Here's how Momence students got wired

School district roars into the 21st Century with Chromebooks, iPads

BY JOHN DYKSTRA
jdykstra@daily-journal.com

Four years ago, Momence schools were nearly ghost towns for modern technology. Teachers were using overhead projectors, wireless Internet was spotty and students were accustomed to pencil and paper.

Now, the schools are wired to the digital realm. About 90 sixth graders are carrying Chromebook laptops. Smart boards have replaced chalkboards. Wireless Internet is available throughout each building, and mobile devices are replacing stationary computer labs.

It has been a transformation geared toward preparing students for college and careers, particularly by personalizing and diversifying education.

"Society is becoming digital, and we need to get our students ready for their future," sixth grade English teacher Heather Morgan said. "We are preparing them for jobs that will exist a few years from now, and they are already developing skills I did not have when I was in college."

This year, Momence Junior High initiated the school district's one-to-one device program, which distributed Chromebooks to all sixth grade students. The program has been so successful, it will extend to seventh graders next year.

Students are able to bring the devices home and own them after four years. During enrollment, the school district charges $100 total per year for a device and accessibility to online textbooks for each student.

Issuing Chromebooks has cast the school district in a relatively small, but expanding light on the national education stage. According to a 2013 online survey by Project Tomorrow, about one-third of students grades 6-12 have access to school-issued mobile devices.

However, the nonprofit education organization anticipates more school districts will become digitally advanced within the next few years. It projects about 47 percent of United States middle school students will take tests online by 2017, which is a 15 percent increase from 2013.

But for the time being, technology has changed Momence's educational outlook for the ages. It has made school officials reflect and wonder what their education would have been like with Chromebooks, iPads, smart boards and the Internet.

"When I was in school, I remember my parents getting excited about buying me an encyclopedia set," said Gary Miller, superintendent of Momence schools. "Now, I don't think many students know what an encyclopedia is. Information is at their fingertips, and teachers can tailor their lesson plans because of technology."

Plane makes emergency landing on Route 17

BY JOHN DYKSTRA AND JON KRENEK
jdykstra@daily-journal.com
815-937-3330

A small airplane landed on Illinois Route 17 on Saturday night near Bonfield after running low on fuel while flying from Kansas to Indiana.

The plane landed cleanly around 10:15 p.m. near the intersection at 8000W Road.

"It was a picture-perfect landing," said Herscher Fire Chief Alan Ramsey. "Nobody was injured and there wasn't any damage. A few people just pushed the aircraft off into a grassy area to clear the roadway."

The pilot, Quinn Bowers, a flight instructor from McPhearson, Kan., told The Daily Journal he was on his way to Goshen, Ind., to see his best friend graduate from Goshen College, a Christian liberal arts institution in the northern part of the state. He was piloting a 1979 Beechcraft Musketeer, a single engine prop airplane he had borrowed from a fellow pilot.

'Fortunately nobody was hurt, but it's not every day that you see a plane landing on a highway.'

MIKE DOWNEY,
Kankakee County Undersheriff

He told The Daily Journal he lost an engine after miscalculating fuel and was attempting to reach Greater Kankakee Airport on a glide. But he lost altitude too quickly and was unable to see the airport in the dark. Moonlight eventually revealed the strip of highway below where he could land.

"I don't know the area. I've never flown over it before," Bowers said. "I'm thankful everything turned out as well as it did."

After landing he was assisted by fire and law enforcement personnel. The airplane was towed to Koerner Aviation and given some fuel. He then landed at Greater Kankakee Airport and topped off his fuel tank before departing.

Kankakee County Undersheriff Mike Downey said the miscalculation in fuel appears to be the cause of the premature landing. Illinois State Police troopers initially investigated the landing, and the Federal Aviation Administration will investigate further.

"Fortunately nobody was hurt, but it's not every day that you see a plane landing on a highway," Downey said.

Bowers said he didn't make it to Goshen in time for the graduation ceremony, but was able to visit with some friends.

"I got to see some of the friends I wanted to see," Bowers said. "It wasn't a total loss."

'School funding fix could take years'

Q&A with new state superintendent

BY KERRY LESTER
The Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD — The state's new superintendent of schools believes the formula to distribute state aid to Illinois schools is flawed. But, unlike lawmakers pushing for an overhaul this spring to divert more money to poorer downstate schools, he thinks finding the right solution could take several years.

Tony Smith, 48, begins his tenure at the Illinois State Board of Education on May 1. He was Republican Gov. Bruce Rauner's sole recommendation to the board before it chose him this week, but the former superintendent, of Oakland, Calif., schools said he has his own views on charters, funding equity and teacher unions.

A former professional football player, he played briefly for the Green Bay Packers and San Francisco 49ers in the early 90s but turned to a career in law and then education and teaching after being injured. He most recently oversaw a nonprofit organization focused on early childhood education.

He spoke to The Associated Press this week. Here are edited excerpts:

Q. What are your views about fixing Illinois' outdated school funding formula?

A. We have to figure out what is a real fair way to talk about school funding. I don't know that that conversation will get resolved in a year or two. But it's one that must happen.

Q. The governor hasn't said if he supports the latest proposed overhaul, which would steer more money downstate rather than distribute it equally. Do you?

A. There's a deep kind of belief people hold that equal is fair. I don't think that's accurate. In a time and place where there's such (education) inequity, choosing to distribute things equally doesn't really do anything to interrupt that inequity, and we have to take that as one of our primary missions.

Q. You were the only candidate considered for this position while past superintendents were chosen through more extensive national searches. Do you have concerns about how you'll be received?

A. The things that I talked about and believe in, I think that's why I had a chance to interview with the state board. ... We talked about the notions of inclusion and belonging and why there's a chance to build on the leadership that's in districts across the state.

Q. The governor is an ardent supporter of charter schools. Your record on them is somewhat ambiguous. Can you clarify your position?

A. We have to do everything in our power to create as many public school options as possible. And some of those places are in district public charter schools in places where they've been doing great. But a school that's not serving kids, when it's not a quality place, that's where we have to take action. I've been part of determining closures for charters.

Q. The governor talks about taking on "government union bosses." How do you plan to work with the state's teacher unions?

A. How do you get to the right kinds of agreements that honor the hard work of teachers, and recognize that this is first, foremost and always about the well-being of children? I think there are many who I've worked with in union leadership who shared the same values.

Q. You have a background working with high poverty, urban districts in California.

Associated Press

Illinois Superintendent of Schools Tony Smith

How will you get to know the needs of rural schools in Illinois?

A. As a young person, I grew up in different types of districts so I have a rural and an urban experience as a student. ... I've got to get to know the rural communities here and what they need in order to serve their children.

Q. How does one go from football player to school superintendent?

A. I was going to play football and be a lawyer after I was done. I got a job in a law firm, and I really didn't like it. I was sharing that story with the director of the athletic study center at the (University of California-Berkeley) and she talked me through some of the things I did with teammates — studying and tutoring with students at some of the local high schools. She said, "That's what a teacher does."

Today is Monday, April 27, the 117th day of 2015. There are 248 days left in the year.

Today's Highlights in History:

On April 27, 1865, in America's worst maritime disaster, the steamer Sultana, carrying freed Union prisoners of war, exploded on the Mississippi River near Memphis, Tenn.; death toll estimates vary from 1,500 to 2,000. Cornell University was established as New York Gov. Reuben E. Fenton signed a measure approving its charter.

On this date:
In 1521, Portuguese explorer Ferdinand Magellan was killed by natives in the Philippines.

In 1777, the only land battle in Connecticut during the Revolutionary War, the Battle of Ridgefield, took place, resulting in a limited British victory.

In 1805, during the First Barbary War, an American-led force of Marines and mercenaries captured the city of Derna, on the shores of Tripoli.

In 1822, the 18th president of the United States, Ulysses S. Grant, was born in Point Pleasant, Ohio.

In 1925, the song "Yes, Sir! That's My Baby" by Walter Donaldson and Gus Kahn was published by Irving Berlin, Inc. of New York.

In 1938, King Zog I of the Albanians married Countess Geraldine

Apponyi de Nagy-Apponyi. In 1941, German forces occupied Athens during World War II.

In 1965, broadcast journalist Edward R. Murrow died in Pawling, N.Y., two days after turning 57.

In 1967, Expo '67 officially was opened in Montreal by Canadian Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson.

In 1973, Acting FBI Director L. Patrick Gray resigned after it was revealed that he'd destroyed files removed from the safe of Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt.

In 1982, the trial of John W. Hinckley Jr., who had shot four people, including President Ronald Reagan, began in Washington. (The trial ended with Hinckley's acquittal by reason of insanity.)

In 1994, former President Richard M. Nixon was remembered at an outdoor funeral service attended by all five of his successors at the Nixon presidential library in Yorba Linda, Calif.

Ten years ago: Touting technology as a way to solve the country's energy problems, President George W. Bush called for construction of more nuclear power plants and urged Congress to give tax breaks for fuel-efficient hybrid and clean-diesel cars. Russian President Vladimir Putin became the first Kremlin leader to visit Israel. The Airbus A380, the world's largest jetliner, made its maiden flight as it took off from Blagnac, France, and returned four hours later.

Five years ago: Defending his company against blistering criticism, the chief executive of Goldman Sachs, Lloyd Blankfein, told a Senate hearing that clients who'd bought subprime mortgage securities from the Wall Street powerhouse in 2006 and 2007 came looking for risk "and that's what they got." Former Panamanian dictator Manuel Noriega was extradited from the United States to France, where he was later convicted of laundering drug money and received a seven-year sentence. Thomas Hagan, the only man to admit shooting Malcolm X, was freed on parole. University of Washington president Mark Emmert was selected as president of the NCAA.

One year ago: Two 20th-century popes who'd changed the course of the Roman Catholic church become saints as Pope Francis honored John XXIII and John Paul II; Emeritus Pope Benedict XVI joined him in the first celebration of Mass by a serving and retired pontiff in the church's 2,000-year history. In a rare acknowledgement, Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas called the Nazi Holocaust "the most heinous crime" of modern history. A tornado tore through parts of Arkansas, killing 16 people. Lydia Ko birdied the final hole for her third LPGA Tour victory and first as a professional in the inaugural Swinging Skirts LPGA Classic, three days after celebrating her 17th birthday.

Today's Birthdays: Actress Anouk Aimee is 83. Actress Judy Carne is 76. Rock musician Jim Keltner is 73. Rhythm-and-blues singer Cuba Gooding is 71. Singer Ann Peebles is 68. ## World War II Memorial makes final tour stop

A large crowd took the time to view the Pillars of Honor Inc., the Traveling WWII Memorial, as it made a stop at the Manteno Sportsmen's Club on Sunday.

The Daily Journal/Scott Anderson

THE DAILY JOURNAL STAFF REPORT

A scale model of the National World War II Memorial is now bound for the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., where it will be put on permanent display.

But before it made its way home, the memorial was on display at the Manteno Sportsmen's Club on Sunday, where it drew a large audience as part of the last leg of a statewide tour.

The Pillars of Honor Inc., an Illinois nonprofit organization, has coordinated stops for the traveling exhibit for the past five years, and Manteno, with its nearby veterans home, was an obvious destination. Manteno American Legion Post 755 organizers helped bring the replica to their hometown.

The audience included a number of World War II veterans, some of whom became emotional when seeing the memorial for the first time.

Police Blotter

Editor's note: The following is a roundup of area arrests for serious crimes. Unless otherwise stated, all of the people listed have been arrested but not yet charged. They are presumed innocent until proven guilty in a court of law. Unless otherwise stated, the following are taken directly from police reports.

Battery

Kankakee police investigated a battery that happened on a school bus on April 23. According to police reports, an officer was called to the 700 block of North Chicago Avenue. The mother of a boy said he called her while on the bus and told her a girl banged his head and punched him in the face because she thought he had thrown water on her. The boy complained of a headache. The officer did not see any visible injuries to the boy. The mother said she was going to seek medical treatment for her son. The girl was arrested, taken to the police department and released.

Theft

Kankakee police were called to a building in the 800 block of East Court Street in reference to criminal damage and theft of copper piping on April 23. According to police reports, an officer talked to the manager of a cleaning crew for a company that owns the property. He said the theft and damage must have taken place sometime between the beginning of February and April 23. He said all the doors were not locked. The officer observed gang graffiti on nearly every wall and copper piping taken from the basement.

Revived parade has patriotic feel

THE DAILY JOURNAL STAFF REPORT

Bradley held its annual Loyalty Day Parade on Sunday, a revived event that was held for the second straight year after a long hiatus.

The theme was "Pride in America," and this year's parade was particularly noteworthy because it commemorated both the 70th anniversary of the end of World War II and the 40th anniversary of the end of the Vietnam War.

The floats entered and the audience that gathered to watch them portrayed the spirit of the event on a sun-soaked afternoon. Signs reading "Freedom isn't free. Thank you, veterans" were among those on display.

The Loyalty Day Parade began in 1957 and continued each year through 1994 before being discontinued for 20 years. Deborah Gard and Doris Hays, members of the Bourbonnais VFW and Ladies Auxiliary 9961, have been instrumental in bringing the event back to life.

Kellie Baranowski took her two kids, E.J., 3, and Ozzy, 1, to the Loyalty Day Parade on Sunday afternoon along Broadway Street in Bradley.

MOMENCE

Chromebooks: 'They are more creative and take more pride in their work'

Sixth grade teachers have organized their courses through Google Classroom, an online website that enables them to email students and post assignments, in addition to video links. Other programs, such as Digidu, have enabled teachers to customize their lesson plans for individual students.

"With a few clicks of a button, I can take a lesson plan I prepared and adjust it for my [special education] students," said science teacher Jen McDermitt. "I can simplify lesson plans so every student gets what they need, and they feel equal."

The results thus far have been compelling. Teachers have noticed their students are becoming more engaged in learning and taking more ownership of their education. Rather than waiting for answers, students have learned to research effectively using the Internet.

