

Research Director's Preface

I am very pleased to present the 8th edition of the Strathmore Law Review. I am equally proud of the team that has made it possible. It is undoubtedly demanding for the students to have found the extra time to dedicate to the Law Review, but the Eighth volume being published in as many years, is testament that the extra time is hours well spent. I am certain that the editorial team does not hold lightly the duty they take on as editors of a student journal. Sitting in judgment of one's peers is a privilege which the team must have undertaken humbly.

I also offer a hearty congratulations to all the contributors of this Volume, without whom the publication would not have been possible. It is no mean task to put one's ideas on paper in the academic way that publications require, and to do so with the enthusiasm which must have motivated the authors. The variety of papers in the Volume is evidence of the high quality of the authors' thought and expression for which, I hope, they are proud of.

As Strathmore Law School, we are also proud of SLR in the role that it plays in preserving the tradition of excellence that has been the mark of the school from its inception. I commend the institution once more for its hard work, dedication, and high standards.

Dr. L. Osiero,
Research Director, SLS

