Village wants more say on wastewater board

BY JOHN DYKSTRA

Bourbonnais wants to have more representation on the Kankakee River Metropolitan Agency's board of directors after acquiring more capacity throughout the past 30 years.

Mayor Paul Schore said the village now owns 30 percent of the wastewater treatment plant's capacity and is responsible for the commensurate debt service. Kankakee, Bradley and Aroma Park own the rest.

An intergovernmental agreement, dating back 30 years ago, allows Bourbonnais to have one representative on the board of directors. Schore said Bradley and Aroma Park each have one representative, while Kankakee has four.

"Our current status on the board really doesn't represent our ownership that we have down there," Schore said after Monday's village board meeting. "We're bringing it to the KRMA board that, maybe, it's time to restructure that based on ownership. ... We feel we should

Clothing drive set after belongings lost in Monday fire

Three local fire departments were called to a fire in an apartment complex on East Main Street of Ashkum at 3:22 p.m. Monday.

There were no people in the building at the time of the fire, and the Ashkum, Chebanse Township and Danforth firefighters were able to put out the fire before it spread. There was a small amount of smoke damage to the neighboring bar, Mugshots.

Ashkum Fire Chief Jeff Glenn said that while no one was residing in any of the four units in the complex, belongings of single mother Iva Hobbs and her three daughters were in the building and lost to the fire.

A GoFundMe account has been set up for the family, and Lisa Hanson is holding a clothing drive at the Hanson Agency in Ashkum.

"She has daughters that are close in age with my daughters and I know how small communities can come together to help," Hanson said.

Hanson said she already has had multiple people drop off clothes, and many more private message her expressing interest in donating.

"It's amazing how far people will go to help out," Hanson said.

As of 2:30 p.m. on Tuesday, the GoFundMe page had raised $140.

Glenn said the reason for the fire at the 30-by-80 two-story complex still is under investigation.

If you would like to help the family affected by the fire, donate to their GoFundMe page or bring household items or clothing juniors size 3, girls size 10/12 and girls size 8 to 101 E. Main St., Ashkum between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

National Night Out brings police and public together

BY COURTNEY WOLFE

AMID THE TURMOIL THE NATION FACES TODAY INSIDE POLICE AND PUBLIC RELATIONS, crowds of citizens on Tuesday showed their support during the 33rd annual National Night Out at Perry Farm in Bourbonnais.

People from all demographics filled Perry Farm, listening to live music, going on tractor rides, visiting assorted vendors, eating hot dogs and even dunking local police officers in a dunk tank. As police nationally come under further scrutiny, the Daily Journal asked the men in blue what changes they've seen.

John Timm, Kankakee County Corrections Department

Hero to zero: "The public's perception of us, we went from more of a hero to more of an enemy."

David Kline, Bradley Police Department

Be accountable: "People are expecting more accountability. They're videotaping the police with cellphones at encounters. ... My theory is if you don't have anything to hide then you have nothing to worry about."

Chief Larry Regnier, Kankakee Police Department

Don't believe everything you read: "The way the negative press has the police perceived and the way we're perceived by the public ... Locally, I don't think that perception is the way it is nationally. Events like this show that people aren't afraid of law enforcement."

Rick Gilbert, Herscher Police Department

Changing views: "The perception of law enforcement."

Sgt. Steve Skelly, Manteno Police Department

Public has your back: "Our public support face to face does not seem to have changed ... People still come up to us and thank us all the time."

Chief Chad Koltwenzew, Kankakee County Corrections Department

Local support: "Sometimes, you get a lack of support, but here you get positive public support."

Sam Palaggi, Bradley Police Department

We are all unique: "People are quick to group all of the police as one when an officer makes a questionable decision, but they don't realize that every police officer is unique."

Todd Schloendorf, Kankakee County Corrections Department

Lack of resources: "In this area it would be budget crunches, budget restrictions, understaffed and overworked. ... That's probably the biggest thing."

Chief Mike Johnston, Bradley Police Department.

Future law enforcers: "Right now, the biggest issue that I see in this area is a lack of interested young people wanting a career in law enforcement."

Sgt. David Nojd, Bradley Police Department

Stagnant views: "Nothing has really changed, I think the people that already supported us have come out and shown us more support."

Aiming to get kids involved at church

BY DENNIS YOHNKA

It's just a 90-minute session on Sunday afternoon, nine Sundays in all.

But it feels like so much more when you hear the students and instructors talking about the impact of the new archery program at Herscher Christian Church. Of course, a first impression is that there has never been so much camo-wear in church. But there's more at work here.

"It's a community outreach thing, maybe not that different than our basketball games or summer camp," said Brian Wells, 43, of Bonfield. He's a member of the Herscher congregation and one of the organizers of the archery program.

"And it's not just archery. We teach the basics, from stance to release. But half of our time is devoted to learning Bible verses."

The program accepts students between the ages of 10 and 19, and, so far, as many as 39 have shown an interest, but only 12 completed the first nine-week session.

"We're thinking of starting the next session in January, so we won't run into vacations and holidays and other interruptions, so we'll see how we do then," Wells said, noting he liked the enthusiasm of the students, especially Tori Wells, 9, of Bonfield, takes aim during a recent practice session for the archery-based youth group Agape Outdoors at Herscher Christian Church. Wells placed second in the group's overall competition, the 500 Challenge, in which participants can earn 250 points in youth group actions, such as memorizing verses and praying aloud, and 250 points in their shooting accuracy.

5 things to know about mosquitoes

While we all know mosquitoes are annoying little pests, many of us often don't think about the other risks they bring when sitting around the campfire or hiking through the woods. According to the American Mosquito Control Association, more than 1 million people worldwide die from mosquito-borne diseases every year, making mosquitoes the organism that cause the most suffering. There's malaria and the West Nile virus that has been on our radar for a long time, but now, there's a new threat: Zika. Spread by sexual intercourse and mosquito bites, Zika has been a hot topic, especially with the Rio Olympics. Here's five ways to protect yourself from mosquitoes and mosquito-borne diseases.

Use insect repellent

This one might seem obvious, but it's a must. Apply an EPA-registered insect repellent whenever you go outside, even during the daytime hours. If you also are using sunscreen, apply the insect repellent after you apply the sunscreen. Make sure to reapply often.

Protect your baby or child

Dress your child in clothing that covers their arms and legs and cover their crib, stroller or baby carrier with mosquito netting when outside.

Treat clothing and gear

Treat items such as boots, socks, pants and tents with permethrin or buy permethrin-treated clothing and gear. If treating the items yourself, always follow the product instructions. Do not use permethrin products directly on skin.

Seal any holes

Use screens on windows and doors, and make sure to repair holes in screens immediately. Keep windows and doors closed and use air conditioning when available.

Get rid of standing water

Once per week empty and scrub, turn over, cover or throw out items that hold water such as tires, buckets, planters, toys, pools, birdbaths, flowerpots or trash containers. Mosquitoes lay eggs near water.

Coroner: Man pulled from river drowned

But investigation continues for cause of crash

jdykstra@daily-journal.com
815-937-3330

The death of the man whose body was pulled from the Kankakee River near downtown Kankakee on Sunday has officially been ruled a drowning.

Michael M. Howard, 41, of Kankakee was pulled from the river along with his 2013 Chrysler 200. Police believe Howard was driving down South East Avenue before he crossed West River Street, struck a fence and landed in the river.

Kankakee County Coroner Bob Gessner said it will take at least a couple weeks to determine how long Howard was in the water. Toxicology results also will take two or three weeks to complete, if possible, Gessner added.

The Kankakee Police Department checked local surveillance cameras without any luck, said Jay Etzel, of the Kankakee police. The department is still trying to gather information on Howard's whereabouts before the crash.

Howard is the second person to die in the river near that intersection in the last 18 months. He crashed through the same section of fencing as Jessica Hinojosa did in February 2015. Hinojosa's body was recovered a month after her vehicle was discovered. Her autopsy determined she was intoxicated when she drowned.

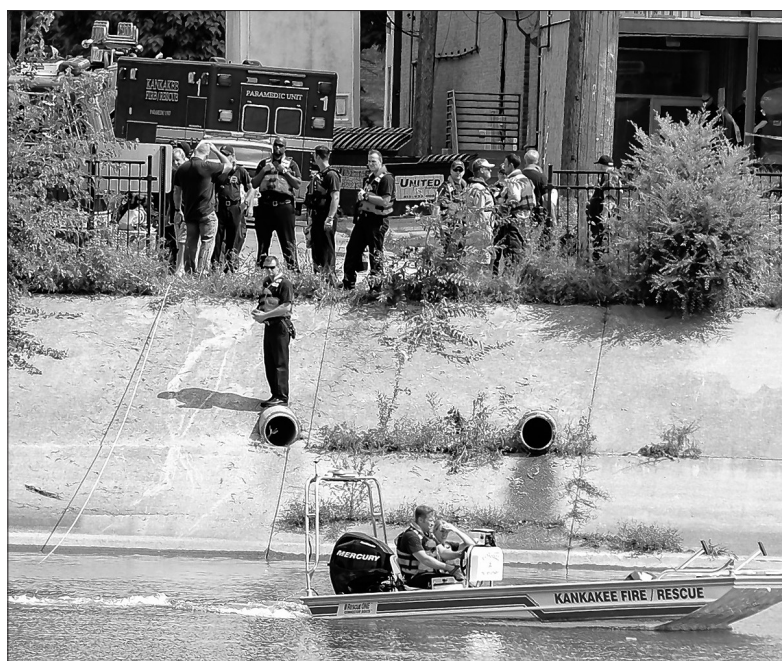

On Monday, Kankakee Mayor Nina Epstein asked Tyson Engineering to look into possible barriers to place along the river near the intersection. However, the city will wait for the recent crash investigation before making a decision.

Howard was the first person to drown in the river this year. In April, Limestone firefighters pulled from the river the body of Daveon Jones, a 20-year-old homeless man. However, Jones' cause of death was ultimately listed as undetermined.

Kankakee Fire Department personnel search for a possible vehicle in the water Sunday morning that went through the iron fencing into the water at South East Avenue and East River Street in Kankakee sometime overnight Saturday. A vehicle was located Sunday afternoon, and the body of a Kankakee man was found inside.

have 30 percent representation on that board."

In March, village trustees gave Tyson Engineering the green light to start designing a new sewer system for the upcoming Interstate 57 interchange at 6000N Road. The project will be the village's most expensive project to date, with estimates showing it will cost between $10 million to $12 million.

The new sewer interceptor will serve the future 1,200-acre business and industrial park that will be developed once the interchange is complete.

SOUNDING THE HORN

To celebrate Bradley-Bourbonnais Community High School's success in music, the village will display signs at its entry posts.

The signs will display the years of music department's recent state championships — 2010, 2011, 2012, 2013 and 2016.

Students set a school record last year by scoring 1,017 points en route to their fifth IHSA Class AA Music Sweepstakes Championship in seven years. The music department also has ranked in the top five for 10 consecutive years at the state competition.

BBCHS also had a record number of students participating in music programs last year. More than 430 students participated in band, choir or orchestra, representing about 20 percent of the school's student body.

A group of BBCHS students and a handful of staff members were present during Monday's village board meeting to receive the honor.

"We celebrate athletic achievements, but music is just as important to these students' lives," Schore said. "They deserve the recognition."

the girls' willingness to listen and focus on the lessons.

The instructors showed commitment, too. Nick Fowler, 47, of Bourbonnais, has been involved with the GOTCHA outdoor show, so he brought teaching experience. He also saw a spiritual side to spending time with nature.

"Bow-hunting is one thing, but just meditating out there ... it kind of puts you one-on-one with your God. It's like a prayer when you see nature wake up in the morning," Fowler said. "The first time I went out there, I thought I was just going to try to fill my freezer with meat for the winter. But you realize it's a time to reflect and there's more to it."

The students weren't quite as poetic.

"The first week, I don't think anyone hit the targets, but we got better," said Tori Wells, 10, the daughter of Brian and Tina Wells. "And, by the end, I memorized 20 verses."

"Well, I kind of thought I wanted to be like Robin Hood. I learned quite a bit, though," said Johnathan Garret, 9, the son of the Rev. Jacob and Karen Garret, of Herscher.

"We learned to shoot at 5 [meters] and then 7 and then 10," said Mylee Coffman, 9, of Limestone. "And when we went to 7 that seemed real hard. But really this is like ... like fun you have on vacation."

"The kids did have fun," said instructor Rick Rosenboom, of Clifton. "There was no motivation needed to get them started. The big problem was getting them to stop."

Man arrested for break-ins

Manhattan police arrested a 22-year-old man for breaking into a building that houses three businesses on Monday.

Ricardo M. Barrios, of Manhattan, was charged by the Will County State's Attorney's office with burglary, possession of burglary tools and obstructing identification, according to a news release on the village's website.

Barrios was captured after he fled the building located at 155 W. North St. All three businesses, including Gibbs Custom Gunsmithing, had been entered. He lied to police about his identity.

Police responded to a security alarm at the building and found a window had been broken.

Ricardo was taken to the Will County Adult Detention Center, where he awaits a bond hearing.

Cancer screenings at Bears Camp

The American Academy of Dermatology will be conducting free skin cancer screenings at the Chicago Bears Training Camp on Thursday and Friday.

The screenings will take place from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. on Thursday and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Friday.

This is the third consecutive year that there has been free cancer screenings at Bears Training Camp.

"Skin cancer is the most common cancer and it affects everybody, all Americans, regardless of your age, gender or skin type," said Dr. Ashish Bhatia, one of the board-certified dermatologists with the American Academy of Dermatology who will be conducting the screenings.

It is estimated that 2,500 new cases of melanoma, the deadliest form of skin cancer, will be diagnosed in Illinois this year.

"You wanna catch [skin cancer] early," said Bhatia. "Professional football players and fans spend a lot of time in the sun at these events."

The screenings will be conducted in private booths near field 4 at Olivet Nazarene University.

Screening participants will be entered to win Bears memorabilia.

Kankakee County receives $60K

Federal funds to aid Emergency Food and Shelter National Board Program

DAILY JOURNAL STAFF REPORT

Kankakee County has been chosen to receive $60,198 to supplement emergency food and shelter programs in the county.

The selection was made by a national board that is chaired by the Federal Emergency Management Agency and consists of representatives from The Salvation Army; American Red Cross; United Jewish Communities; Catholic Charities; National Council of Churches of Christ in the USA; and United Way of America.

Board meeting

WHEN: Thursday, Aug. 11, at 10 a.m.

WHERE: Conference Room (Suite 208) of Kankakee County Community Services, Incorporated, 657 E. Court St.

A local board made of representatives of several local organizations will determine how the funds appropriated by Congress are awarded to Kankakee County will be distributed among the emergency food and shelter programs run by service agencies in the area.

The local board is responsible for recommending agencies to receive these funds and any additional funds available under this phase of the program.

Under the terms of the grant, local agencies chosen to receive funds must: 1) be private voluntary nonprofits or units of government, 2) have an accounting system, 3) practice nondiscrimination, 4) have demonstrated the capability to deliver emergency food and/or shelter programs, and 5) if they are a private voluntary organization, they must have a voluntary board. Qualified agencies are encouraged to apply.

Public or private voluntary agencies interested in applying for the Emergency Food and Shelter Program Funds must call Barb Groth at 815-933-7883, ext. 214 for more information.

The local board will meet on, at 10 a.m. in the Conference Room (Suite 208) of Kankakee County Community Services, Incorporated, 657 E. Court St.

Prepping for the Olympics in Rio

YOUNG PEOPLE ENJOY TABLE TENNIS using a makeshift table at a downtown favela. Local residents say they can't play soccer, their favorite sport, because they don't have access to any open spaces.

Tension, excitement rise for Friday kickoff

STORY AND PHOTOS BY THE JAPAN NEWS/YOMIURI

EXCITEMENT IS BUILDING IN RIO, the host of the first Olympics in South America. The Games will kick off Friday, welcoming about 10,000 athletes from more than 200 countries and territories.

Walking through the streets, one can see elements of the Games all around — a tunnel bearing the official slogan “A New World” on its entrance or an official merchandise store at Copacabana Beach.

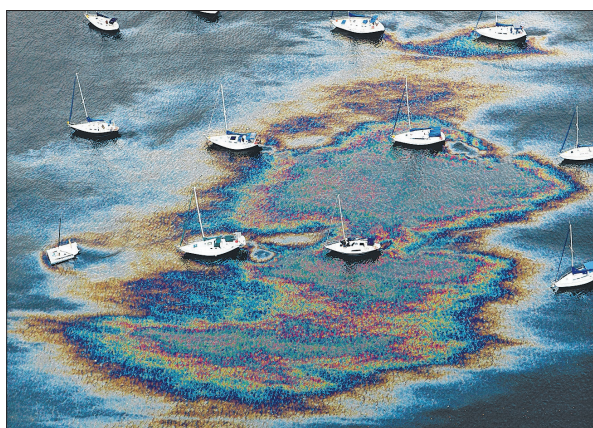

With the completion of the velodrome, all competition venues are ready for the Games.