"I used to look around the classroom and see some students with blank faces. Sometimes they would be bored," said English teacher Jamie Bleyle. "Now, they seem much more excited and engaged. They are more creative and take more pride in their work."

Bleyle tries to incorporate technology into her lesson plans as much as possible because it is "the language of this generation." She often has her students divide into centers and complete website research projects, known as "webquests."

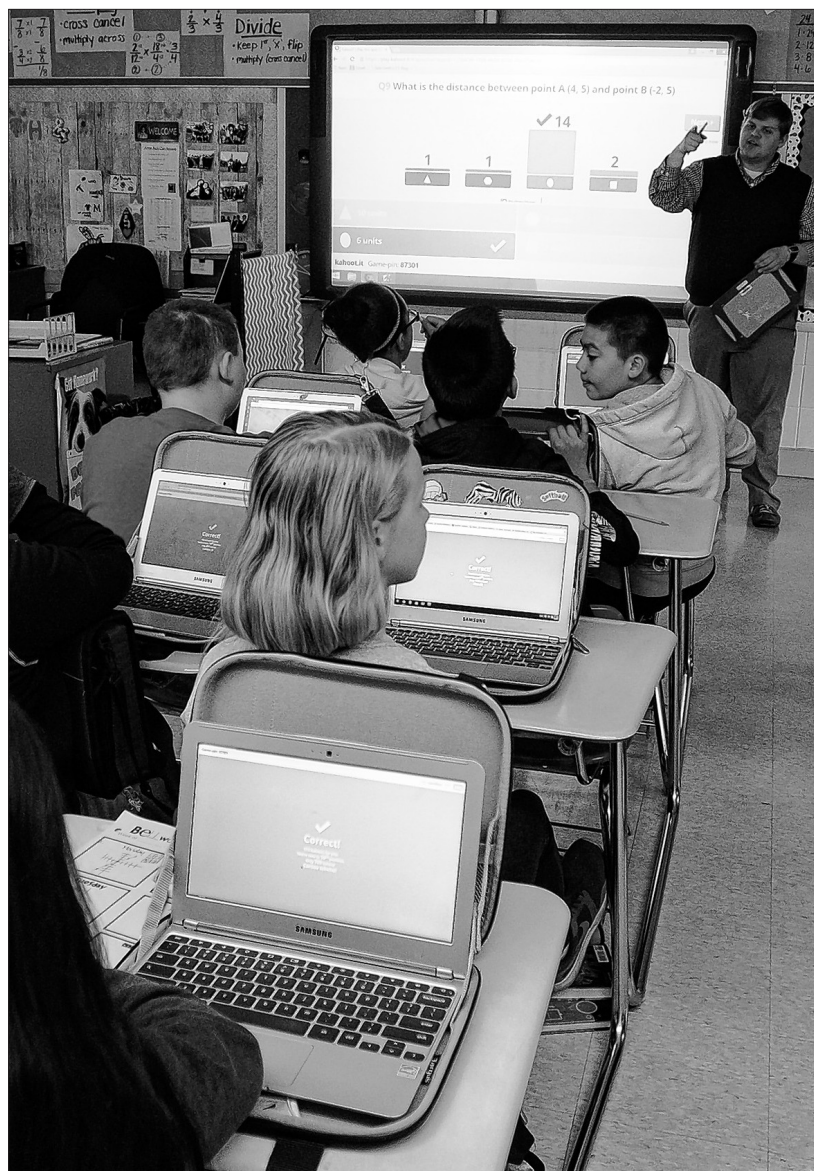

Math teacher Ryan Drenth uses mobile devices to visualize math problems. He also uses game-based learning to make math more appealing.

"We still use paper and pencil to solve problems, but these devices have allowed me to manipulate problems in ways that students will learn how to solve them," Drenth said.

Cutting back on paper usage and updating textbooks also has been a perk on the Chrome Books. Morgan has her students read from online textbooks, and McDermitt modifies her science textbook through Digidu.

McDermitt said her hardback science textbook is 14 years old. With Digidu, she can create her own online textbook that students can highlight in and translate from English to Spanish.

"We need this technology to give our kids an edge in the job world," McDermitt said. "Technology is their niche. It helps them guide the way they learn. It is not the magic wand, but it is an effective way to get them engaged and prepared for the future."

The Daily Journal/Scott Anderson

Ryan Drenth, a sixth grade teacher at Momence Junior High School, gives details about the answer on the smartboard after his class used their Chromebooks to solve a problem.

Leaders of the Chanute Air Museum in Rantoul say they can't afford to stay open, The News-Gazette in Champaign reported.

The museum on the former Chanute Air Force base 15 miles north of Champaign opened in 1994, soon after the base's closure. It receives financial support from the Village of Rantoul, but village officials say the town can no longer afford the bills.

"This was not an easy decision for anybody," said Nancy Kobel, the museum board's president.

Village administrator Jeff Fiegenschuh said the airport's annual utility costs of $350,000 contributed to even more sizable yearly losses. The museum had a monthly operating budget of $10,000, half of which covered rent payments to Rantoul.

"The airport was losing money," he said. "We have a fiduciary responsibility to our tenants and the airport and the residents."

The departure of a sporting goods manufacturer and another tenant that leased an airport hangar hastened the closing. Curator Mark Hanson said the museum's 30 military planes are on loan from the federal government. He expects the military will try to find new homes for the planes.

The museum's collection also includes archival photos and documents, books and magazines, military uniforms, aircraft instruments and tools.

Bill would allow students to opt out of state tests

BY KERRY LESTER
The Associated Press

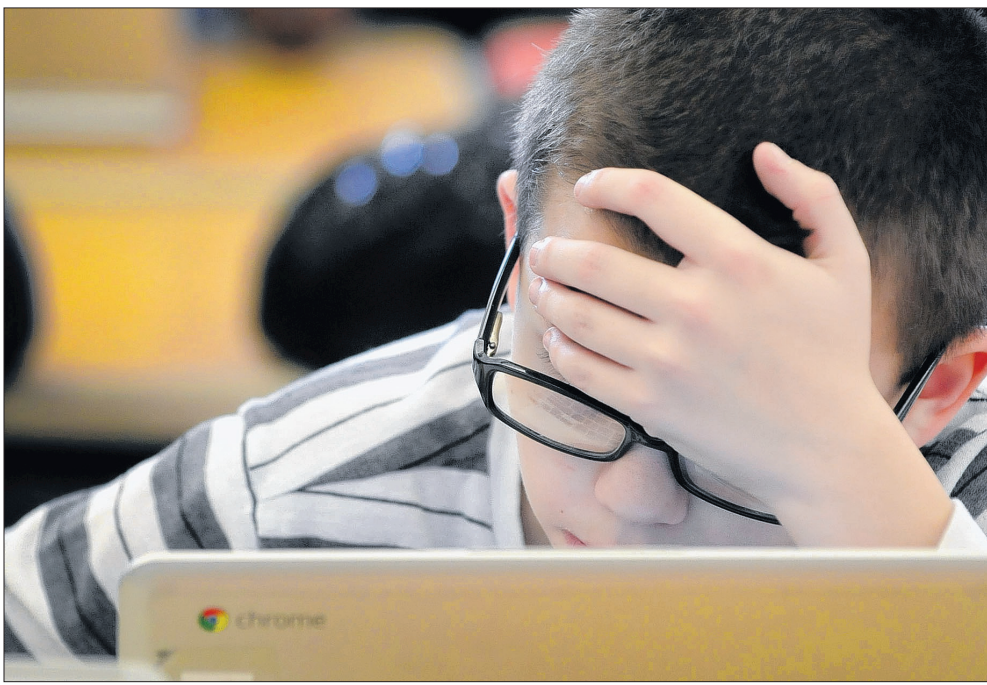

SPRINGFIELD — As new standardized tests tied to the Common Core standards spark debate around the country, the Illinois Legislature is considering a bill that lays out exactly how students can opt out of the state assessment tests.

Democratic Rep. Will Guzzardi's measure, backed by the Chicago Teacher's Union, would amend the school code to allow students to choose not to take the test if they have a request in writing from a parent or guardian.

The legislation comes after Chicago Public Schools initially refused to implement the Partnership for Academic Readiness and College Careers tests in all of its schools and the state board of education threatened to withhold its funding. CPS ultimately administered the tests.

Though the tests are considered mandatory, many students around the state still are not taking them as critics question their difficulty and real benefit to students, as well as if the data collected from them ultimately will be useful.

More than a Score, a com-

Fifth-grader Kyle Wojtecki studies the screen on his laptop as he prepares for the PARCC test in Janet Aoustiff's classroom in February at Liberty Intermediate School in Bourbonnais. The Illinois Legislature now is considering a bill that lays out exactly how students can opt out of the state assessment tests.

The Daily Journal/Mike Voss

munity group opposed to what it calls "excessive" standardized testing in Chicago Public Schools, says students in more than 80 of the city's schools have declined to take the test. School officials in the Chicago suburbs have also reported hundreds of students are not taking the tests, focusing instead on taking college readiness exams, such as the ACT.

The PARCC tests are tied to the Common Core, academic standards that have been adopted by the vast majority of states. The tests focus on English, language arts and math, are given to third- and eighth-graders and high school students, and replace the Illinois Standards Achievement test and Prairie State Achievement Exam, which included the ACT. The state board of education says the new tests are designed to determine how students apply critical thinking to real-world issues, as well as test their mastery of content.

Guzzardi said students aren't taking the test anyway, and his legislation simply provides a clear path for opting out.

"They're doing it right now today. The only thing that this bill will change is to create clear, concise rules about how that will happen," he said.

Meanwhile, Gov. Bruce Rauner's education secretary warns that the bill could increase the number of students not taking the test and could prompt the loss of as much as $1 billion annually in federal funding.

In a memo to lawmakers this week, Beth Purvis noted the state has entered an agreement with the U.S. Department of Education that it will test 95 percent of public school students in third through eighth grade and high schools in order to receive funding for low-income students. Purvis said a reduction in federal funding for the state is a "possible consequence" of not meeting that threshold.

"While this administration understands concerns that parents, educators and lawmakers have about how students are evaluated, (this bill) is the wrong vehicle through which to address these issues and has the potential to significantly disrupt the education of Illinois' children," Purvis wrote.

Still, Guzzardi called the administration's position on the issue "preposterous" and said he believed the loss of federal funding wouldn't occur, as states have not yet been financially penalized.

Rauner's office has been actively lobbying against the legislation's passage, and the Chicago Teachers Union sent an email blast Thursday encouraging members to call their legislators to support the bill.

"The bill provides parents and schools with a clear procedure for opting out of mandated assessments ... that waste valuable instructional time and resources and provide no clear benefit for students, parents and teachers," the message read.

Screens are wrecking your sleep

These companies say they can help

BY SETH PORGES
Bloomberg News

Let's take two points as givens. First: You know you shouldn't be staring at a laptop or phone in the hours leading up to bedtime. Second: You're doing it, anyway.

As appealing as good rest is, it often loses out to last-minute emails from don't-ever-seem-to-sleep work colleagues and the Web's endless supply of ridiculously cute cats. For this, we pay dearly, both with our Zs (studies have long linked the glare of devices to poor sleep), and our workplace performance.

When it comes to screens and slumber, I long ago switched into damage-control mode. There are software and gear-based solutions that promise to mitigate the effects of late-night phone, e-reader and laptop sessions without forcing you to quit cold turkey.

To understand how, some (quick!) science: When you look at a bright screen, its glow essentially tricks your brain into thinking it is daytime and you should be awake and alert. "Because of the three to four billion years of evolution of light during the day and darkness at night, our body clocks are not expecting light at night," said Randy Nelson, professor and chair at the Department of Neuroscience at Ohio State University Wexner Medical Center.

The culprits here are special cells in your eyes that sense light and then tell your brain to suppress the production of melatonin — a hormone that makes you sleepy.

But, as Nelson explained to me, these cells have a secret that you can use to your advantage: They don't respond to all light equally. While the cells mostly shrug off red and orange lights, they are seriously sensitive to the blue wavelengths that LCD screens send their way. To reduce the effect of digitally produced light, all you have to do is minimize how much blue reaches your baby blues.

One solution I've been using lately is a lightweight piece of free software called f.lux. The program, which is available for both Windows and Macintosh computers, automatically changes the color temperature of your monitor as the sun sets; the later it gets, the more blue light is filtered out. That means less harsh blue glare — and less subsequent staring at the ceiling while you wait for sleep to set in.

At first, using f.lux can be a bit off-putting. Videos and Web sites that were once full-colored suddenly radiate a vaguely orange hue. But the screen color changes gradually, and users can tweak just how much blue is filtered out. That makes it friendly for beginners easing into blue-less nights. It's not advised for graphic designers or anyone who needs a true sense of what colors look like, but for simple text and Web browsing, it's a pretty painless shift.

For me, the filtered screen considerably eases the eye strain of looking at a laptop at night. After a few weeks of using f.lux, I barely noticed it was on. Since I first downloaded the software about a year ago, I've grown rather attached to it as a must-have piece of programming.

I'm not alone. According to its founders, the program has been downloaded more than 10 million times since it was first released in 2009. An iOS version of f.lux works only on jailbroken devices. (Apple is pretty strict about how third-party apps can tinker with settings such as the screen, so no luck finding it in the legit App Store.) Android users can download a similar program called Twilight to their mobile devices.

I also have been playing with a second way to bust the blues: blue-blocking glasses that strategically filter the offending wavelengths. I like the ones made by Gunnar Optiks, which makes a line designed specifically for looking at computer screens. They come in a variety of prescription and non-prescription styles that start at about $70. The specs have grown popular with gamers, among the heaviest screen-starkers out there.

I have found these glasses make it easier to see distinct shapes and words than does f.lux, which can sometimes cause objects to blend into the background, depending on their color.

Brittney Ridgley — Custer Park

Brittney Nicole Ridgley, 24, of Custer Park, passed away unexpectedly on Friday (April 24, 2015) because of consequences and the result of a recent battle and addiction to heroin.

