Q&A hollywood

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: What happened with "The Whispers"? Did it really end that way, never to return, or will it be coming back?

A: There are a couple of reasons why the renewal or cancellation of ABC's summer thriller, "The Whispers," has been tricky — one of which is the reason why your question is tricky as well.

The network hasn't made a decision on the series. It wasn't an outright hit in the ratings, though its "plus-three" numbers — that is, the people who watch the show within three days on their DVRs (digital video recorders) — were reportedly a lot better.

That's a problem for the show, since networks don't value those ratings as highly as live ratings. It's also a problem for this column, because it suggests a lot of people may still have the show sitting around in their DVRs, so I can't talk about what happened in the finale. It suffices to say that, since this is a suspense-based show with a serialized plot, things were not totally resolved.

The fact that ABC hasn't made a decision yet would normally not be a big deal, since the first-season finale only aired on Aug. 31 — networks frequently take much longer than that to make renewal decisions. However, people were expecting a decision sooner because the actors' contracts expired in June, meaning they've since been free to pursue other roles.

And many have. Lily Rabe (who plays Claire in the series) has joined the cast of the upcoming season of "American Horror Story," and Milo Ventimiglia (who plays Sean) is reportedly being considered for a new USA Network series called "Shooter."

Barry Sloane (Wes) appears in the new season of "Longmire," which has been available on Netflix since mid-September.

Q: In 2005 or near that time, I watched a movie on IFC that was a simulated newscast about a group of young people in a tent in the New Jersey woods being pursued by someone or something. Can you tell me the name of the movie and whether it is available on any media?

A: It sounds like the movie you're thinking of is "The Last Broadcast" (1998), one of multiple horror movies based on the legend of the Jersey Devil.

According to the New Jersey Historical Society, the Jersey Devil is a creature that stalks the remote wooded area known as the Pine Barrens, with numerous attacks and "blood-curdling cries" ascribed to it. The legend is that the devil is the cursed, 13th child of Deborah Smith Leeds, who lived in the region in the 1700s.

Such legends, of course, are great fodder for horror films. "The Last Broadcast" was actually released a year before the horror blockbuster "The Blair Witch Project" (1999), which gave similar treatment to a Maryland legend.

Both of those films helped to pioneer one of the more popular horror genres: the "found footage" film — so called because the footage that makes up at least part of such movies is supposed to have been shot by the characters themselves. In both "The Last Broadcast" and "The Blair Witch Project," the characters are filmmakers trying to document their investigations.

Though "The Last Broadcast" was made on an incredibly low budget and would normally have been lost to film history, it has benefited from its association with "Blair Witch," so it is still available on DVD.

Moonlit munchies: FYI's food fighting chefs are back for more

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

Stroll around the streets of Las Vegas late at night and you just might witness an after-hours show like no other. The moonlit duels between the city's chefs are a local tradition that have gained a national audience, and the fights are coming back for another round. The second season of "Late Nite Chef Fight" premieres Thursday, Oct. 15, on FYI.

Hosted by four-time world champion boxer Laila Ali and chef Vic "Vegas" Moea, each hour-long episode is based on the Vegas tradition.

So just what are these post-dusk duels? In each episode, two of the city's famous chefs step out of their kitchens and into a food truck that they've never been in before.

They'll be without their armies of highly trained kitchen staff. They won't have their fancy sous-vide machines and won't have the time to braise meats for hours. The ingredients they'll be given to work with range from unfamiliar to outright exotic. There's another twist, too: they'll be working in front of a live audience that tends to get a little bit loud.

Over three starlit rounds, their skills will be put to the test in these small, unfamiliar kitchens with weird, unfamiliar ingredients. In the true spirit of this classic Vegas brawl, though, the winner only takes home bragging rights — that, and a meal cooked by the loser.

Of course, since this is a competition, there has to be judges. Each night, two of them will be on hand, and they include "Top Chef's" Spike Mendelsohn, L.A. chef Russell Jackson, Food Network and Cooking Channel celebrity Aida Mollenkamp ("Ask Aida," "FoodCrafters") and chef Casey Lane.