Many residents of favela slums now can be seen playing Olympics-related sports during the weekend thanks to the promotion of such activities as part of the Olympic legacy.

In contrast to these successes, however, the Rio Games also have faced some difficult challenges, including the Zika virus and Brazil's economic slowdown. The high crime rate is casting the biggest shadow on the upcoming Olympics.

In an effort to fight crime, local authorities are deploying 88,000 security personnel — more than double the number involved in the London Games — while also carrying out counterterrorism drills.

Military helicopters fly over the venues, and soldiers on the ground keep watch with firearms. This is the reality of Rio.

WHAT LOOKS LIKE AN OIL SLICK floats on Guanabara Bay, an Olympic venue. Concerns have arisen because of water pollution.

ILLINOIS

Whiteside United Way losing compassionate leader

BY KATHLEEN A. SCHULTZ
The Daily Gazette

STERLING — They are mighty, mighty, mighty big shoes to fill.

Russ Siefken Jr., United Way of Whiteside County's executive director for 24 years, is retiring March 1.

In his time at the helm, Northwestern Steel and Wire closed and local manufacturing declined in general. Similar to others in the Midwest, Whiteside County's economy tanked.

Through it all, though, United Way stuck to its mission: "We never had to drop any agencies; we always had enough money to help everybody out; and we even added new programs," Siefken said.

The "we" Siefken is talking about are all the people he's quick to credit for the agency's success: His administrative assistant, a bookkeeper and a board of volunteers who've helped the agency keep on giving and growing.

Today, the 72-year-old oversees the distribution of $720,000 to 21 agencies — six more than when he started - and runs several programs, many that he created.

For instance, under Siefken's leadership, United Way launched the Let's Feed Our Children free summer lunch program, created after Northwestern Steel and Wire closed in 2001. For 15 years now, it has filled the gap for children who get free and reduced meals during the school year.

In 2003, he started Literacy is Fun for Everyone, which, through the Dolly Parton Imagination Library, provides free books to children from birth to age 5; the Back to School Supply Program; and the Pharmacy Assistance Program, which helps people in need pay for medications.

Siefken also was instrumental in bringing the 2-1-1 services line to Whiteside County in 2013. The free, confidential information and referral line helps connect people to necessary local services, such as finding a food pantry, helping pay utility bills or suicide prevention services.

Siefken also is a past United Way of Illinois Directors Committee chairman, a past Sterling Area Chamber of Commerce president, a P.W. Dillon Award winner and a Phillip Merriman Staff Leaders Award winner.

In addition, he has been and still is active in many community organizations, including Sterling Noon Rotary, Sterling Mural Society, Sterling Bank Commission, the Whiteside County Crime Stoppers board, the Relay for Life — Whiteside County committee, Royal Neighbors Rock Falls Camp 100 and the Illinois Alliance for Information State of Illinois Committee.

He's not the only career do-gooder in the family. His wife, Carol Siefken, 74, runs the Sauk Valley Foodbank — another United Way of Whiteside County success story, created in 2003. She has no plans to retire, he said.

Doris Dollar James KANKAKEE

Doris Dollar James, 85, of Kankakee, passed away Monday (Aug. 1, 2016) at Miller Health Care Center in Kankakee.

She was born Dec. 12, 1930, in Middleton, Tenn., the daughter of Sidney O. and Mary Maxwell Gray. Doris married Dr. George Dollar in 1995. He preceded her in death in 2006. On Jan. 3, 2014, she married Robert C. James. He preceded her in death on April 26, 2016.

Doris was a member of Faith Baptist Church. She retired from the Manteno State Hospital. She enjoyed sewing, crocheting and ceramics.

Surviving are three sons and three daughters-in-law, Scotty and Valerie Bell, of Aubrey, Texas, Harold and Melody Bell, of Manteno, and Steven and Ami Bell, of Manteno; one daughter and one son-in-law, Patricia and Peter Smith, of Man-teno; two sisters, Betty Rickman and Jeannette Gainey, both of Bolivar, Tenn.; one brother and one sister-in-law, John and Peggy Gray, of Memphis, Tenn.; eight grandchildren; and eight great-grandchildren.

In addition to her husbands, she was preceded in death by her parents; and the father of her children, A.E. Bell.

Visitation will be from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Wednesday at Clancy-Gernon-Hertz Funeral Home in Kankakee. Funeral services will be at 11 a.m. Thursday, also at the funeral home, with the Rev. Terry Anglea officiating. Interment will in Kankakee Memorial Gardens Cemetery in Aroma Township.

Memorials may be made to Hospice of Kankakee Valley.

Please sign her online guestbook at clancygernon.com. (Pd)

Rita Clark ELIZABETHTOWN, KY.

Rita Kathleen Clark, 62, of Elizabethtown, Ky., passed away Saturday (July 30, 2016) at Kindred Hospital, Louisville, Ky.

Mrs. Clark had a special love for her husband and a special place in her heart for her grandchildren. She and her husband enjoyed traveling in their camper together.

Preceding her in death were her parents, Floyd and Ruth Smith; one sister, Mary Smith; a grandson, Lucas Hansen; and a niece, Stephanye Clark.

Survivors include her husband, Glenn A. Clark, of Elizabethtown, Ky.; three children, Jeremy J. Crawford, Lorraine Florio, Kathleen Davis, all of Illinois; five siblings, Floyd Smith, Sharon Yeisley, John Smith, Louis Smith and Thomas Smith; 20 grandchildren, Zoe, Miranda, Harley, Kaden, Xavier, Kylie, Logan, James Jr., Gage, Adian, Kayla, Morgen, Breanna, Christopher, Michelle, Mike Jr., R.J., Jacque, Kaitlyn and Michael; along with a host of family and friends.

Visitation will be from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. Thursday at Coffey and Chism Funeral Home in Vine Grove, Ky. Additional visitation will be from 11 a.m. Friday until the 1 p.m. funeral services at the chapel of the funeral home. Burial will follow in the Kentucky Veterans Cemetery in Radcliff, Ky.

Please sign her online guestbook at coffeyandchism.com. (Pd)

Fewer US kids live in poverty

But more old folks do

BY AMRITH RAMKUMAR
Bloomberg News

When Donald Trump says almost four in 10 black American youths live in poverty, he's technically correct.

According to the official poverty measure, 36 percent of African-Americans younger than the age of 18 fell below the poverty line in 2014. The problem with that statistic is that the official poverty line is a flawed measurement. It doesn't take into account benefits such as food stamps and tax credits, so unlike the more recent supplemental poverty measure, it can't account for the fact earned income and child tax give-backs lower the poverty rate by 3.1 percentage points, and food stamps (formally known as Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program benefits) cut it by 1.5 percentage points.

"What we're doing to fight poverty actually does help reduce poverty," said Gregory Acs, director of the Income and Benefits Policy Center at the Urban Institute, which recently published an analysis of American poverty. "We're just not measuring it right."

Though no empirical measure can truly illustrate the day-to-day reality of being poor, the reduced number of poor children under the supplemental poverty measure is of course good news. There is though a darker side to this more accurate accounting: When including out-of-pocket health care costs, more elderly Americans are classified as living in poverty.

According to 2014 census data, 10 percent of those 65 and older fell below the official poverty measure. That number rose to 14.4 percent using the supplemental measure. A big reason for this is older people are more likely to use costly services such as staying overnight in a hospital or in a skilled nurse facility.

Small Newspaper Group

Dozens line up for a tray of food from the free lunch program at King's Harvest in Iowa. A family of four's current official poverty line is about $24,000.

The poverty measure is based on a 1963 formula. It defines the poverty line as the dollar equivalent of three times the cost of feeding a family of four based on the 1955 Household Consumption Survey, a formula adjusted for inflation. The formula still is used because it's tied to several public funding streams, such as cost assistance for insurance and tax credits, and is uniform nationwide, Acs explained. This remains the case despite the supplemental measure's poverty line being consistently 0.5 to 1 percentage point above the official measure.

Looking at all age groups, a family of four's current official poverty line is about $24,000. According to census data, 14.9 percent of people were below that compared with 15.3 percent under the supplemental measure. The supplemental measure, which groups individuals based on housing, found a poverty line of $25,844 for owners with a mortgage, $21,380 for owners without a mortgage, and $25,460 for renters.

Acs and two of his colleagues used Census data and 2013 findings from Columbia University researchers to chart the supplemental gauge against the official measure over several years. One difference between the two is that, during the 2000s and the immediate fallout of the 2008 financial collapse, the supplemental poverty measure showed a slower increase in the number of poor Americans, in part because food stamp usage increased considerably.

Your phone is smart enough to track your blood sugar

Surgically implanted device will send data to an app

BY AARON GREGG
The Washington Post

Throughout the past decade, continuous glucose monitors have given diabetics a way to track blood sugar without pricking a finger multiple times per day, a quiet revolution in health care that emerged in tandem with the advent of the smartphone. Now health-care companies are finding ways to merge the two technologies and display blood sugar trends on your phone, rather than on a separate meter.

Dublin-based Medtronic and San Diego-based Dexcom already have continuous glucose-monitoring apps approved for use in the United States (MiniMed Connect and G5 Mobile, both for iOS). U.K.-based Abbott has an app on the market in five European countries (Librelink for Android).

Senseonics, a German-town-based biotech company, is working on a tiny piece of machinery, surgically implanted every three months, that will transmit data directly to your phone in real time.

As with any new technology there's reason for wariness. Smartphone glitches or battery failures are annoying when they interrupt your game of Pokemon Go, but a botched blood sugar reading can be really dangerous.

Dexcom, the U.S. market leader, had to recall more than 250,000 receiver devices last year because their alarms were failing.

And cost is an issue for some people (it depends on what your insurance will cover).

Medtronic's MiniMed Connect app requires a separate "uploader" device for $99. The price tag stopped Jack Davis, a 27-year-old videographer from Minnesota who has Type 1 diabetes, in his tracks.

"For me, at my age and for what I do, there's no reason for me to have it on my phone," said Davis, who is content to rely on Medtronic's handheld device.

Even though glucose-monitoring apps still are a work in progress, these companies already are looking beyond: to systems that automatically inject insulin in response to trends picked up by the sensor-like an artificial pancreas.

Dexcom chief technology officer Jorge Valdes says his company is working on such a system.

SPICE 32 BROADWAY

START TO FINISH

Friday, August 5 and Saturday, August 6
at Kankakee High School 7:00pm

Tickets are $10 at King Music in Bradley or Joy's Hallmark in Meadowview Shopping Center in Kankakee or by calling 815-932-0937

Spice of Life is back for its 32nd show titled Broadway: Start to Finish

The production will raise funds for Harbor House, the Kankakee region's shelter for domestic violence victims and their families.

PUBLIC NOTICE

The City of Kankakee, Illinois has applied for an incidental take authorization regarding Illinois state-endangered mussel species, Black Sandshell (Ligumia Recta) and Purple Wartback (Cyclonaias Tuberculata), and Illinois state-endangered fish species, River Redhorse (Moxostoma Carinatum). The application is based upon potential impacts resulting from the construction of the Kankakee Riverfront Trail Bridge over the Kankakee River project which includes construction of the new bridge and a temporary causeway across the Kankakee River located in Kankakee, Illinois.

- The mailing address of the City of Kankakee is 304 S. Indiana Ave., Kankakee, IL 60901.
- The project construction area is located in the City of Kankakee 0.25 miles northwest (downstream) of the IL 17 over Kankakee River bridge. The proposed bridge will be located on the old railroad alignment (bridge piers from the existing railroad structure are still present in the river) approximately 100' northwest of the Norfolk Southern Railroad Bridge. The bridge is located in southeast quarter of Section 31, Township 31N, Range 12E, of the 3rd Principal Meridian in Kankakee County, Illinois.
- Authorization is being requested for incidental take of the following mussel and fish species due to construction of the proposed bridge and temporary causeways and demolition of the existing bridge piers: Black Sandshell Mussel, Purple Wartback Mussel and the River Redhorse. The causeways and cofferdams will cover a portion of the stream channel where mussel habitat and river redhorse habitat is located.
- Measures were taken to minimize the construction footprint and limit these activities to a footprint of 14,300 sq. ft. Further restrictions will be implemented for construction staging areas and conservation measures will be implemented to minimize effects to the mentioned species. All mussel species found in the affected area will be relocated prior to construction and demolition activities. The relocation area will be an area that will be determined by Illinois Natural History Survey (INHS) before construction and approved by Illinois Department of Natural Resources (IDNR) to be in an area with suitable habitats for the affected mussels. All mussel relocation protocols will be followed. To minimize and mitigate the effects of the project on the river redhorse, it is planned to capture and relocate any river redhorse that becomes entrapped in the cofferdams. Culverts will be added to the temporary causeway to maintain flow throughout the width of the channel during low flow.
- A copy of the Conservation Plan is available for review at the Kankakee Public Library, 201 East Merchant Street, Kankakee, Illinois 60901. A copy of the Conservation Plan is also available online at: <http://www.dnr.illinois.gov/conservation/NaturalHeritage/Pages/Incidental-Take-Authorizations.aspx>
- Comments should be directed to: Illinois Department of Natural Resources Office of Resource Conservation Incidental Take Authorization Coordinator One Natural Resources Way Springfield, IL 62702 DNR.ITAcordinator@illinois.gov
- The comment period closes 30 days after the final publication of this notice that first appears in the Kankakee Valley Daily Journal on July 27, 2016. The final publication is scheduled for August 10, 2016. This notice will also be published in the Breeze Courier. Therefore, the comment period closes on August 24, 2016.

President should be elected by popular vote

Electoral College system is flawed

So the pollsters say Hillary Clinton has a fairly comfortable lead in the race for president.

The website RealClear Politics regularly calculates the average from a number of polls, and as of Tuesday, Democrat Clinton led Republican challenger Donald Trump by an average of 4.4 percentage points in the popular vote.

Here's a couple of thoughts on the matter:

- While these polls provide somewhat of a barometer and do make for interesting conversation, the popular vote does not ultimately determine who is elected president. The winner is determined through the Electoral College, which identifies the victor by calculating the electoral votes claimed by each candidate. It takes 270 votes to win, and more populous states such as California, with 55, hold many more votes than smaller states such as North Dakota, which has just three.

- The outcome of the November election already is assumed in numerous states, including California, which RealClear Politics places in the "solid" category for Clinton. The map it displays on its site combines the "solid" and "likely" states for each candidate, and currently projects Clinton with 202 electoral votes compared to 154 for Trump. Illinois and its 20 electoral votes are in the "likely" category for Clinton.

- That leaves 182 toss-up electoral votes spread across 15 states, and how these votes swing will determine the election. The larger states in this group are Florida (29 electoral votes), Pennsylvania (20), Ohio (18), Michigan (16), Georgia (16) and North Carolina (15).

- Recent history tells us a single state can decide the election. In 2000, George W. Bush won after he claimed Florida following a long court battle. Thus, he began his first term in the White House even though Democratic challenger Al Gore narrowly won the overall popular vote. Bush did win the popular vote and a second term in 2004, but again, it came down to a single state as his slim win over John Kerry in Ohio determined the outcome.

Is this how we should decide who will serve as president of all 50 states? States rights are vital, but this really has nothing to do with states rights. Why should Illinois votes matter little and the votes from nearby Ohio potentially mean almost everything?

It doesn't make sense. It's time to scrap the Electoral College and determine our future presidents by popular vote.

QUOTE OF THE DAY

"Most people don't understand the Electoral College; they don't know why it exists."

People stand near the stage to listen to FOO perform on the Hill Stage at the Merchant Street MusicFest on Saturday night.

FOO reunion among MSMF highlights

For the first time, I attended both days of the most recent Merchant Street MusicFest, which took place last Friday and Saturday.

The weekend was filled with an abundance of great music, food and even better company. Here's a review of the MusicFest as I saw it.

For those of you who still are under the impression Kankakee has nothing exciting to offer, think again. This festival has become a late July tradition, and parking lots filled to capacity is one sure sign of its popularity.

Friday night might've been the highlight for me personally because I got to see the second best thing to Earth, Wind & Fire — a tribute band by the name of Shining Star. I got to witness a full band, decked out in 1970s costumes, performing all of my favorites, including "Boogie Wonderland," "That's the Way of the World," "Got to Get You Into My Life" and "Fantasy." This band exceeded my expectations, right down to the vocals and old school choreography.

Saturday night also was entertaining. I attended to see my cousin's band, FOO, perform. FOO came together in the late 1980s right here in Kankakee. My cousin, Ed Shafer; Brandon Washington and Greg Schaertl formed FOO.

Schaertl, the bass player and back-up vocalist, reconnected with Shafer when he found out he acts as a DJ for WZRD 88.3 in Chicago. After reminiscing over a blog interview from a few years back about the band, they decided they wanted to play this year's MSMF. During their performance, they drew a big crowd over to the Hill stage, and I could tell people were excited to see this band from the past. As to why so many were enthusiastic about their return?