Born Dec. 14, 1990, in Morris, Brittney Nicole is a daughter of Rodney William Sr. and Angela Ridgley, of Custer Park, and Renee (Bondlow) Miller, of Florida.

She was raised in a Christian home, where she was taught and understood a strong sense of Christian beliefs and fundamentals. Brittney, during her school years, was a cheerleader and played volleyball. She loved the outdoors and enjoyed four-wheeling. Before her battle with addiction, Brittney always was happy, had a vibrant personality and always was helping others. This showed through in her certification as a nursing assistant and phlebotomist. Brittney cherished her younger siblings and was a wonderful mother who dearly loved her son. She will forever be remembered for her beautiful smile.

Surviving are her son, Patrick Joseph Osipavicius; parents, Rodney and Angela Ridgley; biological mother, Renee (Randy) Miller; three brothers, Rodney Jr. "R.J.," Austin and Zachary; sister, Brandy; grandparents, Richard and Chris Ridgley, Deanna (the late Jim) Casey, Patricia Pritchard, Linda Bondlow and Raymond (the late Nancy) Bondlow; aunts and uncles, Richard Ridgley, Pamela Ridgley, Courtney Ridgley, Donna Bondlow, Jason Pritchard and April (David) Scroggins; and the father of her son, Patrick Osipavicius; as well as numerous cousins.

Brittney was preceded in death by her uncle, Raymond Bondlow Jr.

Visitation will be from 10 a.m. Saturday, May 2, until the 1 p.m. funeral service at Christian Faith Center, 1800 South Water St., Wilmington, with Dr. Kurtes Quesinberry and the Rev. Greg Linkous officiating. Burial will follow in Wesley Cemetery.

Memorials may be made to Christian Faith Center, 1800 South Water St., Wilmington, IL 60481.

Maxine Hengl — Cissna Park

Maxine D. Hengl, 92, of Cissna Park, passed away Saturday (April 25, 2015) at Illinois Knights Templar Home in Paxton.

She was born Sept. 1, 1922, in Peotone, the daughter of George and Minnie Lindemann LeSage. Maxine married Henry Hengl on Feb. 21, 1945. He preceded her in death on July 5, 1992.

Maxine was a homemaker and had a positive impact on the lives of so many of the children she cared for over the years. She was a member of St. Rose Catholic Church in Kankakee, was devout in Catholicism, prayed the Rosary and read from the Bible every day.

Surviving are her daughter, Linda and John Coveyou, of Cissna Park; five grandchildren, Jessica Coveyou, Alyssa Coveyou, Tammy (Phil) Spencer, Tina (Peter) Guerra and Rebecca Hengl; and nine great-grandchildren.

In addition to her husband, preceding her in death were her parents; two sons, Dale and Gary; grandson, Robert Hengl; and brother, George LeSage.

Visitation will be from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday at Clancy-Gernon-Hertz Funeral Home in Kankakee. Funeral services will be at 11 a.m. Wednesday at St. Rose Catholic Church in Kankakee. Burial will be in Mt. Calvary Cemetery in Kankakee. Memorials may be made to Illinois Knights Templar Home in Paxton.

Dawn Wielgus — Oregon, Wis.

Dawn Louise (Michaelis) Wielgus, 50, of Oregon, Wis., passed away suddenly on Friday (April 24, 2015) at St. Mary's Hospital in Madison, Wis., because of a pulmonary embolism.

She was born in Waterloo, Iowa, on July 14, 1964. Dawn grew up on the east side of Madison, Wis., and later in Crown Point, Ind., where she graduated from high school in 1982. She married the love of her life, Ed Wielgus, on Sept. 14, 1985.

Dawn was the center of every gathering and the life of every party. People were drawn to her, seeking her out for friendship, advice and, most of all, laughs. No story about Dawn is complete without the incredible tale of how she and Ed met. She was 14, and Ed, a farm boy from St. Anne, was 19, but both fudged on their ages. By the time Dawn's parents figured out Ed was five years older, he was already a member of the Michaelis family. Ed waited patiently for seven years for Dawn to turn 21 so they could marry. They would have celebrated their 30th anniversary this September. Dawn's favorite role was raising her son, Brian, and daughter, Eileen, and being a grandmother to three, Jack, Maura and Braxton. She also was a much sought-after professional. Dawn was lured from job to job because of her expertise in software quality assurance. She worked for Short Elliott Hendrickson, Ogen, Shopbop and two stints at Widen, where she was working at the time of her death. She enjoyed bowling and cards, board games and political discussions. Dawn loved to attend family gatherings and hosted many of them at their home in St. Anne, and later Oregon, Wis. Numerous young people counted Dawn as their second mom.

Surviving are her husband; son, Brian Wielgus and his wife, Theresa, and their children, Jack and Maura, of West Allis, Wis.; daughter, Eileen Wood and her husband, Bryan, and their son, Braxton, of Madison, Wis.; her father, Don Michaelis, of Oregon, Wis.; siblings, Debbie Nagel, of Oregon, Wis., Dee (Andy) Hall, of Fitchburg, Wis., and Mike (Susan) Michaelis, of Lake Bluff, along with their children; several aunts, uncles, cousins and many friends whom she considered family. Also surviving are her brother- and sisters-in-laws, Butch Cain, Marge (Dennis) King, Joe (Betty) Wielgus, David (Christine) Wielgus, Betty (Ed) Wilson, Jim Wielgus, Hobart (Joan) Wielgus, and their children.

Preceding her in death were her mother, Janice Michaelis; in-laws, Edward and Martha Wielgus; sister-in-law, Josephine Cain; and Ray DuMontelle, one more love of her life who was like her second son.

In honor of her mother, who lived for eight years with a transplanted heart, Dawn's passing provided the gift of life to others.

Visitation will be from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. Thursday at Gunderson East Funeral Home, 5203 Monona Drive, Madison, Wis. An additional time for visitation will be from 9 a.m. Friday until the 11 a.m. funeral services, also at the funeral home. Memorials may be made to The March of Dimes or The Wisconsin Donor Network.

Dawn was the center of the world for so many people who are now heartbroken. The family wishes to extend a special thanks to the Madison, Wis., emergency responders and doctors and nurses at St. Mary's Madison who tried so hard to keep her with us.

Carol Jean Bright — Bradley

Carol Jean Bright, 60, of Bradley, passed away Thursday (April 23, 2015) at River North Nursing Center in Bradley.

Visitation will be from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. Wednesday at Jones Funeral Home in Kankakee. Burial will follow in Kankakee Memorial Gardens.

Carol, the daughter of Charles and Adrienne Shreffler Tompkins, was born Dec. 22, 1954, in Kankakee.

She married Iva Lee Bright on March 20, 1996, in Kankakee. He preceded her in death.

Mrs. Bright was employed at Kankakee Terrace Nursing Center as a supervisor in housekeeping.

Surviving are her children, Robert Brown (Deb Shearer), Jamie McBride (Anton Thomas), Anthony (Angie), Terry (Kizzy), Gerald and Ivan (Tanitia) Bright; sisters, Frances Fleischman, Char Phelan and Dianne (Dave) Pittensberger; brothers, Charles Tompkins and Jim (Lynette) Tompkins; 13 grandchildren; and one great-grandchild; along with many nieces, nephews and friends.

In addition to her husband, preceding her in death were her parents.

Penny Campbell — Thawville

Penny Gail Campbell, 68, of Thawville, passed away at 4:45 a.m. Sunday (April 26, 2015) at her home in Thawville.

Visitation will be from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday at Redenius Funeral Home in Gilman. An additional time for visitation will be from 10 a.m. Wednesday until the 11 a.m. funeral services, also at the funeral home, with the Rev. James Small officiating. Burial will be in Ridgeland Township Cemetery in Thawville. Memorials may be made to the Robert's Gym.

Penny was born Sept. 10, 1946, in Danville, the daughter of Walter and Harriet (Henderson) Arrasmith. Her childhood was spent in Chrisman. She graduated from Chrisman High School.

She married Robert Lynn Campbell on Aug. 27, 1967, in Chrisman. He survives.

Also surviving are a daughter, Kasi (Joe) Schwarz, of Roberts; a son, Michael (Robin) Campbell, of Farmer City; four grandchildren, Paige, Sidney and Hannah Schwarz and Ashley Campbell; her mother, of Danville; two sisters, Marlena "Marty" (Don) Scrogam, of Indianola; and Lorri Taylor, of Westville.

Preceding her in death were her father; and a brother, Daniel "Dan" Arrasmith.

She was a member of the Congregational Church of Thawville and a deaconess of the church. Penny was a school bus driver for 19 years for Roberts, Thawville, Ford Central and Paxton Buckley Loda school districts. Recently she was the head of transportation for the Iroquois Special Education Association before retiring in 2014, after 21 years of service. At the time of her passing, she was the clerk of the Village of Thawville.

Penny was formerly the president of the Thawville Community Nursery School, a Girl Scout Leader, Boy Scout Leader, 4-H Leader, board member of the Illinois Association for Pupil Transportation and volunteer scorekeeper for thousands of her husband's basketball games. She liked flowers, photography and attending her grandchildren's many activities.

Songwriter for Elvis Presley and other stars, dies at 96

Los Angeles Times (TNS)

Songwriter Sid Tepper, who co-wrote more than 40 songs specifically for Elvis Presley and hundreds of others performed by Frank Sinatra, the Beatles, Dean Martin, Eartha Kitt, Perry Como, Jeff Beck and many more, died Friday at his home in Miami Beach. He was 96.

He died of natural causes, said his daughter Jackie.

Although Tepper and his songwriting partner Roy C. Bennett wrote extensively for Presley, they never met him. All their songs for him were for his movies, including the title number for "G.I. Blues" (1960) and "The Lady Loves Me," sung as a poolside duet with Ann-Margret in "Viva Las Vegas" (1964).

By the time they wrote for Presley, Tepper and Bennett were already established songwriters. Their first big hit, "Red Roses for a Blue Lady," was recorded by Vaughn Monroe in 1948. Over the years it was covered by Sinatra (on a radio show), Andy Williams, Paul Anka, Wayne Newton and others, including Vic Dana, who got it back on the bestselling charts in 1965.

Presley needed the songwriting duo's kind of material.

"When Elvis started to make the movies, they needed non rock 'n' roll writers, people who could come up with special material songs and ballads," Tepper said in a 2005 interview for the book "Elvis Presley: Writing for the King," by Ken Sharp.

Quake-aid need acute in Nepal capital

KATHMANDU, Nepal — Shelter, fuel, food, medicine, power, news, workers — Nepal's earthquake-hit capital was short on everything Monday as its people searched for lost loved ones, sorted through rubble for their belongings and struggled to provide for their families' needs. In much of the countryside, it was worse, though how much worse was only beginning to become apparent.

The death toll soared past 3,700, even without a full accounting from vulnerable mountain villages that rescue workers were still struggling to reach two days after the disaster.

Udav Prashad Timalina, the top official for the Gorkha district, where Saturday's magnitude 7.8 quake was centered, said he was in desperate need of help.

"There are people who are not getting food and shelter. I've had reports of villages where 70 percent of the houses have been destroyed," he said.

Coast Guard: 5 missing after sailboats capsize in Alabama

DAUPHIN ISLAND, Ala. — Coast Guard crews searched for five people missing Sunday after recovering two bodies following a powerful weekend storm that capsized several sailboats competing in a regatta near Mobile Bay.

One body was discovered after Saturday's storm and another Sunday morning, said Major Steve Thompson, director of the Alabama Department of Public Safety's Marine Patrol Division.

Authorities said crews used boats and planes to search the Alabama waters, including areas near Dauphin Island where anxious family members have gathered at a Coast Guard station awaiting updates. Red Cross volunteers and an ambulance also were at the site.

Names of the missing and deceased were not immediately released Sunday. One person was rescued Saturday evening.

McCain renews push to end CIA control of drone strikes

WASHINGTON — Sen. John McCain renewed his effort to end the CIA's control over U.S. drone strikes after an attack on an al-Qaida compound in Pakistan killed two hostages.

Now that drones have become "an integral part" of U.S. military operations, it makes sense for such airstrikes to be managed by the nation's armed services rather than by spy agencies, the Arizona Republican said Sunday on CNN's "State of the Union."

McCain, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, acknowledged his bias in seeking to give the Defense Department greater control, adding the military has "the capabilities and the equipment" that the Central Intelligence Agency lacks to conduct effective drone strikes.

The accidental killing of two hostages in a January drone strike was disclosed last week. It may force Congress to revisit an issue that in the past had become a turf battle among lawmakers, with intelligence committees favoring the CIA and defense committees backing the Pentagon.

Officials say heavy rains kill 37 in northwest Pakistan

PESHAWAR, Pakistan — Heavy rains and strong winds tore through northwest Pakistan on Sunday, uprooting trees, collapsing buildings and killing at least 37 people, officials said.

The storm also injured more than 200 people, Information Minister Mushtaq Ghani said. Winds reached up to 75 mph, said Lutfur Rehman, a local disaster management official.

"It was very unusual. It took people by surprise," Rehman said. Pakistan typically experiences such rains during its monsoon season in June and July.

An emergency was declared at all local hospitals in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa province, where Peshawar is the capital, Ghani said.

The rain started Sunday afternoon and caused heavy damage to the region's infrastructure, city commissioner Munir Azam said. All flight operations at the Peshawar airport were suspended because more rain was expected overnight.

Family, friends mourn Gray

Funeral planned for today

BALTIMORE (AP) — A night of violence gave way to a day of mourning Sunday for a man who died after sustaining serious injuries while in the custody of Baltimore police.

Over several hours on Sunday afternoon, a steady stream of mourners filed into the Vaughn Green East funeral home for a wake for Freddie Gray, the 25-year-old black man who died a week after an encounter with police left him with grave spinal injuries.

Mourners passed by Gray's silk-draped, white coffin where he lay dressed in a white shirt, black pants, white sneakers and an all-white Los Angeles Dodgers baseball cap.

Above the lid to the coffin was a floral arrangement and inside the lid was a pillow with a screen-printed picture of Gray flanked by doves and the quote, "Peace, Y'all" at the bottom edge.

