibilities in the community. Since 1928 he has served as a member of the board of deacons and as teacher of the Men's Bible Class of the First Baptist Church in Norristown. (Many students will remember that for years he has opened his home for and guided students in weekly biblical and religious discussions.)

Also, Dr. Sturgis recently completed thirty years service on the Collegeville-Trappe School Board.

As an avocation, he built an "O" gauge model railway which every Friday night he and four associates run on miniature schedule "reproducing the Pennsylvania Railroad's North-South, East-West transfer center at Harrisburg. He has housed this miniature railroad in his basement for the past thirty years.

His other hobby is a study of Civil War strategy, and he has visited many of the historic battlefields of that war in pursuing this interest.

Dr. Sturgis married the former Olive Strickland, a native of Maryland, and their only child, Marylee, was graduated from Ursinus in 1948. Miss Sturgis earned a master of science degree in chemistry at the University of Delaware and later received a master's degree in library science at Carnegie Institute of Technology. She is now employed as technical librarian for the Food Machinery Corporation, Princeton, N.J.

Among the Ursinus mementoes which he cherishes most is the letter dated June 10, 1925, which he received from the late Dr. George Leslie Omwake, president of the college from 1912 to 1936. In that letter Dr. Omwake wrote to Dr. Sturgis, "I hope you will accept the call," and being the devoutly religious man he is Dr. Sturgis says, "I have always liked to believe that God called me to be a teacher of chemistry just as he has called other men to other vocations including the ministry."

Dr. Sturgis will continue to reside at 26 Sixth Avenue in Collegeville.

STAIGER HEADS CHEM DEPT.

Dr. Roger P. Staiger, '43

Recently Dr. Helfferich announced that Dr. Roger P. Staiger will succeed Dr. Russell D. Sturgis as head of the chemistry department at Ursinus.

Dr. Staiger studied under Dr. Sturgis during his undergraduate years, and for twenty-one years he has taught at Ursinus under Dr. Sturgis' guidance.

On June 30, after almost forty years on the Ursinus faculty, Dr. Sturgis moved into semi-retirement.

Dr. Staiger's wife, Margaret (Brown), '43, will continue to work as a library assistant at the College. Their only child, Roger, Jr. is a sophomore at Bucknell University.

Track Team Undefeated

Undefeated, with a 10-0 record, the 1964 Ursinus College track team became the first in the history of the sport at Ursinus to finish with an unblemished season.

In addition to the undefeated season the Bears also won the Middle Atlantic State Collegiate Athletic Conference College Division Track and Field Championship for the second consecutive year.

Writing in the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, George Kiseda reported:

"Ursinus celebrated Swarthmore's Centennial by winning everything except an embossed copy of the Blue Route plans in the Middle Atlantic Conference College Division Championships . . .

"The defending champions took home seven gold medals and scored fifty-one points for a runaway victory over the fifteen teams field. Muhlenberg and Dickinson tied for second with twenty-three points . . ."

In winning the Middle Atlantic the following men contributed as follows:

Bill Cooper successfully defended his 880 championship with a 1:57.2, won the mile in 4:25.1, and ran a :49.5 third leg on the mile relay. Pete Dunn also successfully defended his 440 crown with a meet-tying :49.5. He came back strong to take a second in the 220, and he ran a :48.9 leg on the relay.

Tom Walter ran away from the field in the 220 low hurdles in the fine time of :24.4, placed fifth in the 100 and ran second leg of the relay. Tony Sermarini led off the mile relay and picked up a fourth in the javelin and a fifth in the 440.

Sophomore Bill Robart won the discus and placed third in the shot put. Bob Gladstone won the broad jump with a 21' 11 $\frac{1}{4}$ " effort. Al Hakanson was third in the discus and fourth in the shot put.

The mile relay team of Sermarini, Walter, Cooper, and Dunn retained its championship and set a new school record of 3:23.3, to complete the scoring.

Over the past four years, the Bears won thirty-one of the past thirty-five meets, are undefeated at home since April, 1961, and are undefeated in the last eighteen meets.