"People were excited because we were an original band that created the kind of colorful tunes, coupled with a positive attitude that happened to be on the pulse of what people were hungry to embrace at that time," Shafer said.

Back in the day, FOO played multiple shows at Bird Park, United Wesleyan Church, River Road Park and even something the Kankakee Area Jaycees put on called "Mr. Bucket and his Amazing Friends" that featured other bands.

They definitely kept things local for a time. After the performance Saturday night was over, I was able to witness something amazing. Camaraderie. Appreciation. So many high-fives being given all around. All of this for the performance that the audience just witnessed. This was coming from old and new listeners after 22 years.

"We're always surprised. To see the appreciation, love and accolades come to us like it did in the '90s was truly a humbling experience," Shafer said.

These are very humble guys who don't even reside in Kankakee anymore, but they came back to play where it all started, which made it all the more special.

YORK'S VIEW

COMMENTARY

Will GOP officials jump Trump ship?

BY STUART ROTHENBERG

The Washington Post

The last couple of weeks have been nothing short of disastrous for the Republican Party.

No, Donald Trump's position in the race hasn't worsened dramatically, nor did the Democratic convention wash away Hillary Clinton's many political wars.

Things have deteriorated for the GOP because Trump's comments about Russia and Vladimir Putin have further shredded the Republican Party's historically greatest strength: national security and defense themes.

Add to that Trump's — and GOP delegates' — performance at their convention ("Lock her up!") and Trump's positions on trade, taxes, spending and entitlements, which also contradict the long-standing Republican message, and the party is nothing short of a mess.

For many lifelong Republicans and committed conservatives, as well as dozens of down-ballot Republican candidates, the re-definition of their party and the tone of the nominee are simply unacceptable. That's clearly why Mitt Romney, the Bush family, Nebraska Sen. Ben Sasse, Texas Sen. Ted Cruz, Ohio Gov. John Kasich and others refuse to back Trump.

Of course, some high-profile Republicans — from House Speaker Paul Ryan, of Wisconsin, to Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell, of Kentucky, and presidential candidate Marco Rubio — hesitated to embrace Trump but eventually backed him. They promised (or at least hoped) Trump would "grow" as a candidate when the general election arrived.

They still are waiting. After some staff changes, the Trump campaign is quicker to issue clarifications and corrections following the nominee's interviews. But otherwise Trump has evolved little as a candidate since entering the presidential contest more than a year ago.

Whatever Trump's personal weaknesses — and the list is very long — he is in the process of undermining the entire rationale for the Republican Party.

Trump's Republican Party echoes the economic populism of the Democratic Party. It ignores the party's traditional cultural values, and it now has turned its back on the GOP's foreign policy worldview. Indeed, Trump's view of Putin and how countries should "get along" shows the kind of naïveté and normally associated with the most liberal of Democrats.

Even worse, Trump's message is not about the limits of political power — it is about the unlimited nature of his own power and abilities.

All of this raises the question of whether Republican officeholders and party leaders who announced their support for Trump now will reverse themselves and pull their endorsements. Though Arizona Sen. John McCain has come close, it's very difficult to believe many will take that dramatic step.

Similar to Ryan and McConnell, most will criticize a Trump statement or otherwise indicate a different point of view. But pulling an endorsement is a much bigger step.

Most, if not all, of those unshakably loyal Republicans apparently have concluded that Clinton is so untrustworthy and her politics so far left that any Republican is preferable, no matter how flawed that person might be. For many, the election is about only the Supreme Court.

It's easy for those Republicans to rationalize supporting Trump, no matter how vulgar he is or how far his views stray from what only a couple of years ago was Republican orthodoxy. "He's not Hillary Clinton" covers a lot of Trump's shortcomings.

Why am I so skeptical that mainstream Republicans who already have climbed out on the Trump limb will turn around and crawl back? Because that is not how American politics works.

Something very similar happened back in 1998, when Democrats circled the wagons and stuck by Bill Clinton even though he had a very inappropriate relationship (in the Oval office) with an intern and lied to the American public. Democrats turned the scandal into a partisan fight.

As I wrote in an Oct. 1, 1998, Roll Call column titled "Where's the Outrage?" "I continue to be surprised, and greatly disappointed, that not a single member of his Cabinet, his senior White House staff or his political team has resigned to protest the president's behavior and lie."

"The lack of resignations suggests that members of the administration are either so obsessed with power or so jaded and unprincipled that they can ignore the president's lies to them and to the country," I continued.

Similar to Bill Clinton back then, Trump's behavior has been so far over the line — with his comments ranging from incoherent to inaccurate to outrageous — that it is remarkable so many Republicans continue to support and defend him.

Can you imagine what Republican officeholders, activists and voters would say if a Democratic presidential nominee acted as Trump has or benefited from Kremlin hacking? (I am sure Democrats would be defending that nominee.)

In spite of all of the talk about weaker parties and the growing number of independents, partisanship runs very deep in American politics. It is easier and probably safer politically to hunker down with fellow partisans than to break from the crowd.

Character and principle are qualities that are in short supply on both sides of the aisle.

But that certainly is nothing new.

Look “whooo’s” bringing Comer Children’s Experts Well Within Reach

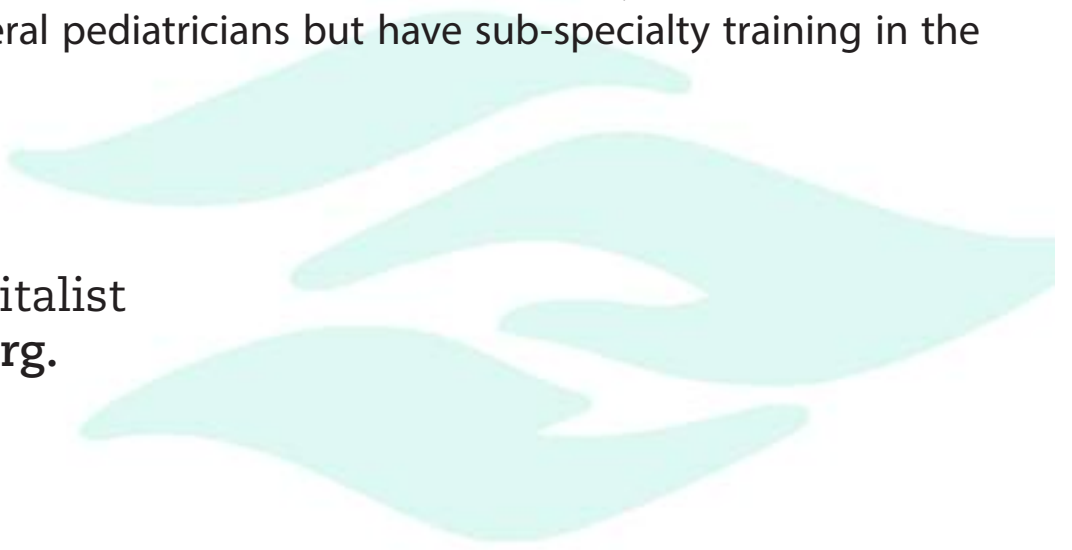

Comer Pediatricians now at Riverside 24/7

The University of Chicago Medicine Comer Children’s pediatric hospitalists are providing around-the-clock inpatient care to children at the Magnet-designated Riverside Medical Center. The pediatric hospitalists will also be available to provide consultations to the Riverside Family Birthing Center and Riverside Emergency Department

“The hospitalist model provides outstanding 7/24 coverage within the hospital setting,” said John M. Cunningham, MD, chairman of the department of pediatrics at the University of Chicago. “These pediatricians are not only experienced general pediatricians but have sub-specialty training in the most critical issues associated with children.”

Ruby red trout, pan-seared to perfection and placed atop a tomato-based Catalan-Zarzuela sauce with sauteed shrimp, is a new dish at Flight 102.

Chef brings creativity to Flight 102

How to spend a rainy Saturday afternoon? Well, mine is drinking wine and talking about food with people who know their business — Kelly St. Aubin, owner of Flight 102 Wine Bar, and her new executive chef, Justin Daniel.

St. Aubin is a well-educated and versed wine connoisseur. She can pair wine with just about any food. She knows their regions, the clarity and, after a few moments with her guests, can determine the best wine for their tastes. Chef Daniel, on the other hand, knows how to prepare food and how to be creative. Food is “his passion and inspiration,” he said. They make a great pair. “Justin is a good fit for us,” St. Aubin said.

BEST BITES

Daniel said he has a feeling of contentment and this “is where I’m supposed to be.”

Daniel was trained at the Cooking and Hospitality Institute in Chicago. Now, he dreams about new and exciting flavors to bring to his guests. St. Aubin has given him license to be as “creative as he wants.” Their signature dishes will remain on the menu.

Daniel has been cooking for more than 10 years, as a chef for six. Originally from Kankakee, he is excited to be here in Bourbonnais and said Flight 102 is different from anything else in the area.

“The food is always the best in town,” he said. “I’ve wanted to come home since living in the city.”

He appreciates the environment of the establishment. It reminds him of some of the places in downtown Chicago. I agree. I’ve spent quite a bit of time in the city tasting foods at different restaurants. When Flight 102 opened several years ago, it was reminiscent of being in an upscale urban bistro.

St. Aubin and Daniel are going to be amazing together. Both of them have great attitudes about the business, and St. Aubin said everyone works as a team.

Daily Journal food writer Deb Terrill can check serving birthday cake to an award-winning artist off her bucket list: As manager of the Green Room at Merchant Street MusicFest, she served fruit flan to Coolio backstage while his band members sang “Happy Birthday” in three-part harmony.

Cookin’ for Coolio

Local chefs catered to rich and famous

BY MARY HALL
mhall@daily-journal.com

When the bands came off the stage last weekend at Merchant Street MusicFest, sweaty and full of adrenaline, another show was about to start.

This one was a private show, somewhat quieter and air-conditioned, involving firefly lights in Mason jars, fresh-cut flowers, low table herb boxes, local produce and hand-crafted food. It was put on by Deb Terrill, Daily Journal food writer, chef and caterer, and Sara Gallagher, chef and co-owner of Stella Bear Foods.

Terrill, Green Room manager for the event, was making guacamole to order while Gallagher set out veggie trays. At one point, someone poked their head in and commented it looked like The Ritz.

The two Kankakee women’s job was anything but simple: Make the musicians and stage managers happy before and after they go on. Bands were given a chance to request food and items for both the Green and VIP rooms, and Terrill and Gallagher were in charge of fulfilling those requests, while making sure their menu was ‘Coolio wanted Fritos, Doritos, fruit juices and pop to use in mixers. The airline lost his drum set. So he spent most of the time before the show doing tai chi and meditating and smoking cigarettes.’

presented beautifully at both locations and everything was running smoothly.

“It’s always interesting,” Terrill said. “It’s a really hard job because you’re juggling the artists and what they need. Each year that you do it, you learn what you need ... like coffee. When it’s 90 degrees and humid, you wouldn’t think you would need coffee, but we went through four pots.”

With 35 bands, that meant a lot of running back and forth across the festival, Terrill said, but the long days were worth it to be apart of such a talented volunteer staff.

This year’s requests included homemade chocolate chip cookies and hummus and pita. One band, Hen House Prowlers, are very into the environment, so they wanted cucumber water, but only that had been filtered through and served in glass containers.

Also on the menu was Terrill’s mango salsa, fresh peaches with honey and tain and fresh guacamole to order (at two avocados for each fresh batch, they went through 32 avocados in one day) — but also throat coat tea bags, hot water and lemon.

“When [the bands] go out on the road, especially in the Midwest, it’s ‘We ordered fried chicken,’” Gallagher said. “To have fresh, homemade stuff was awesome for them. ... The cucumbers were grown here locally from Gray Farms in Watseka. And people just thought that was amazing.”

With the professionals’ eating habits, the job gives perspective on their personal habits, too.

“Coolio wanted Fritos, Doritos, fruit juices and pop to use in mixers,” Terrill said. “The airline lost his drum set. So he spent most of the time before the show doing tai chi and meditating and smoking cigarettes.”

Terrill can check serving birthday cake to an award-winning artist off her bucket list, even one that fancies himself a chef: Coolio has a web series titled Cookin’ with Coolio and he has released a cookbook. In honor of his birthday, which was Monday, she served fruit flan while his band members sang “Happy Birthday” in three-part harmony. She said he loved the cakes.

The pair worked with local farmers to supply the produce, then made a Thursday morning trip to Naperville to get specialty produce and organic cheeses not found locally. That night they prepped, were ready by noon on Friday, and didn’t stop until 1 a.m. Sunday.

Chico’s favorite treat are Greenies.

Chico never met a shoe he didn’t like

NAME: Chico

AGE: We think he’s about 2 years old. We rescued him.

BREED: Chihuahua/Boston terrier mix

HIS PEOPLE AND PLACE OF RESIDENCE: Parents are Chris and Amy; siblings are Tanner and Mya. We reside in Kankakee.

A LITTLE BIT ABOUT ME: I’m a lover of all animals and people. I have a huge heart, but I definitely have an adventurous side as well. I’ve never met a shoe or Shopkin that I didn’t like.

FAVORITE TOY: Anything stuffed that I can chew up and destroy. I especially love anything that I shouldn’t have, like my mom’s shoes or my big sister’s Shopkins and Barbie dolls.

FAVORITE TREAT: Greenies

TRICKS I CAN DO: I have an amazing vertical jump! My dad is really working hard getting me to sit, stay, etc.

IF I COULD SPEAK, I WOULD SAY: I love my “people.” I’m grateful that they fell in love with me and adopted me last summer.

Fallon to host Golden Globes

BEVERLY HILLS — Jimmy Fallon will be in charge of the 2017 Golden Globe Awards.

Fallon will host the three-hour ceremony that's scheduled to air Jan. 8 on NBC, the network said Tuesday.

Fallon, host of NBC's "Tonight Show," has a playful humor that's a good match for the "spontaneous and uninhibited" awards show, NBC Entertainment Chairman Robert Greenblatt said.

Fallon takes over from last year's host, Ricky Gervais, whose biting style of humor brought groans as well as laughs.

JOSHUA HENRY TO PLAY AARON BURR IN 'HAMILTON' IN CHICAGO

NEW YORK — Tony Award-nominee Joshua Henry has been named to play Aaron Burr in the Chicago production of "Hamilton" this fall.

Henry, who has nominations for "The Scottsboro Boys" and "Violet," will join Broadway veterans Miguel Cervantes as Alexander Hamilton, Karen Olivo as Angelica Schuyler, and Alexander Gemignani as King George III.

The rest of the cast there will include Ari Afsar as Eliza Hamilton, Chris Lee as Lafayette/Jefferson, Wallace Smith as Hercules Mulligan, and James Madison, and Samantha Marie Ware as Peggy Schuyler and Maria Reynolds.

"Hamilton" won 11 Tony Awards. In addition to the Chicago production, a touring production begins a 21-week run in San Francisco in 2017 before moving to Los Angeles. A London production is slated for 2017.

OPRAH WINFREY PICKS WHITEHEAD NOVEL FOR BOOK CLUB

NEW YORK — Oprah Winfrey has a new book club pick,

Colson Whitehead's "The Underground Railroad," a historical novel that imagines the network of safe houses and passages that helped slaves escape to free territory is an actual train.

Winfrey told The Associated Press during a recent telephone interview that she knew from the first sentence that she would want to share her passion with her audience, an impulse she has relied on with uncommon success for 20 years.

"I was blown away by it," Winfrey said. "'Blown away' is an often-used expression, but with this book it was to the point of sometimes putting it down and saying, 'I can't read anymore. I don't want to turn the page. I want to know what happens, but I don't want to know what happens.'"

"The Underground Railroad" was scheduled to come out in September, but after learning of Winfrey's decision, Doubleday moved up the release date to Tuesday and more than doubled the announced first printing, from 75,000 to 200,000. An interview with Whitehead appears in the September issue of Winfrey's magazine, "O," which comes out next week. Winfrey's website, Oprah.com, will include a reading guide and Winfrey's comments, and "Underground Railroad" will be featured on the social media site Goodreads (Goodreads.com/OprahsBookClub).

Whitehead, 46, is the author of "The Intuitionist" and "John Henry Days," and a finalist for the Pulitzer Prize and the National Book Critics Circle award. "The Underground Railroad" is his sixth novel.

The book already was highly anticipated, with Kirkus Reviews calling it "startlingly original."

Eicher family works on final preparations for Amish wedding

It is Thursday morning, and time keeps moving on faster and faster it seems. The wedding is tomorrow in a week! It's getting too close for comfort! Tomorrow evening, the wedding cook wagon, the cooler and the trailer with the tables, dishes, etc. will arrive.

On Saturday, Mose's family, Jacob, Emma and family, Verena and Susan (my sisters), Timothy and Elizabeth and a few friends will come help set the tables for the wedding in the pole barn. The wedding wagon comes with a 350-place setting. We finished and insulated the other part of the pole barn so we can spread out the tables a little more. It seems you can never have too much space.