Mourners also gathered outside, and some held up signs.

Melissa McDonald, 36, who said she was Gray's cousin, wore a shirt with "Freddie Forever" printed on the back. She described her cousin as a nonviolent person.

"He didn't deserve to die the way he did," she said.

PHOTOGRAPHER SAYS POLICE BEAT HIM DURING PROTEST

BALTIMORE (AP) — A photo editor for a Baltimore newspaper says he was beaten by police at a protest over the death of Freddie Gray.

J.M. Giordano, who works at the City Paper, says Baltimore police "swarmed over" him and hit him repeatedly. A video posted to the newspaper's website Sunday shows at least two police officers in riot gear hitting and kicking Giordano as the person filming screams, "He's a photographer! He's press!"

The 41-year-old Giordano says his head hit the ground during the beating, which he says only stopped when someone pulled him out of the fray.

"you're black in America your life is always under threat." Bryant also talked about the violence that erupted Saturday night during what began as a peaceful demonstration attended by more than a thousand people.

Some 34 people were arrested, according to the Baltimore Police Department, and six police officers sustained minor injuries.

Baltimore cleans up after Saturday protests

BALTIMORE — Glass shards glinted in the Sunday morning sun on the sidewalk outside the 7-Eleven in Baltimore's Inner Harbor.

"We are closed today 4/26/15. Sorry for the inconvenience," said a makeshift sign taped to cardboard on the door where the glass had been shattered.

Above the door was a softball-size hole in the glass storefront.

It was a scene at a number of downtown businesses Sunday — recovering from the damage incurred during Saturday night's demonstrations, held in protest of death of Freddie Gray. The 25-year-old died April 19, a week after sustaining a spinal cord injury while in police custody.

The demonstrations turned violent Saturday, with several arrests made, police vehicles damaged and storefronts vandalized.

Inspecting the damage at the 7-Eleven, a worker for the Downtown Partnership of Baltimore said the smashed glass struck him as oddly random.

It looked like the path of a tornado — one store was hit but the surrounding ones, including a Dunkin' Donuts and Royal Farms convenience store, were left untouched.

The worker declined to be named because he said he was not authorized to speak publicly. Inside the 7-Eleven, a manager declined comment.

Clinton Foundation acknowledges mistakes

The Clinton Foundation's acting chief executive, Maura Pally, Sunday admitted to some mistakes in the organization's listing of donations from foreign governments on its tax forms.

In a statement, Pally wrote, "Our total revenue was accurately reported on each year's form — our error was that government grants were mistakenly combined with other donations. Those same grants have always been properly listed and broken out and available for anyone to see on our audited financial statements, posted on our website."

Pally's also acknowledged that those grants were not always properly reported.

What's listeria and how is it traced to ice cream?

BY MARY CLARE JALONICK
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — New technologies account for one way that the government is tracking a life-threatening outbreak of listeria linked to Blue Bell ice cream products.

Texas-based Blue Bell Creameries recalled all its products last week after listeria was found in a variety of the company's frozen treats. The massive recall followed several smaller recalls as health officials across the country rapidly worked to track the outbreak, which is linked so far to 10 listeria illnesses in four states, including three deaths.

The investigation has been helped by technology called whole genome sequencing, which maps all of an organism's DNA. While the sequencing has been a staple of medical research, it has only recently been used regularly to track listeria outbreaks. With help from that technique, federal and state officials realized the outbreak was not just a recent event — the ice cream had likely made people sick since 2010.

Questions consumers may have about the outbreak and how it's tracked:

A listeria outbreak, has been linked, so far, to 10 illnesses in four states, including three deaths.

ice cream has recalled all of its products. That follows more limited recalls of Blue Bell products made on production lines in Texas and Oklahoma after the ice cream was linked to deaths and illnesses in Kansas and Texas. The company issued Monday's recall after two samples of chocolate chip cookie dough ice cream tested positive for listeria.

How did they link the illnesses to the ice cream?

The first indication of listeria contamination in Blue Bell products came in January, when the South Carolina Department of Health and Environmental Control collected samples from a Blue Bell distribution plant as part of a random sampling program. The South Carolina officials had no reason to suspect the ice cream was contaminated, but they found that two of Blue Bell's products contained high amounts of listeria. South Carolina notified the Food and Drug Administration, which began an investigation that led to Monday's massive recall.

What else did they find?

Testing in Texas and Kansas found more contaminated samples that could be linked to illnesses in those states. The CDC also found past cases of listeria illnesses that could be linked to the Blue Bell products using whole genome sequencing.

What is whole genome sequencing?

Whole genome sequencing maps all an organism's DNA, instead of just part of it, as other tests do. Dr. Robert Tauxe of the CDC says it has enabled health officials to get better results when trying to link a person's listeria illness to a particular food. Government investigators take stool or blood samples from patients and use the tests to link them to strains of the pathogen — listeria in this case — found in the food.

Tauxe says the whole genome sequencing gives officials hope that future outbreaks can be tracked faster and more accurately.

What are symptoms of listeria?

When a person contracts the disease, it can cause fever, muscle aches, gastrointestinal symptoms and even death.

Am I at risk?

Listeria generally only affects the elderly, people with compromised immune systems and pregnant women. It can cause miscarriage, stillbirth and premature labor for women and serious illness or death in newborn babies. Healthy, younger adults and most children can consume listeria with no ill effects or only mild illness.

How did this happen?

State and federal inspectors still are investigating the outbreak and have not released a cause. In past outbreaks, contamination has been the result of dirty equipment or unsanitary conditions in a plant.

Blue Bell says it is expanding its cleaning and sanitization system, beefing up its employee training, expanding its swabbing system by 800 percent to include more surfaces and sending daily samples to a microbiology laboratory for testing. The 108-year-old company said it also will test all products produced at its facilities.

Infant and toddler foods might be less healthy than you think. Make sure your children eat healthy, nutritious foods by making good choices for them.

Read nutrition labels carefully when buying infant foods

DEAR DOCTOR K: I buy lots of ready-made infant and toddler foods for my little one. A friend told me I should make my own foods for my son at home. Are ready-made toddler foods unhealthy?

DEAR READER: Eating salty, sugary foods in childhood can set the stage for childhood obesity, high blood pressure, heart disease and stroke. Therefore, you might assume foods created for infants and toddlers would be low in salt and sugar. But a recent study, published in the journal Pediatrics, found that infant and toddler foods might be less healthy than you think.

Using a national database, researchers looked at the amounts of sodium and sugar in more than 1,000 infant and toddler foods sold across the United States. The foods included infant and toddler dinners, snacks, fruits, vegetables, dry cereals, juices and desserts.

The researchers found that:

- Most foods made only for infants were low in sodium and sugar and did not have added sugar. That's the good news.

- However, almost three out of four (72 percent) toddler dinners had too much salt. Most toddler foods also had added (extra) sugars. That's the bad news.

Not surprisingly, most toddler desserts and juices contained added sugar. And snacks contained plenty of added sugar and salt.

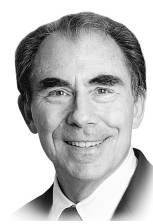

The foods kids eat influence the tastes they like as adults. Eating less salt and sugar in early childhood can help set good habits that lead to better health later in life.

If you have the time and inclination, then by all means, make your own toddler foods. But you also can make sure your child eats healthy, nutritious foods by making good choices at the grocery store:

- Check servings and calories. Don't assume one package equals one serving. Look at how many calories are in each serving and give your child the proper serving size.
- Buy foods low in sodium. Children ages 1 to 3 years should consume less than 1,500 mg of sodium each day.
- Look for foods and drinks low in sugars. Sugars can be listed as sucrose, glucose, high-fructose corn syrup, corn syrup, maple syrup or fructose.
- Cut out soda and juice. This will reduce empty calories from added sugars.
- Give your child water and milk. Milk has a lot of nutrients that your child needs to stay healthy.
- Make sure your lifestyle is healthy, as well. You'd be surprised by how much your child notices when watching you. Your child is more likely to eat healthfully if you do.

The good news about commercially produced foods for infants and toddlers is that manufacturers are required to tell you the contents of their foods on the Nutrition Facts label. Spend a little time examining those labels. You'll be doing your child a big favor.

Brother with repeat offenses doesn't merit sister's support

DEAR ABBY: My brother is older than I am and has been in and out of prison. He has stolen my things and pawned them.

I am married, and my husband and I are expecting our first child. I now am receiving phone calls at 4 in the morning from collection agencies on the hunt for my brother. He has been writing bad checks and leaving my phone number as a contact number.

I'm on the fence about whether I should tell his probation officer what he is up to. My dad is furious with me for even considering it because "brothers and sisters don't do that to each other."

Honestly, I am fed up with this "blood is thicker than water" mentality when it comes to my brother's wrongdoings. He now is including my family in his schemes, and I won't stand for it any longer. What should I do? — LITTLE SIS IN THE USA

DEAR LITTLE SIS: There are no excuses for what your brother has done.

Do not allow anyone to make you feel guilty for protecting yourself and your family. Blood isn't thicker than water when abuse is involved, and your brother's behavior qualifies. Contact his probation officer. With luck, when the collection agency calls again, you will be able to give them your brother's "cell" number.

DEAR ABBY: Last year, I had bariatric surgery. Since the surgery, I have lost a significant amount of weight and continue working to reach my goal. In the beginning, my husband was supportive and seemed proud of my weight loss. But he is no longer as physically interested in me now as he was when I was considerably larger.

I recently discovered several photos of larger women on our computer. Now, I'm wondering if he's looking for my replacement or just has a "thing" for bigger women. Should I say something to him about this? — SLIMMING DOWN IN WASHINGTON negatively affected your marriage, you absolutely should talk with your husband about it. Frankly, HE should have discussed it with you before you made the decision. Bariatric surgery is a major operation. It is life-changing and should not be taken lightly.

DEAR SLIMMING DOWN: If you feel your weight loss might have

As I see it, you have taken a giant step in a positive direction healthwise, and I hope nothing will interfere with it. If you and your husband have trouble discussing this, please do it with the help of your doctor or a marriage counselor.

Stop making bad decisions

I saw the funniest sign recently. But it wasn't funny for long because I started to think about it. It read, "Everything happens for a reason; sometimes, the reason is you're stupid and make bad decisions."

MARY HUNT
EVERYDAY
CHEAPSKATE

Ouch! Those 15 words hit hard. I've made my share of bad money decisions in my life. Suddenly, the humor melted away.

I've come a long way from that dark season of my life. I am determined to not go back but also to not live with regret for what might have been. Instead of living with my eyes on the rearview mirror of my life, I want to stay focused on the present with eyes toward the future. Which begs the question, how can we stop making bad decisions when it comes to money and personal finance?

- Get smart. Despite the fact that research from the University of British Columbia released in November 2013 found the smallest part of our brain is integral in the decision-making process — and the fact that we do seem to repeat some mistakes — it is possible to become a better decision-maker. With a little practice, some awareness and a bit of tender loving care, you can learn to make better choices. I've had a lot of feedback from readers of this column who tell me during the years, they feel as though they have gained the equivalent of a degree in personal finance — one random column at a time.
- Time out. I've discovered for myself a simple way to

With a little practice, some awareness and a bit of tender loving care, you can learn to make better choices.

avoid bad decisions. I impose a minimum 24-hour rule where I have to go into "time out." That means I have to leave the store, turn off the computer, put the decision on the back burner for at least one full day and night. You cannot believe how that stops me in my tracks. And more times than not, after 24 hours, I've nearly forgotten what it was that captured my attention. Situations that indeed require a wise decision find more clarity after time out.

- Check your history. Sift back through your memory when you were faced with something similar. Review what happened, and if it was a bad decision — what led up to that? History does repeat itself, but you can change the way you will make this decision. You don't have to be dumb this time just because that's how things went the last time. The past is over, but the future still is open for discussion.

- Look inside. I know for myself that when I am overly tired or really hungry, I make really bad decisions. I can't think straight. I'm prone to compulsiveness. Take a deep breath, address your stress levels and then move forward cautiously.

- Seek counsel. Unless this decision you are looking at is very personal, very private — call a friend, take your dad out for coffee. Find someone you respect who will listen, and then offer his or her best advice. You don't have to take it, but chances are pretty good that whatever it is, it will help you to see the picture more clearly.

The best thing about a bad decision is you can learn from it and apply that lesson to decisions you will make next time.

Bird flu spreading its wings

Numerous new cases of avian influenza were discovered this past week, including Iowa's largest egg producing facility with 3.8 million hens.

WALT BREITINGER
FUTURES FILE

The count for affected chickens and turkeys is now more than 8 million in the Midwest, with the hardest hit being the states of Iowa and Minnesota, where Governor Mark Dayton just declared a state of emergency.

Experts are concerned that the disease is being transmitted by migratory wild birds, which could accelerate the disease's spread.

So far, the disease has affected less than 0.1 percent of the nation's flock of nearly 9.5 billion chickens and turkeys, but if the disease continues spreading, analysts warn that it could cut into meat and egg supplies. U.S. grain farmers would be affected as well, as the poultry industry is a major source of demand for corn and soybeans, two crops already under pressure because of weak demand.

Meanwhile, speculators have been buying cattle and hog futures aggressively, expecting more demand for beef and pork if poultry supplies dwindle.

Corn crumbles

Corn prices fell Friday to $3.64 per bushel, the lowest level since November. Prices have been dropping because of last year's bin-busting corn crop and tepid foreign demand, which has led to a surplus of the grain. This week's additional 15 cent plunge came as traders began focusing on this year's crop, which is being planted ahead of schedule. Meanwhile, the mounting concerns about bird flu have encouraged even more selling in the corn market.

Longer term, if there is a weather problem with this year's crop or if demand picks up, prices could certainly rebound, but the outlook has been grim for U.S. corn farmers in recent weeks.

Silver loses its luster

Silver prices dropped to a five-week low on Friday morning, falling to $15.55 per ounce. The market is under pressure as the Chinese economy continues showing signs of slowing; silver is primarily used as an industrial metal, making it sensitive to global growth expectations.