Once again, competing in indoor meets primed the trackmen for the outdoor season. The Philadelphia Inquirer Charities Meet, The Philadelphia Department of Recreation Meet, indoor meets with West Chester and Temple, Delaware and Albright, and an outdoor practice meet at Franklin Field with the University of Pennsylvania all proved invaluable in affording the incentive, experience and conditioning necessary for top flight regular season performance. Dunn and Cooper also competed in several of the meets in New York City.

Cooper was especially effective indoors, winning the mile in 4:25.6 and the 880 in 1:56.9 at West Chester against Temple and West Chester and the 1000 yard run at Delaware against Delaware and Albright; he placed second in the 1000 yard run at the Philadelphia Department of Recreation meet and second in the 1000 yard run handicap in the Inquirer Games.

The one disappointment in the season came on a dropped baton in the Pop Haddleton Memorial Mile Relay at the Penn Relays. A :50.0 third leg by Cooper and a tremendous :47.8 anchor by Dunn salvaged a third, and came within a whisker of second.

The following seniors will be sorely missed next year:

Co-Captain John Hunsicker, who, in 1964, won the 120 high hurdles four times, and was second in the 220 low hurdles twice and third seven times. In the 1963 Middle Atlantic he was third in the 120 yard high hurdles.

The record-breaking relay team was composed of (l. to r.) Pete Dunn, '65, Bill Cooper, '65, Tom Walter, '65, and Tony Sermarini, '64.

Penn Relays: Third in Mile Relay. Middle Atlantic Champions: 51 points.

Co-Captain Tony Sermarini was a tremendous competitor and a great leverage man, always willing and able to jump into a spot with point possibilities and come through. In 1964 he won the javelin seven times and was second twice. He took three seconds in the 440, four seconds and two thirds in the 880, a second in the broad jump and a second in the 100. In the Middle Atlantic in 1963 he was fourth in the 440 and second in the javelin and led-off the championship mile relay team, as he also did in the 1964 championships. Also in 1964 he was fourth in the javelin and fifth in the 440.

Al Hakanson, a great shot and discus man, won the shot twice, was second five times and third, once. In the discus he was first twice and second six times. He placed fifth in the shot in 1963 and third in the discus and fourth in the shot in the Middle Atlantic in 1964.

Bob Gladstone won the broad jump eight times and was second once. He also placed second once and third twice in the high jump. He won the broad jump championship in the 1964 Middle Atlantic.

Ron Ritz was a persistent and capable pole vaulter, placing first once, second four times, and third three times.

The high scorers for the team this year were William Cooper, '65, (116 1/4 points); Peter Dunn, '65, (101 1/2 points); Tom Walter, '65, (86 1/4 points); William Robart, '66, (83 points); Tony Sermarini, '64, (80 points); Al Hakanson, '64, (59 points); and Robert Gladstone, '64, (53 points). Along with these men, the letter winners included John Hunsicker, '64, Harold Krum, '67, Walt Irvine, '67 Jonathan Katz, '66, Fred-eric Ferrell, '67, and Ronald Ritz, '64.

Bill Cooper was chosen by his teammates as the most valuable track man of the year, and he and Pete Dunn and Tom Walter were elected Tri-Captains for the 1965 season.

School records were established by Bill Robart in the shot put, 49' 8 1/2", and in the discus, 151' 9 1/2". The relay team set a new record of 3:23.3 and Patterson Field records were established by Pete Dunn in the 440, :48.7, and by the mile relay team, with a 3:24.1 clocking. Sermarini holds the school javelin record of 195' 3". In the 1964 season Ursinus was undefeated in the 220 low hurdles, the 440, the 880, the mile and the broad jump.

Richard Sponenbergh, '65, and George Freeland, '67, were the team's managers.

All alumni join the Journal editor in congratulating members of the team and coach Ray Gurzynski, '39, on their unbeatable season. Prospects for '65 look excellent, and we wish them well on their winning ways.

On Sunday, May 31, the Alumni Association of Ursinus College honored the 1964 Track Team at a special dinner arranged for them at Moorehead's in Trappe.

Cooper breaks the tape to win the mile at the Middle Atlantic Championship meet, as Dunn looks on in the background.

Speakers at the dinner included Everett M. Bailey, Director of Athletics at Ursinus, and Dennis Wilson, '63, Captain of the 1963 Track Team. Richard Schellhase, '45, Alumni Secretary, acted as Toastmaster.