I still need to go shop for a lot of groceries. My list keeps getting longer and longer! It will be a relief once we have all the groceries. It's easier to wait to get the groceries until the walk-in cooler and cook wagon are here so we can put everything in there.

Joseph, Lovina and Kevin are washing down the walls in the pole barn. Verena and Loretta will clean the windows once they finish their list of things to do in the house. My list of cleaning keeps getting smaller and smaller.

On Friday, sisters Verena, Susan and Emma and daughter Elizabeth came to help put 228 eggs into noodles. We have more than 30 pounds of noodles made for the wedding now.

On Saturday, Timothy, Elizabeth and sisters Verena and Susan came again to help. Verena and Susan had the pleasure of cleaning the boys' bedroom. Daughters Verena and Susan and I were organizing drawers, the closet, etc., and trying to stay ahead of my sisters. The room looks so much better, but I wonder for how long. It should stay cleaner after the wedding because Benjamin will move all his things into Susan's bedroom. With just Joseph and Kevin's things, maybe it will stay more organized. Kevin has a bad habit of collecting everything, which doesn't help.

Joseph still didn't get a birthday cake, but we have been so busy. Joseph said he can wait until after the wedding if we don't find time before, but hopefully Sunday we will be able to. I don't know what we would have done without Joseph's help. He has done so many jobs for us that the girls and I couldn't do.

Yesterday, Mose's mother, Rosanna; his sisters, Hannah and Linda; his sister-in-law, Suzanne; my sister Emma; and daughter Elizabeth assisted us in our work. Hannah has four little children, and Suzanne has a little boy. She also brought along Mose's sister LeAnna's little girl. Kevin and Steven helped keep the little ones entertained. Mose was here helping all day, too. He started a new job at an RV factory today. I hope he will like it. It will take a lot off him not to be running after sawmill parts all the time.

My neighbor, Susan, came over to help me get my grocery list ready and help see how much of everything I need. She took the pants I had cut out for Kevin and said she will get her daughter, Barbara, to sew them. I really appreciated that! I have my dress sewn, and this afternoon, I want to sew my cape and apron.

Daughter Susan was off work yesterday. She somehow hurt her shoulder and was having a lot of pain. She was still sore this morning but said she can't miss another day. I really hope she doesn't make it worse. She has an appointment after work today to get it checked out. Hopefully it will heal quickly.

I must get back to my work. Take care, everyone, and God's blessings to all of you! Try this cabbage sausage soup with cabbage out of your garden.

Cabbage Sausage Soup

- 4 cups water
- 1 tablespoon chicken soup base
- 1 small cabbage, chopped
- 1 medium onion, chopped
- 1/2 pound smoked sausage, fully cooked
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
- 1 cup milk
- 1/2 cup flour
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- Velveeta cheese to taste

Bring water, soup base, cabbage and onion to a boil. Reduce heat; cover and simmer until cabbage is tender. Halve sausage lengthwise and slice. Add sausage and heat through. Combine flour, salt, pepper and milk in a gravy shaker. Shake until smooth; gradually stir into soup. Bring to a boil; cook and stir until thickened. Add cheese to taste.

Nymphomaniac struggles with her addiction

DEAR ABBY: I'm obsessed with having sex. I can't stop. Ever since I was 8, I've been having sex, and now I'm 18. I have a boyfriend I've been dating since I was 8, and we can't stop having sex. I want to stop, but he doesn't want to. I keep on doing it because he says if I don't, he'll leave me. Please help. What do I do? — Obsessed in Miami

DEAR ABBY

DEAR OBSESSED: There are worse things than losing a boyfriend who threatens to dump you if you don't have sex with him. Chief among them is having sex with someone because you have been coerced. Because you feel you are "obsessed," you may have what is called a sex addiction.

Licensed psychotherapists treat people with sexual compulsive disorders, and self-help groups help individuals suffering because they can't control their sexual behavior. A 12-step program that has been mentioned before in my column is Sexaholics Anonymous, which originated in 1979 and is based on the same principles as Alcoholics Anonymous. Its website is sa.org. Visit it to find a local meeting.

DEAR ABBY: Within the last year, I met an amazing man who is head over heels for me. We were married five months later, partly because he was deploying. I had always dated "bad" boys with commitment issues, but now I have a wonderful husband.

Everything happened so fast. I'm now having to put the career I worked very hard for on hold. I love him very much, don't get me wrong, but all the drastic changes have me feeling confused and scared. I feel we may have rushed into marriage too soon. Regardless, this is where we are now. Any insight? — Newlywed in Utah

DEAR NEWLYWED: To be honest, most people feel a degree of fear and confusion when they find themselves in unfamiliar territory. On the plus side, you have married a winner after dating a series of turkeys.

Because your husband is deployed, you now have a chance to start evaluating various ways to apply your talents and experience with an eye toward restarting your career or finding a new one. If your husband intends to make a career of the military, research jobs you can do regardless of where he might be posted.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has ongoing relationships with two of his exes' daughters. One girl's mother is deceased, and he has been divorced from the other for more than 20 years. He allows them to call him "Dad" even though they are adults and he has been married three times over.

I don't understand why he has allowed this to go on, but he blows me off when I bring it up. Am I being petty for having concerns, or should I just let them be? — Concerned Spouse

DEAR CONCERNED: Yes, you are being petty. Your husband might have been the most stable and loving parental male figure in those women's lives, which is why they still call him "Dad."

Their relationship should not diminish the one he has with you, unless you make them feel unwelcome because of your own insecurity. So put on a smile, set out the welcome mat and befriend them, and I predict you will reap big dividends.

Future of veggies is ugly

BY STEVEN OVERLY
The Washington Post

The future of produce is ugly. Twisted, blemished, mutated and deformed, to be specific.

That's because an increasing number of grocery chains and crop-sharing services have begun stocking and distributing fruits and vegetables once deemed unfit for sale based solely on appearance. To be clear, these goods aren't damaged or rotten or distasteful. If a chef chopped them up and served them in a souffle, most would never know the difference. Their banishment from shelves was purely produce prejudice.

In recent years, a small number of eco-conscious consumers have begun buying imperfect produce, often at discounted prices, in an effort to chip away at the planet's staggering level of food waste. Now, the buy-ugly movement has been thrust into the mainstream. Wal-Mart, the nation's largest grocer with more than 4,000 produce-selling stores, announced last week it would sell less-than-pretty apples in 300 stores across Florida. This builds on an ugly-potato program the retail behemoth launched in Britain earlier this year.

By virtue of its size, when Wal-Mart makes a change, the broader retail sector notices. The company commands a massive and global supply chain and possesses tremendous purchasing power, a combination that allows it to disrupt traditional distribution channels and create demand for products where there once was none. And food is big business for Wal-Mart. Groceries accounted for 56 percent of all sales in the company's U.S. stores each of the past three years, according to Securities and Exchange Commission filings.

Wal-Mart's program "is a result of working with our suppliers to build the infrastructure and processes that create a new home for perfectly imperfect produce," Shawn Baldwin, Wal-Mart's senior vice president for global food sourcing, produce and floral, wrote on the company's blog. "Because ugly produce can occur unexpectedly in any growing season or crop, we want to have the systems in place to offer this type of produce whenever it may occur."

Wal-Mart is hardly alone in its embrace of ugly fruits and vegetables. Whole Foods has sold similar goods in the past, but it does not have the mass market reach of Wal-Mart. And getting U.S. consumers to buy flawed produce has not been easy. Shoppers, particularly Americans, long have fixated on food with visual appeal in addition to (or instead of) nutritional value. There's a reason the food that appears in television and magazine advertisements look like modern still-life paintings, meticulously crafted by professional staggers to the point of defying reality.

European shoppers, by contrast, have been pioneers in food conservation and buying ugly. Britain has conducted a "Love Food Hate Waste" campaign since at least 2007, and the European Union has pledged to cut its food waste in half over the next decade. Winning acceptance for ugly produce is just one tactic being pursued in Europe to meet that goal. Others see a moneymaking opportunity; a grocery store in Denmark called WeFood sells only discounted food that is either misshapen or past its stated expiration date.

Our vanity contributes to America's waste epidemic. No matter how you slice it, the United States throws away tons of edible food every year. The Natural Resources Defense Council estimates 40 percent of food grown and produced in the United States each year goes uneaten. More fruits and vegetables are wasted than any other food category, with 52 percent being lost rather than consumed.

There are many factors that lead to this waste. Some food simply might spoil before it's sold or fail to meet standards set by the Agriculture Department for consumable goods sold in the United States. Retailers also have guidelines for produce they are willing to shelve, and those guidelines often are more stringent than the government regulations.

Don't eat your Russian sage

But purslane is perfectly edible

Q: I am growing Russian sage, and I wonder if it can be eaten. It doesn't smell so much like sage as it does pine. — MJ

A: Russian sage (Perovskia atiplicifolia) is not a true sage (Salvia). It contains a different set of plant sterols that smell different and probably taste different than sage. I would not recommend using it for culinary purposes.

DEB TERRILL

WITH DEB

I always have wondered how it came to be called a sage when it looks more like a lavender.

Q: I am told you can eat the weed called purslane, but how do you prepare it, and does it need to be cooked? Also, do you eat the stems, too, or just the leaves? — Linda

A: Purslane (Portulaca oleracea) is a fleshy, creeping weed that is very common in gardens here. It is used as a vegetable in most other countries, especially India and Mexico. I see bunches and bunches of it sold in markets in Chicago. It is very high in antioxidants and vitamins.

You do not need to cook it, although there are some recipes for stews and so on available on the internet. I have eaten it and it tastes similar to lettuce. Similar to most leafy plants, the taste gets a bit more bitter after weeks of exposure to high heat.

You can use it in salads, in stir fries and in smoothies.

Q: I was told oak wilt is rampant in our area, and I should not prune my oak trees in the summer or they will be infected by it. The trouble is, it has a broken branch and another that is sticking out over the sidewalk, making a neighbor unhappy. Can I cut off the two branches safely somehow? — Don

A: I wouldn't call oak wilt rampant, but it is a problem here. Once infected by it, the tree usually will die, so it is something to take seriously.

When we prune during months trees "bleed," April through June (some experts include July), insects are attracted to the sap and spread the disease spores to the wounds.

But if you must prune off a branch, spray the cut area with a broad spectrum fungicide immediately after making the cut and again every day for a week or so. Make sure to spray your tools between cuts as well.

And, as always, don't leave stubs when you remove a branch; take it all the way back to its point of origin.

Q: My liatris is doing poorly this year. Only the tips are blooming and they look spindly. Any idea how I can fix this? — Sara

A: Liatris is a native prairie plant with pinky-purple flower spikes. They are unusual in that they flower from the top down, with florets opening at the tip first. It might be that you are just seeing them in the initial bloom stage.

Liatris grows in wet meadows. That means it is one of those natives that likes its feet to be wet and its head in the sun. These are very difficult conditions to offer in the home garden. Perhaps our dry conditions earlier this spring and summer left yours stressed.

GREEN THOUGHTS

I am hopeful the recent spate of assaults on our urban forest will wake us up and make us more aware of the plight of trees and how very vital they are to our health, property values and aesthetics.

Reader Rich St. Aubin gets it. He recently called to chat about trees and told me he uses Gator bags to protect his investment and the environmental appeal of his property. Rich worries we tend to forget about trees and think of them as being self-sufficient when, in fact, they need our attention and vigilance.

"We think to water our (vegetable) gardens and flower beds, but we forget about the trees," St. Aubin said. "I have been using Gator bags for years now to get them through dry periods. The bags are made in different sizes and you just fill them with water, which is released slowly to the roots."

This kind of slow introduction of moisture to the soil eliminates many problems like roots that surface and thatch in lawns. Thatch is caused by a layer of built-up, dead roots at the surface level of the soil. Sprinkling the lawn around the trees for 15 minutes every other day does the opposite, bringing roots to the surface and compromising the integrity of the tree. Trees with shallow roots are much more apt to fall in storms.

Meet 'The Gorilla Who Talks'

A profile of an old-fashioned "cover girl," the documentary "Koko — The Gorilla Who Talks" (7 p.m., PBS, check local listings) profiles a primate who entranced a generation. "Koko" also follows the scientific investigation that led Dr. Penny Patterson to devote her life to communicating with Koko by means of sign language.

The story begins in 1971, when Patterson was a young Stanford student, and continues to this day. Her reports that Koko could communicate desires and emotions via sign language received worldwide attention and a great deal of scientific skepticism. And it put Koko on the cover of National Geographic magazine.

But the story that catapulted Koko to world superstardom was her relationship with a tiny kitten she named "All Ball." It's one thing to discuss zoology, linguistics and primate psychology in scientific papers. The sight of a 300-pound gorilla "mothering" a tiny ball of fur turned into a media sensation that earned Koko her second appearance on National Geographic.

The story of Koko and her kitten also would be immortalized in a schoolbook for third-graders, making her an icon of a generation. The fact that Koko later expressed deep sadness and even grief via sign language after the death of her pet also brought scientists and the general public around to the idea that Koko might have profound ideas and emotions to communicate.

It was 50 years ago today — or this month — that the Beatles last performed live before a stadium audience. But they still are guaranteed to raise a smile when their music is performed as part of the cartoon "Beat Bugs" streaming on Netflix beginning today.

Contemporary musicians perform songs your mother should know to accompany the backyard antics of insect characters Jay, Kumi, Cricket, Buzz and Walter. A splendid time is guaranteed for all.

"Bugs" is aimed at kids who are probably the grandchildren of those who watched "The Beatles," a Saturday-morning cartoon series that ran on ABC from 1965-67, and later in reruns. Each cartoon featured two-dimensional Beatles voiced by actors, culminating in a different Beatles song. Actors' voices also were heard in the 1968 feature-length cartoon "Yellow Submarine."

KEVIN McDONOUGH
TUNE IN TONIGHT

The Beatles' relationship with cartoons continued with "The Simpsons," which has featured the appearance (and real voices) of Paul McCartney, Ringo Starr and the late George Harrison over its long run. In 2001, an entire episode of "The Powerpuff Girls" titled "Meet the Beat-Alls" featured dialogue consisting almost entirely of Beatles lyrics. In 2008, an episode of Nickelodeon's "The Wonder Pets" ("Save the Beetles") also featured Lennon/McCartney tunes.

How long will the Beatles' music appeal to young viewers? Tomorrow never knows.

• "CMA Music Festival: Country's Night to Rock" (7 p.m., ABC, TV-PG) offers a three-hour highlight reel of a four-day festival featuring scheduled performances by Jason Aldean, Dierks Bentley, Luke Bryan, Eric Church, Brett Eldredge, Florida Georgia Line, Miranda Lambert, Little Big Town, Thomas Rhett and healthy, fresh living, it was important to them to serve that kind of food, Gallagher said, which meant cutting up vegetables throughout the day, providing fresh fruit and stressing about presentation.

Vegetarian and vegan, locally-grown, healthy food options are becoming more and more popular with musicians and artists, Gallagher said.

STRANGE REQUESTS

This was Terrill's fourth year volunteering with the Green Room and her second year managing. And plastic-free cucumber water was not the most unique request.

One band a few years ago asked for a 6-pound can of tuna. "I had it in the refrigerator chilling," Terrill said. "I brought mayo and relish and olives and crackers, because I didn't know how they wanted it served."

But when the band came in, they had no idea what she was talking about. "They think their manager was throwing it in to see if [the Merchant Street organizers] were paying attention."

That can of tuna still resides at the Depot's refrigerator. It expired last month.

The lead singer of another band, Fifth Dimension, asked for three full-length mirrors, so the other musicians wouldn't crowd her mirror when she was getting dressed. She also wanted a steam iron and a seamstress to make final adjustments for her costume. MSMF had seven mirrors brought in, along with a costumer from the Kankakee Valley Theatre Association to iron the singer's white bell bottom pants.

Even with the chaos, Terrill and Gallagher say the job is incredibly rewarding and already have plans for next year.

Daniel is going to deliver excellent food and "raise the bar where we can."

"His attitude brings a whole new energy to Flight 102," St. Aubin said.

Daniel will be serving seasonal fresh fish. Currently, it's Dover sole, flounder and salmon. The salmon will be paired with the August wine of the month, Benovia pinot noir 2014 from Russian River Valley. The salmon and the pinot noir will complement each other beautifully.

Some of the chef's summer creations for appetizers are the foie gras (duck liver) doughnuts, which are house-fried, sea-salted doughnuts stuffed with homemade foie gras mousse and sweet cherry compote. Chef said people would be surprised by these delicacies.

Another different starter is the duck fat "fried" Marcona almonds. He said it's a simple dish, but great with wine. Mesquite sea salt, fennel pepper and rosemary with almonds. It's delicious!

The Flight's flatbreads are one of their best-selling items. The chef has changed some of them to be more creative. For instance, the duck confit — made with slow-roasted pulled duck meat, roasted asparagus, rosemary fig jam and fontina cheese. It was at this point my mouth was watering.