Meanwhile, other investments in the United States have been faring better in recent weeks, as stock and bond futures have been gaining value, making silver less appealing in the near term.

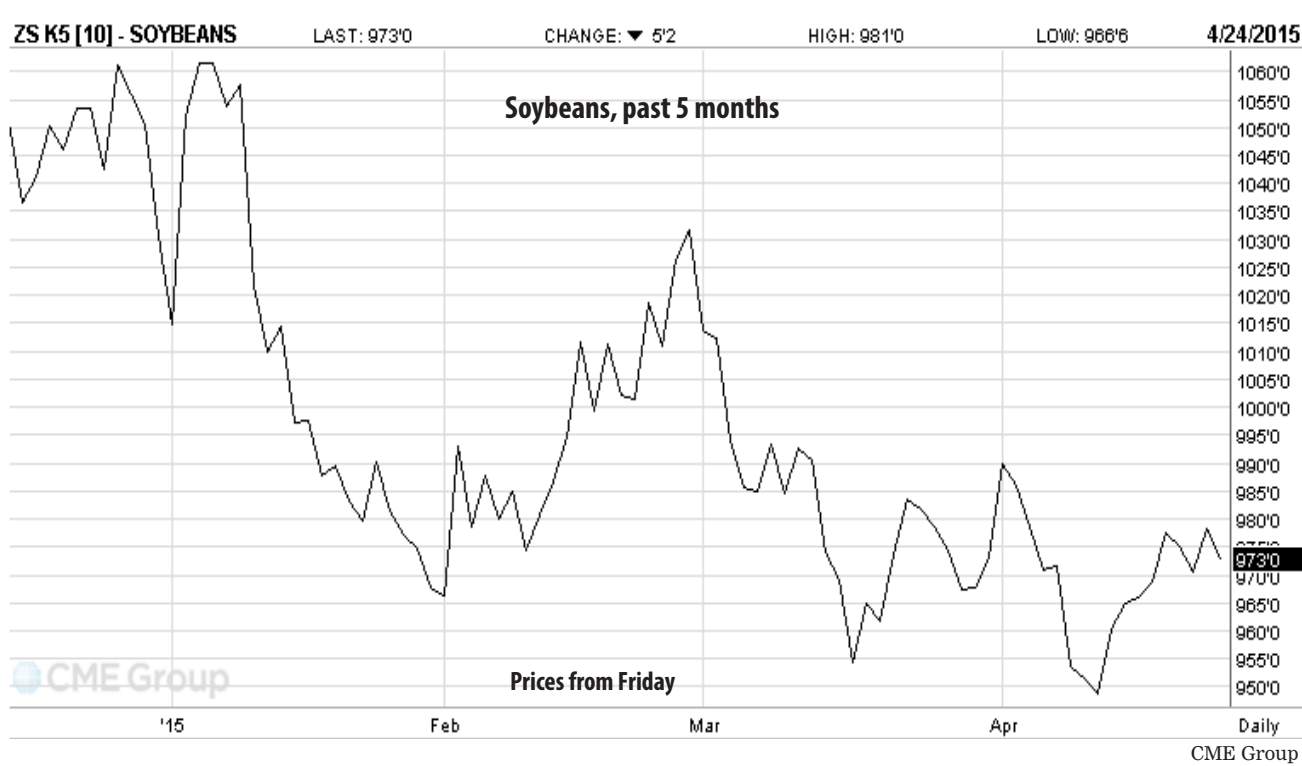

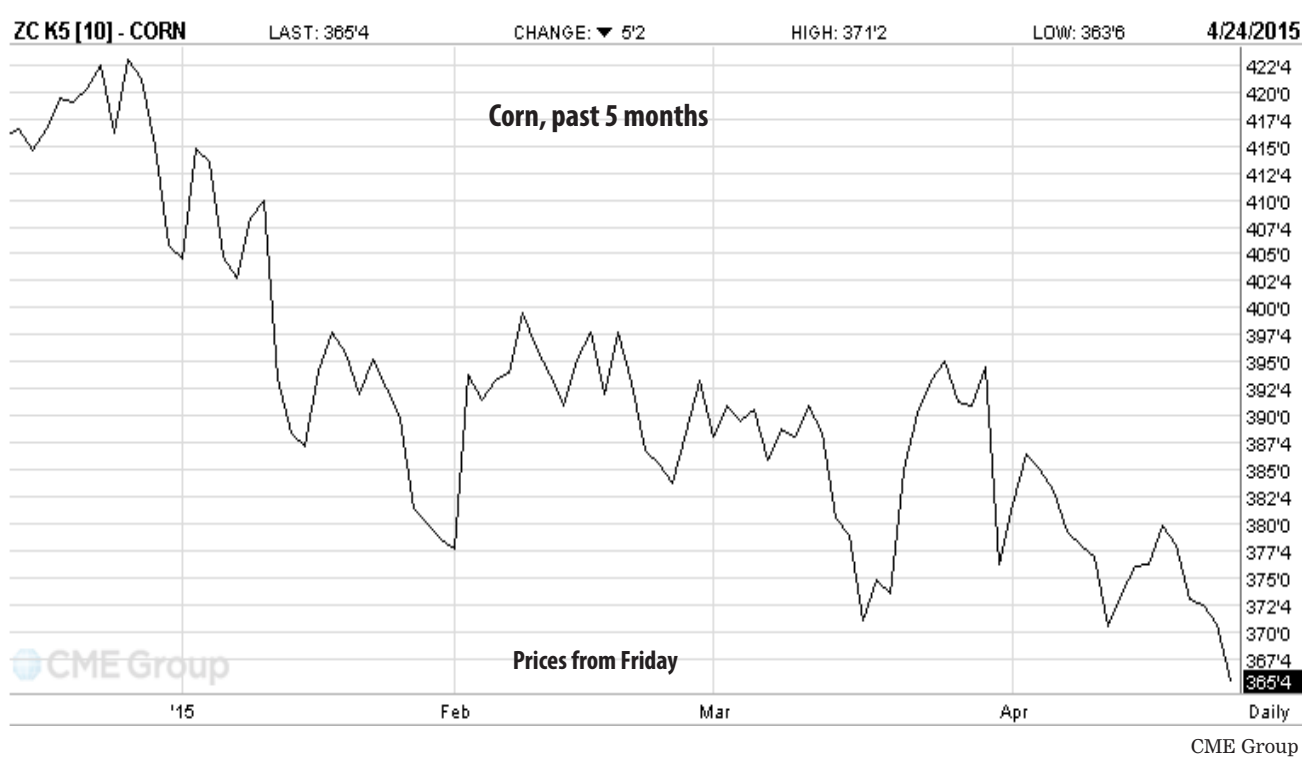

Conversely, some silver investors are eager to buy the metal as it nears $15 per ounce, a price that has held the market numerous times in the past few months.

Enough damage done by distracted driving

It's worth repeating: Put that cellphone down

It's becoming a common refrain but one that bears repeating based on a story that appeared in the most recent Weekend Edition of The Daily Journal.

Distracted driving is a serious problem, and despite laws intended to stop the practice, motorists just keep right on doing it.

On average, Illinois Department of Transportation data shows crashes that cause serious injury or fatality occur more frequently in Kankakee and Iroquois counties than other counties across Illinois. When officials are asked why, they cite distracted driving to be a cause on par with speeding, disobeying traffic laws, driving while impaired or driving in inclement conditions.

Just a few short years ago, it wasn't a problem, as cellphones and similar electronic devices didn't exist. The new technology has done marvels for improving communication and placing vital information at your fingertips, but that doesn't mean your fingers have to be on it all the time, especially when you're operating a motor vehicle.

Kankakee police have placed heightened focus on distracted driving and just last month handed out 31 tickets for violation of the law during an enforcement detail. Police Chief Larry Regnier said he believes the number ticketed during that crackdown represents just a sliver of those regularly violating the law but admits it's hard to prove.

But one thing that's easy to do is practice a bit of self enforcement. Use either a hands-free device as allowed by law or separate yourself from the device until you reach your destination. No phone call or text message is so important that you have to risk life or limb over it. If it is so crucial, you can pull over to deal with it.

If everyone heeded the advice, the hunch here is that the trend toward higher than average serious crashes in these parts would dip substantially. Don't become a statistic. Do it for your safety and the safety of everyone else on the road.

For the week ending April 24

By Thomas Voting Reports, Inc.

Y	Y	Y				Steps to Combat Cyber Attacks: The House passed, 307-116, a bill encouraging companies under cyber attack to voluntarily share sensitive data on the incident with U.S. agencies so that broad defenses can be quickly mounted. The bill (HR 1560) largely immunizes firms from lawsuits.
Y	Y	N				Electrical Grid, Nuclear Plants: The House defeated, 180-238, a Democratic bid to require a partnership between the Department of Homeland Security and energy firms for protecting the electrical grid and facilities such as nuclear power plants. A yes vote backed the motion to HR 1731.
	Y	Y				Loretta Lynch Confirmation: The Senate confirmed, 56-43, Loretta E. Lynch as the 83rd U.S. attorney general and the first African-American woman in that office. She was backed by both independents, 10 Republicans and all Democrats. The absentee was Ted Cruz, R-Texas.
	Y	Y				Steps Against Sex Trafficking: The Senate passed, 99-0, a bill (S 178) that would bolster federal laws and other measures to combat sex trafficking and help its victims to recover. This followed the removal of GOP-authored anti-abortion language that had stalled the bill for six weeks.
	Y	Y				Measure With LGBT Protections: Senators failed, 56-43, to reach 60 votes for adopting a measure to renew the Runaway and Homeless Youth Act with specific protections for lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender (LGBT) individuals. A yes vote backed the amendment to S 178.
	N	N				Measure Without LGBT Protections: The Senate defeated, 45-53, a measure that would renew the Runaway and Homeless Youth Act without specific language to protect lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender (LGBT) individuals. A yes vote supported the amendment to S 178.

KEY VOTES AHEAD

In the week of April 27, the House will debate fiscal 2016 appropriations bills, while the Senate will take up a bill providing congressional review of any proposed nuclear deal with Iran.

Obama's Nixon doctrine: Anointing Iran

WASHINGTON — In December, President Obama said he wished to see Iran ultimately become a "very successful regional power." His wish — a nightmare for the Western-oriented Arab states — is becoming a reality. Consider:

- Gulf of Aden: Iran sends a flotilla of warships and weapons-carrying freighters to reinforce the rebels in Yemen — a noncontiguous, non-Persian, nonthreatening (to Iran) Arabian state — asserting its new status as regional bully and arbiter. The Obama administration sends an aircraft carrier group, apparently to prevent this gross breach of the U.N. weapons embargo on Yemen. Instead, the administration announces that it has no intention of doing anything. Meanwhile, it exerts pressure on Saudi Arabia to halt its air war over Yemen and agree to negotiate a political settlement involving Iran.

- Russia: After a five-year suspension, Russia announces the sale of advanced surface-to-air missiles to Iran, which will render its nuclear facilities nearly invulnerable to attack. Obama's reaction? Criticism, threats, sanctions? No. A pat on the back for Vladimir Putin: "I'm, frankly, surprised that [the embargo] held this long."

- Iran: Last week, Obama pre-emptively caved on the long-standing U.S. condition that there be no immediate sanctions relief in any Iranian nuclear deal. He casually dismissed this red line, declaring that what is really important is whether sanctions can be reimposed if Iran cheats. And it doesn't stop there. The Wall Street Journal reports that Obama is offering Tehran a $30 billion to $50 billion signing bonus (drawn from frozen Iranian assets) — around 10 percent of Iranian GDP.

- Syria: After insisting for years that President Bashar al-Assad of Syria "step aside," the U.S. has adopted a hands-off policy toward a regime described by our own secretary of state as an Iranian puppet.

- Iraq: Iran's Quds Force Commander Qassem Suleimani, director of Shiite militias that killed hundreds of Americans during the Iraq War and were ultimately defeated by the 2007-08 U.S. surge, operates freely throughout Iraq flaunting his country's dominance. In March, he was directing the same Iraqi militias, this time against the Islamic State — with the help of U.S. air cover.

This is the new Middle East. Its strategic reality is clear to everyone: Iran rising, assisted, astonishingly, by the United States.

Obama's initial Middle East strategy was simply to withdraw. He would enter history as the ultimate peace president, ushering in a new era in which "the tide of war is receding." The subsequent vacuum having been filled, unfortunately and predictably, by various enemies, adversaries and irredeemables, Obama lighted upon a new idea: We don't just withdraw, we hand the baton. To Iran.

Obama may not even be aware that he is recapitulating the Nixon doctrine, but with a fatal twist. Nixon's main focus was to get the Vietnamese to take over that war from us. But the doctrine evolved and was generalized to deputize various smaller powers to police their regions on our behalf. In the Persian Gulf, our principal proxy was Iran.

The only problem with Obama's version of the Nixon doctrine is that Iran today is not the Westernized, secular, pro-American regional power it was under the shah. It is radical, clerical, rabidly anti-imperialist, deeply anti-Western. The regime's ultimate — and openly declared — strategic purpose is to drive the American infidel from the region and either subordinate or annihilate America's Middle Eastern allies.

Which has those allies in an understandable panic. Can an American president really believe that appeasing Iran — territorially, economically, militarily and by conferring nuclear legitimacy — will moderate its behavior and ideology, adherence to which despite all odds is now yielding undreamed of success?

Iran went into the nuclear negotiations heavily sanctioned, isolated internationally, hemorrhaging financially — and this was even before the collapse of oil prices. After 17 months of serial American concessions, the Iranian economy is growing again, its forces and proxies are on the march through the Arab Middle East and it is on the verge of having its nuclear defiance rewarded and legitimized.

The Saudis are resisting being broken to Iranian dominance. They have resumed their war in Yemen. They are resisting being forced into Yemen negotiations with Iran, a country that is, in the words of the Saudi ambassador to the U.S., "part of the problem, not part of the solution."

