Q&A hollywood

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: I'm wondering if I missed an episode or two of "Mr Selfridge." At the end of last season ... [spoilers].

A: I'm cutting your question off there because this is one of those shows people are passionate about, and sometimes like to binge-watch a season at a time. Rather than risk ruining any plot points for anyone, I'll answer your question as broadly as I can.

You have no need to worry, you haven't missed anything, the producers just expect you to keep up.

Both the second and third seasons involved huge leaps forward in time, leaving it to the circumstances and characters' dialogue to let viewers know what's happened in the interim.

At the end of season 2, the First World War is still tearing Europe apart, but the third season starts in 1919, months after it finished.

The same sort of time lapse happens between season 1, which is set in 1909, and season 2, which starts up in 1914.

Those are significant time jumps to keep up with, but viewers also have the real life story of Harry Selfridge, founder of the still-thriving Selfridge's department store, to go by.

Before the third season premiered, executive producer Kate Lewis hinted at what was to come.

"You only have to walk down Oxford Street today to know that Selfridge's department store continued to be successful," she said. "But for its founder, Harry Selfridge, things were very different. His story was a roller-coaster ride that ended rather tragically. We pick up series 3 in 1919 — the point at which his life really begins to unravel."

As dire as that sounds, viewers shouldn't get too worried — the show has already been renewed for a fourth season, so his life can't unravel too much this season.

Q: Whatever happened to Natasha Curry, who did news on HLN? She did an excellent job on weekends and filling in for Robin Meade.

A: No one has said exactly why Natasha Curry left HLN, where she had her own weekend show and, as you say, was the go-to fill-in for Robin Meade's weekday show. The closest we have is an unnamed HLN spokesperson telling "TV Newser" that she "decided to move back West to be with her family." Of course, that decision may or may not have come after someone else decided she didn't have a job anymore.

Her departure came in December 2013 as part of a shakeup at the cable news network. Sports reporter Carlos Diaz left at the same time, shortly after new network president Albie Hecht came in and started making major programming changes, including a number of cancellations.

Curry's weekend show, "Weekend Express," wasn't on the cut list, though — the show is now hosted by Lynn Berry.

The only sight that's been seen of Curry since her exit wasn't even a sight: She returned to her Pacific Northwest-radio roots by doing a weeklong fill-in spot on Seattle's MOV'n 92.5 radio morning show in August 2014. (Before joining HLN, Curry reported for Seattle's KOMO-TV and KOMO Newsradio.) Other than that brief run, there's no word of what Curry's been doing.

It's quite possible she has indeed taken some family time — she's done it before. She went on maternity leave from HLN for a few months in 2012 to give birth to her son.

Real girl, real food: Haylie Duff's food is the real deal

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

Who says that actors are out of touch? OK, so the stereotype of the rich, snobby Hollywood star may apply in some (possibly a lot) of cases, but it sure doesn't apply to Haylie Duff.

She may be singer/actress/songwriter Hilary Duff's big sister, but Haylie definitely doesn't live in her sibling's shadow. She has her own successful acting career (she starred in "7th Heaven" and 2004's "Napoleon Dynamite"), and in 2012 launched her own super successful blog, "Real Girl's Kitchen."

It turns out that the actress is also a whiz with food, and her easy but tasty recipes quickly found a loyal following. That blog was — and continues to be — a huge success, and in 2013 she released a cookbook featuring some of her favorite recipes. Her very own TV show wasn't far behind.

"The Real Girl's Kitchen" is currently airing Saturdays on Cooking Channel, and it shows Duff doing what she does best: cooking up delicious dishes that are great for everyday situations that people at home are likely to find themselves in. Whether it's a baby shower or a surprise birthday party, there's really no get-together that isn't improved with some good food.

In the May 9 episode, she'll be hosting a potluck with her friends in which they'll be challenging each other to put a twist on some of their childhood favorites. She'll be throwing together some turkey chili with a side of beer, bacon and cheese cornbread herself before helping her friends prepare some Greek meatballs.