A new entree is the shrimp puttanesca: sauteed jumbo shrimp, caper berries, cherry tomatoes, olives, garlic, white wine, Italian parsley and chili flakes, tossed with fresh pappardelle and grated Parmigiano Reggiano. The caper berry is formed into a flower and served on top. If you haven't tried a caper berry, they are fabulous.

I'm excited that Daniel is here. I was impressed with his energy, attitude and vision to create new and exciting foods.

One thing about him that I found fascinating — he is a guitarist and singer in the band Dischord. As a matter of fact, many of you probably watched him perform at the Kankakee MusicFest last weekend.

Flight 102 Wine Bar is located at 565 Main Street NW, Bourbonnais, next to the Jewel-Osco store.

Hours are 4-11 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday (kitchen closes at 10 p.m.); 4 p.m.-midnight Thursday through Saturday (kitchen closes at 11 p.m.); closed Sunday and Monday.

Check out Flight102winebar.com for their menu and other announcements or call 815-556-WINE.

OUR WORLD

Much unity still seen in a fractured land

EDITOR'S NOTE — THIS STORY IS PART OF DIVIDED AMERICA, AP'S ONGOING EXPLORATION OF THE ECONOMIC, SOCIAL AND POLITICAL DIVISIONS IN AMERICAN SOCIETY.

BY MATT SEDENSKY
The Associated Press

SOUTH BOSTON, Va. — Outside the Annin Flagmakers factory in this perennial swing state, a summer of discontent is brewing. They feel it inside, too — national divides that seem to grow deeper each passing week. Yet as their hands glide over broad stripes and sew bright stars to craft the most unifying American symbol, the workers sound far more alike than different.

Asked to name life's most important elements, the same answers come back: family, work and faith. Presented with the idea of living in a foreign land, they uniformly say no, America can't be beat. Nudged to sum up the values Americans broadly share, they point to their handiwork and what it stands for — freedom, opportunity and pride.

"We may be divided on some things, but when it comes down to the most important things we come together," said Emily Bouldin, a 66-year-old seated before a jabbering sewing machine on an Annin production floor awash in red, white and blue. "Because we realize, together we stand, divided we fall."

All the splintering bared in the rhetoric of a presidential campaign belies another truth: Americans are remarkably united, too.

You see it in the banality of routine, in morning drives to work and evenings before the glow of a TV. You see it along parade routes, in blood donation lines after tragedies, and in the quiet prayers of the faithful. You see it in the flag.

Bouldin works on the opposite end of a sprawling sewing room floor from Ed Haney and political pollsters would see them in different worlds altogether. Haney is white and male, tends to side with Republicans and expects to vote for Donald Trump. Bouldin is black and female, always votes Democratic and will cast her ballot for Hillary Clinton. Yet they both speak of their Christian faith, the importance of family, their love of America.

"The United States is the freest and the best country on this earth and that flag represents that," said Haney, a 69-year-old maintenance mechanic at Annin. "The country was founded by men of different opinions who united on one thing: The freedom to have those opinions."

For all the divisions well-known across the U.S., surveys find broad agreement on a range of topics.

On foreign affairs, Americans hold resoundingly favorable views of Canada, Great Britain, France, Germany and Japan, and unfavorable ones of North Korea, Iran, Iraq and Afghanistan. Overwhelmingly, they see the Islamic State group as a major threat.

Domestically, there's near unanimity that veterans should be better cared for, and that more research into renewable energy should be supported. Medicare and Social Security are wildly popular, and most have a positive view of entrepreneurship and small business. Nearly all Americans believe in helping the less fortunate.

The gun debate may polarize Capitol Hill and statehouses, but there is wide consensus among Americans on mandating background checks for gun shows and private sales (85 percent agree, according to a Pew Research Center poll), and on keeping weapons from the mentally ill (79 percent agree).

Abortion remains acrimonious, but relatively few people call for totally legalizing or outlawing it in every case, with the majority of people somewhere in the middle. (Only 24 percent of Americans believe in blanket legalization, according to Pew, and 16 percent are for an outright ban.)

And though immigration remains a flashpoint, most Americans believe undocumented immigrants should be able to remain in the country if they meet certain conditions. (Another Pew poll found 74 percent of Americans held that view.)

"The average Democrat and the average Republican are not that far apart from each other," said Patrick Miller, a political science professor at the University of Kansas.

Unity also emerges in comparing the U.S. with other countries. Americans are more likely than those elsewhere to believe hard work is very important to get ahead in life and that individuals have control over their success. They stand out among rich countries for their optimism and their widespread belief in God, the importance of religion in their lives and the regularity in which they practice their faith. Some 89 percent of Americans express some level of belief in God, according to Pew.

Americans may not agree on whether to support Clinton or Trump, but they unite in their lack of confidence in Congress and the political system overall. They hold rabid allegiances to varying sports teams, but will chant "USA" together as Olympians compete.

NYC's top cop stepping down after challenging tenure

New York City Police Commissioner William Bratton is leaving the nation's largest police force, after getting credit for keeping crime down but grappling with tension between police and minority communities.

Bratton, whose departure was announced Tuesday, will leave next month to become a risk and security adviser at Teneo, a consulting firm. James O'Neill, the department's top chief, will replace him as commissioner.

During five years spanning two stints as the city's top cop, Bratton has had an outsized impact on the New York Police Department. He noted that he was leaving at "a challenging time for police in America and New York, even though all indicators are pointing in the right direction."

5 dead in California bus crash; ugly images for survivors

A bus was nearly sliced in half after plowing into a highway pole in California's agricultural San Joaquin Valley, killing five people as survivors faced horrific scene of wounds and screams.

Eighteen people were also injured in Tuesday's crash, but by days' end, none were critical, officials said.

The accident sliced the bus from front to back, with the vehicle coming to a stop when its first rear axle hit the pole.

With job at Ryan, Trump ignites new tensions in GOP

As Republican loyalists continue to flee, Donald Trump ignited new party tensions Tuesday by refusing to endorse House Speaker Paul Ryan or a pair of senators seeking re-election, a remarkable display of party division just three months before Election Day.

The Republican presidential nominee told The Washington Post he's "just not quite there yet," when asked about an endorsement of Ryan, who faces a primary election next week.

On Tuesday, retiring New York Rep. Richard Hanna became the first Republican member of Congress to say he will vote for Democrat Hillary Clinton in November instead of Trump.

U of Texas professors sue over guns on campus

Texas' new law allowing concealed handguns in college classrooms, buildings and dorms has barely started and already faces a legal challenge seeking to block it before students return for the fall semester.

Three professors at the University of Texas sued July 6 to overturn the law, claiming it is unconstitutional and is forcing colleges to impose "dangerously-experimental gun policies."

Sources: 15 Libyan soldiers killed by suicide attack in Benghazi

A suicide attack targeting Libyan Army troops in the Libyan city of Benghazi killed at least 15 soldiers, medical sources tell dpa.

The attack struck a gathering of Libyan Army forces loyal to General Khalifa Haftar near Quarsah district, in the northwestern suburbs of Benghazi, the sources said. At least 16 soldiers were wounded in the attack.

No group has immediately claimed responsibility for the attack, but similar violence has been claimed by Islamic State terrorists. The movement has taken advantage of chaos in Libya to seize territory along the sparsely populated central coast.

Pope: It's 'terrible' children taught they can choose gender

Pope Francis has lamented that children are being taught at school that gender can be a choice, adding that his predecessor, Benedict XVI has labeled current times "the epoch of sin against God the Creator."

Francis weighed in with his view on gender and what he said was that of the emeritus pontiff while meeting privately last week with bishops from Poland during his pilgrimage there. The Vatican released a transcript Tuesday of those closed-door remarks.

The pope said he wanted to conclude his remarks by reflecting on this: "We are living a moment of annihilation of man as image of God."

He added: "Today, in schools they are teaching this to children — to children! — that everyone can choose their gender."

North Korea fires mid-range missile toward waters near Japan

A medium-range ballistic missile fired today by North Korea flew about 620 miles and landed near Japan's territorial waters, Seoul and Tokyo officials said, one of the longest flights by a North Korean missile.

The U.S. Strategic Command said North Korea fired two presumed Rodong missiles simultaneously today, not just one. The command's statement said initial indications reveal one of the missiles exploded immediately after launch, and the second was tracked over North Korea and into the Sea of Japan.

Syrian government and rebels trade gas attack accusations

Syrian rebels accused government forces of launching toxic gas attacks on civilians in a town southwest of Aleppo on Tuesday. The government rejected the claim and accused the rebels of using chemical weapons themselves.

Rebel sources provided video of people receiving treatment who they say were among the victims of a gas attack, but the images were not conclusive and neither of the gas attack claims by the rebels or the government could be independently verified.

The accusations on both sides came amid heightened fighting around the contested northern city that killed at least 20 people, activists and government media reported.

ILLINOIS

Advocates urge Illinoisans to comment on health plan rates

Consumer advocates encouraged Illinoisans to make their voices heard Tuesday, one day after proposed insurance rate increases as high as 45 percent were made public for health plans sold in the state under the federal health care law.

Illinois released insurance companies' rate increase requests for 2017 late Monday, making it one of the last states in the nation to reveal what insurers have requested.

As in much of the country, Illinois insurers want higher premiums for next year because they have taken significant financial losses under the health law. Enrollment has been lower than anticipated, new customers were sicker than expected and a government system to stabilize the markets had problems.

Stephani Becker of Shriver National Center on Poverty Law said consumers can comment by email to the state's Department of Insurance. The email address is DOI.HealthRateReview@illinois.gov.

Suburban Chicago man charged with murder in wife's death

A suburban Chicago man has been charged with shooting and killing his wife as she walked into their home carrying their 1-year-old child.

The Cook County Sheriff's Office said Tuesday that 42-year-old Jose Arturo Salgado-Roque has been charged with first-degree murder. The sheriff's department alleges Salgado-Roque fatally shot 38-year-old Divina Salgado on Sunday afternoon at their Arlington Heights residence.

Report: Chicago agency had no records on 6 police shootings

The beleaguered Chicago agency that investigates police-involved shootings made no mention in quarterly reports in recent years of dozens of incidents in which officers fired their weapons and had no records at all of six shooting incidents, the city's inspector general found in a report released Tuesday.

As the city, the Independent Police Review Board and police department struggle to regain public trust, the report raises more questions about what the public is being told — and not told — when officers use force.

"During this historic moment of transformation of police oversight in Chicago, the City should recognize that the use-of-force reporting is a crucial tool for meaningful transparency," Inspector General Joe Ferguson's office concluded in the report.

Workers build wood framing for a house under construction in the Norton Commons subdivision of Louisville, Ky., in May.

Boom or bust?

Fragile US economy now is facing a slowdown in building

BY THOMAS BLACK
Bloomberg News

At a quarry in Bridgeport, Texas, where rock is crushed, sorted and cleaned, it's hard to tell that the nation's construction boom might be hitting a wall. Workers maneuver front-end loaders to fill a long line of rail cars and trucks with up to 25 tons of washed stone each. The destination: one of many construction projects that dot the Dallas-Fort Worth area 70 miles away.

"We're moving a lot of rock," said Dean Gatzemeier, who runs quarries in North Texas and Oklahoma for Martin Marietta Materials Inc.

Construction has been one of the few pockets of strength in the U.S. economy — until recently. Construction payrolls have declined since March, and spending in May rose less than 3 percent from a year earlier, the lowest rate since 2011. Coming after supercharged growth of 10 percent last year, the question now is whether the sputtering is just a blip or something more lasting that portends a significant drag on the economy.

Vehicles exit an off-ramp next to a building construction site in Washington this past week.

"It's a deceleration process after two years of fairly decent growth," said Robert Murray, chief economist of Dodge Data & Analytics, which gathers data on construction.

Last year's boom was spurred by housing and office construction. Residential spending alone contributed almost 0.3 percentage point to the U.S. economy's 2.4 percent growth rate. New industries, such as e-commerce, also drove construction work, including two Amazon fulfillment centers in California that will be 1 million square feet each.

Yet, construction may be a victim of its own success. A torrid pace of apartment building has saturated some markets. Foreign investment, looking for returns, has poured into high-rise condos in Miami and hotels in New York, creating some overcapacity. In one example, Pollock Shores Real Estate Group, a privately held group, put on hold plans to build a 315-unit apartment complex in the Atlanta area as several new buildings cropped up.

Regulators have flagged a heightened risk of lending to commercial real estate, noting hundreds of banks increased loans to the sector by more than 50 percent during the last three years.

The slowdown can be seen in construction payrolls. Adjusted for seasonal fluctuations, the number of people working in the field dropped by 22,000 since hitting a post-recession peak in March of about 6.7 million. It was the first time the job count had dropped for two straight months since 2012.

MAINSTREET: VISION

How to create your mission statement

It's crucial to the success of your organization

Recently, while consulting a company, the discussion came up regarding mission statements. This particular company, as well as others I have consulted, lacked a mission and vision statement. They are successful organizations, however, lacking was the critical element of what they do and why they do it for their employees and, more importantly, for their customers.

An important theme connects the vision (the leader's strategic plan for the organization) to the mission statement (what we do, how do we do it and whom do we serve). Creating your organization's vision and mission statements are the first two steps in developing the planning process.

Developing a vision and mission statement is crucial to the success of organizational initiatives. These statements explain your group's aspirations in a concise manner, help your organization focus on what is really important and provide a basis for developing other aspects of your strategic plan.

"Mission statements help clarify what business you are in, your goals and your objectives," says Rhonda Abrams, author of "The Successful Business Plan: Secrets and Strategies."

Additionally, Abrams advocates your mission statement should reflect your business' special niche. However, studying other companies' statements can fuel your creativity. Listed below are useful tips to assist your organization in developing and crafting a unique and purposeful mission statement, according to Entrepreneur Magazine:

- Why are you in business? What do you want for yourself, your family and your customers? Think about the spark that ignited your decision to start a business. What will keep it burning?
- Who are your customers? What can you do for them that will enrich their lives and contribute to their success — now and in the future?
- What image of your business do you want to convey? Customers, suppliers, employees and the public all will have perceptions of your company. How will you create the desired picture?
- What is the nature of your products and services? What factors determine pricing and quality? Consider how these relate to the reasons for your business's existence. How will all this change over time?
- What level of service do you provide? Most companies believe they offer "the best service available," but do your customers agree? Don't be vague; define what makes your service so extraordinary.
- What roles do you and your employees play? Wise captains develop a leadership style that organizes, challenges and recognizes employees.
- What kind of relationships will you maintain with suppliers? Every business is in partnership with its suppliers. When you succeed, so do they.
- How do you differ from your competitors? Many entrepreneurs forget they are pursuing the same dollars as their competitors. What do you do better, cheaper or faster than other competitors? How can you use competitors' weaknesses to your advantage?

ED PIATT
MAIN STREET BUSINESS

- How will you use technology, capital, processes, products and services to reach your goals? A description of your strategy will keep your energies focused on your goals.
 - What underlying philosophies or values guided your responses to the previous questions? Some businesses choose to list these separately. Writing them down clarifies the "why" behind your mission.
- Furthermore, the mission statement can be answered by these simple questions, as described by Forbes Magazine: If you don't have one, you need to get one. Here are four essential questions your company's mission statement must answer: 1) What do we do? 2) How do we do it? 3) Whom do we do it for? 4) What value are we bringing? These essential questions bring into focus and alignment these critical components.

In as much, the value of the mission statement must follow the vision statement. In general terms, the vision statement has been defined as a company's road map, indicating both what the company wants to become and guiding transformational initiatives by setting a defined direction for the company's growth.

So, the relationship between vision and mission statements can be put simply as the vision outlines where you want to go (the roadmap) and the mission statement is the vehicle to get you there.

Given the need for today's organizations to have a clear and articulate vision and mission statement, it is equally important to craft an individual mission statement for your career. Mine is in two parts: "Mediocrity kills excellence every day of the week," and "I pursue excellence in everything I do." Personal mission statements sync your passion with your purpose. If you can define and live your mission statement, you can succeed equally in your career.

Logic suggests if we can follow an organizational mission statement, we certainly can and must craft our own individual plan. Take time to organize and review your purpose: what you do, how you do it, how you measure success and whom you do it for.

Your purpose drives your vision and your vision drives your mission. It must be in sync to be effective. In the final analysis, and one I certainly subscribe to, "my purpose is where my deepest gladness meets the world's deepest sadness." I am a servant leader whose vision allows me to craft my mission in serving others. Once you find and fulfill your purpose, you are halfway there in becoming not only a great employee, leader, coach, teacher, etc., but something far better — "a person of excellence."

Recent widow learning how to invest

DEAR DAVE: I'm a recently retired widow, and my husband always took care of most of our finances. We never had any debt, but after starting to learn a little bit about how money works, I'm worried there might be too much of it invested in certificates of deposit. The total nest egg is a little more than $1.5 million, with $300,000 of that in CDs. There's also a $317,000 annuity, a 403(b) and about $900,000 in IRA mutual funds. I also have two homes and a new car that are paid for.