Obama appears undeterred. He's determined to make his Iran-first inverted Nixon Doctrine a reality. Our friends in the region, who for decades have relied on us to protect them from Iran, look on astonished.

Anyone remember how to write a check?

BY CHRISTOPHER INGRAHAM
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Writing a check always has been a fundamentally strange act. There's the fussy ceremony of writing out the amount in words and drawing the squiggly line across the remainder of the space, ostensibly to protect against a type of fraud — tampering with individual digits — that's quaint by today's standards. There's the questionable business of handing a complete stranger a document with your bank account and routing number printed plainly across it.

And of course, the memo line — an open invitation to humiliate your friends and leave passive-aggressive notes to your creditors.

Today, Americans are writing fewer checks than ever. According to the Federal Reserve's most recent study of how Americans pay for things, "the number of checks paid declined more than 50 percent since 2000." Meanwhile, electronic and card payments tripled over the same period.

As check use declines, we tend to forget the details of that strange ceremony of writing them. And naturally, we turn to Google to jog our memories. Falling check use has been accompanied by a rise Google searches for "how to write a check." Today, those searches are nearly five times as prevalent as they were 10 years ago. And each year, those searches peak in late August and early September — when kids are returning to college. Students living off-campus for the first time are likely facing the daunting task of writing their first checks, for electric bills, cable payments or especially for rent.

As Bloomberg News notes, checks still dominate the world of rent payments. "The rental market is huge and fragmented," Bloomberg writes. There are millions of landlords overseeing just one or two properties, and for these folks there's little reason to invest the money required to move to an electronic or card payment system.

Looking at the geography of check befuddlement, searches for "how to write a check" appear to be clustered in the Northeast — Pennsylvania leads the pack, followed by Delaware, New York, Massachusetts and Hawaii. There are a lot of colleges in the Northeast, which fits the hypothesis of confused college kids driving the trend. But it doesn't explain why there are also a lot of people looking for check-writing help in Oklahoma, or in Louisiana.

Overall we should be welcoming the trend of falling check use. They're cumbersome to write, and cumbersome to cash. They invite fraudulent behavior. And with the information contained on them, writing a check to someone is akin to giving them the keys to your bank account, and trusting that they won't help themselves to what's inside.

But in terms of pure volume we're still writing a ton of checks — about 18.3 billion per year, according to the Federal Reserve. That's about 77 checks for every adult resident of the U.S. While the End of Checks may indeed be on the horizon, it's not quite here yet.

With Hello, Facebook's focus on the future of communication grows

BY HAYLEY TSUKAYAMA
The Washington Post

Facebook doesn't just want to be your social hub, it also wants to be a bigger part of how you communicate in general. Now Facebook's gone a little further with the introduction of a new mobile devices application, Hello.

The new program, introduced Wednesday, was designed by the company's Messenger team but essentially is a calling, caller ID and search app for your phone. Available only on Android phones, the app pulls Facebook data to identify callers — it can do this even if they aren't in your address book, thanks to Facebook's bank of phone numbers — and will let you search for businesses that have put their phone numbers on the social network.

The Hello announcement came shortly before the company released mixed results for its first-quarter earnings. Facebook reported lighter-than-predicted revenue of $3.54 billion for the quarter versus analyst expectations of $3.56 billion.

The firm beat analyst predictions for earnings of $1.41 per share, by one cent. And the company's focus on mobile has also continued to pay off, with 73 percent of its advertising revenue coming from smartphones and tablets. Chief executive Mark Zuckerberg called it a "good quarter and a good start to the year" in the company's earnings call with analysts.

But most of his remarks focused on Facebook's future plans for expansion, including in the world of messaging.

The introduction of Hello continues a trend Facebook's been exploring for the past couple of years. From the company's 2014 acquisition of WhatsApp, to its purchase of the virtual-reality startup Oculus, or the expansion of its own Facebook Messenger app, many of the company's major moves demonstrate a deep interest in the future of communication via text, voice and video messaging.

Not all of them have borne fruit yet. The Oculus Rift, for example, still isn't on the market. Facebook's attempt to catch up to Snapchat, with an app called Slingshot, has gained almost no traction. But the efforts do show where Facebook's interests lie as its core social network ages.

Of course, it faces fierce competition from the likes of Twitter, Google, Skype, Snapchat and many others.

The Washington Post

For those who use their phone to check out Facebook, a new mobile devices application "Hello" has been made available.

It's a crowded space. But Facebook seems happy to just be in the mix for now, with plans to keep experimenting.

When talking about messaging during Wednesday's call, Zuckerberg told analysts that he's happy Facebook has "evolved from a single blue app on your phone into a family of apps" that allow users to talk to each other in a variety of ways.

For example, Zuckerberg said that WhatsApp is used more as a text-message replacement for users around the world. Facebook Messenger, on the other hand, is more "focused on expression," he said. He also said he's not interested in unifying the company's many messaging services, preferring to serve these small niches rather than pulling everything together in a one-size-fits-all tool.

"I think that these are just going to keep on growing, is my expectation and hope," he said. "And we're excited to kind of pursue both different products to serve the different communities."

The clips keep coming on 'Chaos caught on camera'

Everything gets documented these days. From those cat videos shared on Facebook to TMZ's endless reel of celebrity stumbles, the proliferation of smartphones and cameras floods us with images as never before. But sheer volume aside, is any of this new?

"Chaos Caught on Camera" (9 p.m. and 9:30 p.m., Science, TV-PG) presents personal calamities captured and uploaded for our entertainment. These include natural disasters, accident footage, man-made destruction and vacation mishaps.

Our first glimpses of "Chaos" include a grandmother who should have thought twice about skydiving, a skier trapped by an avalanche and travelers who find their car encircled by an encroaching forest fire.

As exciting as this all sounds, it merely offers a digital gloss on the old tradition of armchair voyeurism. Way back in the days of videotape, some of the more sought-after VHS reels were part of the "Faces of Death" series, including scenes of hapless fishermen eaten by alligators and other grim snuff-film stuff too weird, wild and morbid for mere television. Mediums change, but human nature? Not so much.

In a similar vein, the documentary series "Tornado Alley" (8 p.m., The Weather Channel) recalls a deadly storm's impact on Hattiesburg, Miss.

"Tales of the Grim Sleeper" (8 p.m., HBO) recalls the quarter-century career of serial killer Lonnie Franklin Jr. He was captured in 2010, when, quite by chance, a computer DNA match linked him to at least 20 cases. His conviction literally fell into the prosecutor's lap.

"Grim" examines Franklin's reign of terror as well as the reasons he remained at large for such a long period while he murdered vulnerable women on the margins of South Central Los Angeles. Nick Broomfield ("Aileen: Life and Death of a Serial Killer") directs.

"The Spy in the Hanoi Hilton" (7 p.m., Smithsonian) examines efforts by POWs held by North Vietnam to communicate with American espionage agencies. Using coded letters and other techniques, the prisoners/spies tried to coordinate an escape plan with the CIA and a Navy SEAL team. But the mission was called off as too dangerous. That attempt and the entire spy operation was kept classified for decades.

Tonight's other highlights

- Fareed Zakaria interviews former jihadists and Middle East correspondents about a new terror threat on "Blindsided: How Isis Shook the World" (8 p.m., CNN).

Claire's secret is revealed on "The Returned" (9 p.m., A&E, TV-MA).

MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL: WHITE SOX 3-5, KANSAS CITY 2-3

White Sox take 2 from sparring partner

Gillaspie, Garcia heroes in downing KC

BY JAY COHEN
The Associated Press

CHICAGO — David Robertson threw the first pitch of the afternoon and the last one. And the Chicago White Sox hoped it would go that way on one strange Sunday.

Robertson got a win and a save as the White Sox won a pair of games against the Kansas City Royals. The day began with Avisail Garcia's two-out RBI single, sending Chicago to a 3-2 victory in the resumption of a game suspended by rain on Friday night, and it concluded with the White Sox rallying for a 5-3 win.

"[Robertson] starting off the day like he did and then finishing it off, it was nice," manager Robin Ventura said. "Good day when you get two wins in one day."

The White Sox and Royals were tied at 2 when Friday night's game was suspended by rain after eight innings. Robertson (2-0) was on the mound when they resumed, and the closer got three outs before Garcia drove in Melky Cabrera in the bottom half with his first career game-ending hit against Kelvin Herrera (0-1).

Robertson, who signed a $46 million, four-year contract with Chicago over the winter, then returned for the ninth inning of the second game and got Omar Infante to bounce out with two runners on for his third save.

"It's not really any different than going out and having a little flat-ground and playing catch before the game and coming back in," Robertson said. "You're throwing a little bit harder obviously with more intensity out there on the field, but I was prepared for it and thankfully I didn't end up throwing 30 or 40 pitches each inning."

The White Sox's Adam LaRoche scores on a single hit by Conor Gillaspie as Kansas City catcher Salvador Perez reacts during the sixth inning of Sunday's game. The White Sox took two from the American League champions, winning 3-2 in the resumption of Friday's rain-delayed game before taking the regularly scheduled game, 5-3.

Alex Gordon hit a two-run homer for Kansas City, which won its first four games of the season against Chicago. Gordon, a four-time Gold Glove winner in left, also made a pair of nice defensive plays, including an outstanding leaping grab into the stands on Micah Johnson's foul liner in the sixth.

"When I was going over I knew when I jumped I was going to jump in the stands," Gordon said. "I kind of had an idea of where the fence was and how low it was."

I just said I gotta make the catch here and that was it."

Kansas City right-hander Edinson Volquez (2-2) was charged with one earned run and five hits in 5 2/3 innings. The right-hander pitched at least seven innings and allowed three runs or less in each of his first three starts.

The White Sox had just one hit and trailed 3-0 before they pushed across five runs in the sixth. Third baseman Mike Moustakas committed a costly error on Jose Abreu's grounder, allowing Adam Eaton to score, and Conor Gillaspie put Chicago in front with a two-run single.

"It's a play I need to make. Ninety-nine out of 100 times I make that play," Moustakas said. "The one time I don't make it, they score five."

John Danks (1-2) pitched six innings of three-run ball while improving to 8-1 with a 2.73 ERA in 18 career starts against Kansas City.

Back in action

Chicago and Kansas City returned to the field for the first time since Major League Baseball handed down seven suspensions for Thursday night's brawl in the series opener. The resumption of the suspended game and Saturday's regularly scheduled matchup also were rained out.

"I think we got all our emotions out that night and I think it's over and done with," Kansas City outfielder Lorenzo Cain said.

Cabrera's catch

Cabrera jumped against the fence in left to rob Eric Hosmer of extra bases for the final out of the eighth, earning a round of applause from Zach Duke as the reliever walked to the dugout.

Next

White Sox: RHP Hector Noesi (0-2, 5.23 ERA) gets the ball when the White Sox open a three-game series at Baltimore tonight. Ubaldo Jimenez (1-1, 2.30 ERA) is scheduled to pitch for the Orioles."

Embarrassed early, Blackhawks hit their stride just in time

Goalies come, goalies go, but Chicago moves on

It smacks of desperation. And it's more a hunch than a real strategy.

But when pressed, most coaches will admit few things motivate pro athletes better than embarrassing them.

another big first-period deficit and then a goalie swap for the second time against the Nashville Predators. The result was another 4-3 win Saturday night that closed out their first-round playoff series in six games and left Chicago awaiting Minnesota in the conference semifinals.

As they had for most of the series, the Blackhawks started sloppy and paid the price. Predators winger James Neal notched two quick goals, and then teammate Matt Cullen picked defenseman Duncan Keith's pocket along the left boards and put Nashville ahead 3-1 just past the midway mark in the first.

Chicago coach Joel Quenneville, experiencing something very much like deja vu, had seen enough. In the opening game of the series at Nashville, he pulled Corey Crawford after he gave up three goals on just 12 shots and replaced him with rookie Scott Darling. The Hawks roared back from a 3-0 deficit to win in double overtime.

After Darling started Game 6 by surrendering three goals on the same number of shots, Quenneville pulled the switch again. Chicago didn't need any extra periods to shake the Predators this time. It was 3-3 by the end of the first.

"It's never a situation you want to be in, but you might be right that it's a wake-up call," Chicago captain Jonathan Toews said.

"We know we can't hang our goaltenders out to dry the way we have numerous times in this series."

"But when we get that first or second goal, especially at home," he added, "I think there's that feeling across our lineup that we can take control of a game."

Before that could happen, though, Crawford needed a confidence boost of his own. He came in cold with just less than nine minutes left in the first and almost immediately faced a high whistling shot from Neal.

"The first one clipped my glove and went off the post," he recalled. "Then I settled down and started seeing pucks a lot better."

Apparently, so did his teammates. Other than that wrister by Neal, they didn't allow Nashville another shot on net for the next four minutes. Keith, a perennial Norris Trophy candidate, was clearly embarrassed when Cullen, a 38-year-old veteran, went through him like a revolving door for the Predators' third score.

He got his revenge in the third, using some deft stick-handling to end a cat-and-mouse duel with Nashville defenseman Seth Jones near the left boards, freeing up enough space to rip a slap shot that beat netminder Pekka Rinne high on the stick side at 16:12.

The Predators will have the entire offseason to examine what happened. They earned home-ice advantage in the first round by finishing second — a place ahead of Chicago in the Central Division — but suffered a major blow early in the series when defenseman Shea Weber went down with a lower-body injury. They also played without forward Mike Fisher for a large chunk of time.

Afterward, coach Peter Laviolette wasn't in the mood to look back at his first year with the team. "It's probably a better question for another day," he said.

"The objective was to get to this point," Laviolette added a moment later, "but that wasn't the whole objective, so disappointing right now."

That was obvious from the mood in the Predators' locker room. Rinne was still replaying some of the tougher chances that beat him, wondering what difference a save or two might have made.

"Throughout the series I felt like some of the games, the puck had eyes," he said. "You look at least three games, the winners ... just find a way through the maze and, obviously, that feels disappointing. ... You feel like maybe you get a break one of these games and it hits something and it doesn't go in."

