'The Expanse' brings sci-fi back into our own solar system

By Cassie Dresch
TV Media

Humans have always had a penchant for exploring — from the depths of the ocean to the vastness of the universe, we want to know what's out there. Space exploration has come a long way as technologies have advanced and evolved, which makes it easy to dream of what waits for us beyond our solar system.

TV likes to go out into the cosmos, too: "Star Trek," "Battlestar Galactica," "Firefly," "Andromeda," the list goes on and on. These shows are classic examples of intergalactic, outer space human exploration shows, but what about staying closer to home? There aren't many sci-fi shows that revolve around the vacuum of space nearest our sun.

But Syfy's newest offering does stay within our solar system for a change; "The Expanse," a space opera set 200 years in the future on Earth, Mars and the asteroid belt that separates the two planets, is the cabler's latest original show. The 10-episode series kicks off with a special two-night event Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 14 and 15, on Syfy, before sliding into its regular Tuesday time-slot.

The show from NBCUniversal's Syfy is based on the international bestselling series of novels of the same name from James S. A. Corey (the pen name used by authors Ty Franck and Daniel Abraham), and stars three-time Golden Globe nominee Thomas Jane ("The Mist," 2007) as Det. Josephus Miller, and Steven Strait ("Magic City") as rogue ice freighter captain James Holden. The pair are on the hunt for a missing woman, and ultimately end up hot on the trail of the biggest conspiracy in human history.

If the source material is any indication, "The Expanse" promises to be an intriguing tale that doesn't need to zip-zoom to the outer reaches of the galaxy to make for good TV. Co-creator Mark Fergus commented on this at the Television Critics Association press tour in January:

"We always felt that the great struggle of a lot of sci-fi we grew up on takes us into a story world where we've already jumped over the interesting part, which is the first fumbling steps of us pushing off this planet, getting out into the solar system, sorting ourselves out as a race. All the struggle and the pain and the glory of that, ... [e]verything is kind of done. And to us, we really got turned on by the books because they told of this world where 'Here is the scaffolding. Here is how it got built. Here is who built it. Here is how humanity started looking at itself differently and getting rid of old forms of racism and creating new forms of racism."

Part of the "we" Fergus is talking about is his partner in crime, Hawk Ostby. The screenwriting duo penned the Oscar-nominated film "Children of Men" (2006), the mega-hit superhero film "Iron Man" (2008) and the Daniel Craig and Olivia Wilde-starring film "Cowboys & Aliens" (2011), and now they make their first foray into TV writing with "The Expanse."

The co-creators have a lot of material to draw from as the series progresses — there are currently five novels, two short stories and two novellas, and four more novels and three more novellas are planned for the book series — and, if reaction from San Diego Comic-Con in July and New York Comic Con in October is any indication, the series looks primed for a long run after its initial 10 episodes.

"Welp, we have a new favorite show," io9.com's Lauren Davis wrote following the July screening. "At San Diego Comic-Con, we got to watch the entire pilot ... and we were blown away." Max Nicholson from IGN said that the pilot episode "looked gorgeous. The exterior space shots and zero gravity effects in particular were top notch, especially for television," and after the viewing in New York, Blastr's Cher Martinetti said that Syfy "has a winner on their hands," judging by fan response.

Of course, the true test comes now as sci-fi fans get introduced en masse to the story and characters, especially if they haven't read the books and this is the first time they're delving into the world of "The Expanse." They're in capable hands, however, as the series has lined up an (inter)stellar cast.

Alongside Jane and Strait, the ensemble includes Oscar-nominated and Emmy-winning actress Shohreh Aghdashloo ("House of Sand and Fog," 2003), Chad L. Coleman ("The Walking Dead," "The Wire"), Wes Chatham ("The Help," 2011), Gemini Award nominee Cas Anvar ("The Tournament") and Dominique Tipper ("Vampire Academy," 2014).

The universe is a big, dark, scary place with many corners to explore, and TV likes to do just that. "The Expanse," however, brings things a little closer to home — our own solar system. With assets ranging from a bestselling series of novels to an accomplished pair of screenwriters to an impeccable cast, this new sci-fi series looks poised to be out-of-this-world good. There's tons of hype about the show right now, so see what it's all about when "The Expanse" premieres with a special two-night event Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 14 and 15, on Syfy, before it settles into its regular Tuesday time-slot.

Q&A hollywood

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: I just watched "Gone Girl" and loved it. I was told it was based on a book. Have any of the author's other works been made into movies?

A: Another of the Gillian Flynn's four books has indeed been turned into a movie. But if you're really interested in seeing her words on screen, you'll be excited to hear she's started cutting out the middle-medium.

The 2014 film adaptation of her book "Gone Girl" was a huge success, but its successor, "Dark Places," released earlier this year, wasn't.