The Alumni Association presented each member of the undefeated team with a trophy, and Coach Gurzynski was given an Ursinus College Captain's Chair. President Helfferich concluded the banquet with appropriate remarks directed to the squad.

Along with members of the team, all past track captains and record holders were invited to be guests of the Association at the banquet.

Among the alumni in attendance were Glenn Eshbach, '39, George Kennedy, '49, William Turner, '50, Joseph Shaw, '50, Paul Scheiver, '51, Richard Eshbach, '54, Harry Donnelly, '56, Lee Lawhead, '57, Cal Fox, '60, Richard Woodruff, '62, Pete Wise, '62, Robert Carney, '63, and Dennis Wilson, '63.

The Second Mile

Four hundred and ninety-two alumni have already paid in full the pledges which they made to the Capital Funds Campaign. Of this number, three hundred and eighty-seven have made contributions in excess of their pledges. These latter alumni, who are volunteering to go the second mile in their giving, have contributed a total of $7,661.66 over the amounts which they have pledged.

The names of the 492 alumni who have paid their pledges in full are listed on the opposite page. Those among this number who contributed toward their pledge between July 1, 1963, and June 30, 1964, are also listed in the following pages among the contributors in the 1964 Loyalty Fund.

The names of alumni who have paid in full their pledges since August, 1964, will have their names printed in the November issue of the Journal. Subsequent issues of the Journal will carry names of those who pay their pledges in full in the future.

To All Alumni: July 20, 1964

The pleasure of giving to the college of our choice, URSINUS, was amply demonstrated by 2,588 of our alumni, as you will recognize from the final figures for the Loyalty Fund Campaign appearing in this issue. The $163,657 for the year was exceeded only by the preceding year, 1963, the first year of our Capital Funds Campaign.

As Dr. Helfferich wrote a year ago, "Alumni Giving is now established at a higher level." The results this year bear out his prediction. The Alumni Association and its Loyalty Fund Committee are grateful to all alumni for this expression of interest in and gratitude to Ursinus. Your response this year and in future years assures that our Alma Mater will move ahead as a progressive and expanding liberal arts institution, benefiting future generations of students.

Irwin S. Leinbach, '29

Dr. and Mrs. Irwin Leinbach in the physical therapy room at Cho Ray hospital in Saigon, South Viet Nam.

A prominent St. Petersburg, Florida orthopaedic surgeon, Irwin S. Leinbach, and his wife spent five weeks (September 26 to November 4, 1963) as volunteer workers in Cho-Ray Hospital in the Chinese section of Saigon in Viet Nam.

The program under which Dr. and Mrs. Leinbach worked in Viet Nam was co-sponsored by MEDICO, founded by the late Tom Dooley to bring emergency teams of doctors to developing countries, and CARE, which sends self-help supplies abroad.

The Leinbachs received no salary for the work, paid their own transportation costs, and even took with them a number of instruments and supplies which they left at the hospital.

Cho-Ray Hospital is located in Cholon; Saigon-Cholon is actually two cities. The total population of these twin cities is about two million people; seven hundred thousand of these are Chinese and live in Cholon.

"Most of my patients were Chinese-Vietnamese, and I was amazed at the number of children injured by gunfire and grenades," he reported. He said that one weekend they admitted ninety casualties and that they had to put these patients on the floor of the recreation rooms and the gymnasium.

"Vietnamese people are very kind and mild mannered," said Dr. Leinbach, "and we would go back to work for and with them any time."

Asked to comment on the political situation, he said, "I hesitate to say anything; I am rather pessimistic."

"Things are changing continually; what's fact today could be fiction tomorrow. I only have impressions," he added.

The coup against President Ngo Dinh Diem occurred when the Leinbachs were in Saigon, and they spent the night lying on the floor of the CARE Mission House listening to two machine guns shooting outside.

"But it seemed to be a clean revolution; telephone, electric and garbage-disposal service continued as usual. We heard there were less than one hundred casualties."

From our American perspective, we like to think that the war in Viet Nam is against Communists, and it is. However, we tend to forget that this is also a war between Vietnamese, Dr. Leinbach explained.