How do you think I should handle things going forward?
— Joan

DEAR JOAN: I'm really sorry to hear about your husband, but you two did a fantastic job with your finances. You're worth at least $1.5 million, and you have no debt. You're set for life, but you're wise to want to be careful.

The CDs give you some stability, but, obviously, they're not earning much of anything. I think of them as money kicked up in a hammock — it's not working for you. You both worked hard for that money, so, personally, I'd like to see it working hard for you now. If you've had good luck with a variable annuity, that's fine. You also have had very good luck with your mutual fund investing. So, with all this money in different areas, you're definitely diversified. It's just a matter of wrapping your arms around it all and developing a deeper understanding of things going forward.

At this point, I would urge you to find an investment professional in your area with the heart of a teacher — someone who's not trying to sell you stuff. You want to learn, Joan, and I'm really impressed by that. It's a smart and necessary thing.

— Dave

BUY THE CAR?

DEAR DAVE: My wife and I are 31 years old, and we have no debt except for our home. We also have an emergency fund and college savings in place for the kids. During the past several months, we've saved $22,000 for a newer car, but we also are worried about retirement. We've been putting 15 percent of our income toward retirement, and we're concerned maybe we shouldn't spend the whole $22,000 on a car. We make about $100,000 annually and have $50,000 in our nest egg.

What do you think, Dave?
— Brandon

DEAR BRANDON: In your situation, a $22,000 car is not unreasonable at all. You guys are both 31 years old, and you're going to be in great shape for retirement if you just keep doing what you've been doing. On top of all that, you've got your emergency fund in place, in addition to a nest egg and car savings. If I'm in your shoes, I'd go out and find the best car $22,000 can buy.

You're doing all the right stuff. Your kids can go to school debt-free, and you're going to have the house paid off in no time. In short, you're going to retire multi-millionaires at the rate you're going — as long as you keep on keeping on!

Think about this, too. As a general trend, most people's incomes go up throughout their lifetimes. That being the case, chances are you're going to make and invest even more money in the years ahead. You and your wife easily could retire with $5 million to $10 million sitting there.

You've done a great job together; Brandon. Keep up the good work, and enjoy that car! — Dave

Paycheck 101: A guide for recent college grads

There you are, a college graduate with your newly minted degree in one hand and new job in the other — or the confidence you will have one soon. For years, you've waited for a real job with a real paycheck so you could get a decent car, apartment and a respectable wardrobe. After all, these are the things you so richly deserve for having nearly starved to death for 10 to 15 years.

Well, not so fast, Buckaroo. Before you do a thing, we need to go over the fundamentals of managing a paycheck — a small detail that might have been overlooked in the courses you took to prepare you for the real world.

WHEN NET IS GROSS

You might have figured your annual salary — a number that has you seeing dollar signs. That is your gross salary. Do not fall in love with it. A $35,000 annual salary, when reduced by 30 percent for “withholding” for taxes, Social Security, etc., then divided into 52 weekly paychecks, suddenly looks more like $470.

As an adult wage earner, it is important you adopt a personal standard for the management of your paychecks. It is not how much you earn that matters. It is how much you keep. Make it a personal rule you will live on 80 percent of your net income, whatever that amount might be. Get used to this now, and you'll breeze through life as your income grows. Ignore this wisdom by living on more than you earn, and your suffering has only begun.

YOUR EXPENSES

You need to get a handle on your true expenses starting with absolute essentials. I can predict some of them for you: shelter, food, insurance, travel expenses. You might have other essential expenses if you have arrived at your first job dragging a load of debt behind you, in which case you need to consider your student loan payment and credit card payment as essential expenses.

NO NEW WHEELS

If there is one critical mistake you easily could make at this time, it would be to either buy or lease a new car. Get that idea out of your head. You cannot afford a car payment. You have survived this long with that old clunker, and can do that for a while longer.

NO FANCY PAD

If you cannot find a housing situation with a roommate (or several roommates to keep your expenses low), consider moving back home for a while, if they will have you. Take it from me, the parent of adult children: If you come home with a grateful spirit, do your own laundry, clean up after yourself, carry your weight in household chores, act pleasantly, help with meals and do nice things for your parents — you will be welcomed with open arms. At least until you get on your feet.

GET OFF THE PLASTIC

Yes, I am aware you have a credit card. And if you begin to see it as part of your available cash resources, you'll be dead in the water. This is why I want you to put that thing away. Far away, and in a safe place. Your carefree years of living on the plastic are over.

FACE THE MUSIC

If you have student loans, you might have a six-month grace period before you must begin making repayment. But you do not have to wait that long. Start now, and you'll pay less interest. You will learn from your lender there are multiple payment plans. Go to the Federal Student Aid website to learn more.

In conclusion, one of the most valuable aspects of your education was learning how to live on next to nothing. You might need to do that for a few more years as you get your financial bearings.

If you follow what I say, one day you will thank me. And as a bonus, you'll find financial freedom while you still are young.

Building: Many believe current slowdown is temporary

The trend was reinforced on Monday when Vulcan Materials Corp., a big seller of crushed stone, gravel and sand — the basic building blocks for all construction projects — reported second-quarter revenue and profit below analysts' estimates. The company blamed a deceleration of shipments on wet weather and the delayed start of large projects.

Many in the industry remain buoyant, saying the current slowdown is temporary. Warm winter weather pulled projects forward in the first quarter, which saw construction spending jump 11 percent, said Ken Simonson, chief economist with the Associated General Contractors of America. That event and heavy flooding in areas such as Texas caused the numbers to stumble in April and May, he said.

ROOM TO GROW

Construction spending still has room to grow. As a percentage of the U.S. economy, it was 6.4 percent in the first quarter, below the 50-year average of 8.3 percent. While housing starts have rebounded slowly to 1.1 million last year from a 2009 low of 554,000, they remain well under a rate of 1.4 million a year since the 1960s.

Simonson's group projects that construction spending will rise between 8 percent and 10 percent this year as projects to build schools, hospitals and strip malls make up for slower growth of apartment buildings and hotels. Next year, the outlays are expected to increase 6 percent to 8 percent, he said, well outpacing the projected growth of the U.S. economy.

Construction companies also are pinning their hopes on public works spending, such as the replacement of New York City's Kosciuszko Bridge. In December, Congress enacted the first long-term highway bill in a decade, replacing short-term funding patches.

Iowa finally will expand to four lanes a 30-mile stretch of U.S. Highway 20 between Dubuque and Sioux City, said Paul Trombino, director of the state's Department of Transportation.

“Without knowing that funding will be there, it's hard to do the big projects,” Trombino said.

Brian Lane, chief executive officer of Comfort Systems USA Inc., hasn't been able to hire enough qualified employees to accept all the jobs from customers. The Houston-based company installs heating and air-conditioning systems in office buildings, schools and other commercial properties. Welders and pipefitters are particularly difficult to find, and salaries for skilled workers are rising 3 percent to 6 percent per year, he said.

“We're turning down work,” said Lane, whose company's backlog of projects rose to $777 million at the end of March, the highest level since 2008.

Martin Marietta and Vulcan also don't see a slowdown. Martin Marietta expects sales of aggregates, as the materials are known, to rise by 13 percent this year while Vulcan forecasts shipments increasing 9 percent.

“We have a long way to go in this recovery,” Thomas Hill, Vulcan's chief executive officer, said in an interview. “We're really encouraged by all our markets.”

THE MOTLEY FOOL: TO EDUCATE, AMUSE & ENRICH

MY DUMBEST INVESTMENT

LeapFrog tripped

My dumbest investment was in LeapFrog Enterprises, a company that made educational electronic toys for children. They were kind of like early versions of the tablets we enjoy today, but while they were initially embraced by many, today, every 3-year-old can have a fine time with his mother's or dad's iPad. No one seems to need LeapFrog devices anymore. — B.W., Atlanta

Compelling competition was indeed a key reason LeapFrog faltered, but remember, iPads, costing hundreds of dollars, still were significantly different from LeapFrog offerings.

LeapFrog performed well as an investment for a while, but then it did fall on hard times. In mid-2015, it posted quarterly results that featured sales down by more than 30 percent in the U.S. and abroad, and inventory swelling by about 40 percent. Management said it would be developing new products to address new markets, but investors were not encouraged, and many sold, sending shares down further.

LeapFrog's market value sank to about $40 million by early 2016, when the Hong Kong-based company VTech announced its intention to buy LeapFrog for about $72 million. VTech long has been in the electronic learning toy business and wanted to add LeapFrog's assets to its mix to broaden its portfolio.

The LeapFrog story is a good reminder we need to keep a close eye on our holdings to make sure they're performing well and their prospects still are strong.

with more than 2,275 locations in all 50 states and beyond. My stores average about 104,000 square feet inside, plus about 24,000 square feet for my garden departments — and stock about 35,000 products. I employ more than 385,000 people and rake in close to $90 billion annually. I'm still focused on helping customers, with do-it-yourself clinics and workshops. Who am I? (Answer: The Home Depot)

THE MOTLEY FOOL TAKE

A stock to bank on

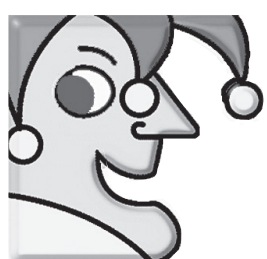

After the Federal Reserve raised its federal funds target rate for the first time in about a decade in December and led many to expect several more hikes in 2016, Bank of America (NYSE: BAC) was counting on rising interest rates to boost its interest-based income and net interest margin. But that hasn't happened because of weaker jobs growth and GDP data.

Still, there's reason to be bullish. For starters, Bank of America has put most of its mortgage-based litigation behind, leaving it with fewer expenses, better visibility and more transparent performance numbers.

General cost-cutting is another reason Bank of America looks attractive. It has been able to scale back its overhead costs via some branch closures to take advantage of the push toward mobile banking. Mobile and ATM transactions are substantially cheaper than in-person transactions, giving B of A an incentive to cater to mobile consumers.

Bank of America also offers an intriguing value proposition. The company is trading well below its book value, primarily as a result of its subpar return on assets. However, improved expense efficiencies, coupled with the expectation of interest-rate normalization at some point in the intermediate term, should help push its ROA higher.

With a dividend that recently yielded 1.5 percent, Bank of America is worth considering for your portfolio. (The Motley Fool has recommended Bank of America.)

ASK THE FOOL

Beware of falling prices

Q: What's deflation? — J.R., Norfolk, Va.

A: Deflation is the opposite of inflation, occurring when prices fall during time. It typically happens during a recession and can contribute to rising unemployment and decreased production. While lower prices might sound like a good thing, remember they reflect an ailing economy, where supply is greater than demand, as many people and businesses are financially pinched and are delaying purchases.

Fortunately, though, there are measures that can be taken to combat the threat of deflation. The Fed, for example, can lower interest rates or increase the money supply to spur inflation a bit.

If you're worried about deflation, you might prepare yourself for a possible pullback in stocks, perhaps locking in some yields with government bonds. Deflation is relatively rare, though, and a little inflation can be good for us.

Q: When preparing my tax return, will I be able to deduct a big loss from a stock sale? — K.W., Midland, Mich.

A: Yes. Losses sting, but their silver lining is they can help shrink your tax bill. You'll first offset any capital gains from stock sales with your loss. If any loss remains, it can be deducted from your income — up to $3,000 per year. Sums above $3,000 can be carried over to the following year.

If you're in the 25 percent bracket, and you deduct $3,000 from your income, you're excluding that amount from taxation. So, you save 25 percent of $3,000, or $750, and don't have to pay that in taxes.

It's worth spending some time learning more about tax rules and strategies, as they can save you money. Do so at irs.gov or fool.com/taxes.

FOOL'S SCHOOL

Evaluating mutual fund performance

If you're looking for good mutual funds to invest in, you might just look to see which ones have performed the best recently. That's not the best way to find winners, though.

Remember funds that beat the stock market average one year won't necessarily beat it the following year. A fantastic performance partly might be the result of the fund manager's talent, but it's also partly luck — at least during the short term. (Many fund managers invest only for the short term.) Bad funds can have strong years now and then.

Even finding a fund with a terrific three-, five- or 10-year average annual return isn't enough. A great average can be because of one outstanding year. After all, a five-year average is just an average of five annual performances. If one is unusually high, the average will be high. For example, if in each of five years, a fund earns 7 percent, 9 percent, 2 percent, 6 percent and 26 percent, its average annual return will be about 10 percent. That might look respectable, but note that in reality, it exceeded 10 percent in only one of five years.

The majority of stock mutual funds actually tend to underperform the market average. According to the folks at Standard & Poor's, as of the end of 2015, fully 82 percent of all large-cap domestic stock mutual funds underperformed the S&P 500 during the preceding 10 years. It's simply hard to beat the average — in large part because of fund fees.

So, what can you do? Well, consider investing in an inexpensive broad-market index fund, which will outperform most other mutual funds — for example, the Vanguard S&P 500 Index Fund (ticker: VFINX). If you still want to seek above-average managed funds, look for ones with no loads, expense ratios (annual fees) below 1 percent and thoughtful managers who invest their own money in the funds.

FOOLISH TRIVIA

Name that company

I trace my roots back to the 1966 creation of the Interbank Card Association. I'm a global payments titan, boasting more than 2 billion accounts in more than 210 countries and territories. I handle 150 global currencies and process more than $4 trillion in transactions annually. Mine was the first payment card issued in China and the first to feature laser holograms. I like to think of myself as priceless, but I have a market value — which recently was about $100 billion. My ticker symbol is the abbreviation for the Bay State. Who am I?

Last week's trivia answer

I was conceived at a coffee shop by two guys who built me into a retail powerhouse. They envisioned trained staffers who could teach customers about products. Today, based in Atlanta, I'm the world's largest home improvement retailer;

Get deals on school supplies

It's hard to believe, but back-to-school time is right around the corner. As our family prepares, I'm also enjoying some of my favorite stock-up sales of the year on school supplies. It's easy to get great deals on everything from scissors to binders to notebooks by watching sales and shopping the lowest-priced items.

Almost every year, media outlets approach me to share my best school supply savings tips. While these tips don't change too much year-to-year, they're tried and true ways to send your child back to school with a backpack full of supplies that won't break the bank. (Even if you're not shopping for a student, this also is the best time of year to purchase many office supplies for your own personal use, as there are so many sales and deep discounts.)

During each school supply season, I aim to pay between a penny and a quarter for the supplies I'm buying. (Really!) I find some of the best prices at office supply stores around this time of year. Several major chains feature penny deals each week, and by skimming these sales, you can pick up many items at bargain prices. So far, I've purchased index cards, pocket folders, pencil boxes, spiral notebooks, erasers and glue sticks — all for a penny per package. Add 10-cent spiral notebooks and 25-cent scissors and rulers, and I'm quickly checking items off my kids' classroom lists.

Do be mindful of purchase limits. Most stores' loss leader items are quantity-limited per person, per week. Pay attention to minimum purchase requirements, too — one national chain requires a $5 minimum purchase to get the penny deals. In this case, look at the sales ad for other low-priced items to meet the threshold. One week, I purchased two one-packs of facial tissues to meet the minimum threshold, as they were on sale for a great price, too (and I could use a coupon on them).

Speaking of coupons, you might be surprised to learn how many coupons are available each summer for school supplies.

Recent newspaper inserts have featured coupons for pens, pencils, markers and highlighters. Pair these with loss-leader-level sale prices, and you can grab some excellent deals. I've picked up $1 packages of pens and pencils that ended up being free with a $2-off-2 coupon.

When you're shopping for your child's school supplies, resist the temptation to buy all of the items on the list in one store. I realize parents' time is valuable — I'm a mother of three, and I know the relief I feel when I know the kids' shopping lists are completed, and they're ready to return to school. If you head to a store to grab 5-cent folders, don't overpay for your child's glue, pencil pouch and graph paper in the same trip. I keep my kids' supply lists in my purse all the time, and whenever I'm out shopping, I skim the school supply deals to fill in some of the items. Many schools put the supply lists online, too, so if you're a smartphone user, you'll always have easy access to the list even if you're not carrying a paper version around.

By shopping the lowest-priced sale items and using coupons, I'm usually able to complete my children's lists for less than $10 per child and, many years, it's been closer to $5!

The one item that I recommend parents don't skimp on is a quality backpack. Each year during back-to-school sales, we see stores offering $5 backpacks. If $5 toward a backpack is all your budget will allow, by all means, get one — it's a great price. I've bought them, but most of them aren't durable enough to last more than a year. A few years ago, I splurged on lifetime backpacks for all of my children. By watching sales and discounts, you can pick up a name-brand backpack that comes with a lifetime warranty (examples: Jansport and Lands' End) for about $30.