That film was an adaptation of Flynn's second novel (actually written three years before "Gone Girl"), and starred Charlize Theron and Christina Hendricks. Though it certainly didn't make the same splash as "Gone Girl," it's hard to say how successful "Dark Places" was. That's because it had a pretty unconventional release: it aired on DirecTV Cinema for seven weeks before it even hit theaters. So the fact that it was a flop at the box office (earning just $210,000 in ticket sales, compared to "Gone Girl's" $368 million) doesn't necessarily mean it didn't make money.

It's worth noting that Hollywood is still very much in the Gillian Flynn business. However, it has started getting her to dispense with the book part of things.

She now has two screenwriting projects on the go simultaneously. Both are adaptations of others' previous work, which makes sense, since her only screenwriting experience to date is adapting her own book ("Gone Girl") for the screen.

That said, don't hold your breath waiting for either of them.

One project is a remake of the Alfred Hitchcock classic "Strangers on a Train." It promises to reunite Flynn with "Gone Girl" actor Ben Affleck and director David Fincher. However, in an interview with Vulture.com, Flynn said the project is on hold for the time being.

The other film she's working on is the heist thriller "Widows," based on the British TV miniseries of the same name. This was only announced last March and is in such an early stage of development that they aren't even guessing at a release date.

All that said, Flynn hasn't given up on the idea of putting her other books on screen. She's already sold the rights to her first novel, "Sharp Objects," and she's reportedly in the process of selling the rights to her most recent book, "The Grownup."

Q: "Love Actually" is one of my favorite Christmas movies. Did the kid who played Sam go on to do anything else?

A: The adorable child star of 2003's "Love Actually," Thomas Brodie-Sangster, has grown into a hugely in-demand twentysomething.

He co-stars as Newt in the smash-hit teen-film franchise The Maze Runner, which launched last year and released a sequel this past September. It's based on a popular book series, as many of the big movies are these days.

Some of the biggest shows are, too, such as HBO's huge hit "Game of Thrones," which also featured Brodie-Sangster for a while, playing the mysteriously gifted Jojen Reed.

Even if you haven't seen his face since "Love Actually," you may have heard his voice. He plays Ferb on the long-running Disney cartoon "Phineas and Ferb."

Culinary saboteurs get vicious in 'Cutthroat Kitchen'

By Kyla Brewer
TV Media

It is fair in love and war, and the same may be true in culinary television shows. The competition is fierce on foodie TV, but one series truly takes the cake. Four chefs face the ultimate test of their skills as they go head to head in a new episode of "Cutthroat Kitchen," airing Sunday, Dec. 13, on Food Network.

Hosted by television personality Alton Brown, the show is similar to many other culinary series in that it features four chefs competing in three rounds of competition.

However, here's the rub: the chefs have the opportunity to sabotage each other or give themselves advantages as Brown presents various auction items, both before and during the rounds. At the beginning of the episode, each chef is given $25,000, which they may use to purchase items or "sabotages" they can use to try to stifle their competition. Whatever the victor has left after the final round is theirs to take home. The competitors have a limited time to prepare their dishes, after which they're evaluated for taste, presentation and resemblance to the assigned dish.

In the Dec. 13 episode, one competitor is forced to plank while trying to make a crab cake Benedict. Later, the remaining culinary villains make gyros, but one of them has to do so while spinning around on a giant spit. In the end, one chef must find a way to make a rhubarb pie in a pi pan.

Those kinds of challenges make for tall orders, even for the most experienced chefs. However, they are also a recipe for ratings as fans can't seem to get enough of backstabbing in the kitchen. When asked in an interview for the Food Network blog why the show is so popular, Brown offered some insight:

"People love games. And it's a kind of game where anything can happen — and often does. Sabotage is fun. It's fun to see what is going to come out of that shelf later."

You, too, can enjoy in the sabotaging fun when a new episode of "Cutthroat Kitchen" airs Sunday, Dec. 13, on Food Network.

Obama goes 'Wild'

The president joins Bear Grylls on an Alaskan Adventure

By Jacqueline Spendlove
TV Media

America's top dog is stepping out of the Oval Office and into the great outdoors. In a special episode of "Running Wild with Bear Grylls," the British survival guru is taking none other than U.S. President Barack Obama on a rugged trek through the Alaskan wilderness.

The two live off the land, hike along a glacier and shimmy down a mountain as part of a three-day presidential trip to the Arctic intended to address the effects of climate change on the Alaskan wild. Rounding off a star-studded second season, the special episode airs Thursday, Dec. 17, on NBC.

When Obama's people called Grylls' people with the idea for the episode, the latter was sure they were pulling his leg. He was assured, however, that the president is a big fan of "Running Wild" and would love to do it — and what better way to promote his climate change agenda than to examine the effects in person?