"Some of the hospital patients were Viet Cong fighters," he said. "You could treat them and never know that they were Viet Cong guerrillas. During the day the man is perhaps a civilian, a rice farmer. At night he fights. When he gets hurt in battle, his family brings him to the hospital the next day. We could never be sure whom we were treating."

Enroute to Viet Nam Dr. Leinbach attended a meeting of the International Society of Surgery, Orthopaedics and Traumatology in Vienna. On the way home, via Malaysia, he performed six major surgical procedures in Kuala Lumpur in one day and also took part in a mobile educational seminar of the Pan-Pacific Surgical Association.

As a director of the International Society for Rehabilitation of the Disabled, he inspected rehabilitation services in a number of countries in the Middle and Far East. Upon his recommendation fellowships and scholarships to the United States have been granted for training personnel in orthopaedics and rehabilitation.

A native of Reading, among the positions which Dr. Leinbach has held are the following: Chief Resident, Philadelphia Orthopaedic Hospital; Chief Resident Orthopaedic Surgeon, American Hospital in Oxford, England; and Gibney Fellow in Orthopaedic die Surgery at the Hospital for Special Surgery in New York City.

He engaged in the private practice of Orthopaedic Surgery in Reading from 1936 to 1941, and (after serving as an Orthopaedic Surgeon in the Army during the war) from 1945 until 1946. Since 1946 he has been located in St. Petersburg, Florida.

Today he is Senior Consultant in Orthopaedics at Bay Pines Veterans Hospital and Chairman of the Orthopaedic Section of the Surgical Staffs of three other St. Petersburg hospitals.

He has received the Presidential Award "for meritorious service to the handicapped" from both President Eisenhower and President Kennedy, and in 1963 he received the Governor's Award from the State of Florida.

Since 1962 he has served as Professor of Law-Medicine at Stetson University, College of Law. Annually, he travels abroad both to lecture and demonstrate his surgical techniques and to keep abreast of advances in orthopaedic surgery in Europe. He has invented and constructed a number of orthopaedic instruments and apparatus, and has written extensively in the fields of orthopaedic surgery and Law-Medicine.

He is a Diplomate of the American Board of Orthopaedic Surgery and of the International Board of Surgery, and a Fellow of the American Medical Association, the American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons, the American College of Surgeons, International College of Surgeons and a Founding member of the Law-Science Academy and Foundation of America.

He is also the founder and chief benefactor of The Leinbach Foundation for Charity, Education & Research in Rehabilitation.

Along with numerous other memberships in professional, civic and social organizations, he serves as an elder in Trinity Congregational Church at St. Petersburg.

Ursinus College conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Science in 1955.

Dr. and Mrs. Leinbach reside at 4660 First Avenue South, St. Petersburg, Florida.

Blanch Shirey Wentzel, '43

On April 14 Blanche Shirey Wentzel was named recipient of the Berks County Medical Society's annual Benjamin Rush Award for "outstanding service to the community especially in the field of fellowship."

In response to receiving an appropriately inscribed plaque, Mrs. Wentzel said, "At Fellowship House in Reading we are pledged to help create a community where prejudice and discrimination give way to understanding and opportunity for all. Though this is a long slow process, we feel we can see some signs of real progress."

Mrs. Wentzel received the award primarily for her work with the children of Fellowship House, a year-round program which includes a summer camp experience. At present Mrs. Wentzel serves as secretary of the board of directors of Fellowship House, as chairman of the Children's Activities and as director of Camp Joy.

She was nominated to receive this award by the Reading Chapter of the American Association of University Women. She is now serving this organization as first vice-president in charge of program development.

In response to a question concerning the AAUW, she said, "It's a wonderful organization for us alumnae, and it is most helpful when we move into a new community. Through the AAUW we immediately meet women with similar interests and background, but, even more, its study and work programs continue to stimulate the thinking and action of its members."

Mrs. Wentzel began her professional career as director of athletics and teacher of health and physical education (1943-46) at Moravian College. The following three years she taught and coached at Royerford Jr-Sr High School, and from 1949 to 1956 she taught health and physical education and coached hockey at Norristown Sr. High School. Since then she has been a part-time teacher at Schwenksville and Wyomissing Hills, and, more recently, in the Tulpehocken Union School District.