In a town built on high stakes, it's the ultimate low-stakes battle for these pros: all they stand to lose is a good night's sleep. The first season of "Late Nite Chef Fight" was a hit for FYI, and Las Vegas's cool nights have been heating up in anticipation of the second.

The late-night duels get underway Thursday, Oct. 15.

Toeing the line

'Truth Be Told' aims to 'ruffle feathers' on NBC

By Cassie Dresch
TV Media

Truth be told, it can be hard to keep up with the new slate of TV shows the networks drop each fall. Truth be told, not all of those shows turn out to be as good as the networks hope, and many get canned in short order. Truth be told, if there's one show you should check out this fall, it's "Truth Be Told," premiering Friday, Oct. 16, on NBC.

The semi-autobiographical sitcom hails from the mind of DJ Nash, known for another NBC semi-autobiographical sitcom called "Growing Up Fisher." The new series tells the story of two married couples who are all best friends and all speak their minds, no matter the topic (especially if it's a topic that's typically avoided on TV).

That's not to say that "Truth Be Told" will be outright raunchy and disrespectful, or better suited for HBO. Nash's goal for the series is to make viewers at home really think about some of today's pressing topics — especially the ones that no one wants to talk about.

"I think we really want to ruffle feathers," Nash said at the Television Critics Association press tour in August. "If there is not a point in every episode where we're uncomfortable, then we're not telling the right story. Very little in life is black and white. ... And I want to have those topics where we're all not always on the same page, and I want to push it. So I think there are certain limits that we put on ourselves."

Helping Nash ruffle some feathers on screen is a cast of characters with quite a few funny, familiar faces. Starring as married couple Mitch and Tracy are Mark-Paul Gosselaar and Vanessa Lachey. Gosselaar was catapulted to fame in the '90s when he starred as the charming Zack Morris in the now classic comedy "Saved by the Bell" and, until recently, starred in

Vanessa Lachey, Mark-Paul Gosselaar, Tone Bell and Bresha Webb star in "Truth Be Told"

Bravo's "Franklin & Bash." Lachey is a former fashion model and Miss Teen USA winner who got her start in the television world in "The Bold and the Beautiful." Most recently, she appeared in the short-lived Fox series "Dads."

The other married couple, newlyweds Russell and Angie, live right next door to Mitch and Tracy, and the couples visit each other frequently. Stand-up comedian Tone Bell plays Russell, who is also a stand-up comic. Bell appeared in season 2 of the NBC sitcom "Whitney," as well as the Kate Walsh comedy series from last winter, "Bad Judge." Bresha Webb, best known for her work in drama series' such as "ER" and "Grey's Anatomy," stars as Angie, who isn't afraid to keep Russell in line.

Nash remains steadfast in keeping "Truth Be Told" as authentic as possible; in fact, many of the topics discussed — and some of the conversations themselves — are pulled directly from his real life. To say he's drawing from experience would almost be an understatement as he claims to often try to draw out fights with his wife in an attempt to glean material from them that he can use in the show.

"Whenever [my wife and I are] in a fight or if I'm out in the world and something happens, I will stay in it longer because I want to see what the third act is," Nash joked with AfterBuzz TV at PaleyFest in September. "I can't resolve the fight too fast because I need 22 minutes [of show material]."

Executive producer William Packer, whose producing credits include the Ice Cube/Kevin Hart comedy "Ride Along" (2014) and the immensely successful NWA bio-pic "Straight Outta Compton" (2015), commended Nash in the same AfterBuzz TV interview for using personal experiences to fuel the story.

"That's what I really dig about having somebody like DJ, who's not afraid to pull from real-life situations," he said. "People know when stuff is fake now. They know when it just feels fabricated and it doesn't feel authentic. He's not afraid to actually pull things from his real life — personal stuff or stuff that just happens to him on the weekend. And that's what makes this show so cool."

Truth be told, it's not often that a network jumps head first into a TV show that toes the line between daring and distasteful. It appears that NBC is doing just that, though, and if it works for Nash, Packer and company, the peacock network could have its next great sitcom on its hands. Truth be told, it should be a fun, exciting ride for the cast and crew of "Truth Be Told." Catch the premiere episode when it airs Friday, Oct. 16, on NBC.