Grylls has hosted several TV series centered around wilderness survival, the most well-known being "Man vs. Wild," which documents his efforts to survive and find his way back to civilization after being dropped in a remote area. While he's certainly adept at keeping himself alive, "Running Wild" is proof that others are safe in his care, too — even the privileged and pampered.

Each episode of "Running Wild" sees Grylls take a celebrity along for a two-day trek in the wilderness, exercising the same types of survival techniques employed in his other series. The most recent season has taken him to the Italian Alps with Jesse Tyler Ferguson ("Modern Family"), the Panama jungle with New Orleans Saints quarterback Drew Brees, and the Snowdonia mountains with Kate Winslet ("Titanic," 1997). He doesn't pull any punches, either, just because he's dealing with the rich and famous — a fact to which Michelle Rodriguez ("Avatar," 2009) can testify after eating a mouse cooked in her own urine.

Bear Grylls and President Obama as seen in "Running Wild with Bear Grylls"

Clearly, the 44th president is in capable, if not delicate, hands. Of course, the fact that he couldn't exactly shake his security team made for a bit of a safety net as well.

"It was a different show to normal, due to the 60 or so Secret Service agents and helicopters hovering above," Grylls told the Absolute Radio Christian O'Connell Breakfast Show. "But [Obama] was so down to earth and couldn't have been nicer."

"As president, I am in what's called the bubble, and Secret Service makes sure that I'm always out of danger, which I very much appreciate, but it can be a little confining," the president said in a clip.

"Confining" is not a word by which Grylls lives, as he told the Telegraph:

"We were going down this steep slope and the Secret Service were saying it was too dangerous. So I told the president that they didn't think he could do it, but [he] was like 'of course I can ... I'll show them ... c'mon let's go!'"

The host has also noted that the agents would sweep ahead, giving him the same opportunity for one-on-one time with the president that he enjoys with the rest of his guests.

He also provided a more palatable meal than scorpions, squirrel or urine-soaked mice. A clip from the episode does, however, show Obama voicing some mild concern as to what he'd be eating on his trip:

"I've seen some of the things Bear eats, and it's got to be something that doesn't still have its legs and eyes on it. You know, I want it not to be too recognizable."

Eyes yes, legs no. Come meal time, Bear presents Obama with a rather gory-looking salmon that's been partially gnawed by a bear, explaining that bears often eat the fatty brain and eggs, leaving the meat behind.

"I think a piece of salmon, that'll work just fine," the president said gamely, having made a meal of the second-hand fish. "It would have been nice if we'd had a cracker to go with it," he added.

Fair enough. He is used to White House finery, after all.

For Obama's part, the trip wasn't just for the adventure, but also to add to the legacy he hopes to leave behind. The president recently introduced ambitious new regulations on carbon emissions, and the purpose of his Alaskan visit is to highlight the effects of climate change and what it's doing to the Arctic — from crumbling permafrost to villages threatened by rising sea levels to receding glaciers like the one he and Grylls hike in "Running Wild."

"Eventually, I hope to have [grandchildren]. I want to make sure this is there for them, not just for us," he says in the episode, gesturing towards the remote Alaskan landscape.

His appearance on the show is a wise tactic to get the word out to an audience that may not be tuned in to the political agenda, but he definitely took personal pleasure in it as well, declaring it to be one of the best days of his presidency. As with the makeup-free celebrities usually featured on the show, the episode gives viewers a chance to see a very different side of the besuited, often serious Obama they see in the press.

Mission: Impossible - Rogue Nation

After obtaining hard evidence, Agent Ethan Hunt of the Impossible Missions Force (IMF) is convinced he and his colleagues can finally prove the existence of the Syndicate, a criminal organization the CIA doesn't believe exists. Their plans to expose the enterprise backfire, however, and the IMF is disbanded and absorbed by the CIA. After a warning from IMF Field Ops Director William Brandt (Renner), Hunt manages to evade capture, but is forced back to square one of his investigation.

Director: Christopher McQuarrie.
Stars: Tom Cruise, Simon Pegg,
Jeremy Renner, Sean Harris, Rebecca Ferguson. 2015. 131 min. Action.

Beltone

Helping the World Hear Better - Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow

I really enjoy my hearing aids. It is a whole new world. I wear them every day. I would advise anyone who needs hearing aids to get Beltone. They have friendly service; someone is always there to assist me whenever I need help.

Fantastic Four

Since childhood, Reed Richards (Teller) and Ben Grimm (Bell) have been working on building a teleporter. The talented pair catch the eye of Franklin Storm (Cathey), who invites them to work with him, his children — Sue (Mara) and Johnny (Jordan) — and his protégé, Victor Von Doom (Kebell) at their lab. The team uses the teleporter to embark on an expedition to an alternate dimension, but disaster strikes, and Von Doom is left behind, abandoned in the strange world.

Director: Josh Trank. Stars: Miles Teller, Michael B. Jordan. 2015. 100 min. Action.