"It's frustrating," he said finally, "but now I have way too much time on my hands to think about these things."

Busch goes from courtroom to Victory Lane

Leads 291 laps in dominating Richmond victory

BY HANK KURZ JR.
The Associated Press

RICHMOND, Va. — Kurt Busch has spent time this year in a Delaware courtroom, then on NASCAR's sidelines as he served a three-race suspension for an alleged domestic assault on a former girlfriend.

Now he has made a trip to Victory Lane, where Busch hoped his victory Sunday at Richmond International Raceway will help him close one of the messiest chapters of his volatile career.

"Standing on the truth the whole time, that gave me the feeling of when I do get back to the car, it's going to be easy to focus, and I think I've shown that," said Busch, who still has a no-contact order against him that was issued in February by a Delaware Family Court judge. The judge ruled that Busch likely assaulted ex-girlfriend Patricia Driscoll in September.

The 2004 series champion dominated the rain-delayed NASCAR Sprint Cup race that was originally scheduled for Saturday night under the lights.

The Stewart-Haas Racing driver led a career-best 291 of the 400 laps on the 0.75-mile oval, outrunning teammate Kevin Harvick over the final dozen laps to end a 35-race winless streak.

Earlier in his return, he said he was trying too hard.

"I think I might have been driving too hard, too much of a chip on my shoulder, so to speak," he said, adding that he realized last weekend that there is danger in driving along the line that separates effectively aggressive and overly aggressive.

One week later, he's already secured a spot in NASCAR's 10-race playoff.

"We're winners in April. It feels good," he said. "Plenty of time to do fun things to build the team up, get stronger, learn from all these races coming up and continue to go forward."

"Like [team owner] Gene Haas said: One win is great. I want four or five more."

Harvick, meanwhile, finished in the top two for the seventh time in nine races but said he had to rally after his car struggled on one set of tires and drifted back into the pack.

The race looked much like the Xfinity Series event Friday night in which Denny Hamlin led 248 of 250 laps and only lost the lead during green flag pit stops. This time, there were actual green flag lead changes, but only two — when Busch passed Joey Logano after 94 laps to take the lead, and when Jamie McMurray passed Busch after 262 laps.

Busch regained the lead under caution and never relinquished it, beating Harvick to the finish by 0.754 seconds. The victory was the 26th of Busch's career and second at Richmond.

Jimmie Johnson rallied from a No. 36 starting spot to grab third. McMurray was fourth, and pole-sitter Logano, who led the first 94 laps, was fifth. Rookie Chase Elliott, making his second start in NASCAR's premier series, finished 16th.

McMurray's pass came during a series of green flag stops, and when a caution came out on lap 270, only three cars were on the lead lap, including Busch, who had just pitted. He stayed out, regained the lead and slowly pulled away from Justin Allgaier, who got up front because of the green flag stops.

"We just had a really good car after 40 or 50 laps," McMurray said. "Really, for us to have a shot at winning, we had to have a long green-flag run at the end."

Harvick was closing on him in the final laps, but "just ran out of time," he said.

The day was especially disappointing for Hamlin, who grew up about 20 miles from the track and had a dominating Friday, qualifying second and leading 248 of 250 laps in the Xfinity Series race.

That, however, was before rain all day Saturday washed all the rubber off the track, and when the race began Sunday, Hamlin began fending immediately. He went a lap down after 236 laps and finished 22nd.

AVONDALE, La. — Justin Rose birdied the final two holes Sunday to win the Zurich Classic.

Rose, who entered the week ranked ninth in the world, completed a 7-under 65 in the rain-delayed third round and closed with a 66 at TPC Louisiana for his seventh PGA Tour title.

The Englishman has won at least once in six straight seasons, the second-longest streak on the tour behind Dustin Johnson's eight straight.

Playing aggressively on a soggy course, Rose made six birdies in the final round and played the last 66 holes without a bogey. He finished at 22-under 266.

Rose's final two putts from 10 and 13 1/2 feet allowed him to hold off Cameron Tringale by a stroke. Tringale birdied the 18th for a 65.

Boo Weekley, who led after the first round, finished third at 20 under, and Jim Herman and Jason Day, ranked sixth in the world, tied for fourth at 19 under.

Champions Tour

RIDGEDALE, Mo. — Joe Durant had a hole-in-one and teamed with Billy Andrade to win the Champions Tour's Bass Pro Shops Legends of Golf at Big Cedar Lodge.

Andrade and Durant closed with a 9-under 45 at the par-3 Top of the Rock course, playing nine holes of modified alternate shot and nine of better ball.

Durant aced the third hole on the second nine, using a 7-iron on the 167-yard hole.

Durant and Andrade finished at 19-under 159 in the 54-hole event, opening Thursday with a better-ball 63 on Buffalo Ridge's regulation Springs course and shooting a 51 on Saturday in high wind on the par-3 course. They each earned $230,000 for their first victories on the 50-and-older tour.

Sandy Lyle and Ian Woosnam tied for second, three strokes back after a 51. The former Masters champions took a two-stroke lead into the final round.

Larry Nelson and Larry Fleisher won the Legends Division for players 65 and older, beating Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player by two strokes. Nelson and Fleisher had a 1-under 26 for nine holes of better ball on the par-3 course. They finished at 12 under in the 45-hole event.

LPGA Tour

DALY CITY, Calif. — Lydia Ko won the Swinging Skirts LPGA Classic for the second straight year, beating Morgan Pressel on the second hole of a playoff.

The 18-year-old Ko never had the lead Sunday until she rolled in a 5-foot birdie putt on the par-5 18th hole for her seventh career victory. She also made birdie on the 18th in regulation for a 2-under 70 to force a playoff.

Pressel closed with a 72. She missed three birdie putts on the 18th hole — from 15 feet in regulation, from 10 feet on the first playoff hole and from 8 feet on the second playoff hole.

Brooke Henderson, the 17-year-old from Canada, had a 74 and missed the playoff by one shot.

Bayless' buzzer-beater buries Bulls against Bucks

Leading 3-1, Chicago can close series tonight

BY GENARO C. ARMAS
The Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Jerryd Bayless cut right along the baseline, leaving Derrick Rose a couple of steps behind.

It was just the sliver of an opening Bayless needed to put up a game-winning layup at the buzzer.

Bayless' basket gave Milwaukee a rousing 92-90 victory over the Chicago Bulls on Saturday, drawing the upstart Bucks within 3-1 in their Eastern Conference playoff series.

"We thought we got better tonight. We found ourselves with a 'W,'" coach Jason Kidd said.

And they are still alive to play Game 5 tonight in Chicago.

All thanks to a play coming off a timeout called by Kidd with 1.3 seconds left.

Bayless' task was to cut along the baseline and hope to find an opening. The guard stopped Jared Dudley to ask a question before his teammate threw the inbounds pass from side court.

"I was curious. I just wanted to know, 'Are you going to look for this?' Every cut is live," Bayless said.

The high-arcing pass got to Bayless at the perfect moment.

Milwaukee's Jerryd Bayless shoots a game-winning shot over the Bulls' Derrick Rose during Game 4 of the Bulls-Bucks first-round playoff series on Saturday in Milwaukee. The Bucks won 92-90 but the Bulls can close out the series with a Game 5 win tonight at the United Center in Chicago.

He made a nice catch and put up a quick shot with his right hand.

Rose walked away in frustration, while green and white streamers descended from the Bradley Center rafters.

The rebuilding Bucks had won their first playoff game in five years.

"As a whole we have a long ways ago," Kidd said. "But I thought with this being a character game, the group in that locker room showed a lot of character by finding a way to get a win."

Chicago had a chance to win with the game tied at 90. But Milwaukee's Khris Middleton tipped a dribble away from Rose to force a steal. Kidd called timeout to set up the final play.

"I put that all on me. I just wasn't paying attention to the ball," Rose said.

Coach Tom Thibodeau refused to lay the blame solely on his star point guard.

With a total of 28 turnovers, the whole team played a part in failing to close out a four-game sweep.

COLLEGE BASEBALL

KCC takes pair from Lake County

Good pitching and timely hitting helped Kankakee Community College to a double-header sweep of the College of Lake County on Sunday at KCC.

The Cavaliers won the first game 6-0 behind a strong outing from starting pitcher Brock Immke. In the second game, reliever Tristan Walters got out of a tough spot in the sixth inning and pitched a spotless seventh to earn the save in a 4-3 win.

Immke (3-4) allowed just one hit in the opener while fanning 11 and giving up just one walk. In Game 2, Kyle Flessner (5-1) was the winning pitcher, allowing three runs, but only one earned. He fanned three in 5 1/3 innings but got into trouble in the sixth, allowing runners to reach second and third. Flessner gave way to Walters, who got the final five outs of the game without any damage.

In the opening win, Jeff Cardenas had two of the Cavs' seven hits and an RBI. Jake Lane also added a two-run double. In Game 2, Josh Bergbreiter had two hits, including a run-scoring double. Evan Regez had two hits, and Sean Green (two RBIs) and Cardenas also hit safely.

KCC is back in action today, traveling to Des Plaines to face Oakton in a double-header starting at 3 p.m.

HIGH SCHOOL BADMINTON

Boilermakers win H-F Invitational

A strong overall performance allowed Bradley-Bourbonnais to roll to the team title at the Homewood-Flossmoor Invitational on Saturday.

The Boilermakers coasted to the title by racking up 28.5 points.

The tournament had three individual flights and three doubles flights, and no Boilermaker unit finished lower than third.

"We had a lot of close matches that we were able to win," Bradley-Bourbonnais coach Kathy Colclasure said. "The girls played hard, and I saw a lot of good play from our girls."

Leading the way for Bradley was the No. 2 doubles team of Leann Hale and Jenna Howard as they captured first place in the flight. Also faring very well were the No. 1 doubles team of Shyanne Falkner and Megan Fox and the No. 3 doubles grouping of Ravina Vasawala and Leslie Neblock. Both groups claimed second place in their respective flights.

In singles play, Haniah Zaheer took second at No. 1 singles, and Lizzy Graven (No. 2 singles) and Haley Tuntland (No. 3 singles) each earned third-place finishes.

YOUTH TRACK

Meet set for Saturday at McNamara

Bishop McNamara Catholic High School will host a Youth Olympic Track Meet on Saturday, beginning with field events at 9:30 a.m.

All Kankakee County Elementary School and Junior High School students are eligible to participate in the event.

A three-event limit is in place for elementary level students while a four-event limit is in place for junior high school students.

There is a cost of $5 per event for individuals and $20 for relay events.

Pre-registration for the event is available at 815-304-4633, or registration on event day begins at 8 a.m.

CAMPS

Shooting camp to be held in Sheldon

A Pro Shot Basketball Shooting Camp will be held from 9 a.m. until noon on Saturday, May 23, at the Milford East Campus school in Sheldon for boys and girls from fourth grade to 12th grade.

For more information on the camp, contact Pat Teig at 785-230-6568.

"I'm not going to put it on that last play. There were a lot of other plays throughout the course of the game," Thibodeau said. "When you turn the ball over like that, you're not going to have success."

Jimmy Butler had a playoff career-high 33 points for the Bulls. Pau Gasol had 16 points and 10 rebounds, while Rose finished with 14 points, six assists and eight turnovers.

And Chicago couldn't force a Milwaukee mistake at the end.

"But that definitely didn't lose us the game," Gasol said. "Mistakes will happen — we just made too many of them throughout the game."

● MLB: CUBS 5, CINCINNATI 2

The Associated Press/Tom Uhlman

The Cubs' Addison Russell hits a three-run double against Cincinnati in the fourth inning of Sunday's game in Cincinnati. Russell delivered the key hit in the Cubs' 5-2 victory, improving their record to 10-7, their best start since 2008.

Russell's double sends Cubs home happy

21-year-old rookie ends first week on big note

BY JOE KAY

The Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Rookie Addison Russell finished his first week in the majors with his biggest hit yet.

The youngest player in the National League doubled with the bases loaded on Sunday, and the Chicago Cubs held on for a 5-2 victory and a sweep of their rain-shortened series against the Cincinnati Reds.

The 21-year-old second baseman was in a slump when he broke the game open with his three-run double in the fourth inning off Anthony DeSclafani (2-1). Russell was called up on Tuesday and was only 2 for 19 with 11 strikeouts heading into that at-bat.

"I'm just understanding this whole process," Russell said. "It may be overnight, it may take a few games, it may take a few at-bats. I'm just trying to stay patient and stay with my approach and believe in my talent."

His teammates have seen enough to know that he has talent aplenty.

"Those are things he's going to be able to do more often the more comfortable he gets here," starter Jake Arrieta said. "He's had some at-bats where he looks a little, and the next time he comes up he has great swing at the ball."

Miguel Montero had a solo homer and a run-scoring single off DeSclafani, who had a streak of 16 scoreless innings snapped.

Arrieta (3-1) pitched six innings after waiting out a 4-hour, 13-minute delay before the Reds called off Saturday's game because of persistent rain. The Cubs won the series opener on Friday night, 7-3 in 11 innings.

Arrieta gave up four hits, including Todd Frazier's solo homer, and struck out six. Hector Rondon gave up a hit in the ninth while earning his fourth save in five chances.

The Cubs are 10-7 under first-year manager Joe Maddon, their best start since 2008 when they went 11-6. Chicago won the division that year under manager Lou Piniella.

Montero hit his 100th career homer in the second inning, ending the longest scoreless streak of DeSclafani's career and giving the Cubs a 1-0 lead.

The Cubs sent eight batters to the plate for four unearned runs in the fourth, set up by Frazier's fielding error at third base. Montero singled home a run, and the Reds intentionally walked Chris Coghlan with one out to load the bases and bring up the bottom of the order.

Arrieta struck out on three pitches, but Russell doubled off the base of the wall in right-center field for three runs. Russell was called up from the minors on Tuesday.