Sound mouthwatering? I definitely think so. Luckily, the TV and cookbook fame hasn't stopped Duff from updating her blog regularly. Visitors to realgirlskitchen.com can find countless mouthwatering recipes from the down-to-earth actress, along with restaurant reviews, general thoughts from the kitchen whiz and even answers to questions posed by her many loyal fans.

"The Real Girl's Kitchen" airs a new episode Saturday, May 9, on Cooking Channel.

The fine art of flying solo

'Weird Loners' wraps up its freshman season

By Jacqueline Spendlove
TV Media

By the time you hit your 30s, chances are the majority of your friends have paired off. They're buying houses. They're posting an endless stream of baby pictures on Facebook. They're spending a lot of time in small towns you've never heard of to visit various in-laws. You're attending at least four weddings a year and have learned to hit the registries as soon as humanly possible so you're not stuck buying a $300 blender.

If you happen to be one of the last remaining singletons in a vast sea of couples, you're probably getting asked — with an ever-heightening tone of concern — whether you're seeing anybody yet. And no matter how content you might be in your selfish, hedonistic, freewheeling lifestyle, you're sure to feel just a little pang when you catch that look of pity or mild distress in their eyes when you answer "Nope!"

"Weird Loners" gets this. The new mid-season sitcom cooked up by "The King of Queens" creator Michael J. Weithorn follows four chronically single 30-somethings who've been thrown together in a Queens townhouse. The series premiered at the end of March and wraps up its six-episode arc Tuesday, May 5, on Fox.

According to the network's website, "Weird Loners" is "a show for all those who have at some point felt scared, lost, lonely and overwhelmed in the world of love and relationships. Namely, everyone." It's true. Aside from that one relationship-hopping friend who hasn't been single for a full day since ninth grade, most of us have had at least one period in our lives since middle school where we seem to be the only one not madly in love. It can feel like a negative thing, but it doesn't have to be.

Like "Friends," arguably one of television's most popular sitcoms, "Weird Loners" seems to be aiming to duplicate the idea that it's OK if you haven't found "the one," as long as you have a strong group of friends to act as your support system and surrogate family. The more recent "How I Met Your Mother" is another show that put a lot of emphasis on the importance of adult platonic relationships, and it, too, garnered a massive following.

The core lone weirdos in Fox's new series are considerably different characters with varying attitudes towards relationships, and single-hood in particular. For the most part, they start out as strangers, but, as they're sharing living quarters by the end of the pilot, it's safe to say we'll see some significant growth and bonding, assuming the series gets the chance to progress past one season.

"Happy Endings" Zachary Knighton stars as Stosh, the show's token playboy who loses his job in the first episode for ill-advisedly making time with his boss's fiancée. After getting boot-ed from his condo, he moves in with Eric (Nate Torrence, "Hello Ladies"), his affable oaf of a cousin whose dad has just died, leaving Eric on his own for the first time in his life.

The other half of the house is inhabited by Caryn (Becki Newton, "Ugly Betty"), who's a recognizable archetype of that girl who can't seem to keep a guy around despite being quite attractive, and she just cannot figure out why. As a result, she comes off as a bit desperate and ever so slightly nuts because she so badly wants that fairy tale marriage — which, in turn, scares off potential suitors in a vicious circle of single-hood.

Rounding out the foursome is Zara, a free-spirited artist played by Meera Rohit Kumbhani in her first major role. We meet Zara in the midst of a botched attempt at a clean break from her boyfriend, who catches her trying to sneak out without having to tell him it's over. She's brought into the fold after selling Eric a painting, and by the end of the first episode, Caryn has taken her on as a roommate.

With some lovably oddball characters, there's no reason to doubt that "Weird Loners" can still make something of itself. Judge for yourself and get caught up on Fox's freshman comedy before it wraps things up. The season finale of "Weird Loners" airs Tuesday, May 5, on Fox.