A XYDLBAAXR is LONGFELLOW

One letter stands for another. In this sample, A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

THURSDAY, AUG. 4, 2016

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★ You might feel as if you have made the effort to get past a problem that continues to follow you. You will try to be gracious and understanding, but are likely to be disappointed. Perhaps it is time to try a new approach. Tonight: Let someone know where you are coming from.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★ You might feel as though your roommate or partner is acting like a volcano that's about to erupt. No matter how many times you try to placate this person, he or she continues to put on war paint. Communication is very active right now. Tonight: First nap, then decide.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★ One-on-one communication flows with ease all morning, so much so that you might justify turning off your phone and ignoring your emails. You won't need to go far, because come afternoon, you will be surrounded by friends and loved ones. Tonight: Make it early.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★ Curb a tendency to go overboard. Ask yourself what feeling are you sitting on, and then find out why. A serious conversation takes you down a new path, although you could be resistant at some point. Tonight: Hang out with a friend who seems to have some interesting news.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★ Beam in more of what you want, despite someone's obvious resistance. As much as you will open the door to communication, you could find that this person suddenly gives you irrelevant answers. Obviously, you need a different approach. Tonight: Make it your treat.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★ You can't seem to discuss an important topic in the morning. Perhaps taking a nap later could relieve some of the tension. A family member proves to be quite difficult. Once you open up later in the day, you will feel better. Tonight: A loved one's compliment means a lot.

Wide receiver Kevin White has looked fantastic in camp so far with concerns regarding last year's shin injury quickly fading. While his elite speed has been noticeable, the second-year wideout is clearly still learning the playbook.

4 observations at camp's midway point

BY KYLE NABORS
knabors@daily-journal.com
815-937-3373

The Chicago Bears enjoyed their first day off Tuesday after reaching the halfway point of training camp with Monday's practice.

Jay Cutler and company return to Olivet Nazarene University at 11:30 a.m. today for the first of three straight practices before heading to Soldier Field for Family Fest.

Here are four observations with training camp headed into the home stretch:

1. Cody Whitehair's first NFL training camp hasn't been particularly kind to him. No, that doesn't mean it's time to panic about the Bears' second-round draft pick and presumptive starter at left guard.

Whitehair's troubles shouldn't come as a surprise. It's not often that rookie offensive linemen perform well when they get their first look at an NFL defense.

Monday's practice was noticeably rough on Whitehair during 1-on-1 competition. Not only did Mitch Unrein blow by Whitehair with a swim move, but the rookie also twice ended up on his backside against Ego Ferguson.

Whitehair's performance will improve as he gets more reps under his belt, while Kyle Long's eventual return to practice should help as well.

2. Kevin White looks as explosive as advertised. Any doubts about his speed after having a metal rod inserted into his shin are quickly vanishing.

Teammates were raving about his performance during OTAs and it's becoming clear that they weren't just paying lip service to the second-year wideout.

White has looked every bit as explosive in training camp as he did at West Virginia after missing his entire rookie season.

It's not all good news, however. White is clearly still learning the playbook, with fellow receivers needing to show him where to line up on multiple occasions.

3. The difference in the defense's speed is noticeable. The Bears' defense seemed a bit slow in training camp last summer and that feeling was confirmed in an ugly preseason opener against the Miami Dolphins.

Players on both sides of the ball keep talking about the defense's improved quickness.

Defensive lineman Akiem Hicks has been a rock up front and, along with Eddie Goldman, has allowed the team's linebackers to attack the quarterback and flow to the ball on running plays.

4. Pernell McPhee's knee injury is a growing concern. The Bears' most important linebacker has yet to take the field in Bourbonnais.

Head coach John Fox and general manager Ryan Pace continue to assert that they're only being cautious with McPhee's recovery.

The pass rush will be considerably weaker if McPhee is unable to return at 100 percent. Rookie Leonard Floyd has looked solid in camp thus far, but McPhee brings a type of power rush that isn't replaceable on the Bears' roster.

Do Bears have enough depth on offensive line?

If the injury bug hits, the Bears could be in big trouble

There is a perception around the 2016 edition of the Chicago Bears defense. Justifiably, I think they will be greatly improved.

The prognosis on offense is less clear. Jay Cutler is the Chicago Bears quarterback of the present and future. There is enough young talent at running back and wide receiver that both could develop into solid position groups, and tight end, while clearly not a strength of this team, doesn't have to be a liability. But the likelihood of future success on offense is very much an unknown right now because it will all be dictated by the play of an offensive line that is at best a work in progress.

The one sure thing in the Bears' front wall, Kyle Long, is watching from the sidelines with what is hoped to be a minor calf strain. Long should be fine by opening day.

While he struggled at right tackle last year, he is clearly one of the best guards in the game.

Bears coach John Fox is comfortable enough with his Pro Bowl guard that he sees the silver lining in his time off the field. "It's huge," Fox said about the extra reps for other players in Long's absence. "We use, and you get sick of hearing it, but I'm going to keep using it, and that's next man up, the old Wally Pipp story. "Everybody starts off a nobody, sometimes you don't know that until they get the opportunity. So it gives you a chance to look at other guys and we don't wait for anybody."

Make no mistake, Fox is not looking for a Lou Gehrig to replace Long. He is just pleased with the opportunity to get a longer look at some of the new kids on the block because right now, by his definition, they are a collection of nobodies.

"Cody Whitehair is a rookie draft pick and Ted Larsen is a new guy to us," Fox said. "So they are getting the reps there and are getting more familiar with our system and it gives them an opportunity."

"When Kyle gets back, obviously he'll plug back in, but those reps are very valuable for those guys moving forward, whether it's in a backup role or someone gets nicked in a game and they got to go in."

Actually with Matt Slauson in San Diego, one of those two will have to start at left guard and Whitehair looks like the favorite.

Fox also acknowledges the uncertainty around Hroniss Grasu at center.

Chicago Bears wide receiver Kevin White admitted OTAs were "a little rough," but he started hitting his stride in minicamp.

Burning questions in NFC North for fantasy football

BY ARTHUR ARKUSH
aarkush@profootballweekly.com

Training camps have opened, pads have begun popping and the biggest fantasy football questions entering 2016 will quickly start coming into focus.

We're covering all fantasy angles at Pro Football Weekly this season, and what better place to start than providing the biggest question we want answered for each team before draft season kicks into full gear next month?

CHICAGO BEARS: HOW SOON WILL KEVIN WHITE START PAYING DIVIDENDS — AND HOW LARGE?

When Jay Cutler met the media on report day, he said the seventh overall pick in 2015 has unique physical and athletic tools to help accelerate his learning curve en route to becoming "something special."

White admitted OTAs were "a little rough," but he started hitting his stride in minicamp and continues to impress not just Cutler but media observing his cushion-eating speed, imposing size and leaping ability and overall attacking style.

Before a broken leg robbed White of his rookie season, we had him ranked 41st among WRs and 111th overall. My current pre-camp rankings have White as WR39, 89th overall and as the top-rated "rookie" pass-catcher — an illustration of his aforementioned traits, being opposite Alshon Jeffery and, despite red-shirting, having the benefit of learning the offense in meetings.

I expect White, if healthy, to quickly develop into a threat on quick screens, nine routes and contested balls. But how refined the rest of his route tree appears in camp — and how much that compels Dowell Loggains to loosen the reins on his extra first-round pick — could have big fantasy reverberations.

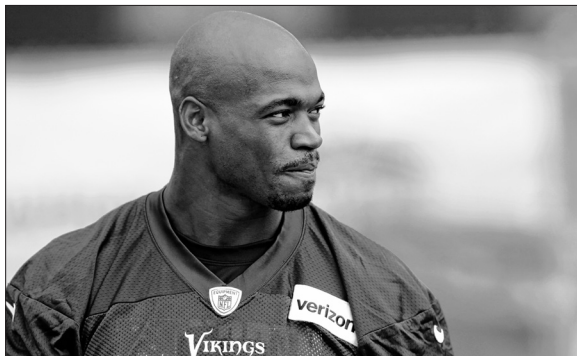

DETROIT LIONS: IS ERIC EBRON READY TO STAND TALL IN A CALVIN JOHNSON-LESS WORLD?

I've told anyone who'll listen over the past month Anquan Boldin can still help an offense, and had Marvin Jones ranked as the best available wide-out in free agency, thus I credit rookie GM Bob

The Associated Press/Paul Sancya

Detroit Lions tight end Eric Ebron has the size, movement skills and catch radius to help the big-armed and erratic quarterback Matthew Stafford.

The Associated Press/Andy Clayton-King

Minnesota Vikings running back Adrian Peterson is set to get some much-needed help from quarterback Teddy Bridgewater on offense this season.

GREEN BAY PACKERS: WHAT TO MAKE OF JORDY NELSON ON THE PUP LIST WITH HIS OTHER KNEE ACTING UP?

My pre-camp rankings — which slotted Nelson WR8 and No. 16 regardless of position — assumed no setbacks in the 31-year-old's recovery from ACL reconstruction. Now that there's been one, with Nelson reporting soreness in his other knee likely as the result of overcompensation, should we panic?

The preseason clearly takes on added importance, as we don't know when Nelson will resume practicing. Perhaps the silver lining for the rest of the WR corps is another chance to strut their stuff, this time before the win-loss column is affected.

If Nelson doesn't get back to being himself, one lesson I learned after overrating WR depth a year ago: Jared Abbrederis, not Jeff Janis, is the one to keep an eye on.

Everyone (including me) gravitated to Janis last season because he's almost a carbon copy of Nelson physically. Yes, Rodgers desperately missed Nelson, the field stretcher. But what he missed arguably as much was Nelson, the safety valve: a guy whom Rodgers always knew would be where he was expected, making catches expected of him. Because of his route running and intelligence, Abbrederis has looked like that guy in camp in Nelson's absence.

MINNESOTA VIKINGS: IS THE OFFENSE FINALLY BALANCED TO GIVE ADRIAN PETERSON A BOOST?

Not that the reigning rushing champ needs one, but at 31 and coming off his biggest workload and first postseason trip since 2012, it can't hurt, right? Early reports from Mankato suggest Teddy Bridgewater has looked sharp throwing deep, and more in tune with his mental clock — encouraging, certainly, but let's see what happens when he faces a rush without a red jersey.

It should be noted that most coaches still are praising most players, but hearing that big wideout Charles Johnson and center John Sullivan are off to solid starts after disappointing last season is promising nonetheless — and doesn't even account for high-priced additions Laquon Treadwell and Alex Boone, plus Andre Smith, the projected starting RT.

It's not like we're expecting Bridgewater to carry the offense to a top-10 passing finish. He just needs to command defense's respect by posing enough of a threat in the intermediate and deep parts to take a little heat off Peterson. A hamstring pull has delayed A.D.'s camp debut but the passing game developments already are intriguing.

"He had a bit of a setback when he had the injury (last season)," Fox said. "I thought he was coming along pretty good, He did miss that time, that is hard coming back from injury, especially as a rookie. But I liked his growth and development during the offseason program, and I like what I've seen from him so far this year."

Bobby Massie is one of the potential stalwarts of Ryan Pace's 2016 unrestricted free agent class and a huge 6-6, 320-pound run-blocking specialist who will be an upgrade over Jordan Mills — and maybe even Long at right tackle — but was deemed expendable by Arizona after four seasons.

The Bears will run right a lot behind Long and Massie, but can the newcomer protect Cutler?

And lastly there is the ultimate protection question: Can Charles Leno Jr reward the confidence Fox and Pace clearly have in him at left tackle?

There is more than one pro scout out there who questions where that confidence is coming from.

Depth is a huge question as well. Amini Silatolu will challenge for playing time at guard once his knee is completely rehabbed, but the swing tackle at the moment appears to be Nick Becton.

No offense to the Becton family, but ...

So, the long and short of it is this: If Massie, Grasu, Whitehair and Leno Jr are all at the front end of solid NFL careers, the offense should be at least somewhat improved.

But if any one or two of them prove to be less than the real deal, the Bears have a real problem.

Hammel, Chapman pitch Cubs past Fernandez, Marlins

BY MIKE CRANSTON
The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Cubs manager Joe Maddon's decision to lift a dominant Jason Hammel for a pinch-hitter in the sixth inning looked dubious when Miguel Montero struck out and Pedro Strop got into trouble in the seventh.

All it took was a big play in the outfield and some 104 mph heat from Aroldis Chapman to give Maddon and the Cubs another win.

Hammel threw six scoreless innings, Dexter Fowler had three hits and Chicago beat Miami ace Jose Fernandez and the Marlins 3-2 on Tuesday night for its third straight victory.

"Today I was a one-pitch pitcher," said Hammel, who allowed four hits and set a career high for wins in a season. "I didn't really have a feel for any of the breaking pitches, curveball and the slider, and I didn't throw any changeups. The fastball played well today."

Hammel (11-5) extended Chicago's scoreless streak to 24 innings before Strop's shaky seventh. Aroldis Chapman hit 104.4 mph on the radar gun in a perfect ninth as the Cubs won for the sixth time in seven games and opened a nine-game lead over St. Louis in the NL Central.

"We're playing really good baseball," Maddon said.

Hammel threw 80 pitches before being lifted for a pinch-hitter with the Cubs up 3-0, a move Maddon calls a "National League moment." But Montero struck out with two on.

"We took a shot, it didn't play," Maddon said.

Fernandez (12-6) allowed three runs and eight hits over six innings, losing consecutive starts for the first time since his 2013 rookie season.

"This may sound funny, but I felt strong today," Fernandez said. "I was making good pitches. This is a good team."

Fowler was his nemesis. He led off the first with a triple and scored on catcher Willson Contreras' single. Batting Contreras second worked for Maddon, as Fowler and Contreras had consecutive hits again in the third to produce another run.

"He was involved in almost everything tonight," Maddon said of Fowler.

The center fielder added an RBI single in the fifth off Fernandez, who fanned eight and took over the major league lead with 192 strikeouts.

Adeiny Hechavarria and J.T. Realmuto each hit an RBI single in the seventh off Strop, who also committed a throwing error. Travis Wood replaced him and Chris Coghlan's diving catch of Christian Yelich's looping liner to left field with two on ended the threat.

don picked off pinch-runner Dee Gordon from first in a scoreless eighth.

Then Chapman entered and used his blazing fastball to strike out one and earn his second save in three tries since being acquired from the Yankees.

"It's coming out hot, but it's easy when you have that kind of guy throwing a fastball straight," Contreras said. "It's harder when you have 97 (mph) with sink. But I mean, it's unbelievable."

IDEAL TRADE

Not only did new Cubs reliever Joe Smith go from the struggling Los Angeles Angels to a contender, he's now just a short flight or 4½-hour drive from his ailing mother in Cincinnati. Lee Smith, 56, is battling Huntington's disease, an inherited, fatal disorder that causes cognitive and physical impairment.

"It's nice," Joe Smith said. "Traveling is hard and those flights take a lot out of her."

RHP Spencer Patton was optioned to Triple-A Iowa to make room for Smith, acquired Monday.

PHELPS ON FRIDAY

Marlins manager Don Mattingly said RHP David Phelps will move into the rotation and start Friday against the Rockies. He'll replace RHP Colin Rea, who was traded back to San Diego on Monday.

ICHIRO UPDATE

Ichiro Suzuki struck out pinch-hitting for Fernandez in the seventh, leaving him at 2,998 hits. Suzuki is expected to start Wednesday's series finale against RHP John Lackey. Suzuki's 37 hits against Lackey are his most off any pitcher.

TRAINER'S ROOM

Marlins: 1B Justin Bour (ankle) went 0 for 3 for Triple-A New Orleans was expected to play one more minor league rehab game Wednesday before returning Friday at Colorado.

Cubs: Second-year slugger Kris Bryant wasn't in the lineup. "It didn't matter who was pitching today as long as he was right-handed," Maddon said. "I wanted to give him the day off."

Hamstrung in the discus

Local senior wins twice despite pain

BY DENNIS YOHNKA
dyohnka@daily-journal.com
815-937-3384

Chebanse retiree and Masters Track and Field champion Lawrence Lagesse, came home from the most recent age-bracketed games — held last weekend in Greensboro, N.C. — with a handful of medals and some serious fitness frustration.

He struggled but earned a gold medal in his strongest event, the pentathlon, on Friday. But he will tell you he limped to the final podium in his two individual events Saturday. He could pull off only a second in the discus but held on to win the pole vault.

"I had a lot of pain and stiffness in my hamstring, so I was only able to jump a low height, for me, in the vault," he explained. "It was very close to the all-American standard, but I couldn't go back for a better jump the way I felt."

The discus experience was a stranger story.

"Never before have I struggled to throw inside the sector [prescribed landing area]," he explained. "It was just such a battle. The first two throws were easily 39-plus meters. One possibly was 40 to 41-meter toss."

"But all of my five first throws were out of bounds. With only one attempt to go, I prayed and concentrated on none of my usual list of mental cues, but only on throwing down the middle of the sector. I put zero effort into the throw itself just fearing that I was going foul again."