She is secretary of the Board of Christian Education and director of the vacation school at St. Peter's U.C.C. in West Lawn, a Reading suburb. She is also a member of the board of directors of the YWCA and a member of the Berks County Mental Health Association.

Born in Frackville, Pa., she is the wife of Richard G. Wentzel, '49, and they reside at 1650 Penn Avenue, Wyomissing, Pa.

"Cap" Paine, looking over his new ship!

Clarence A. Paine, '22

More than 800 of "Cap" Paine's friends turned out on May 23 at the Woodbury High School gym to honor him upon completion of his forty-two-year career as teacher, coach and athletic director at Woodbury, N.J.

This is the fourth testimonial dinner given to Cap during his years at Woodbury. In 1933, when he left the football field as coach to assume his duties as athletic director, a dinner was held in his honor. In 1947, after twenty-five years of service, 250 of his former athletes attended a celebration in his honor at Almonessen Park.

To start him off on his thirty-fifth year at Woodbury, a testimonial dinner in the local Armory was attended by 450 of his former students and associates, and on that occasion he was presented with a new Plymouth car.

During this latest dinner Cap's friends gave him a boat, and the outboard motor and trailer to go with it—thus supplying the equipment that goes with his nickname. Numerous other presents were given to him and his wife, Doris, who also graduated from Ursinus in 1922.

One of the principal speakers at the gathering was Cap's Ursinus roommate and former coaching rival, Paul Isenberg, '21, who for many years was athletic director and coach of a variety of sports at Haddonfield High School, near Woodbury.

Among some of the unexpected gestures of good-will which came to Cap on May 23 was an article written by one of his former students, Oscar Fraley, Sports Columnist for The Times and U.P.I., who lauded Cap in his coast-to-coast column on that day.

Among other things, he wrote, "He's the dedicated kind who moulds character of one sort or another in the kids at his command. When it's over, for him, he has been only a high school coach. But the headlines are written on the hearts of those he has helped become men. They went forth, his boys, into all corners of the world; yet they never forget Cap and his teachings, his wisdom and his kindness. Every town that's lucky has a Clarence A. "Cap" Paine."

He began his career at Woodbury as a teacher of health and physical education and as coach of football, baseball and track. When he became athletic director in 1934, he gave up coaching football and baseball, but continued to coach basketball until 1948, and was track coach until 1959.

During his years of coaching he produced several national champions and members of Olympic track teams. Among his students who came to Ursinus are Fred Faux, Ray Coble, Elmer Shropshire, and Edward Knudsen. His teams played over one thousand games, and won better than 60% of these.

Over the years Cap has served as an elected official in many civic and professional organizations, and at present he is a Republican Committeeman for the County of Gloucester. For many years he has been a vestryman and a Sunday School teacher in Christ Episcopal Church in Woodbury.

He has served Ursinus College in a variety of capacities, most recently as president of the South Jersey Regional of the Alumni Association.

He and his wife reside at 59 N. Girard Street, Woodbury, N.J.

Loretta Podolak Finnegan, '60

Loretta Podolak Finnegan, '60, and her husband, James O. Finnegan, both received their M.D. degrees from Hahnemann Medical College on June 4.

In addition to this unusual event is the fact that Loretta and her husband also had three children born to them during their four-year schooling at Hahnemann. Their three children, all sons, are Mark Owen, two and a half years old, Matthew James, one and a half years old, and Michael Patrick, nine months old.

Both Drs. Finnegan were members of the Hahnemann Honor Committee, and Loretta also served as Publicity Coordinator for the Hahnemann Undergraduate Wives Association.

Both doctors will intern at Hahnemann Hospital in Philadelphia. Loretta plans to stay on for a residency in pediatrics, while her husband expects to specialize in surgery.

Loretta admits that it would have been impossible for her to continue her studies at Hahnemann had it not been for Mrs. Anna Taylor, her full-time baby sitter who resides in their apartment building at 161 N. 15th Street. "She's been with us," writes Loretta, "since Mark was one month old. The boys call her 'nana', and she cares for them as if they were her own children."

Jean Bonkoski, '68

Jean Bonkoski, daughter of the late Vincent J. Bonkoski, '37, and an incoming freshman at Ursinus, was awarded the annual Quaker Chemical Foundation Scholarship, which carries with it a grant for each of her four years of undergraduate study.