Arrieta retired the first 11 Reds — only two of them got the ball out of the infield — before Frazier homered. The Reds got another run in the fifth on Billy Hamilton's RBI forceout, but they left the bases loaded when Frazier fouled out and Brandon Phillips hit into a forceout.

The Reds have dropped three in a row overall. They went 0 for 20 with runners in scoring position during the two games against Chicago.

Road wins

The Cubs went 4-2 on a trip to Pittsburgh and Cincinnati, leaving them 6-3 on the road overall.

Great play

Shortstop Starlin Castro dived to get Brennan Boesch's short-hop grounder in the hole in the sixth inning. Getting up to his right knee, Castro threw him out at first base.

Trainer's room

Cubs reliever Pedro Strop retired all three batters in the eighth. He'd been bothered the past few days by a sore toe.

On deck

The Cubs return to Wrigley Field for a six-game homestand against Pittsburgh and Milwaukee. Jason Hammel (1-1) faces Vance Worley (2-1) tonight.

● MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL: MILWAUKEE 6, ST. LOUIS 3

Brew Crew cages Redbirds

Milwaukee wins for just 2nd time in 12 games

BY JIM HOEHN
The Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Adam Lind hit a two-run homer and the Milwaukee Brewers beat the St. Louis Cardinals 6-3 Sunday for just their second victory in the last 12 games.

Milwaukee, off to the worst start in team history, improved to 4-15. Every other team in the majors has at least six wins.

The Cardinals had won nine of 10. St. Louis got 13 hits, but stranded a season-high 14 runners, including eight in the first three innings.

Mike Blazek (1-0) pitched two innings for the victory. Starter Mike Fiers gave up one earned run on nine hits and two walks in four-plus innings.

Lance Lynn (1-2) allowed six runs on 10 hits in five innings.

The Brewers took a 3-0 lead in third after Logan Schafer reached on infield single that bounced off the back of Lynn and Gerardo Parra tripled. Cardinals right fielder Jason Heyward appeared to stumble on Parra's hit and left the game with left groin tightness, and was listed as day to day.

Lind then hit his third homer.

The Cardinals got a run back in the fourth when Jon Jay, who replaced Heyward, singled with two outs. Jay moved up when Lind mishandled a pickoff throw and scored on Jhonny Peralta's single.

Mark Reynolds, who played last season for Milwaukee, cut the lead to 3-2 with his first home run to lead off the fifth, chasing Fiers.

The Brewers scored three times in the bottom half on doubles by Parra, Kris Davis and Elian Herrera, and an RBI single by Hector Gomez.

Catcher Cody Stanley, called up from Triple-A to take Wainwright's roster spot, made his major League debut as a pinch hitter to lead off the eighth and singled. He later scored on Matt Adams' bases-loaded grounder.

Trainer's room

Cardinals catcher Yadier Molina was out of the lineup for the second straight day as he recovers from getting hit by a foul tip on Friday. "He's feeling better, even though we just need to go ahead and take at least another day," manager Mike Matheny said. "He can hit, he can run, but squatting is the major issue right now."

Up next

Cardinals RHP John Lackey gets the start as the Cards return home tonight for a four-game series against Philadelphia after a six-game road trip. He is 1-0 with a 4.34 ERA in three starts.

● BOXING

Fight week begins with Pacquiao caravan to Vegas

$100 grand for ringside seats to richest fight in history

BY TIM DAHLBERG

The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — The last time Freddie Roach was on the interstate linking Los Angeles with this boxing capital, he was written up for going 140 mph.

Roach will be driving a lot slower today as part of a colorful caravan of hundreds of cars heading down Interstate 15 with Manny Pacquiao for his showdown with Floyd Mayweather Jr.

"Manny will spar on Monday for the last time and after that we'll break camp and everyone will go to their cars and trucks," Roach said. "The entourage used to be about 100 cars, I'd say there might be 1,000 cars this time."

Fight week is finally here, and even in a city known for the outlandish it is shaping up to be something special. The richest fight in history has spawned $100,000 ringside tickets, hotel rooms going for $1,600 per night, and a pay-per-view price just a nickel shy of a $100 bill.

Even $10 tickets to see the two fighters at the weigh-in are running as much as $700 through online ticket brokers.

Everything is over the top for the megafight that was five years in the making. That includes the caravan that will bring Pacquiao to Las Vegas, featuring hundreds of cars and a custom bus wrapped in Pacquiao's image for some of the luckier members of his entourage.

"I might have the fastest car," Roach said. "But if I get one more of those tickets I can't drive anymore. I asked the police officer, why do they make these cars so fast if you can't drive that way? I should have shut my mouth."

Pacquiao is scheduled to arrive at the Delano Las Vegas hotel at Mandalay Bay sometime early evening today following seven weeks of training at Roach's Wild Card Boxing Club in Hollywood. His arrival marks the unofficial kickoff to a fight week unlike any other in a city used to hosting the biggest fights.

So far it doesn't look like promoters underestimated the demand for the fight. The cheapest ticket on the StubHub website Sunday was $5,245, while ringside seats were being offered for as much as $106,950. Even tickets to watch on closed circuit at various MGM-owned properties in Las Vegas — which originally sold for $150 — were being offered at $620 or more online.

Everybody will pay for a fight that will likely earn Mayweather $180 million and Pacquiao $120 million. Even Roach had to shell out $70,000 for 20 tickets for family and friends, though he was able to get his at retail prices.

"My mother asked for four tickets and my mother gets whatever she wants," Roach said. "My brothers and sister all want to go. I'm happy I can afford to buy them tickets."

While Pacquiao will be arriving in town, Mayweather lives here and has been training at his own gym just west of the Las Vegas Strip. His promoter, Leonard Ellerbe, said Sunday that Mayweather will treat the week just like any other big fight he has been involved in.

Dispatch. "All those rumors floating around seem to have some validity to them."

The 33-year-old Wainwright was put on the 15-day disabled list Sunday. He was hurt while stumbling out of the batter's box after hitting a popup in the fifth inning at Miller Park.

Several top pitchers in recent years have been lost for most of a season or all of it — Matt Harvey, Yu Darvish, Jose Fernandez and Zack Wheeler, among them.

But those were related to pitching, with Tommy John surgery the result. Wainwright had that same procedure and missed the 2011 season when St. Louis won the World Series.

This time, Wainwright got hurt hitting, a few days after Washington ace Max Scherzer injured his thumb batting. Those kind of incidents are likely to ramp up the long AL vs. NL debate on the designated hitter, as in whether it's worth having pitchers bat.

— The Associated Press

The Associated Press/Jeffrey Phelps

The Cardinals' Jason Heyward walks off the field with manager Mike Matheny and a trainer after getting injured against Milwaukee during the third inning of Sunday's game in Milwaukee. Heyward left the game and will be evaluated today, as will pitcher Adam Wainwright, who might be lost for the season with an Achilles injury.

Wainwright on 15-day DL, could be out much longer

St. Louis Cardinals ace Adam Wainwright is out at least 15 days because of an injury to his Achilles and left ankle. It could be longer, much longer — possibly even for the whole season.

Hurt while batting Saturday night in Milwaukee, Wainwright was scheduled for an MRI today that likely will reveal how long he'll be gone.

"Unfortunately, it is not great news," general manager John Mozeliak said in a video on the Cardinals' website. "Any way you slice it, he is going to be missed for a while and potentially losing the season is very real."

Several published reports said the Cardinals expect Wainwright to be out for the season. Manager Mike Matheny would only say the pitcher will be examined when the team returns to St. Louis.

"I don't like to speculate until you have the full information, but if you ask me how I feel... not good," Mozeliak told the St. Louis Post-

"It's a typical fight week, business as usual," Ellerbe said. "Floyd is going to put on a spectacular performance, you can count on that."

Ellerbe said he isn't surprised by the demand for anything to do with the fight, which will smash records for biggest gate and almost surely set records for pay-per-view sales.

"Everything is out of the stratosphere," he said. "It shows you the world wide appeal of this fight."

Roach can be forgiven if he speeds a bit on his way to town. A seven-time winner of the trainer of the year award by the Boxing Writers of America, he said Pacquiao guaranteed him a win last week so he would win the award for an eighth time.

"This will be my biggest win ever," Roach said. "This one really counts, it will be in the history books the rest of our lives. I think my guy is ready for it."

Bourbonnais Offsite garage/yard sale signs permitted on Thurs., Fri., Sat. & Sun. only & must be removed by 7 a. m. on the following Mon. Signs no larger than 2 feet by 2 feet, cannot be placed on trees, fences, utility poles, streetlight poles, traffic signals, street signs, stop signs or similar items. Signs must contain the address of the property where the garage/yard sales being conducted. They cannot be placed within 100 feet in any direction of the intersection of Illinois 102 and U.S. 45/52, including the landscaped islands. Signs cannot be placed on village property, including the village hall, public works, buildings, village parks, flower beds, landscape area or drainage areas. Signs shall not be displayed on any portable device or vehicle parked on any public street or right of way. If signs are placed in the right of way, namely that area between a sidewalk and the curb, the person placing the sign shall first have the permission of the owner of the property adjoining the right of way, or that property owner would have the ability to remove and dispose of the signs. If the Village has to remove any garbage or yard sale sign because the sign(s) do not meet these regulations, the person or persons responsible for the placement of the sign(s) may be subject to a $50.00 removal fee.
Bradley No fee. Registration required at Village Hall 8:00 am to 4:30 pm Permitted e two 3 day sales per year. Signage cannot be on public property, easements, poles, signs and the like.
Herscher No fee. No signs posted on public property
Kankakee Permit issued to anyone hosting a sale within City of Kankakee, obtained at City Clerk's Office, 304 S. Indiana Ave., 9-5, Mon. - Fri.; Residents limited to two (2) day sales consecutive) during a 12 mo period. Permit is $5/sale. Hours of operation 8 am to 8 pm. Permits must be posted in a conspicuous place on premises & visible from the street during the operation of the sale, not on terraces, sidewalks, trees or utility poles & must be removed within four hours after the sale is completed. A fine of not less than $10 nor greater than $100 will be issued upon violations: failure to obtain a permit, failure to remove permit; posting on trees and/or utility poles, fraudulently altering any permit or using it for premises other than the address issued for. Permits are non-transferable and non-assignable are good only for the dates, time and residence address issued. One-day rain permits may be reissued at no charge in the event of inclement weather which occurs over a substantial portion of those days permitted for the sale, if the person contacts the City Clerk's Office within ten (10) days from the last day of the sale.
Manteno No permit or registration required. Any area between sidewalk and curb is considered village parkway and, as such, must not have any signs or structures placed or built upon it. Signs attached to trees or public utility poles are prohibited.
Momence $5.00 fee. No signage on city property.
Peotone An application for a garage sale permit must be made at least 48 hours prior to the sale date. The cost of each garage sale permit is $5.00. Residents are limited to two (2) garage sales per year. 01 (However, one (1)rain date will be allowed for the following week only). Garage sales held in conjunction with the Chamber of Commerce "Community Garage Sales Days" will not require village permits or count toward the two sale limit. No garage sale may last longer than two days. Garage sales may only be held between 8 am and 4 pm. Items for intentional resale may not be sold at garage sales. The garage sale must not obstruct sidewalks/walkways. No garage sales are permitted on the weekend of the Peotone Country Festival. Residents will be limited to one (1) sign per sale, no larger than 4 square feet, and no higher than 3 feet from the ground; Signs must be placed on private property at location of sale only, not in parkways or public right-of-ways; Fines for violation of ordinances range from $25 to $750.

YOUR HOROSCOPE BY JACQUELINE BIGAR

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

TUESDAY, APRIL 28, 2015

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★★ You will need to make an extra effort to determine what to do to get some feedback from an important person.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ You typically are logical and forthright, but at this point in time, you'll tap into your creativity when a problem appears.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ Lie low and choose to be passive. Listen carefully to a conversation to determine what is being left out.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★★ You know what you want, and you recognize the power of having support from others.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★★ You will jump over any obstacles that appear. Others are drawn to you, as you are able to accomplish a lot quickly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★★ One-on-one relating could prove to be rather fruitful. Nevertheless, keep what you know to yourself right now.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★★ Keep your goals in mind as you approach a situation that has several implications.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★ Others see how gifted you are in many different ways.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★★ Reach out to someone you care about.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★★ Take charge, and run with an idea while you can.

Ready for Kilbride Classic

Submitted photo
Kankakee High School's Brother to Brother organization is ready to volunteer for the Kilbride Family Classic 5k run/2 mile walk for autism. Members of Brother to Brother have provided volunteers for several years. This year's event will be on Father's day, June 21. Pictured are Joseph Jordan, left, Eric Morris and Gino Wendes.

Future occupations

Students in Patti Pietraszewski's first-grade class at Noel LeVasseur School in Bourbonnais dressed as their future occupations recently. Gavin Pilbeam, left, chose to dress as a policeman; Saul Beck, center, dressed as a zookeeper; and Liam Olson, right, dressed as a member of the United States Air Force.

Send us your pictures for Local Faces in Different Places

- Just make sure to follow these simple rules.
1. Photos must have the first and last names of all people whose faces are visible. There are no exceptions.
  2. Please state what town a person is from (for example: Joe Jones, of Ashkum).
  3. Identify people from left to right, and top row to bottom row.
  4. Clear focus and good lighting are important. If a picture is too blurry or too dark, it will not run.
  5. Pictures in bad taste (such as drinking, smoking or showing gang signs) will not run.

- To submit prints by mail:
1. Please type or print legibly.

2. We will gladly return prints if a stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed.
3. Use commercial printing labs (like a drugstore) or high-quality photo paper. Photos on ink jet paper cannot be printed.
4. Send prints to: The Daily Journal, Local Faces in Different Places, 8 Dearborn Sq., Kankakee, IL 60901.

To submit digital photos:

1. Only submit one picture per email.
2. Send the photo as an attachment.
3. Send full-size images. Photos taken with a cellphone, or pulled from a website, will not run. (Thumbnail images are too small.)
4. Send captions in black text.
5. Give your photos simple, descriptive names.
6. Email to: localfaces@daily-journal.com.