"I thought only about keeping it in between the line, [and] this time — thank God — it did," he said. "Any mediocre throw for me is normally, say 37 to 38 meters, and that would have won it handily. But I finished second with a pathetic 34 meters. I was so disappointed."

Lagesse attributes some of his discus problems to the hamstring he's trying to baby.

"I was wobbling out of the ring and scratching you know it was just horrible," he said. There are, however, three new fancy awards on the 68-year-old internationally-recognized athlete's wall. And there is no concession speech written. He plans to take his time repairing the hamstring and competing again.

Garcia homers twice, but ChiSox fall to Tigers

BY DAVE HOGG
The Associated Press

DETROIT — Avisail Garcia expected to get the night off against his former teammates on Tuesday. Instead, he provided one of the few bright spots in an ugly game for the Chicago White Sox.

Garcia entered in the fifth inning after an injury to rookie Charlie Tilson and hit a pair of long home runs off Detroit Tigers relievers. It wasn't enough to prevent an 11-5 loss, but it gave Garcia a boost of confidence.

"You hate coming into a game because of an injury, but I wanted to take the chance I got," said Garcia, who began his career with the Tigers. "It felt great to hit those two balls hard."

Garcia's second homer cleared the first section of seats in left field and was estimated at 465 feet.

"We've always known that Avi has the potential to hit balls like that, and it is great to see him start to do it," White Sox manager Robin Ventura said. "He's a big kid, and he's finally putting it all together."

"That one had some serious distance on it." Todd Frazier hit his 30th homer for the White Sox, but they were never able to dig themselves out of the hole created by Detroit's six-run fifth.

James Shields (3-6) held the Tigers scoreless for the first four innings, then got hit hard in the fifth. He had allowed only five runs in his previous four starts combined, and Ventura thought a six-day layoff might have been the problem.

Chicago couldn't get anything going against Anibal Sanchez (5-12).

The right-hander allowed one run in six innings to win for the first time as a starter since April 28 — a span of 11 starts. He gave up six hits and three walks, and didn't yield a homer. He came into the game having served up 18 home runs in 94 2/3 innings.

"This might be the best I've pitched all year," said Sanchez, who lost his rotation spot in June but got it back because of injuries. "I felt really good with my command. That's something that I've been looking for all year long."

Miguel Cabrera hit his third home run in two games and Victor Martinez also went deep for Detroit. Andrew Romine and Cameron Maybin tripled in a six-run fifth for the Tigers.

TRAINER'S ROOM

White Sox: Tilson, playing his first major league game, had to be helped off the field in the fifth after straining his left hamstring while chasing Cabrera's double. His leg buckled under him, and Adam Eaton had to field the ball in right-center while Tilson was lying on the field. Ventura said after the game that Tilson was undergoing tests, with results expected Wednesday.

NBA

LeBron: Motivated by 'ghost' of Jordan

BY TOM WITHERS
AP Sports Writer

CLEVELAND — LeBron James has often avoided talking about trying to match Michael Jordan's accomplishments. Now he's chasing "the ghost" of arguably the greatest player in NBA history.

Fresh off leading the Cavaliers to an NBA championship and bringing Cleveland its first title since 1964, James, in a story posted online by Sports Illustrated, recently told young players at a camp in Los Angeles that his motivation "is this ghost I'm chasing. The ghost played in Chicago."

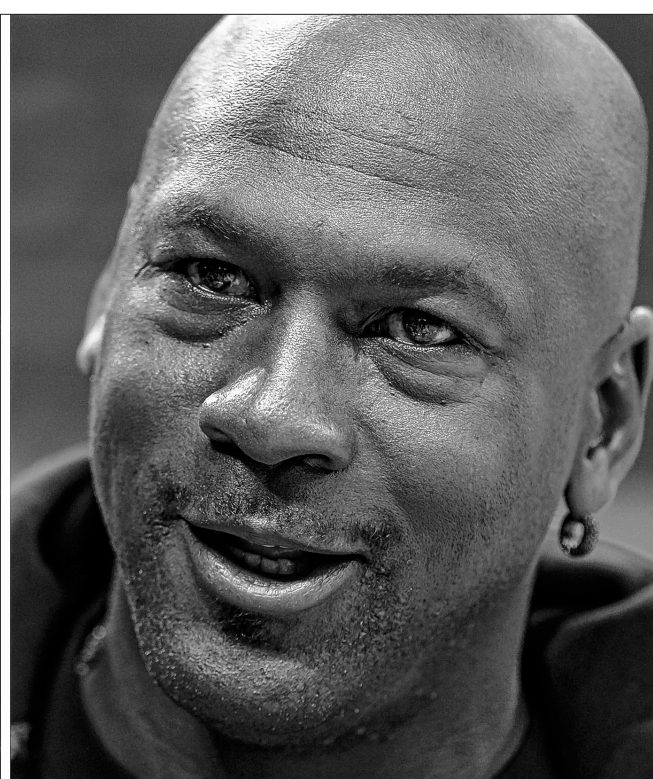

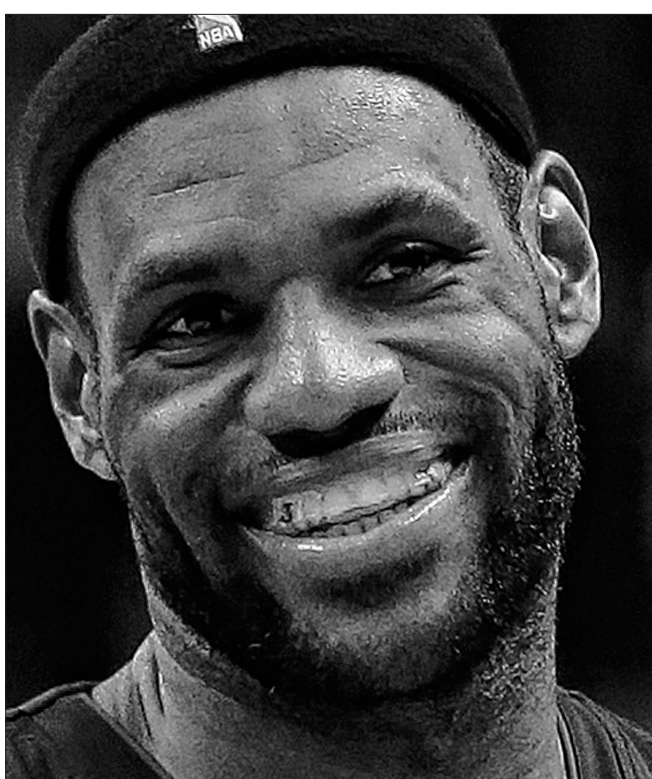

The ghost, of course, is Jordan, who led the Bulls to six titles. James has admired Jordan since he was a kid and reveres him to this day. James has typically sidestepped questions about being in Jordan's elite company, and the 31-year-old tells SI he's hoping to build on his sterling resume.

"My career is totally different than Michael Jordan's," James tells SI's Lee Jenkins. "What I've gone through is totally different than what he went through. What he did was unbelievable, and I watched it unfold. I looked up to him so much. I think it's cool to put myself in position to be one of those great players, but if I can ever put myself in position to be the greatest player, that would be something extraordinary."

While James is only halfway to matching Jordan's number of titles, ending Cleveland's drought in historic fashion — the Cavs overcame a 3-1 deficit to beat Golden State — will always separate him from other players.

"This was bigger for me than the first and the second," James tells SI, "because of everything it represents."

LeBron James, left, has often avoided talking about trying to match the accomplishments of Michael Jordan, right. Now, he's chasing "the ghost" of arguably the greatest player in NBA history.

OLYMPICS: WOMEN'S SOCCER

Revamped team put to the test in Rio

BY TALES AZZONI

BELO HORIZONTE, Brazil — A new era opens for the U.S. women's soccer team at the Olympic Games when a generation of younger players seeks to continue the global domination established at last year's World Cup.

Bidding to add Olympic gold to World Cup success, the U.S. will have 11 Olympic newcomers on its roster when it opens against New Zealand on Wednesday at the Mineirao Stadium.

It will be the team's first major competition since the retirement of players such as Abby Wambach and Lauren Holiday following last year's triumph in Canada.

"Of course, we had some gigantic losses, some players that have been around the game for quite some time, and they are irreplaceable, really," veteran goalkeeper Hope Solo said. "But we have something different and I don't think anybody has seen the U.S. team as we are right now. Nobody knows what to expect, with our younger players, with our new talent, with our formation. So I think it's going to be exciting."

Seeking a fourth straight Olympic gold, the Americans are also without Christine Rampone because of injury, while Sydney Leroux and Amy Rodriguez are pregnant. Two other key players, captain Carli Lloyd and midfielder Megan Rapinoe are coming to Brazil recovering from health problems. Rapinoe is not expected to play in the early games.

"There's been a little bit of a change in the roster, but it's good," Lloyd said. "I think we have about 11 players who are competing in their first Olympics, which is a huge turnaround, but I also think that those players bring experience, they've been around this team, they've earned quite a few caps with the team and are doing very well. So I think that, mixed in with us old folks, we will be all right."

Among the Olympic newcomers are a few players who also made it to the World Cup last year, including Meghan Klingenberg, Ali Krieger, Morgan Brian and Whitney Engen. The youngest player in the current roster is 18-year-old Mallory Pugh. The U.S. is trying to become the first team to win the Olympics after succeeding at the World Cup.

Lloyd, the team's captain in Rio, said the U.S. remains favored to win the title despite the revamped team.

"I think the toughest (opponents) are going to be ourselves," said Lloyd, who scored a hat trick in the World Cup final against Japan. "No other team should intimidate our team. Of course, there are going to be tough contenders, but honestly, not a single team intimidates me."

The U.S. is trying to win its fifth gold medal since women's soccer became an Olympic sport in 1996. It won its third World Cup title in Canada, the first since 1999.

"I think we are always feeling the pressure of coming back with gold. It's just in our DNA," Lloyd said. "Even if we hadn't won the World Cup we'd still be under tremendous pressure to win. It comes with being the No. 1 team in the world and going for a fourth consecutive gold medal. We are super excited to get started. I know this team has a lot of talent and depth and we have the opportunity to really create history."

After playing New Zealand, the U.S. faces powerhouse France and then Colombia in Group G of the 12-team Olympic tournament. Second-ranked Germany, fifth-ranked Australia, sixth-ranked Sweden and host Brazil loom as potential quarter-final opponents.

"We as a team acknowledge the pressure," Solo said. "We know that the target is on our backs. We are ranked No. 1 for quite some time, we won last year's World Cup, we won the last Olympics. It doesn't make it easy. We don't come into any tournament with an extreme amount of confidence or arrogance. We know that the job is going to be extremely difficult to repeat winning a gold medal."

Low-key Harrison let productivity speak volumes

BY MICHAEL MAROT
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — Marvin Harrison often stood silently in the corner of the Indianapolis Colts' locker room. He didn't need to utter a word.

The numbers spoke for themselves, and he was content playing the quiet, productive guy in a league full of trash-talking, flamboyant receivers.

Harrison's low-key, old-school approach fit perfectly with Peyton Manning in Indy and led the wiry receiver down a Hall of Fame path that ends with Saturday night's induction ceremony in Canton, Ohio.

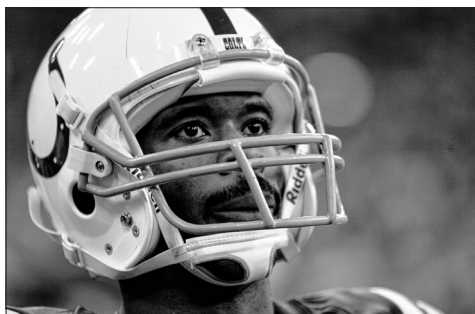

"There have been some very, very good receivers, but Marvin was special," Colts kicker Adam Vinatieri said of his former teammate. "He was one of a kind."

On the field, he was a defensive coordinator's worst nightmare.

Harrison could embarrass cornerbacks with uncanny hips that made every route look the same. Opponents feared the move while Colts' teammates often tried — and failed — to emulate it.

The Syracuse product looked as comfortable going over the middle as he was going deep, and he had a penchant for making spectacular plays seem routine.

Throughout his career, Marvin Harrison avoided reporters and even declined pre-induction to the hall interview requests. Some believe after Colts owner Jim Irsay introduces Harrison, the acceptance speech could be one of the shortest in Hall of Fame history.

In 2007, Harrison immediately jumped up and simply waved his teammates down the field. In 2006, at rival New England, Harrison somehow spun around at full speed, tipping the ball to himself near the side of the end zone, and made an incredible double toe-tap that induced a rare spike from him.

But the public displays of greatness paled in comparison to what teammates witnessed behind the scenes.

"We saw that every day in practice," Vinatieri said. "Some guys, in practice, may be a little different than they are in a game. But for Marvin, practice was it. He made the effort on every single play."

Harrison was as unusual off the field.

Throughout his career, he avoided reporters, and even declined pre-induction to the hall interview requests. Some believe that after Colts owner Jim Irsay introduces Harrison, the acceptance speech could be one of the shortest in Hall of Fame history.

When his name surfaced in a police investigation following a 2008 shooting in his hometown of Philadelphia, Harrison kept mostly quiet. Charges were never filed.

He occasionally discussed the notion of stitching the balls from his touchdown catches together to construct a chair, and he said he never watched film.

Yet nobody doubted Harrison's ability to be ready when he laced up his shoes.

"You earn your paychecks in practice, you play the games for free," Harrison used to say.

Perhaps that's why so few could keep up with him.

Harrison finished his career with 1,102 receptions, 14,608 yards and 128 touchdowns — all Colts' franchise records. He topped the 100-catch mark four straight times, including 2002 when he caught an NFL record 143 passes, a mark that still stands.

MLB: CINCINNATI 7, ST. LOUIS 5

Cardinals bullpen blows late lead

CINCINNATI — On a day when the Cardinals' lineup was back together, the bullpen couldn't hold on.

Seung Hwan Oh gave up a three-run homer to Scott Schebler in the ninth inning Tuesday night that rallied the Cincinnati Reds to a 7-5 victory in a back-and-forth game.

There were four lead changes in the final three innings, with the Reds getting the better of it against a bullpen that hadn't allowed a homer since July 22.

"It was everyone on deck and you figure out how you can help the next guy out," manager Mike Matheny said. "When you're fighting to get back in it, you've got to use all your pieces. You take every shot you can."

Brandon Moss and Tommy Pham hit solo homers in the eighth for a 5-4 lead. Oh (2-2) escaped a bases-loaded threat in the eighth but gave up a pair of singles to start the ninth. Schebler, who was called up from the minors earlier in the day, connected for his second homer of the season and first game-ending shot.

Jumbo Diaz (1-1) fanned Oh with the bases loaded in the top of the ninth to keep it 5-4.

The second-place Cardinals are hoping to make a run in the NL Central now that their lineup is closer to full strength. Moss and Jhonny Peralta returned from injuries on Tuesday, and the Cardinals expect to get leadoff hitter Matt Carpenter back later in the week.

Instead, they fell to nine games back when the first-place Cubs beat the Marlins 3-2. It was the Cardinals' second walk-off loss in a row.

"It's hard, for sure, but they're painful just like the other ones are painful," said Adam Wainwright, who lasted five innings. "You don't want to get beat 11-0 either."

Moss and Peralta had doubles that accounted for a run in the sixth. Moss tied it with a leadoff homer against Blake Wood in the eighth, part of his three-hit game. Pham followed with his first career pinch-hit homer, the fourth by St. Louis.

Wainwright and Jedd Gyorko also had solo shots for St. Louis.

Cincinnati played its first game without right fielder Jay Bruce. Bruce and Adam Duvall were tied for the team lead with 25 homers when the right fielder was dealt to the Mets on Monday. Duvall moved from left field to Bruce's old spot and hit a two-run homer in the seventh off Kevin Siegrist for a 4-3 lead.

Cincinnati's Joey Votto had an RBI double among his four hits and extended his hitting streak to a career-best 16 games. Yadier Molina doubled and extended his hitting streak to 16 games as well, the longest by a Cardinal since David Freese hit in 20 in a row in 2013.

Wainwright hit his second homer of the season off Dan Straily but couldn't beat the Reds. Wainwright went 3-0 with a 1.77 ERA in July but lasted only five innings on Tuesday. He's only 8-10 career against the Reds in 21 starts.

"I wasn't terribly sharp," Wainwright said. "I had good stuff but I was just a tick off in the timing."

DUKE'S DEBUT

LH Zach Duke, who was obtained from the White Sox on Sunday, made his Cardinals debut and retired only two of the five batters he faced, walking two of them. "I wasn't as sharp as I'm accustomed to be," Duke said. "I'll be better next time."

UP NEXT

Cardinals: RH Michael Wacha (6-7) has won his last four decisions covering seven starts. He's 3-1 in six career outings at Great American Ball Park.

Reds: LH Cody Reed (0-5) gave up six runs in five innings of a 9-7 loss in San Francisco on Tuesday. He's never faced the Cardinals.