In addition to this scholarship Ursinus also awarded her a financial grant. The Quaker Chemical Foundation, of which, coincidentally, W. Ronald Benoliel, '58, is a director, was established in 1959 for children of the corporation's employees.

Selection of the recipient is made by an impartial committee of faculty members of several Philadelphia area colleges and universities; no officers of the Quaker Chemical Corporation participate in the decision.

Miss Bonkoski was graduated from Conshohocken High School in June; she was valedictorian of her class and participated in many other phases of the school's activities.

In addition to being president of the Future Teachers of America Club and of the Library Club, she was a member of the National Honor Society and Spanish Club, co-editor of the school newspaper, and played on the girls' tennis, basketball and hockey teams.

She, along with a few other incoming freshmen, was granted "Honors upon Entrance" by Dr. Helfferich for her outstanding high school academic record and for her entrance credentials. She plans to major in English and eventually to specialize in Library Science.

Her mother has been employed by the Quaker Chemical Corporation for eleven years and is supervisor of the Laboratory Office as well as secretary to the Textile Laboratory Director.

Her father, Vince (Bounce), was an outstanding football player during his years at Ursinus. He is remembered best for his having kicked the winning point-after-touchdown during a pouring rain in the final minutes of play which gave Ursinus a 7-6 victory over the University of Pennsylvania in 1930, when he was quarterback on the Ursinus eleven.

After teaching and coaching at Norristown and Royersford high schools, he returned to his hometown, where he coached several undefeated teams for Conshohocken High School. He died in 1953.

The Journal takes pleasure in presenting to our alumni this vignette of Miss Jean Bonkoski, one of 270 incoming freshmen, and it congratulates her upon choosing Ursinus as the College where she will pursue her higher education.

Jean Ewen Trend, '43

On July 1 Mrs. Harry K. (Jean Ewen) Trend began her responsibilities as state president of the American Association of University Women.

The immediate past second vice-president of the statewide organization of fifty-five AAUW branches, Mrs. Trend was elected to her present position by two hundred delegates who attended the annual state conference held in June at Beaver College.

The Bethlehem Branch, of which she has been president for two years, recognized her contributions to the AAUW on the local and state-wide level by naming the Bethlehem Branch fellowship the "Jean Ewen Trend Fellowship" in her honor.

One of the major concerns of Mrs. Trend as president of the AAUW will be to cope with problems in the continuing education for women.

"We feel education should continue even if a girl marries and has a family. Many women are marrying young today, rearing a family and then going on with their education," she says.

"The demand for educated women is steadily increasing in the labor market, and the nation cannot afford to waste brain power," she added. "It is imperative that we help young girls whose college education was interrupted by early marriage to continue their education, and we must chart ways for educating the older women whose children have reached college age."

Mrs. Trend earned her master's degree at Lehigh University and has taught school in Bridgeton, N.J., and in Bath, Pa. At present she is a part-time member of the faculty at Moravian Preparatory School.

Mrs. Trend has lived in Bethlehem for the past sixteen years. Her husband, Harry, is secretary of the Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce, and with their son, David, 11, they make their home at 609 Melrose Avenue, Bethlehem, Pa.

1914-1964

From the north and the south and from the east and west seventeen of the twenty surviving members of the Class of 1914, accompanied by their husbands, wives and children, returned to Ursinus College on June 6 to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of their graduation from the college. The class originally numbered forty members.

Dr. Helfrich joined the class for its Smorgasbord luncheon in his private dining room in Freeland Hall. After his words of greeting, the meeting was in the hands of President Paul E. Elicker and Secretary Miriam Smith. They called upon their classmates to relate interesting episodes in their lives during and after their college days. The class by unanimous action voted to reelect the present officers and to hold their reunion at the college on their fifty-fifth anniversary.

Dr. Elicker reported that almost all members of the class have been participating in the Loyalty Fund and that in 1963 they gave a total of $1,068.30. In 1964, sixteen of the twenty living members were active contributors to the Loyalty Fund, several having joined The Century Club.

At the general meeting of the Alumni Association the members of the class were presented with "certifications of distinction", and President Elicker was called upon to introduce his classmates.

During the day's activities Dr. Elicker assembled biographies of all members of the class, and a resume of each of these follows.

Along with his work at the University of Connecticut, Dr. Knepper is also a part-time lecturer of political science at the College of Liberal Arts and Science of St. John's University in New York City.

Dr. Knepper received his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from New York University, and before assuming his present position he was assistant professor of social studies in charge of government courses at the City University of New York. Before that he taught political science at P.M.C. and at the State University of New York.

Dick Brandon, singing with the chorus of the Riverside (California) Citrus Belters gave the Ursinus Bears their top position in San Antonio, Texas, on June 27 as three former alumni met in the World Series of barber-shop quartet and chorus competition. Coincidentally, "Rabbit's" own chapter quartet, "The Sidewinders," won the International Quartet Championship.

Don "Whistler" Donahue, '51, saw his Livingston, N.J. Chapter chorus in 7th place; their chapter quartet, "The Main Street Four," finished 12th.

While Roy Rauenzahn's, '52, Philadelphia Chapter did not compete, his quartet, "The Pennsmen," took 30th spot out of the 45 quartets that were entered in the finals, out of an original 2,000 entries.

The very fact that three Ursinus men were in competition at that level is unusual. The competition in this 35,000 member organization is quite fierce. The classes of the early fifties started a tradition of barbershop quartet singing. 1949 alumni will remember "The Glenwood Quartet," which was then supplanted by "The 51ers," Buck Ross, Don Donahue, Russ Lord and Russ Fisher, all of whom maintain membership in the SPEBSQSA.

Some 143 members, wives and children of Donahue's chapter from Livingston, N.J., made the scene in public relations as they were filmed for Universal pictures in a short subject motion picture. Donahue also carried personal greetings from the Governor of the State of New Jersey to Mayor Walter W. McAllister of San Antonio. "Whis" was also a featured speaker at the International Public Relations meeting.

One of the most important items to come out of the 26th International Convention was the adoption of the Institute of Logopedics as a society-wide charity. Founded in 1934 in Wichita, Kansas, by Dr. Hugh Palmer, the foundation deals with speech defects caused by aphasia, cleft palate and cerebral palsy.

Each one of the 665 chapters of SPEBSQSA holds annual shows, and all money raised by them will be funneled into this organization. The singing "Beers" will now be saying, "We sing, that they shall speak."

VALEDICTORY

by JAMES SHINNICK

President, Class of 1964

Our four years at Ursinus have passed quickly. Reality now confronts many of us. The isolation has finally ended. We will now care the family, financial, social, and religious problems which our parents have lived with year after year.

What life holds is unanswerable at this time. For some life will be a continually enlightening experience; for others, a monotonous journey. As college graduates we look forward to the future with eagerness. It is an opportunity for potentiality to be fulfilled, for knowledge to become beneficial, and for creativity to be expressed.

Do not be afraid to step forward; rather be fearful of becoming static. A step in one direction may lead to success or failure. Either case lends itself to the acquisition of additional knowledge. If you make a mistake here are other alternatives, other paths. Many battles have been won by the "retreat and advance" principle. It is the step not taken that evolves into indifference and complacency, the demons of modern society.

Criticize, but remember criticism can be both good and bad. Question, but do it with an intellectual sense and curiosity. Degeneration begins when men cease to question.

Success is hard to define; therefore, it is hard to discuss. However, I feel that some keys to successful living are found in the following:

1. Be an optimist. Life will look better. You have the gift of a higher education, but it cannot be properly applied unless you have the correct attitude. Your decisions are a partial reflection of your attitudes.

2. Always give the best of your abilities. Do not engage in activities half-heartedly.
3. Be flexible. Be able to adjust to new situations and new challenges. Always expect the unexpected.
4. It is not what society owes you but what you can contribute to society that matters.

5. Remember the Golden Rule—"Do unto others as you would have them do unto you." "No man is an island . . ." Everyone is dependent on his fellow man for one reason or another.

In conclusion, I hope that throughout life God will be your right-hand partner and happiness your left-hand companion.

URSINUS COLLEGE, COLLEGEVILLE, PENNSYLVANIA
RETURN REQUESTED

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE ALUMNI SECRETARY AT THE JUNE 6 MEETING OF THE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION.

The Face of the New Alumnus

By "new alumnus" I do not mean the recent graduate; I mean any graduate who has taken a new look at himself and who has a revised image of what his relationship to his alma mater is.

In the rah-rah, razzle-dazzle days of the twenties, the alumnus was the loud and boisterous supporter of athletics. If the football team was a good one, the alumnus was happy; he griped only when gridiron losses made it embarrassing for him among his friends at the office. In the thirties the alumnus was too busy looking for work to be seen looking around his old college. The war years of the forties further sobered him and consumed so much of his time and energy that he was unable to settle into a satisfactory relationship with "the old school."

Then came the fifties. America was thrust into international leadership and engaged in ideological warfare and in economic and military assistance to nations she had never heard of. Sputnik and the space age were born. Megalopolis is where the alumnus lived. The computer is how he thought. The population explosion troubled him as much as the explosion of knowledge. Everything was shaken loose. He was living in a new world.

Now, in the mid-sixties, college graduates, especially alumni of liberal arts colleges, are beginning to see themselves and their relationship to their colleges in a new light. They realize that higher education is no longer a luxury; it is a necessity. Their very lives, and the future of the world, depend upon it. And they know that only by their continuing interest and support can the liberal arts college retain its status and fulfill its peculiar role in America's educational spectrum.

The new alumnus engages himself seriously in the whole business of education. He thinks through the meaning of a "liberal arts" education and acquaints himself with its goals and the means toward attaining its ends. He learns to appreciate its value and to defend its raison d'être. He knows the difficulties facing independent liberal arts institutions, and he involves himself in helping to effect creative solutions to difficult academic, organizational and financial problems. He readies himself—and himself helps to ready the college—for change. In short, the new alumnus is learning to know something of what an education in the liberal arts tradition is and what it means to him and for the world. He finds himself hard at work, both within his particular institution, as one who adds his voice and vote and dollar to strengthen and improve his "old school," and without, as one who interprets the function of the liberal arts to the world.

Janus—like, the face of the new alumnus is looking fore and aft. He looks behind, in gratitude; he looks before, in hope.

He asks not what Ursinus can do for him; he rejoices in what Ursinus did for him. He asks what he can do for Ursinus, anticipating that with his aid Ursinus will do much for others.

The face of the new alumnus can be seen everywhere. At Ursinus evidence of this new look can be seen in many places: 17 alumni sit on the Board of Directors; 21 alumni serve on the faculty; 61 alumni assist the Office of Admissions as counsellors; 47 are members of various committees of the Alumni Association; and 154 serve permanently on the Loyalty Fund Committee and in its adjunctive offices.

In the recent Capital Funds Campaign more than 520 alumni volunteered to solicit their fellow-graduates for pledges. In 1963 one out of every ten alumni (497) contributed $100 or more to the College, and a total of 2,809 (56%) alumni contributed $192,568 to the Loyalty Fund. In the past twenty months alumni have contributed a total of $334,825 toward the Capital Funds goal of $500,000.

When asked to serve the College or the Association, alumni invariably say "Yes." There is no difficulty obtaining alumni to serve on committees or to run for offices. This generous and cooperative and almost unanimous positive response on the part of alumni makes my job as alumni secretary especially pleasant and easy. Compared to other alumni secretaries with whom I talk, we have an unbelievably loyal group. I take pleasure in making public my gratitude for this fact.

As usual, three issues of the Alumni Journal were printed during the year. They totaled 132 pages, and the 18,800 copies cost $6,071. The College contributed $4,000 toward this expense. In fact, the College paid a total of $12,540 toward the 1963-64 expenses of the Alumni Office, which totaled $15,290.

On April 15 a letter from Mr. John G. Johnson, executive director of the American Alumni Council, informed us that "Ursinus College won honorable mention for Improvement among large coeducational colleges in the 1964 Alumni Giving Incentive Award Competition." The $125 cash award will be presented to the College at the AAC's 49th General Conference in Denver on July 14.

This is my fifth annual report as Alumni Secretary. I am grateful to all alumni for their creative suggestions, their ready support, and their constructive criticisms. I can serve you and the College better only as I continue to hear directly from you.

Respectfully submitted,
RICHARD T. SCHELLHASE
Alumni Secretary
